WINDHAM—was formed from Woodstock, (Ulster co.,) as part of Ulster co., March 23, 1798. "Greenland" (now Hunter) and Lexington were taken off in 1813, Prattsville in 1833, and a part of Ashland in 1818. A part of "Freshold" (now Durham) was annexed March 26, 1805. It lies upon the w. declivities of the Catskills, s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is very broken and hilly. A high range of mountains extends along the s. border, at the s. foot of which flows Batavia Kil,⁶ in a deep, rocky valley. The central and s. parts are occupied by mountain spurs divided by narrow ravines. The soil is a heavy, gravelly and clayey loam, of which dis-integrated shale forms a large son the first gristmill, in 1792; and Richard Peck opened the first inn, in 1795.

³ Friends, 2 M. E., Bap., Christian, Ref. Prot. D., and Prot. Meth.

⁴ At this place, at the extensive tannery of the Hon. Zaddock Pratt, 60,000 sides of sole leather were tanned and 6,000 cwt. of bark consumed annually for 25 years.

⁵ Among the first settlers were John Laraway and his sons John, Jonas, Derek, and Martinus, Isaac Van Alstyne, — Vreeman, John and Peter Van Loun, John Becker, and a family by the name of Schoonmaker. The first school was taught by Mr. Hanks, in 1790. Martinus Laraway kept the first inn, soon after the Revolution, and, with his brother John, erected the first gristmill.

part. Windham Center, (p. v.) on Batavia Kil, in the w. part of the town, contains 2 churches, and has a pop. of 359. Hensonville, (p. v.) on the same stream, is the only village of the town, contains 124 inhabitants, and Big Hollow, (p. v.) in the e. part, 2 churches, and 2 houses. East Windham and Union Society are p. offices. The first settlement was made in 1790, by Geo. Stimpson, Abijah Stone, and Isaac Chaffin. Rev. Henry Stimpson was one of the earliest settled ministers. There are 5 churches in town.

HAMILTON COUNTY.

This county was formed from Montgomery, Feb. 12, 1816; but its independent organization has never been fully completed.¹ It occupies the central portions of the great wilderness region in the n. e. part of the State; is centrally distant 80 miles from Albany, and contains 1,745 sq. mi. Its surface is a rocky, mountainous, and hilly upland and is still mostly covered with the original forests. The highlands are divided into several ranges, generally distinct, but in many places sending out spurs that interlock with each other, and all extending n. e. and s. w. The Schroon Range—called in Fulton co. the Mayfield Mts.—crosses the s. e. corner of Hope. This range ends upon Lake Champlain at Crown Point, the highest point being Mt. Crane, in Warren co. The Baquet Range, parallel to the first, extends through the co. between Wells and Lake Pleasant. This range terminates upon Lake Champlain at Split Rock, the highest peak being Dix Peak, in Essex co. The Adirondack Range, next n., extends from the Mohawk, at Little Falls, n. e. through Morehouse, Arietta, Long Lake, Gilman, and Wells, ending at Trembleau Point, on Lake Champlain, Mt. Marcy being the highest peak, and the highest point in the State. Its course is in a wave or undulating line occupying a space of 4 to 6 mi. in width. Next n. is the Au Sable Range, extending n. of the Fulton chain of lakes and Long and Racket Lakes. The highest points are Mt. Emmons, in this co., and Mt. Seward, in Franklin co. Spurs from this range occupy the entire n. part of the co. and extend into St. Lawrence and Herkimer cos.²

Within the valleys between these mountain ranges are several remarkable chains of lakes, many of them connected by considerable streams and all affording a large amount of boat navigation. These lakes are generally long and narrow, are bordered by steep banks and high mountain peaks. Their waters are clear and cold, and they form the most interesting features of the landscape. Although flowing in different directions, separated by high mountains, and extending over an area of more than 60 mi., they have a nearly uniform elevation.³ The first chain on the s., commencing in Stratford, Fulton co., includes several small ponds in the s. e. corner of Hope, several ponds in Johnsburgh, Warren co., and Schroon and Paradox Lakes in Essex co. The second chain embraces Jerseyfield Lake and several others in Herkimer co., flowing s., Piseco, Round, Spy, and Ox Bow Lakes, Lake Pleasant, and a great number of smaller ones, all flowing into Sacandaga River. The third chain, lying between the two highest ranges of mountains, is composed of lakes less in extent than either of the other chains. It comprises Woodhull Reservoir and about 20 small lakes, principally in Herkimer co., flowing into Black River; a large number of small ponds in the immediate vicinity, flowing into West Canada Creek; Indian, Square, Beaver, Wilmurt, and a dozen smaller ones, in Hamilton co., flowing into Black and Indian Rivers; and the Indian Lakes, flowing into the Hudson. In Essex co. this chain embraces Lakes Rich, Sanford, and Henderson, and numerous others, lying near the foot of Mt. Marcy. The fourth or n. chain is the most extensive of all. It comprises Brauntingham and other Lakes in Lewis co., flowing into Moose and Black Rivers; the Fulton chain and about 20 other lakes in the n. part of Herkimer, respectively flowing into Beaver and Moose Rivers; Cranberry Lake and many others in the s. part of St. Lawrence, flowing into Oswegatchie and Grasse Rivers; Tappers, Racket, Forked, and Long Lakes, and 50 others, in Hamilton co., and a large number in Franklin, flowing into Racket River; St. Regis Lake, Osgoods Pond, and numerous others, into St. Regis River; Ragged Lake, Round and Ingraham Ponds, into Salmon River; Lake Placid, into the Au Sable; the Chateaugay Lakes, into Chateaugay River; and the Chazy Lakes, into Chazy River. All these last named lakes are in Hamilton, Franklin, ¹ Now the honor of Alexander Hamilton. The territory was ceded in Herkimer co. Feb. 16, 1791, but was re-annexed to Montgomery March 31, 1797. It is incomplete its organization because it has a sufficient population to entitle it to a number of A. S. 4033. It remained appended to Montgomery until 1808, when it was annexed to Fulton on the erection of the latter co. Courts were established in 1817.

² This region was called by the natives Coughsavage, "the great wilderness." The following entry on a map published about the period of the Revolution, or soon after, gives the prevailing opinion of that day concerning these lands:—"Through this tract of land runs a chain of mountains, which, from Lake Champlain on one side and the river St. Lawrence on the other side, show their tops always white with snow; but altho' this one unfavorable circumstance has hitherto secured it from the claws of the hairy land jobbers, yet no doubt it is in future to furnish a comfortable retreat for many industrious families."

Essex, and Clinton cos., in close proximity to each other. The streams, forming the outlets of the lakes, are mostly small. The whole region being a mountainous plateau higher than the surrounding country, the streams that rise here flow in all directions and form tributaries of the St. Lawrence, Lake Champlain, the Hudson, Mohawk, and Black Rivers. Several of the rivers have the same name as the lakes which respectively form their headwaters; as the Racket, Chazy, and Chateaugay.¹

This whole region is primitive, the rock being principally gneiss. Calciferous sandstone and Trenton limestone are found upon Saenodaga River. White limestone is also found in several localities. Peat is found in great abundance in the vales, or natural meadows, which extend along the valleys. Iron ore and graphite are both found,—though no surveys have been made to ascertain their extent. A large amount of labor has been expended in mining for silver; with what success is unknown. The soil is a light, sandy loam, and, except in the valleys, is not susceptible of profitable cultivation. The mountain sides are covered with a thin growth of forest trees, and when cleared seem incapable of supporting vegetation. The valleys at first are productive, but, being deficient in lime, as soon as the vegetable mold is exhausted they become barren.

The county seat is located at Sageville, in the town of Lake Pleasant.² The co. buildings, consisting of a courthouse, jail, and clerk's office, were erected in 1840. Each town supports its own poor, and the co. poor are provided for by the Superintendent at the most convenient place. There has never been a paper printed within the co.³ The public works are entirely prospective.⁴ Most of the territory of the co. is included in the Totten and Crossfield Purchase of 1773.⁵ Grants within the limits of the co. were made in colonial times to Sir Jeffrey Amherst, Henry Balfour, and Thomas Palmer. Arthursboro, in Morehouse, was granted to Arthur Noble. The first settlement was made about 1700.

ARIETTA⁶—was formed from Lake Pleasant, May 13, 1836. A part of Long Lake was taken off in 1837. It extends from the s. w. border northward nearly across the co., a little w. of the center. Its surface is much broken, and it contains a great number of wild, picturesque lakes. Of these, Racket and Forked Lakes, in the n. part, and Piseco,⁷ in the s., are the most important. The principal streams are the w. and s. branches of Saenodaga River. A considerable amount of lumbering is carried on.⁸ Piseco, formerly a p. o., and once a busy village of some 250 inhabitants, is now nearly deserted, and contains but 4 families.⁹ There is no p. o. in town. The first settler was Shadrack Dunning, at the e. end of Piseco Lake, in 1827, and David Woodworth, in the s. part, about the same time. Rensselaer Van Rensselaer, of Albany, settled in 1834.¹⁰

GILMAN¹¹—was formed from Wells, April 23, 1839. A part was annexed to Wells in 1858. It is an interior town, extending in a long, narrow strip near the e. border of the co. Its surface is much broken by mountains and diversified by small lakes. Several of the highest peaks in the co. are in this town; but their elevations have never been ascertained. It is the least populous town in the State. Gilman (p. o.) is in the s. border. Most of the settlers are in the s. part, a few only living on the extreme n. border, quite isolated from their fellow townsmen. Philip Rhine-lander, a wealthy merchant of New York, began the first settlement.¹²

² The first co. officers were Richard Peck, For Judge; Saml. Galt, Clerk; James Harris, Sherrif; G. R. Parlour, Dist. Comm.; and Thos. H. Kline, Sargeant.

Hall, in July, 1773. It was estimated to contain 800,000 a. res.—General Minutes, A. S. L. P., p. 31.

⁶ It was surveyed by Ebenezer Jossip and associates.

HOPE¹—was formed from Wells, April 15, 1818. A part of Lake Pleasant was annexed May 10, 1847. It lies upon Sacondaga River, in the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is broken and mountainous. It is the most populous town in the co., and the settlements are chiefly in the e. part. The w. portion is still a wilderness, known only to hunters. The mountains are very irregular; but in general they extend upon both sides of the river, and, as usual in this region, have their longest slope to the s. w. The principal tributary of the Sacondaga is East Stony Creek; and the main range of mountains lies between this stream and the river.² Lumbering and tanning are extensively carried on. Hope Center, Benson, and Benson Center are p. offices. Hope Falls (p. o.) is a hamlet. Settlement was begun in 1790, in the s. border of the town.³

INDIAN LAKE—was formed from Gilman, Long Lake, and Wells, Nov. 13, 1858. It lies upon the e. border of the co., n. of the center.⁴

LAKE PLEASANT—was formed from Johnstown, Fulton co., May 26, 1812. Parts of Stafford, Johnstown, and Salisbury were annexed at the time of the formation of Hamilton co. Morehouse was taken off in 1835, Arietta in 1836, and a part of Long Lake in 1837. A part was annexed to Hope in 1847, and a part to Wells in 1858. It is the central town of the co., and includes a long tract extending from n. to s. to within a few mi. of each extremity of the co. Its surface is broken and mountainous, and most of it is still a wilderness. Lake Pleasant, from which it derives its name, is about 4 mi. long by 1 wide. Round Lake, $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. from this, is very irregular in form, and about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi. across in the widest part.⁵ The Eckford chain of lakes, in the n. part, are in the midst of wild mountain solitudes. The upper of these is named Janet Lake.⁶ The principal streams in the s. are the n. and w. branches of the Sacondaga, and in the n. the Racket and its tributaries. A mine of graphite has been opened 4 mi. n. of Sageville. Limestone mixed with silex and mica, from which quicklime is obtained, is found s. of Lake Pleasant. Lumbering and shingle making are carried on to a considerable extent. Lake Pleasant, (p. o.), at the foot of the lake, contains a hotel and 2 dwellings. Sageville⁷ (p. v.) is situated on a beautiful elevation 50 feet above Lake Pleasant⁸ and Round Lake, about one-fourth of a mi. distant from each. It contains the co. buildings, a large hotel, a church, and several dwellings. Settlement was commenced about 1795, by Joseph Spier, of Columbia co.⁹ Meetings were first held by Rev. Elisha Yale; and the first settled minister was Rev. Ryan Bristol.

LONG LAKE—was formed from Arietta, Lake Pleasant, Morehouse, and Wells, May 4, 1837. It extends across the n. end of the co., and is named from the principal lake within its borders. Its surface is very broken, and numerous small lakes are scattered through its forests. Settlement was begun in Township 21, a few years before the date of its organization.¹⁰ There is no p. o. in town.

MOREHOUSE¹¹—was formed from Lake Pleasant, April 13, 1835. A part of Long Lake was taken off in 1837. It extends along the w. border of the co., from the s. extremity to Long Lake.

a costly mansion on Elm Lake, in Township 9, several mi. distant from neighbors. He remained here until the death of his wife, in 1818 or 19, and soon after, being struck with paralysis, was obliged to return to New York. The property, after repeated sales, is now owned by Dr. Elliott, an oculist of New York City. Gilman and his sons were the next settlers. John Carter, Andrew Morrison, Samuel Johnson, Jr., Wm. B. Peck, Wm. Orcutt, and others were early settlers. Mrs. Blumlander was the first person that died. Susan Gilman taught the first school, in 1823. No man has ever been licensed in town.

⁴ This town has been formed since the statistics were collected; and its description and history are included in those of the towns from which it was formed.

making the geological survey of the 24 district. She was the daughter of Henry Eckford, the celebrated shipbuilder, from whom the chain of lakes was named.

⁹ Benj. Macomber, John Barnes, Joseph Davis, Joshua and Jonathan Rich, Jesse Callop, Caleb Nichols, Geo. Wright, Ephraim Page, Daniel Fish, Henry Burton, Lemuel Holmes, and R. Saterlee settled in town before 1806. The first birth was that of Olivia Spier, in 1806; and the second, that of Eleanor Macomber, who died a missionary in Burmah. Geo. Wright kept the first inn, in 1806, and Wm. B. Peck the first store, in 1817. A saw-mill was built by — Foster, in 1795; and a gristmill, by Joseph Spier, in 1797.

Its surface is hilly and mountainous. In the several valleys which extend across the town are numerous lakes. Jerseyfield Lake, upon the s. border, is the principal lake in the s. part. The 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th lakes of the Fulton chain, in the s. part, discharge their waters into Moose River. Jones, Deer, Goose, and several other lakes flow into West Canada Creek. Morehouseville, in the s. part, is a p.o. The Arthurboro Patent was mostly within the limits of this town. The tract of 50,000 acres purchased by Jonathan Lawrence was also partly in this town.¹ The first settlement was commenced, under the agency of Andrew K. Morehouse, in 1832.

WELLS²—was formed from Mayfield and Northampton, Fulton co., May 28, 1805. Hope was taken off in 1818, a part of Long Lake in 1837, and Gilman in 1839. A part of Mayfield was annexed June 19, 1812; parts of Mayfield and Northampton in 1816; and parts of Gilman and Lake Pleasant in 1858. It lies along the e. border of the co. and forms a part of the hunting grounds of Northern N. Y. Its s. part is inhabited by a few families on Indian Lake. It is intersected by mountain ranges separated by deep, narrow valleys. The highest peaks are 2,000 to 2,500 feet high and are covered by masses of naked rock. The three branches of the Senoandaga unite in the s. part, forming a large stream. Jessup and Cedar Rivers, in the n., are large streams. Indian Lake is a sheet of water about 6 mi. long; and further n. is a cluster of small lakes flowing into the Hudson. There are numerous other small lakes in other parts, known only to hunters. The soil is light and sandy. Calciferous sandstone appears in situ above Wells Village. Wells (p.v.) contains a large tannery, gristmill, sawmill, and 15 dwellings; Pickleville, one-half mi. above, contains 2 churches and 15 dwellings. Settlement began in 1798.³

² Mr. Morehouse bought a tract of land, built a sawmill, store, and dwelling, and came in with his family early in Aug. 1834. He began a small village 1 mi. w. of Morehouseville, called "Be-thornville?" but the project failed. Dennis and Henry Tucker, Theodore Marché, Ezra Combs, Jonathan Tibb, Christian Weaver, Elias Beckard, J. B. Beily, and B. Bennett were early settlers. The first birth was that of a son of Wm. Baker; the first marriage, that of David Bushnell and Miss Squires; and the first death, that of a son of Christian Weaver, by a falling tree. A gristmill was first built in 1834, by John Cummings; and the first tannery, in 1834, by Henry and Theodor Larkin.

HERKIMER COUNTY.

THIS county was formed from Montgomery, Feb. 16, 1791.¹ Onondaga was taken off in 1794, Oneida and a part of Chenango in 1798; the present territory of Hamilton co. was taken off and annexed to Montgomery in 1797; parts of Montgomery co. were annexed April 7, 1817; and parts of Richfield and Plainfield, Otsego co., were annexed in forming Winfield in 1816. It is centrally distant 80 mi. from Albany, and contains 1,745 sq. mi. Its surface is a hilly upland, with a series of ridges extending in a general n. and s. direction. Mohawk River flows e. through the co. in a deep valley which cuts the ridges at right angles and separates the highland into two distinct parts. A broad ridge extends from the s. border to the Mohawk, and thence n. of that river along the w.

bank of East Canada Creek to the n. line of the co. The Hasenclover Mts., another broad ridge, lie along the w. border of the co. n. of the Mohawk. From the Mohawk the highlands rise toward the s. in a series of hills, the declivities of which are steep and their summits 500 to 1,000 ft. high. North of the river the surface gradually rises to a height of 1,000 to 1,500 ft., where it spreads out into a rocky and broken plateau region, the highest summits being 2,500 to 3,000 ft. above tide.

Mohawk River breaks through a mountain ridge at Little Falls, the valley forming a natural channel of communication between Lake Ontario and Hudson River. At this place the mountains on each side of the river are masses of naked rock rising nearly perpendicular to a height of 500 to 600 ft. An intervalle, with an average width of 2 mi., extends along the river w. of the pass, and from it the land rises on each side in gradual slopes. East of this point the Mohawk flows for some distance through a valley bordered by steep and nearly perpendicular hills. The river receives from the n., Sterling, West Canada, Cathataehua, and East Canada Creeks; and from the s. Furnace, Browns Hollow, and Nowadaga Creeks. East Canada Creek² forms a portion of the e. boundary of the co., and receives as tributaries Trammel, Spruce, and several other small creeks. West Canada Creek flows s. w. through Wilmut, Ohio, and Russia, thence s. e. along the w. border of Russia, thence s. through Newport, Fairport, and Herkimer, to the Mohawk. It receives from the e. Black, White, and North Creeks, and from the w. several small brooks. Several small streams take their rise in the s. part of the co. and form branches of the Unadilla. The n. part of the co. is yet an unbroken wilderness. It is a wild, mountainous region, with very little land susceptible of cultivation. The streams, usually flowing in deep, rocky ravines, form headwaters of Black, Moose, Beaver, and Oswegatchie Rivers.

The portion of the co. lying n. of a line extending w. of Brocketts Bridge, on East Canada Creek, is covered with primary rocks.³ This same formation also outcrops at Little Falls on the Mohawk. Rising successively above the primary are the Trenton limestone, appearing in Norway and Russia; the Etna slate, appearing upon the summits of all the hills immediately n. of the Mohawk; the Frankfort slate, appearing immediately s. of the river; the Oneida conglomerate and Clinton group, extending in a belt through near the center of the s. half of the co.; the Onondaga salt group, waterlime, Onondaga and corniferous limestones, appearing in thin layers next s.; and the Marcellus shales and limestones of the Helderbergh Range, covering the summits of the s. hills. These rocks yield an abundance of lime, waterlime, and building material in nearly every part of the co.; and for these purposes they are extensively quarried. Drift is found in deep deposits in many parts of the co. The useful minerals are few in number.⁴

Agriculture forms the leading pursuit. The hilly character of the surface particularly adapts this co. to pasturage; and dairying has long been the leading branch of industry.⁵ Hops are

⁴ Gypsum is found in small quantities; and this co. is said to be the most easterly point in the State where it can be obtained. The discovery of small particles of anthracite, found associated with sandstone near Little Falls, has led to the erroneous supposition that coal might be obtained in the vicinity. Among the other minerals found are crystals of quartz, adapted to optical instruments, iron sand, iron and copper pyrites, lead ore, heavy spar, graphite, alum, and aluna slate.

⁵ The amount of cheese produced in this co. is three times as great as in any other co. in the State.

largely produced. At Little Falls, and a few other localities, considerable manufacturing is carried on.

The county seat is located at the village of Herkimer.¹ The courthouse is a fine brick building fronting Main St., near the center of the village. The jail is a stone building, on the opposite side of the st. from the courthouse. The clerk's office is a fireproof brick building, upon the commonsense lot, fronting Court St. The pothouse is located upon a farm of 65 acres 9½ mi. S. of the courthouse. The average number of inmates is 130, supported at a weekly cost of $1.50 each. The farm yields a revenue of about $700. A school is taught about 6 months in the year. The institution is in good condition and seems to be well managed.² The works of internal improvement within the co. are the Erie Canal and the N. Y. Central R. R., both extending along the valley of the Mohawk.

Four weekly newspapers are now published in the co.,³

The lands of this co. adjacent to the river were granted mostly in the first half of the last century, and the greater portion now settled was conveyed before the Revolution. The S. portion and small tracts in other sections remained in possession of the State Government until conveyed to Macomb and others.⁴

² The two main buildings of this institution are of stone, and are each 24 by 46 feet.

³ The Albany was commenced at Herkimer about 1802 by E. J. Corey. It was purchased by David Holt and J. B. Robbins, and discontinued in Jan. 1805.

The Tarbo & Monitor was commenced in the same office in 1805 by Holt & Robbins. It was discontinued in 1807. The Herkimer Phoenix was commenced in 1807 or '08 by E. J. Corey, and was discontinued about 1810.

The Herkimer American was commenced in 1810 by J. H. & H. Prentiss. Wm. L. Stone afterward became the publisher. In 1813 or '14 he sold it to Edward P. Seymour, who continued its publication until 1820, when it was discontinued.

Bowler Hill was commenced at Herkimer in 1810 by G. G. Plimney. Its name was changed in 1812 to

The Herkimer American, under which title it was published a few years.

The People's Friend was commenced at Little Falls, in Sept. 1821, by Edward M. Griffin. It was successively published by Joseph A. Newman, Horatio N. Johnson, and E. G. Palmer & H. N. Johnson. In 1870 it was published as

The People's Friend and Little Falls Gazette. In July, 1854, it passed into the hands of N. S. Benton & Co., who changed its name to

The Mohawk Courier, under which title it is now published by A. W. Faxon.

The Herkimer Herald was commenced in 1828 by John Carpenter. It was removed in a few years to Oswego.

The Republican Farmer's Free Press was commenced at Herkimer in 1830 by — Holt; B. B. Hartman, editor. In 1834 it was removed to Little Falls and its name changed to

The Herkimer County Whig, under which title it was published about 2 years by Earned W. Smith.

The Impulsor was published a short time at Little Falls by Earned W. Smith.

The Herkimer County Journal was commenced in

Dec. 1837, by a company, J. C. Endicott, editor, E. P. Seymour, printer. In 1838 it passed into the hands of O. A. Rowe, and in 1849 to Orlando Squires, who removed it to Little Falls. He was succeeded by Daniel Ayer, by whom the paper is now published.

Key of David, Small papers. A few numbers were issued in 1837 of 54 by O. Squires. The Little Falls Eclectic Bulletin, paper was designed as a daily, but was issued only tri-weekly.

The Watchman was issued by Squires about 6 months in 18—.

The Democratic Advocate was issued by Squires about 2 weeks in 18—.

The Enterprise was issued at Little Falls in 1830 by E. M. Griffin. In 1841 it was succeeded by

The Mohawk Mirror, semi-weekly. This paper was discontinued in 1844.

The Tribune and Spirit of '98 was published at Little Falls a short time in 18— by H. N. Johnson.

The Herkimer Freeman was commenced at Little Falls in July, 1844, by O. A. Rowe. In 1850 he removed it to Mohawk and changed the name to

The Mohawk Times. It was soon after discontinued.

The Franklin Democrat was commenced in 1842 by J. M. Lyon & W. R. Holmes. In 1844 it was removed to Herkimer and its name changed to

The Herkimer County Democrat. In 1848, Mr. Lyon was succeeded by Robert Earl. In 1850 C. C. Withers came into interest in its publication, and in March, 1854, he became sole proprietor. In Sept. 1854, J. L. Hays was associated with Mr. Withers, and in Dec. 1856, the name of the paper was changed to

The Herkimer American. In May, 1860, Mr. Hays withdrew, and in July following the paper passed into the hands of E. W. Cram & J. T. Stevens, who changed its name to

The Herkimer County Democrat. Withers came soon after became proprietor, and in June, 1861, the paper passed into the hands of H. G. Croucher, its present publisher.

The True Independent was commenced in Jan. 1857, by G. W. Fungay, editor, Wm. L. Faxon & H. W. Cram, publishers. In Jan. 1858, it was removed to Little Falls.

The Mohawk Valley Sentinel was commenced at Mohawk in Jan. 1859, by F. W. Peters & G. W. Cram. In May following Mr. Peters became sole proprietor, and is its present publisher.

The first settlements were made upon the river intervals above Little Falls, about 1722, by a colony of Palatinates. Accessions were made to their number from time to time, and up to the close of the Revolution they constituted almost the sole inhabitants of the co. During the French War of 1756, this colony was twice invaded, and numbers of the people were killed or carried away prisoners.¹ During the Revolution also it was repeatedly invaded; the buildings and crops were destroyed; and at last the inhabitants were obliged to abandon their homes and seek protection in the lower part of the valley. The German Flats were invaded by a body of 300 Tories and 152 Indians, under Brant, in Sept. 1778. This party burned 63 dwellings, 57 barns, 3 grist-mills, 2 sawmills, and killed or took off 235 horses, 229 horned cattle, 269 sheep, and 93 oxen. Only 2 persons lost their lives; and the forts were not attacked. A party of militia pursued them on their retreat, but without effecting any thing. Andrustown, in Warren, was burned in July of the same year. A stockade fort was built at the German Flats, and another at Danube, a short time previous to the commencement of the French War. In 1776 another fort was built at Herkimer, s. of the Mohawk; and strong blockhouses were erected in several other parts of the co.²

This co. shared in the loss of men at the battle of Oriskany. Gen. Arnold came as far as German Flats in the summer of 1777, on his way to relieve Fort Schuyler; and from this place was sent the tory Han Yost Schuyler, to spread alarm among the savages in St. Leger's camp and hasten the abandonment of the siege.

After the war the settlements rapidly spread, and within 15 years over 10,000 persons from New England and the eastern cos. of the State located in the central and s. portions of the co. From that time its progress has been gradual and continually prosperous.

COLUMBIA³—was formed from Warren, June 8, 1812. It lies on the s. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is rolling and moderately hilly, with an average elevation of 500 to 600 ft. above the Mohawk. The streams are small brooks, a portion of them flowing s. to the Mohawk and the remainder flowing s. to the Unadilla. The soil is a clayey loam and generally fertile. Columbia Center (Columbia p.o.) contains 98 inhabitants; Cedarville, (p.v.) on the line of Litchfield, 2 churches, a tannery, and 115 inhabitants. South Columbia, in the s. e. part, is a p.o. The first settlement was commenced before the Revolution, by families from the Mohawk;⁴ but their improvements were abandoned during the war. The first religious services (Ref. Prot. D.) were held at an early period. Abram Rosegrantz was the first preacher.⁵

DANUBE⁶—was formed from Minden, (Montgomery co.,) April 7, 1817. Stark was taken

⁴ Among the early settlers were Conrad Orendorf, Conrad Frank, Conrad Ehmer, Frederick Christian, Timothy Frank, Nicholas Lightball, Joseph Meyer, and Henry Frank. The settlement was named "Council-town" at an early day.—Benton's Herkimer, p. 300.

⁵ Philip Arnsman taught the first school, German, in 1756, and Joel Phelps an English school, in 1796. The first store was kept by David W. Golden and Benj. Mix, in 1796. The first grist-mill was built in 1761-62, by Andrew Miller and Geo. Bell, at Miller's Mills.

off in 1828. It lies on the E. border of the co., S. of the center. Its surface is hilly in the center, rising 400 to 800 ft. above the Mohawk; and it is broken by ravines on each side of the valley of the creek. Fine flats extend along the Mohawk on the S. border. The principal stream is Nowadaga Creek, which flows S. E. through the town near the center. The soil is gravelly in the S. and a sandy loam in the S. In the N. part are two sulphur springs. Newville (p. v.) contains 1 church and 20 houses, and Indian Castle (Danube p. o., a hamlet) 1 church. Settlements are supposed to have commenced as early as 1730; but no records have been preserved. During the Revolution, the settlements were broken up, and did not commence again until about 1780.¹ The first patents are dated 1750-31.² A mission church was established here by Sir William Johnson in 1768. This church had a bell, which the Indians attempted to carry off in the war, and for that purpose secreted it. Search was made in vain. After sufficient time had elapsed the thieves, on returning by night to bear away the coveted treasure, had their presence and business betrayed by the unwarly member which they neglected to muffle. As it was borne along on a pole, its ringing brought the Germans to its rescue with such weapons as they in their haste could snatch, and the bell was recovered. The present church occupying the site of the old Mission Church is known as the "Indian Castle Church." There are 2 union churches in town. This town was the residence of King Hendrick³ and Joseph Brant,⁴ the celebrated Mohawk chiefs, and of Gen. Nicholas Herkimer.⁵ King Hendrick sustained a high character for sagacity and integrity, was warmly attached to the English, and especially to Sir Wm. Johnson, whom he accompanied to Lake George in the summer of 1755, where he was killed. He was recognized as a chief as early as 1697.

FAIRFIELD—was formed from Norway, Feb. 19, 1796. A part of Newport was taken off in 1806, and a part of Little Falls in 1820. It lies in the interior of the co., near the center. Its surface is a hilly upland, the center rising into a ridge 800 to 1,000 ft. above West Canada Creek.⁶ The streams are small. West Canada Creek flows S. on the W. border. The soil on the uplands is mostly clay, and in the valleys it is gravelly, with local drift deposits of sand. Several fine quarries of limestone are found in different parts.⁷ Fairfield, (p. v.) near the center, contains 3 churches, an academy,⁸ a cheese box factory, and 60 houses; Middleville, (p. v.) on the line of Newport, 1 church, a woolen factory, tannery,⁹ chair factory, grist and saw mill. Pop. 295. Settlements were first made in 1770, by 3 German families named Maltanner, Goodbrodt, and Shaffer, who located upon the Royal Grant.¹⁰ The first preacher was Rev. — Fields, (Presb.), in 1791.¹¹

⁴ Small portions of Fall Hill, Vanchar's, and L'Honnemellien's Patents, the whole of Lindsey's, and parts of J. Vrooman's, C. Golden's, Van Horn's, and Lansing's Patents are in this town.

⁷ General Herkimer's house is still standing, 3 mi. below Little Falls, S. of the canal. It is of imported brick, and was built in 1765, at a cost of $7,500 to $8,000. Some of the rooms were finished in panel work and were plastered on the brick walls, and in its day the house was surpassed by none in this section. It is now owned by Daniel Conner. Efforts were made to burn it in the Revolution by throwing combustibles upon the roof; but further attempts of this kind were prevented by covering it with a layer of clay. Gen. Herkimer's grave is 25 rods S. E. from the house, on a knoll, and is marked by a plain white tombstone inscribed as follows:—

NICHOLAS HERKIMER,

Died

Aug. 17, 1777.

Ten days after the battle of Oriskany, in which engagement he received wounds which caused his death.

Attmpts have been repeatedly made to obtain the means to erect a suitable monument; but, notwithstanding the resolution of Congress on the 4th of Oct. 1777, that the Governor and Council of New York be desired to erect a monument, at Continental expense, of the value of $500, to the memory of the late Brigadier Herkimer, who commanded the militia of this county in the State of N. Y., and who was killed fighting a gallant defense of the liberty of these States; this order has been neglected, and the citizen chief has forgotten by the country for whose cause he gave his life. He was chairman of the Taxation committee of safety. At the time of his death he was about 50 years of age.

¹³ These settlers, though Royalists, were attacked by the Indians in 1779. Two members of the families were killed, and the others were carried into captivity. Families named Heller, Waddeker, and Pickett settled near the Mammoth Inn, and others settled on the Glen Purchase, before the war. Cornelius Chaffield settled in March, and Van Harn in May, 1755; Josiah, David, and Lester Johnson, John Buckley, Ben. Bowen, John Eaton, Nath. and Wm. Brown, Sam'l Lewy, David Busey, John, Absha, Wyan, Gant et Eaton, John Buckley, John Wiley, Amos, Daniel, Daniel, Nathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathan, Nathan, Amos and Jas. Hulse, — Nelly and Peter and Betty Ward, all from New England, settled soon after. The first store was kept by Smith & Dana, in 1742-93. The first gristmill was built by ——— and the first sawmill by Samuel & Paul Green. A school was first set up in 1755 by Wm. D. Gray, but others had been previously taught in the S. part of the town.

FRANKFORT¹—was formed from German Flats, Feb. 5, 1796. It was divided in the formation of Oneida co. in 1798, and a part annexed to Deerfield. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the Mohawk. Its surface is a broad intervalle, rising into hills of moderate elevation on the s. w. border, the highest points being about 500 ft. above the river. The Mohawk flows s. e. on the s. border. The streams are small brooks and creeks. The soil on the uplands is a clayey and slaty loam, and on the flats an alluvial loam. Limest. ne. ledges are found in the s. w. The most important of these is called Horsebone Ledge. The stone is whitish and makes excellent lime. Slate and calciferous sandstone are also found in some places. Frankfort, (p. v.) in the s. e., near the Mohawk, contains 4 churches, 1 bank, a grist and saw mill, woolen factory, and distillery. Pop. 1,150. New Graefenberg (p. v.) is the seat of a water cure, $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. from Frica, Howards Bush (Frankfort Hill p. v.) is w. of the center. Jacob Folts made the first settlement, on Lot 3, Burnetsfield Patent, before the Revolution.² The census reports 7 churches in town.³

GERMAN FLATS¹—was formed, as a district of "Tryon co." March 24, 1772. Its name was exchanged with the Kingsland District, March 8, 1773. It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. Frankfort, Litchfield, and Warren were taken off in 1796, and a part of Little Falls in 1829. It lies upon the s. bank of the Mohawk, s. of the center of the co. A fine intervalle extends along the river, and from it the surface gradually rises to a height of 300 to 400 ft. and spreads out into an undulating upland. The valley of Fulmer Creek divides this upland into two nearly equal parts. The other streams are small brooks. The soil is a clay and slaty loam upon the hills, and a gravelly loam and alluvium in the valleys. Mohawk, (p. v.) a canal village, in the s. w. part of the town, was incorp. April 16, 1844. It contains 3 churches, a bank, and newspaper office. Pop. 1,355. Hion (p. v.) is a canal village, $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. w. of Mohawk. It contains 2 churches, a bank, and Remington's rifle factory. Pop. 813. Fort Herkimer, upon the Mohawk, in the e. part, contains 2 churches and 20 houses. Dennisons Corners (Dennison p. v.) and Pains Hollow are hamlets. The first settlements were made in 1722, by a colony of Palatinates who had previously located upon the Hudson.⁵ The population rapidly increased until 1756, when the whole settlement was laid waste by a party of Canadians, French, and Indians.⁶ A council was held with the Indians at this place, June 28, 1775, at which the Oneidas and Tuscaroras agreed to remain neutral.⁷ During the Revolution the Indians committed many murders in town; and in July, 1782, they destroyed nearly the whole settlement.⁸ The German inhabitants early espoused the Patriot cause; and the first liberty-pole in the Mohawk Valley, erected here, was cut down by Sheriff White and a body of militia, who came up from Johnstown for the purpose, in the spring of 1775. At the close of the war the settlements progressed with great rapidity. A treaty was held with the Indians at Fort Herkimer, June 28, 1785, at which time the Oneidas and Tuscaroras ceded to the State the territory lying between Oneida and Chenango Rivers. The first church was built of logs, in 1725; it was superseded by one built of stone, in 1767. The building is still standing, and is the most ancient structure in the co. It was commenced under a permit granted in 1746, but from apprehension of Indian troubles it was delayed, and a new permit was granted Oct. 6, 1751. It was not fully completed for use until 1767. On the 24th of Sept. 1730, Nicholas Wolever deeded Lot 20 of Burnetsfield Patent for church and school purposes. A society was formed soon after, and the conveyance was perfected April 26, 1733. Lots 15, 46, and 47 in German Flats were conveyed Sept. 18, 1755, by Hans Dedrick Stelly, and others, to Peter Remsen, for the support of the Ref. Prot. D. church at this place. The first preacher was Rev. A. Rosegrant.⁹

² Among the other early settlers were Conrad Folts, Andrew Piper, David Boderick, Aaron James, — Morgan, Evan Evans, Joseph Harris, John Morris, John Myers, and Adam Weber. Several Welsh families settled about 1800. The first inn was kept by John Myers in 1799; the first sawmill was built by John H. Bisher, in 1794; and the first gristmill by Adam J. Campbell, in 1808.

³ 4 M. E. Bap., Ref. Prot. D., and Univ.

⁴ Named from the German settlers, who located on the Mohawk Flats at this place.

⁶ This attack was made Nov. 11, 1756. The settlers were totally unprepared, and the greater part were murdered or captured without resistance. The French account states that a mill, 99 houses, and a large number of barns, were destroyed, 40 persons were killed, and 150 taken prisoners. These numbers were doubtless much exaggerated. A small stockaded fort, called Fort Koner, was garrisoned at this time, and afforded shelter for a portion of the inhabitants. On the 30th of April, 1758, the French and Indians made another attack upon the settlers, and killed 20, losing 35 of their own number.

⁸ In July, 1782, a party of 600 Indians and Tories entered the settlement, and were discovered by Peter Wolever, who with Augustus Hess, lived about 50 rods from the fort. Both families escaped to the fort, except Hess, who was killed at the place of refuge. Valentine Starring was tortured without hearing of the fort, which was too feeble to attempt a rescue.—Bond's Herkimer, p. 106.

HERKIMER¹—was formed from Kingslaud District, March 7, 1788. A part of Palatine (Montgomery co.) was annexed in 1791. Norway and Schuyler were taken off in 1792, a part of Newport in 1806, and a part of Little Falls in 1829. A part was annexed to Schuyler in 1808, and restored in 1811. It lies on the s. bank of the Mohawk, near the center of the settled portions of the co. A wide intervalle extends along the river, and from it the surface gradually rises to the g. line of the town. West Canada Creek flows s. through near the center, dividing the upland into two distinct ridges. The Hasenclever Mts., w. of the creek, are 600 to 800 ft. above the Mohawk. The soil upon the hills is a gravelly loam, and in the valleys a deep, fertile alluvium. Herkimer,² (p. v.), upon the Mohawk, w. of the mouth of West Canada Creek, was incorp. April 6, 1807. It contains the co. buildings, 3 churches, a bank, newspaper office, paper mill,³ and gristmill. Pop. 1371. It is a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. Eden (p. o.) is a hamlet, in the s. e. corner, on the line of Fairfield and Little Falls. The early history of the town is blended with that of German Flats, of which it formed a part until its organization as a town. The first settlements were made by Palatinates, under the patronage of G. v. Hunter, in 1722.⁴ It had its share of suffering during the Revolution; and all the patriot families that remained during the war were those sheltered by Fort Dayton. This fortress stood upon a point of the stone ridge about 30 rods above the present site of the courthouse. After the destruction of Fort Schuyler by flood and fire, in May, 1781, Forts Dayton and Herkimer became the frontier defenses of the Mohawk Valley.⁵ After the war, many of the Indians and Tories who had been actively engaged in hostilities returned to the settlements; but they were received by the settlers in a way little calculated to inspire sentiments of friendship, and the greater part emigrated to more congenial places.⁶ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed at an early period, by Rev. A. Rosegrantz; but the precise date has been lost.⁷

LEITCHFIELD⁸—was formed from German Flats, Feb. 5, 1796. A part of Winfield was taken off in 1816. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the Mohawk. Its surface is elevated and moderately hilly, its mean elevation being about 500 feet above the river. A series of ridges in the w. and s. are known as the "Dry Lots," no water being found upon them. The streams are small; some flow s. into the Unadilla and others s. into the Mohawk. In the n. part is a sulphur spring.⁹ Litchfield (p. v.) contains 1 church and about 15 houses; Cedar Lake (p. o.) 1 church and 9 houses; Jerusalem, a hamlet near the center, 2 churches and 7 houses. The first settlement was commenced about 1789, by Jabez Snow, on Snow Hill.¹⁰ The first religious services were held in 1794; Rev. — Spaulling was the first preacher.¹¹

LITTLE FALLS—was formed from Fairfield, Herkimer, and German Flats, Feb. 16, 1829. It lies in the interior of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is a broken upland, divided by the ³ This paper mill was established in 1849; it gives employment to 120 hands.

⁵ Lieut. Solomon Woodworth was stationed at Fort Dayton with a small force of Continental troops. He rendered great service to the settlers in this part of the Valley. In the summer of 1781, with 10 men, he went out to reconnoiter; but about 3 m. s. of Herkimer the party fell into an Indian ambuscade, and only 2 escaped. The commander and 20 men were killed, and Mrs. Smith, scalped by the Indians during the war, recovered and lived to a good old age. On the 6th of August, 1781, a party of Tories and Indians, under Donald McDonald, Scotch refugees, from Johnston, made an attack upon the settlement at Shells Bush. The inhabitants mostly fled to Fort Dayton; but John Chastin and his family, consisting of his wife and 6 sons, took refuge in their own house, which was a strong blockhouse. His two little sons, twins, 8 years of age, were taken prisoners; but the remainder of the family escaped within and secured the entrance. In trying to force the door, McDonald was wounded, and made prisoner. The attack continued until dark when the Tories fled, with a loss of 11 killed and 6 wounded. McDonald died of his wounds the next day. The two little boys were returned after the war.—Eden's Herkimer.

⁶ John Adam Hartman, an active and successful trader, was engaged in peddling services through the war. s. and e. of the place, an Indian came into an inn, in the w. part of this town, where Hartman was present, and getting intoxicated began to boast of his exploits and showed a telling gash made from the skin of a white child's arm and hand, with the nails still on. When the Indian left, Hartman found traces on the same road. They both passed into a swamp and the Indian never came out. In reply to questions put to him, he returned that he had saw the Indian, some distance ahead, swimming a log; and that he fell as it hit. Hartman was tried in 1780, but was acquitted. He lived in town till his death, in the spring of 1836.—Eden's Herkimer, p. 409.

⁸ Named from Litchfield, Conn., whence many of the early settlers came.

⁹ These hills have limestone ledges below, and the Hill is a rough scarp. These hills, 2 in number, are about 1000 ft. high each. Water is obtained by wells at an expense.

¹¹ Among the other early settlers were John P. Pett, Nathaniel Ball, and Ebenezer Durry (from N. H.) and Ezekiel Cross and S. Sherry, from Conn. Seth Hale, who settled 2 m. e. of Jerusalem. Wm. and Thos. Jones, Oliver Epler, Joseph Cook, and others, were also early settlers. The first marriage, that of Joseph and Luke Andrews, in 1790; the first marriage, that of Joseph and ———, in the same year; John and Mary (from N. H.) the first school; Joseph Shepard kept the first mill, 1793; J. Hays kept the first store; ——— Talbot built the first sawmill, and John H. Johnson the first gristmill, in 1790.

deep, narrow gorge of the Mohawk. A range of hills extend n. and s. from the village. They are rocky and precipitous near the river, but less rugged on the n. and s. borders.¹ The Mohawk flows s. e. through near the center of the town in a series of cascades and rapids. Its banks are rocky and in places precipitous. The soil is a sandy, gravelly loam. Little Falls, (p. v.) in the e. part, on the line of Manheim and Danube, was incorp. March 30, 1811. Its name was changed to "Rockton," April 16, 1850, and again changed to Little Falls, April 16, 1852. It is an important station on the N. Y. C. R. R. It contains 9 churches, a bank, 2 printing offices, the Little Fall Academy, a union school, and a large number of manufactories.² Pop. 3,984. Jacksonburgh, in the w., on the canal, has 206 inhabitants; and Bethel, in the s., 1 church and 15 houses. Paines Hollow is a p. o. Lots 12 and 13 of Burnetsfield Patent, embracing all the water-power n. of the river, were owned before the Revolution by — Petrie. This town also embraces portions of several other patents issued at an early period.³ The first settlements were made by a colony of Palatinates, in 1722.⁴ The settlers suffered much during the war, and most of them were driven off.⁵ The first settler at the village after the war was John Proteus, in 1790.⁶ A great impulse was given to the business and population of the place by the construction of the locks of the Western Navigation Co. in 1796.⁷ The first church was built about 1815. It was octagonal, with a steep roof, and surmounted by a cupola. The census reports 10 churches in town.⁸

MANHEIM⁹—was formed from Palatine, (Montgomery co.,) April 7, 1817. It lies on the n. bank of the Mohawk, upon the e. border of the co. Its surface gradually rises from the intervals along the Mohawk to the n. border, where it attains an elevation of 500 ft. above the river. East Canada Creek forms its e. boundary.¹⁰ Cathatachua Creek flows s. through near the center, and Bennett Brook flows s. e. through the n. e. corner. Upon East Canada Creek, 1 mi. above its mouth, is a series of cascades, where the water descends 180 ft. in three-fourths of a mi. The soil is a gravelly loam upon the upland, and a fine, fertile alluvium in the valleys. Brocketts Bridge, (p. v.) upon East Canada Creek, in the n. part, contains 2 churches, a large tannery,¹¹ gristmill, and 50 houses; and Inghams Mills, upon East Canada Creek, 3 mi. below Brocketts Bridge, a church and 25 houses. East Creek (p. o.) is a hamlet and station upon the N. Y. C. R. R., near the mouth of East Canada Creek. Manheim Center is a p. o. The first settlements were made by Germans, probably in about the year 1736.¹² During the Revolution they were frequently attacked by the Indians and were mostly destroyed. On the 30th of April, 1780, a party of 60 Tories and Indians fell upon the settlements at Rheimen Snyder's Bush, burned a gristmill, and carried 19 persons away into captivity.¹³ The first church, built in 1771 or '75, was burned during the war, and was re-built soon after. The census reports 5 churches; 2 M. E., 2 Union, and Ref. Prot. D.

Wm. Carr, Wm. Morales, Washington Britton, Alpheus Parkhurst, John Drummond, Eben Britton, and Josiah Skinner,—all of whom came in town between 1790 and 1800.

⁸ Bapt. Ev. Univ., M. E., At. Meth., Meth. Prot., Presb., Prot. Episc., R. C., Univ., and Union.

⁹ Named from Manheim, in Baden, the native place of the early settlers. The town embraces 6 lots of Glen's Purchase, a part of the fourth allotment of the Royal Grant, the Patents of John Van Driess and of Snell and Zimmermann, a part of the patents of Rev. Peter Van Driess and of Moorman, and several minor tracts granted since the Revolution.

¹⁰ This stream was called by the Indians Ci-shawa and Sag-oh-ta.

¹³ A blockhouse stood at this place, and many of the inhabitants took refuge in it. Twelve of the prisoners were taken at one house by half the number of Indians, without resistance. The captives all returned after the war, except one who died in Canada, and one that escaped. John G. Snell, while searching for cattle in the woods, was surprised by the Indians and shot through the body. He recovered, however, and lived to an advanced age. The town was deserted after this by all but Tories.

NEWPORT¹—was formed from Herkimer, Fairfield, Norway, and Schuylcr, April 7, 1803. It lies on the w. border of the co., near the center. Its surface is broken by ridges of highlands, which rise 400 to 500 ft. each side of the narrow intervals of West Canada Creek. This stream flows s. e. through the town, near the center. White Creek flows s. through the e. part. The soil is a clayey loam, with some gravel on the hills. It is chiefly underlaid by limestone, which is quarried in some localities. Newport, (p. v.) near the center, incorp. March 20, 1857, contains 3 churches, 1 bank, a gristmill, cotton factory,² and 671 inhabitants. Settlement was commenced in 1791, by Christopher Hawkins, from R. I.;³ Rev. David Haskell (Bap.) held the first meeting, in 1796.⁴

NORWAY⁵—was formed from Herkimer, April 10, 1792. Fairfield was taken off in 1796, Russia, as "Union," and a part of Newport, in 1806, and Ohio in 1823. It lies in the interior of the co., s. of the Mohawk. Its surface is elevated and rolling. It is drained by several small streams, tributaries of West Canada Creek. The soil is sandy in the s. w., and loam and gravelly in the e. and s. Limestone is quarried in several places; and fossils have been found near White Creek. There is a sulphur spring 1 mi. s. of the village. Norway, (p. v.) near the center, contains 3 churches, a cheese box factory, tannery, and 30 houses; Graysville,⁶ (p. v.) on the line of Ohio, contains an extensive tannery and 30 houses.⁷ The first settlement was made by — Whipple and Christopher Hawkins, from R. I., in 1786; but it was soon abandoned.⁸ The first religious meetings were held by Rev. — Robertson, in 1792.⁹

OHIO¹⁰—was formed from Norway, as "West Brunswick," April 11, 1823. Its name was changed May 3, 1836. A part of Wilmurt was taken off in 1836. It lies in the interior, on the s. border of the settlements. Its surface is moderately hilly, with an elevation of 700 to 900 ft. above the Mohawk. A range of high, steep hills extends through the s. part. It is drained by West Canada and Black Creeks and their tributaries. The soil is a sandy loam, with some clay. A large portion of the town is still a wilderness. Graysville, (p. v.) on the line of Norway, contains 1 church, a tannery, and 30 houses. Ohio City, (Ohio p. o.) in the w. part, contains 10 houses. A few scattering settlements were begun before the Revolution, but were broken up during the war.¹¹ Religious services were first held at Ohio City, in 1808.¹²

RUSSIA¹³—was formed from Norway, as "Union," April 7, 1806. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A part of Wilmurt was taken off in 1836. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the Mohawk, its s. part extending into the border of the great northern wilderness. Its surface is rolling and moderately hilly, and on the w. descends abruptly to the valley of West Canada Creek. The hills are 800 to 1,000 ft. above the Mohawk. West Canada and Black Creeks flow w. through the s. w. part, the former forming a part of the w. boundary. On it are some extensive lumber works.¹⁴ Trenton Falls, upon West Canada Creek, is on the w. border. The soil is sandy

² A cotton factory was built in 1808, by Benj. Bowen. The Herkimer Manufacturing Co. was formed in 1814, with a capital of $40,000. In 1841 V. S. Kinyon became proprietor by purchase, and to present gives employment to 80 persons, and turns out $45,000 to $50,000 worth of sheetings annually.

³ Among the other early settlers were Benj. Bowen, John C. Green, Israel Wakely, and Geo. Fencer, all from R. I.; Dr. West Willoughby, and Sherman Wooster, from Conn. Joseph Benseley, A. M. Daniels, Geo. Cook, and Wm. Whipple were also early settlers. The first death was that of Salas Hawkins, in 1793. Alder Jo-stone bought the first school, in 1795. Wm. Wakely kept the first inn, in 1793, and Geo. Cook the first store, the same year. Benj. Bowen built the first sawmill, in 1793, and the first gristmill, in 1794. The first settlers derived title from parties who had purchased from the courts of forfeiture.

⁴ The census reports 7 churches in town; Bap., M. E., Cth., Meth., Presb., Union, Univ., and R. C.

⁵ Named from Norway, in Europe. This town is included in the second and third allotments of the Royal Grant.

⁶ Named from Lathan Gray, a resident of the place.

⁷ L. Dea's tannery, established in 1855, with a capital of $150,000, employs 75 men, and produces $150,000 worth of side leather annually. The works are driven by a steam engine of 50 horse power.

The first birth was that of a child of Gibbon Beavton; and the first death, that of the wife of K. Hinman. The first school was taught by Jeanette Henderson, in 1793. Amos Coe kept the first inn; Thaddeus Seribner & Bro., the first store, in 1793; Capt. Hinman built the first sawmill, in 1793; and Carpenter Cole the first gristmill, the same year. Vade & Ledy built a tiling mill, in 1793.—Beavton's Herkimer, p. 430.

¹⁰ Named from the State of Ohio. This town includes the Jerseyfield and a small part of the Bensenville Patents.

¹⁴ Hinckley & Eallon have an extensive sawmill, planing mill, blacksmith shop, top hammer, and other wood manufactory, employ 100 men, and turn out work to the amount of $20,000 annually.

loam and clay. Russia, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 2 churches and 140 inhabitants; Gravesville, (p. v.) in the s. w., a church and 20 houses; Poland, (p. v.) near the s. line, a church and 179 inhabitants; Cold Brook, (p. v.) in the s. e., a saw set factory, cheese box factory, gristmill, and 248 inhabitants; Booth, (p. o.) on Black Creek, a church, grist and saw mill, tannery, and 10 houses. Prospect is a hamlet, and contains — sawmills. The first settlement was commenced in 1792, by Stobard Squires, from Conn.¹ The first religious meetings (F. W. Bap.) were held by Rev. Benajah Corp.²

SALISBURY³—was formed from Palatine, (Montgomery co.) March 3, 1797, and annexed from Montgomery co., April 7, 1817. It lies on the e. border of the co., and extends n. into the great wilderness. Only about one-fourth of its surface is cultivated. It is a broken and mountainous upland in the s. and hilly in the s. The principal streams are East Canada Creek, which forms a part of the e. boundary, and Spruce Creek, which flows through the s. w. and s. parts. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. A bed of iron ore has been worked to some extent on Lot 105, fourth allotment of the Royal Grant. Salisbury Center, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 2 churches, a tannery, and 319 inhabitants; Salisbury Corners, (Salisbury p. o.) in the s. w., 2 churches and 30 houses; Diamond Hill, 25 houses; Deveraux, 15 houses. Whitesburgh, (p. o.) on the line of Fulton co., is a hamlet. Settlement was begun before the Revolution, by tenants of Sir Wm. Johnson, who followed his lead during the war, and shared his fate at the hands of the Commissioners of Forfeiture.⁴ The census reports 4 churches in town.⁵

SCHUYLER⁶—was formed from Herkimer, April 10, 1792. Trenton was taken off in 1797, Deerfield (Oneida co.) in 1798, and a part of Newport in 1806. A part was annexed from Herkimer in 1808, and re-annexed to Herkimer in 1811. It lies on the w. border of the co., n. of the Mohawk. Its surface is hilly. The Hasenlever Mts. extend through the center, attaining in this town an elevation of 1,000 to 1,200 ft. above tide. A wide interval extends along the Mohawk, which forms the s. boundary. Its streams are tributaries of the Mohawk and generally flow through narrow ravines. The flats bordering the river are annually overflowed. The soil upon the hills is slaty and gravelly. East Schuyler, (p. v.) in the s. e., contains 25 houses; and West Schuyler, (p. v.) in the s. w., a church and 25 houses. Settlement was commenced previous to 1775, by several German families.⁷ There was a good carriage road in 1757, on the bank of the river, from the crossing, where Utica now stands,⁸ to the Palatine village, German Flats. There are 2 churches in town: M. E. and Meth. Prot.

STARK⁹—was formed from Danube, March 18, 1828. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is hilly and broken, with a mean elevation of 500 feet above the Mohawk. The principal streams are Otsquago and Nowadaga Creeks. Otsquago Creek flows through a narrow valley, bordered by steep banks 150 to 200 ft. high. The soil is generally a sandy loam in the valleys, and sandy and gravelly on the hills. Starkville, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, and 190 inhabitants; Van Hornesville, (p. v.) in the s. part, 1 church, a cotton factory, (not in operation,) a grist and saw mill, and 228 inhabitants. Smiths Corners is a run, purchasers under the Commissioners of Forfeiture, to receive from the treasury the part of the purchase money which they had paid and convey back the lands.

¹ Jonathan Millington, from Ct. — Smith, Farley Fuller, Geo. Taylor, Rosanna Steena. — Austin & Son, Wm. Back, Jeremiah Smith, Jotham Carpenter, &c. — Coon and others, set the loam after; and in 1794, many others came in. The first marriage was that of Farley Fuller and Maria Smith, in 1794; the first death, that of a son of — Allen, and the second, that of Waite Robinson. The first school was taught by — Morehouse, at Graves Hollow, and another, about the same time, by — Stenned. The first inn was kept by Jonathan Carpenter, the first store by — Swinburn, at Graves Hollow, in 1797. The first sawmill was built in 1797, and the first gristmill by Benj. Hume, in the same year. A cotton factory was built at Poland some years since.

⁴ John Fayville and Cornelius Lamberson settled about 1773, near Burrill's Corners; Asa Sheldon and Abijah Ford about 1793. Abel Pratt, Stephen Todd, Jabez Ayers, Jonathan Cole, — Bidwell, Ira Bartholomew, Atwater Cook, Amos Ives, Moses De Witt, — Low, Jonathan Hallett, and others, were early settlers. John Ford was the first child born; Elizabeth Rice taught the first school; Aaron Hackley kept the first inn and store, at Burrill's Corners.

⁵ 2 M. E., Bap. and Union.

⁸ In 1757, M. De Belletre, with a body of French and Indians, traversed this road, and burned every house upon it within the town. — Walton's Herkimer, p. 41.

hamlet. Small settlements were commenced before 1775, but were broken up during the Revolution.³ The census reports 4 churches in town.⁴

WARREN⁵—was formed from German Flats, Feb. 5, 1796. Columbia was taken off in 1812. It lies centrally on the s. border of the co. Its surface is hilly, the highest points being 500 to 800 feet above the Mohawk. The principal stream is Fish Creek, which flows s., and is bordered by steep banks 100 to 200 ft. high. Mud Lake, in the e., and Weavers and Youngs Lake, in the s., are small bodies of water. The soil is a sandy and clay loam. There are 2 small sulphur springs in town. Jordanville (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 125 inhabitants; Stages Corners (p. v.) a gristmill, sawmill, and 82 inhabitants; Little Lakes,⁶ (Warren p. o.) in the s. part, 1 church and 117 inhabitants. Crauns Corners is a hamlet. Some settlements were commenced before the Revolution, by Germans from the Upper Valley.⁷ Elder Phineas Holcomb was the first settled minister in town, about 1793.⁸

WILMERT⁹—was formed from Russia and "West Brunswick," (now Ohio,) May 3, 1835. This is the largest town in the State, and is one of the least populous. It includes the whole s. part of the co., extending nearly 50 mi. in length, by about 16 mi. in breadth, entirely within the wild primeval forests of Northern New York. Its surface is rocky and mountainous, and the greater part is unfit for cultivation. In the deep valleys among the mountains are numerous beautiful, picturesque lakes, forming one of the finest features of the landscape.¹⁰ The soil is a sandy loam. The hills are usually covered with a thin growth of forest trees; but in the valleys only is found soil fit for profitable pasturage. The settlements are confined to the s. part. There is no p. o., village, store, church, or gristmill in town. The lumber cut in this region is mostly floated down West Canada Creek, and manufactured at Prospect in the town of Russia. An attempt was made to settle the town in 1790, by Arthur Noble, the patentee, and a sawmill was built at that time; but the project failed. It was again tried in 1793, with no better success. Toward the close of the last century, John Brown, a wealthy capitalist of Providence, R. I., who owned a large tract in this town, made an attempt at settlement; but his project failed. In 1812 his son-in-law, Chas. T. Harrisoff, made another attempt to settle upon this tract. He built a forge and sawmill, and cleared 2,000 acres; but, the outlay bringing no return, and his supply of money from the e. being cut off, the project was abandoned, and the colonists returned to their respective homes.¹¹

WINFIELD¹²—was formed from Litchfield, Richfield, (Otsego co.) and Plainfield, (Otsego co.) April 17, 1816. The bounds of the co. were enlarged upon the formation of this town. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is moderately hilly, and forms the dividing upland between the Mohawk and Unadilla Valleys, the general elevation being about 500 feet above the Mohawk. A range of hills in the s. e. rises about 200 ft. higher. The e. branch of the Unadilla flows s. through a deep valley in the w. part. Browns Hollow Creek, a branch of the Mohawk, rises on the n. border. Near East Winfield is a sulphur spring; and several limestone quarries are found in different parts of the town. East Winfield (Winfield p. o.) contains 30 houses; West Winfield (p. v.) 2 churches, the West Winfield Academy, a bank, 2 gristmills, 2 saw-

¹ One of these settlements was on Otsego Creek, and consisted of the families of John Shull, John Bronner, ———, Tobias, and others. Another settlement was commenced at The Falls, so called.—Beaumont's Herkimer, p. 483. The families of Wadsworth, Adam Young, and others, were early settlers. Abraham Van Home, from N. J., settled in town in 1791, at what is now Van Homeville. The first German school was taught by ——— Garner, and the first English school by ——— Haight. Abraham Van Home built the first mills, soon after his settlement, and his sons kept the first store.

² Bap., Bap. and Luth., M. E., and Union.

⁴ Called by the Indians Wa-ion-tha.

⁵ Andro-wo-town, in the s. part, then containing 7 families,—was plundered and burned by Brant in July, 1778. A part of the inhabitants were killed, and the remainder carried away captive. Young's settlement at the Lakes was spared by the Indians on account of the Tory principles of the proprietor; but the Americans soon after plundered and burned this place in retaliation. In March, 1792, Samuel Cleland, from Mass., and his sons Norman, Simon, Jonas, Martin, and Moses, settled in town. Danforth Abbott, Hugh Panell, Amos Allen, Elder Phineas Holcomb, Richard Schooley Hull, Thomas James, and Garret Abel, and ——— Thayer were early settlers. Stephen Ludington kept the first inn, Outhout A. Vrooman the first store, and Isaac Freeman built the first gristmill, in 1795.

⁷ This immense town embraces part of the French and Indian Warman's Patents, Adams, Browns, &c. &c. on the Otsego River; and Watson's Patents, and Towns and Grants of the English. Brown's tract, owned by E. K. Lyon and others, embraces 20,000 acres, and extends across the county of Hamilton and Lewis.

mills, a clover mill, and tannery. Pop. 381. North Winfield is a p. o. The first settlement was commenced in 1792.¹ The census reports 3 churches.²

JEFFERSON COUNTY.

This county was formed from Oneida, March 28, 1809, and named in honor of Thomas Jefferson. Its lands have been changed by setting off a portion of Rodman to Lewis co. in 1809, and by annexing a portion of Lewis co. to Wilna in 1814. It lies in the angle formed by the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario, is distant 115 mi. from Albany, and contains 1878 sq. mi. The s. w. part is marshy, but at a short distance from the lake the land rises in gentle undulations, and, farther inland, by abrupt terraces, to the highest point, in the town of Worth. A plateau, about 1000 feet above the lake, spreads out from the summit, and extends into Oswego and Lewis cos. An ancient lake bench, 200 feet above the present level of the lake, may be traced through Ellisburgh, Adams, Watertown, and Rutland. North of the Black River the surface is generally flat or slightly undulating; in the extreme s. e. corner it is broken by low ridges parallel to the St. Lawrence. With the exception of a few isolated hills, no part of this region is as high as the ancient lake ridge mentioned above.¹

The rocks of the co. belong to the primary formation and the lower strata of the N. Y. system. Gneiss is the underlying rock of the e. border in Wilna and Antwerp, of the Thousand Islands and the shore at Alexandria Bay, and of two strips of land extending from the e. border, one toward Theresa Falls, and the other toward Evans Mills. Next above this is a thick deposit of Potsdam sandstone, extending through Wilna, Antwerp, Philadelphia, Theresa, Alexandria, Orleans, and Clayton, the margin of which may be traced along its entire extent by a low moral precipice. The soil upon this rock is thin, and principally derived from drift deposits. The rock itself is almost indestructible, and preserves diluvial scratches and marks with great distinctness. Above this is a thin deposit of calciferous sandstone, extending through parts of Cape Vincent, Lyme, Clayton, Orleans, and Le Ray. The soil upon this rock is deeper than that upon the Potsdam sandstone, and is derived principally from disintegration. The Black River limestone overlies this, and forms the surface rock in most of the remaining parts of the co. s. of the river, and in a part of Champion and Rutland, s. Above this is the Trenton limestone, appearing on the lake shore at Cape Vincent and extending in a s. e. direction through Lyme, Brownsville, Watertown, Rutland, and Champion. This rock is of great thickness, and it forms the principal declivities of the plateau in the s. part of the co. About midway in this strata is found the ancient lake ridge before noticed. The caves near Watertown are in the lower strata of this rock. Next above come the Utica slate and Lorraine shales, forming the summit of the irregular table land which covers the s. "peak" of Champion, the s. border of Rutland, the greater part of Rodman, a corner of Adams, the e. part of Ellisburgh, and the whole of Lorraine and Worth. These shales are easily decomposed, and produce a deep, rich soil. Along the streams that flow from this formation the water has worn deep and often highly picturesque ravines, sometimes miles in length, and almost through the soft and yielding strata. The rounded outline of the slate hills, the abrupt terraces of the limestone, and the sharp, wall like margins of the sandstone, afford characteristic features to the country underlain by these several formations. Alluvial deposits uniformly occur where the streams from the slate flow out upon the limestone; and drift deposits are scattered promiscuously over the whole co. The most remarkable of these is the "Pine Plains," a sand barren several miles in extent in Wilna and Le Ray. The lake shore in Ellisburgh consists of drifting sand, behind which are marshes. From Stony Point to Cape Vincent the shore is bordered by the level edges of the Trenton limestone; but farther down the river it presents that alternation of rounded ridges of rocks, intervalles, and marshes peculiar to the primary formation. The highest point in Worth is about 1200 feet above the lake. The streams are Black,² Indian, and Perch Rivers, the two Sandy Creeks,³ Stony, Catfish, Kent, French, Pleasant, and Black Creeks, and their tributaries, Hungry Bay⁴ (including Henderson,

Black River, and Chaumont Bays) has a coast line of great length; and the Thousand Islands present many attractions from their romantic scenery and historical associations. Several small lakes, filling deep gorges, in Antwerp, Theresa and Alexandria,—one in Rutland, two in Henderson, Perch Lake in Pamela and Orleans, and Pleasant Lake in Champion, constitute the other waters of the co. Iron ore abounds in Antwerp. Traces of lead and copper are found in the primary region; limestone, capable of a great variety of uses, water limestone and barytes are also abundant. The Black River enters the co. at Carthage, where commence a series of cascades and rapids which continue almost to the lake, with a total fall of 480 feet. Indian River affords water power at half a dozen places, and most of the streams s. of Black River are available for the same purpose.

The flat country along the St. Lawrence at times is affected by drouth, which is never felt on the uplands; while the latter are somewhat noted for the great depth of their snows. The mirage has been frequently seen on the lake, bringing into view places beyond the horizon. One form of this refraction, in which a line of clear sky appears along the shore, is almost a constant attendant upon clear, pleasant days in summer. Waterspouts, attended with dark clouds and a roaring noise, have been seen upon the lake and its bays. In the primary regions the intervalles are remarkably fertile, while the ridges are often naked rock. The soil over a part of the sandstone is too thin for cultivation, but the barren region is comparatively limited. The limestone and slate districts are exceedingly fertile, and particularly adapted to dairying and the raising of spring grains. Of these, barley, within a few years, has become the most important. Winter wheat is raised less than formerly; oats, corn, rye, and peas are staple products. For many years manufactures have received much attention and employed a large amount of capital. They consist of iron from the ore, castings, machinery, cotton and woolen fabrics, paper, leather, and flour, and have been chiefly carried on along the line of the Black River, and in Antwerp, Theresa, Philadelphia, Adams, and Ellisburgh. Rafting, shipbuilding, and lake commerce form prominent pursuits at several points along the St. Lawrence.

Upon the erection of the co., in 1805, Watertown was selected for the co. seat.¹ A combined courthouse and jail was erected in 1807 and burned in 1821. Soon after, separate buildings, of stone, were erected, which are still in use. In 1816 a fireproof clerk's office was built, and occupied until 1831, when the present one was erected. The jail having become unfit for use, and having been officially complained of, a writ was issued, Dec. 1, 1848, by the Supreme Court, ordering its immediate improvement.² This led to the erection of an additional building, with excellent arrangements for both the security and convenience of prisoners. The first poorhouse was erected on the Dudley Farm, in Le Ray, about 5 mi. s. of Watertown, in 1825; and it was used until 1833, when the present spacious buildings were erected in Pamela, 1 mi. below Watertown. In 1852 a special act was passed for the supervision of the poor in this co.

The first newspaper in the co., called the "American Eagle," was established at Watertown, in 1811, by Henry Coffeen. Its name was soon after changed to the "American Advocate,"³

² In 1807 the jail inmates were first established, which were erected on a site to be donated at a passing market. They covered a small spot around the courthouse and part of the public square, and included most of the houses of the village, while between and these localities, along the sides of the roads, and sometimes in the center, were pullies, from 4 to 8 feet wide, with occasional cross-arms; so that, by carefully observing his route, turning right or left, and keeping himself in the street ranges, while they met had established a prisoner might vent nearly every building in the village; but if the route was, by any accident, obstructed, by a block of lumber, a pool of mud, or a single wheel, he must pass over, through, or under, or else cross, by, or under, the road, or losing this precious freedom, by one's imprisonment, and subjecting his bad to presentation to the vengeance of his host. History of Jefferson County, p. 21.

⁶ The Water-town Freeman was established in 1824, and continued until 1833, and was then changed to

⁷ The Democratic Standard. In July, 1835, it was united with the Watertown Eagle, and became

⁹ Thursdays Post was commenced in 1826 by Theron Parsons & Co., and in 1828 sold to Henry L. Harvey, who changed it to

¹⁰ The Register. It was afterward united with the Genius of Philadelphia, and in 1830 it became the

¹¹ Watertown Courier and General Advertiser. In 1831 it passed into the hands of B. Cory, and in 1835 it was changed to the

¹² North American. It was published by J. Huxton a short time, and afterward by H. S. Noble, by whom in 1839 it was issued as

¹⁴ The Black River Journal, and continued it until 1846.

¹⁵ The Genius of Philadelphia was started in 1828 by Henry L. Harvey, and was afterward united with The Register.

¹⁷ The Anti-Masonic Sun. Shortly after, Dr. R. Goodale, becoming proprietor, changed it to

¹⁸ The Constitution, and continued it until 1832, when it passed into the hands of Abner Morton, who published it as

¹⁹ The Jefferson Reporter until 1834. It was then discontinued

This co. is all embraced in the Macomb purchase¹ of 1791, except the islands in the lake and river, a small reservation at Tibbetts Point near Cape Vincent, and a tract 10 mi. square, with one corner extending to the St. Lawrence at French Creek, reserved by the Oneida Indians in the treaty of 1788 for Peter Penet, and called "Penets Square." That part s. of a line running e. from Chaumont Bay, in the line of the s. bounds of Diana, was known as Great Tract No. IV., and was sold to the "Antwerp Company," of Holland. Gouverneur Morris became the first agent, and afterward Jas. D. Le Ray de Chaumont became extensively interested in the title, and under him much of it was settled. The land between No. IV. and Black River (210,000 acres) was purchased by Peter Chassanis, of Paris, for a company of capitalists; a romantic scheme of colonization was formed, and settlement begun at its southern point, near the High Falls, in Lewis co. A few years after, the emigrants returned to France. Ellisburgh was mostly purchased by Murvel Ellis, of Troy, in March, 1797, but it afterward reverted to Constable. A tract known as the "Eleven Towns" was purchased in 1795 by Nicholas Low, Wm. Henderson, Richard Harrison, and Josiah Ozden Hoffman: it was divided by them and sold by their agents. Penets Square was mostly settled by squatters, with whom the owners afterward had much difficulty. With the exception of Carlton Island, the first settlement in the co. was made in Ellisburgh, in 1797, and within 10 years nearly the whole of this town and of the "Eleven Towns" was taken up by actual settlers. Settlement commenced under Le Ray in Wilba, Antwerp, Le Ray, and Philadelphia, about 1806, and in the s. part of the co., along the St. Lawrence, after the war of 1812-15. But a small part is now owned by the original purchasers or their heirs, much the greater portion having long been owned in fee by actual settlers.²

The embargo and non-intercourse laws were quite unpopular along the s. frontier, and met with open hostility or secret evasion in many cases. The declaration of war filled the co. with alarm, and some families hastily prepared to leave. Ft. Carlton,³ within the American boundary, had been held until this time by the British, and was immediately captured by a small volunteer party and the buildings burned. A regiment of drafted militia, under Col. C. P. Bellinger, was stationed at Sackets Harbor in May. A fleet of 5 sail of the enemy was repulsed from that place July 19, with loss. On the 30th Capt. Forsyth was stationed there with a fine company

The Independent Republican and Anti-Masonic Recorder was published at Watertown, from 1828 until 1839.
The Voice of Jefferson was published during the summer and fall of 1828.
The Watertown Eagle was commenced in Sept. 1822, by J. Calloun. In 1833 Alvin Hunt became associate editor; and in 1835 it was united with the Democratic Standard, and issued as
The Eagle and Standard. In 1837 it was changed to The Jeffersonian, and afterward to The Watertown Jeffersonian, and continued until 1855, when it was united with the Democratic Union, and appeared as The Jefferson County Union. By this title it is now published by E. J. Clark & Co.
The Era was published during the campaign of 1822.
The Spirit of Seventy Six was published a few months in 1834.
The Patriot and Democrat was published during the campaign of 1838.
The Aurora was published by Alvin Hunt during the campaign of 1840.
The Daily Journal was started in 1843, by Joel Greene. It was soon after changed to The Watertown Journal, &c., and continued until 1846.
The Democratic Union was started in 1846, by T. Andrews, and continued until 1855, when it was united with The Jeffersonian.
The Northern State Journal was started in August, 1816, by Andrew W. Clark. It was afterward changed to The Northern New York Journal, and is now published by A. W. Clark.
The Watertown Spectator was established in Jan. 1847, by Joel Greene, and continued until 1849.
The New York Reformer was commenced in Aug. 1850, by Ingels, Burdick & Co., and is now published by Ingels & Hubbard. They also publish
The Daily News, commenced in March, 1859.
The Anti-Slavery Mirror was published about a year, in 1851.
The Monitor and The Student were issued a short time. All of the above were published at Watertown.
The Sackets Harbor Gazette and Advertiser, the first paper published at Sackets Harbor, was commenced in March, 1817, by Gov. Camp. In Feb. 1821, it was changed to The Jeffersonian Republican, and was continued about a year.
The Farmers' Advocate was started in 1824, by Truman W. Haswell, and continued until 1828.
The Courier, afterward called
The Sackets Harbor Courier, was published by J. H. Woe.
The Jefferson County Whig was published in 1837, by E. H. Purdy.

The Sackets Harbor Journal was established in Oct. 1818, by E. M. Lull, and continued until 1831.
The Haverstrawton was published by E. M. Lull during the campaign of 1840.
The Sackets Harbor Observer was founded in March, 1848, by O. H. Harris. In 1852 it was changed to The Jeffersonian Farmer, and continued 2 or 3 years.
The Carthaginian was started at Carthage in Dec. 1839, and in 1841 it was changed to The Black River Times. It was discontinued soon after.
The People's Press was commenced in 1847 by M. F. Wilson.
The Carthage Standard has been published since Jan. 1858, by W. R. Merrill.
The Jefferson County Democrat was established at Adams in June, 1844, by E. C. Hatch. In 1847 it passed into the hands of E. J. Clark. It is now published as
The Jefferson County News, by J. Lobb.
The Orleans Chevauchee was started Jan. 14, 1848, by F. C. Bart, at Theresa, and continued about a month.
Le Phare des Lacs (the Beacon of the Lakes) was commenced at Watertown, in May, 1859, by Peck & Grandpre.
The Cape Vincent Gazette was commenced in 1858 by P. A. Leach.

¹ Alexander Macomb, Daniel McCormick, and Wm. Constable, of New York, were the parties owning this purchase. The first two failed, and Constable became charged with and party to the sales that were subsequently made.—History of the State of New York.

² The present names of these towns are in most cases different from those applied by the landholders. Their names, numbers, and owners under the allotment of 1791 are as follows: Harrison and Hoffman held their interests in common, and sold years later of riflemen, and, Sept. 20, made a descent upon Gananoqui, Canada, and destroyed a large quantity of provisions. The details of the operations upon the N. frontier belong to general history. Sackets Harbor became the principal seat of military and naval preparations, and from this post were fitted out the armaments that captured Little York and Ft. George, and the disgraceful expedition, under Gen. Wilkinson, that descended the St. Lawrence late in the fall of 1813.¹ Large bodies of troops were stationed here during most of the war; and a fleet of frigates of the largest class was fitted out at this point, to cope with one, equally formidable, built at Kingston. The enemy were repulsed in an attack upon Sackets Harbor, May 29, 1813, and were subsequently defeated at Cranberry Creek and Sandy Creek and in several minor engagements. After the war the costly navy was left to rot, or was sold for commercial purposes; and, in accordance with the provisions of the convention of April, 1817, but one armed vessel was left afloat upon the lake. Extensive barracks were built in 1816-19 at Sackets Harbor. A considerable body of regular troops was stationed here until withdrawn for service in the Indian wars of the Northwest and of Florida. In the abortive scheme known as the "Patriot War," in 1837-40, this co. became the scene of intense excitement, and the seat of many grave as well as ludicrous events. "Hunter Lodges" were formed in every village to promote the Patriot cause, and large sums raised for the same purpose found their way into the pockets of the leaders, most of whom evinced a cowardice as little creditable to their honor as was their financial management to their honesty.

The several tracts were appraised by Benj. Wright, of Rome, the surveyor, and their value equalized into a part of Wm. H. On Carlton or Buck Island. It was built by the French, and during the Revolution was an important rendezvous for scalping parties of Tories and Indians.

The earliest market of this co. was down the St. Lawrence, which has ever been the route of the lumber trade. Several State roads were built through the co. before the war, and a military road was laid out and partly worked from Sackets Harbor to Plattsburgh. Soon after the introduction of canals and railroads many projects of internal improvement were formed, and surveys were made in this co. without result. The Watertown and Rome R. R. extends from Cape Vincent s. through Lyme, Brownville, Pamela, Watertown, Adams, and Ellisburgh, connecting with the N. Y. Central at Rome. The Sackets Harbor and Ellisburgh R. R., a branch of the preceding, extends from Sackets Harbor through Henderson to Pierpont Manor. The Potsdam and Watertown R. R. extends N. E. from Watertown through Pamela, Le Ray, Philadelphia, and Antwerp, forming a connection with the Ogdensburgh R. R. in Potsdam. In 1848-51 about 170 mi. of plank road were built within the co., by over 20 companies; but most of the lines have been surrendered to the towns in which the roads were laid. Steam navigation commenced upon Lake Ontario in 1816, and commodious lines have since been run, touching at Sackets Harbor, Cape Vincent, Clayton, and Alexandria Bay, within this co.

- 1812, May.—The Lord Nelson, a British schooner, was taken, and condemned, for violating the revenue laws. Her name was changed to "Sponge."
 " Col. C. P. Bellinger was stationed here with a regiment of militia.
 " June 14, Schooner Ontario taken and discharged.
 " July 19, Village attacked by 5 vessels of the enemy. No injury done to the Americans, and the British retired with loss.
 " July 30, Capt. Benj. Forsyth arrived with the first regular troops.
 " July 31, Schooner Julia sailed for Ogdensburgh, and encountered 2 hostile vessels at Morris-town.
 " Aug. 20, Col Bellinger's regiment were disbanded before they were paid.
 " Sept. 20, Capt. Forsyth started upon an expedition against Gananoqui.
 " Sept. 21, Gen. Dodge arrived, and ordered Gen. Brown to proceed to Ogdensburgh.
 " Oct. Commodore Chauncey and Gov. Tompkins arrived, the former having been appointed commander of the naval forces on the lake.
 " Oct. 12, Capt. Forsyth's company and others were sent to Ogdensburgh.
 " Nov. 8-11, Com. Chauncey cruised upon the lake before Kingston, and took several vessels.
 " Nov. 26, Ship Madison was launched 15 days after commencement. Fort Tompkins and barracks were completed about the same time.
 1813, March.—Gen. Dearborn arrived and took command
 " April 7, Brig Jackson launched.
 " " 19, Brig Jones launched.
 " " 19, The Growler sailed to reconnoiter.
 " " 22, Gen. Pike's forces embarked for Little York.
 " " 25, Expedition sailed.
 " May 13, Expedition returned laden with spoils.
 " " 22, Com. Chauncey sailed with the fleet for Niagara
 " " 29, Sackets Harbor attacked by the enemy, who were repulsed with the loss of 150 men. The Americans lost a large quantity of military

- stores, including the spoils of Little York, from the accidental burning of the storehouse.
 1813, June 1, Com. Chauncey returned with the fleet.
 " " 12, Ship Pike launched.
 " " 14, Lieut. Wolcott Chauncey went on a cruise, and took a schooner laden with stores and arms.
 " July 2,—Maj. Gen. Morgan Lewis arrived and took command.
 " " 3, A secret expedition to burn the Pike was defeated.
 " " 14, The Napoleon and Fox sailed on a privateering expedition down the St. Lawrence. (See p. 355.)
 " " 20, Com. Chauncey, with the Tybe, sailed for Niagara. The Sylph (built in 33 days) accompanied him.
 " Aug. 26, Gen. Wilkinson held a council to decide upon offensive measures.
 " Sept. 5, Gen. Armstrong, Sec. of War, arrived.
 " Oct. 26, Gen. Wilkinson sailed on an expedition down the St. Lawrence, with disastrous results.
 " Nov. 2, The Pike and other armed vessels sailed on a cruise among the Thousand Islands.
 Dec. and Jan. The remaining part of the fall and winter was spent in ship building and in strengthening fortifications.
 1814, May 1.—Frigate Superior, of 66 guns, was launched in 80 days from the commencement of building.
 " June 15, The crew of the ship Congress began to arrive from Portsmouth.
 " " " An expedition under Lieut. Gregory sailed, and a few days after captured the gunboat Black Snake in the St. Lawrence, for which Congress awarded $3000 in 1834.
 " " 26, Another expedition, under the same, sailed, and in a few days burned a vessel on the stocks and a quantity of stores near Prescott.
 " July 31, The American fleet sailed for Niagara.
 " Sept. 14, Gen. Izard arrived from Lake Champlain.
 " " 30, A gig belonging to the Superior captured several boats laden with goods for Kingston.
 " Oct. Great alarm was felt for the safety of the harbor, which led to the assembling of large bodies of militia.

ADAMS¹—was formed from Mexico, April 1, 1802, and named in honor of John Adams, Ex-President. Rodman was taken off in 1804. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling, and generally inclined toward the lake, and, with the exception of its s. e. border, is underlaid by Trenton limestone. Several remarkable upheavals of this formation occur along its s. and w. borders, and a bold terrace extends into Watertown and Rutland. It is well watered by the N. Sandy and Stony Creeks. The soil is a clayey loam, with occasional sand and gravel, especially along the ancient lake ridge, which may be traced through this town. It is very productive, and equally adapted to dairying and the cultivation of grains. Manufactures are carried on to some extent. Adams, (p. v.), situated on North Sandy Creek and the W. & R. R., contains 4 churches, a bank, a sanctuary, printing office, and several small manufactories. Pop. 1,265. Adams Center (p. v.) and Smithville (p. v.) have each about 250 inhabitants. Appling² and North Adams (p. o.) are hamlets. The town was mostly settled under Isaac W. Bestwick, agent of Nicholas Low, the proprietor.³ The first sermon was preached in 1802, by Rev. Mr. Woodward, a missionary.⁴ A private academy—now called the Philharmonic Institute—has been taught at Adams Village for many years. The remains of several ancient fortifications are found in town.

ALEXANDRIA—was formed from Brownville and Le Ray, April 3, 1821, and named from Alexander Le Ray, a son of the proprietor. Theresa was taken off in 1811. It lies on the St. Lawrence, in the s. extremity of the co., and embraces the E. part of Wells Island and a considerable portion of the Thousand Islands. The surface underlaid by gneiss is rough and rocky, but that portion underlaid by sand-stone is level, with a thin, clayey and sandy soil. A vein of lead has been discovered near Redwood, and examined to the depth of 40 feet. Alexandria Bay⁶ (Alexandria p. o.) contains 24 houses, Piessis⁷ (p. v.) 32, and Redwood⁸ (p. v.) 120 inhabitants. Settlement commenced in 1811, under Le Ray. An engagement took place within the limits of this town during the war of 1812.⁹ An elegant Ref. Prot. D. church was erected at Alexandria Bay in 1848-51.¹⁰

ANTWERP—was formed from Le Ray, April 5, 1810, and named from the Antwerp Company.¹¹ It is the extreme E. town in the co. The s. and E. portions are broken by low rocky ridges parallel to the river. The s. w. part is more level. The soil in the valleys is a clayey loam, and is very fertile.¹² The ridges are made up of masses of gneiss,¹³ white crystalline limestone,¹⁴ and sand-stone.¹⁵ Between the gneiss and sand-stone in this town are several of the richest iron mines in the State. The "Sterling Mine"¹⁶ lies about 3 mi. n. of Antwerp Village; another, of less extent, 1 mi. n.; a third, known as the "Keene Mine,"¹⁷ on the borders of St. Lawrence co.; and a fourth, known as the "Parish Mine,"¹⁸ immediately adjacent. In this same range are found the mines of Rossie and Gouverneur, which have furnished most of the ore used at the furnaces in this region. Bog iron ore is found near Ox Bow.¹⁹ One or two sulphur springs are found in town. Antwerp, (p. v.), on the P. and W. R. R., was incorporated July, 1833. It contains

² This village was first settled by David Smith, about 1800, and for many years it was known as "Saults Mills." Incorp. Nov. 11, 1831.

³ Named from Maj. Daniel Appling, the hero of the battle of Sandy Creek.

⁴ The first settlers came on for permanent residence in 1800; among them were Nicholas and Alexander Salisbury, Solomon Smith, Daniel Comstock, Daniel Smith, Abram Ripley, Jonathan Cade, Stephen Sappog, and John D'Ewing. The first inn was kept by Mel Hart, and the first store by Jesse Hale. Daniel Smith erected the first grist and saw mills in 1801-02, the former superseding the stamp-motors of the first season. The first bath was that of Edmund Salisbury; the first marriage, that of Fane Ellis to Mrs. A. Salisbury, widow of Alexander Salisbury, in 1802; and the first death, that of Alexander Salisbury, drowned in 1801. Schools were first taught in 1803.

⁵ Rev. Chas. G. Finney, Pres. of Oberlin College, was a law student in this town. The census reports 9 churches; 3 Bap., 2 Seventh Day Bap., 2 Cong., M. E., and Prot. E.

⁸ A glass factory was established at this place in 1833, by John S. Foster. It is devoted to the manufacture of cylinder glass, and is now carried on by a joint stock company known as the Redwood Manufic. Co. A stream a few rods in length, flowing from Mud to Butterfield Lake, has here a fall of 24 feet, and furnishes water power for a grist and saw mill.

¹¹ This land company, formed in H. Land, bought Gr. A Tract No. 14, within which this town is situated. For particulars see Hugh's Hist. J. P. Co. p. 85, 91.

¹² According to the last census, this town produces more butter than any other town in the co., and, with one exception, it has the greatest number of cows of any town in the State.

¹³ From 1805 to 1828 about 100 pairs of mill-tones were manufactured from this rock in this town.

¹⁴ This limestone is especially valuable for lime and as a flux for iron ore.

¹⁵ This sand-stone furnishes an excellent building material, and is used for the lining of chimneys.

¹⁷ Owned by the firm of Hiram B. Keene, and owned by a company.

¹⁸ Owned by Geo. Parish, of O. S. Island, n. e.

¹⁹ This ore is of the bed of sandstone variety. The region in which it is found is one of the richest in the country for specimens of rare minerals.

The Antwerp Liberal Institute¹ and 3 churches. Pop. 621. Ox Bow² (p. v.) is situated on the Oswegatchee River. Pop. 240. Sterlingburgh,³ 1 mi. above Antwerp, and Spragnes Corners, on the line of St. Lawrence co., are hamlets. The first improvements were made in 1803, at the Ox Bow, under the direction of Lewis R. Morris, the original proprietor.⁴ In 1808, Morris sold 29,033 acres to George and David Parish, under whose agents the greater part of the settlements were made. A party of militia was stationed here in 1808, to enforce the embargo, and a blockhouse was built at the village in 1812. The first church was built, in 1816, by Parish.⁵

BROWNVILLE—was formed from Leyden, April 1, 1802, and was named from Gen. Jacob Brown, its founder. Le Ray was taken off in 1806; Lyme, in 1818; Pamela, in 1819; and Orleans, and a part of Alexandria, in 1821. It is situated on the s. side of Black River and Black River Bay. Its surface is level or gently undulating. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. Sulphate of barytes is found on Pillar Point, and the vein has been worked to some extent for lithic paint. Upon the w. bank of Perch River, a few rods below Limerick, is a cave extending 150 yards into the bank and 30 feet below the surface. Manufactures receive considerable attention. Brownville, (p. v.), on Black River, 4 mi. below Watertown, was incorp. April 5, 1828. It has a valuable water power, and contains 3 churches, a cotton factory, and several foundries and machine shops. Pop. 621. Dexter⁶ (p. v.) is situated at the head of navigation on Black River. It is the seat of an extensive woolen factory built in 1836.⁷ Pop. 429. Limerick (p. o.) and Moffatville, (Perch River p. o.) contain a dozen houses each. Pillar Point (p. o.) is situated across the bay from Sackets Harbor. Pop. 50. Gen. Jacob Brown began the settlement of the town in 1799, as proprietor and agent.⁸ During the war Brownville village became the seat of a hospital; and on different occasions large bodies of troops were posted in the vicinity. For several years it was the residence and headquarters of Maj. Gen. Brown, commander in chief of the s. department, and afterward of Col. Edward Kirby,⁹ his son-in-law. There are 10 churches in town.¹⁰

CAPE VINCENT—was formed from Lyme, April 10, 1849, and named from Vincent Le Ray, son of the proprietor. It is the s. w. corner town of the co., and embraces Carlton, Grenadier, and Fox Islands in the St. Lawrence. The surface is level, or slightly undulating, and the soil is a clayey loam. Kent Creek is the principal stream. There are 2 or 3 sulphur springs in town. Considerable attention is paid to ship building. Cape Vincent,¹¹ (p. v.) the terminus of the W. and R. R. R., near the head of the St. Lawrence River, is a thriving commercial village. Pop. 1026. Saint Lawrence and Millens Bay are p. offices and hamlets. The first settlement in the town and co. was made upon Carlton Island,¹² at about the time of the Revolution. A regular fortification, known as "Fort Carlton,"¹³ was erected upon the island, and a tract of 30 acres was cleared and cultivated, and long known as the "Kings Garden." The first settlement upon the mainland was commenced in 1801 at Port Putnam, 2 mi. below Cape Vincent, by Capt. Abijah Putnam.¹⁴ Count Real, Chief of Police under Napoleon, and other French families of note, resided in this town for some time. A custom house was established in 1819. Upon the shores of Grenadier Island,¹⁵

⁴ The first settler was Wm. Lee. Mills were built at Antwerp Village in 1806-07, for Morris, by John Denton. The first school was taught in the Foster Settlement, by Benj. Cook.

⁶ Named from S. Newton Dexter, of Whitesboro', one of the proprietors. It was formerly known as "Fish Island." During the war the mills at this place furnished lumber for the public works at Sackets Harbor. The steamer "Brownville," built in 1827, and designed to run between this place and the lake ports, was burned upon her first trip. The Black River Nav. Co., incorp. in 1816, built locks here, which were little used. Plans for the improvement of navigation were built at the mouth of the river by the Gen. Government; but they have resulted in misery.

⁷ This factory is of stone, and cost $140,000. It is fitted for 10 sets of machinery, and employs 75 hands.

Evans was hung near Watertown for murder committed in this town,—the only execution by civil authority that ever took place in the co.

⁹ Col. Kirby held the office of paymaster in the army from 1821 till his death, April 18, 1846.

¹⁰ 2 M. E., 2 Presb., 2 Uny., 2 Presb., 1 Bap., 1 Union.

¹³ This fort commanded the s. channel of the river, and was an important post during the Revolution. It was mostly excavated in the rock, and the materials taken out were used in the construction of the rampart and escarpment.

¹⁴ Mr. Putnam established a ferry from this place to Wolf Island. In 1803 a State road was opened to this place, and in 1804 a village plot was laid out, but soon after abandoned.

¹⁵ This island was the rendezvous of Gen. Wilkinson's army on their way down the river in 1813. At the eastern extremity is a and of the mainland opposite, are valuable seine fisheries. A town ag. soc. was formed in 1850.² There are 3 churches in town.²

CHAMPION³—was formed from Mexico, March 14, 1800. A part of Harrisburgh was taken off in 1803. It is the central town on the s. e. border of the co. The surface is broken and hilly. The most elevated portions are the slate hills in the s. angle, (known as the "peak," which are about 1700 feet above tide. From their summits the land descends in a series of broken and irregular terraces to the river. The s. part is more level. The soil is generally a clay loam, but near the river in some places it is sandy. Champion (p. v.) contains 20 houses, Great Bend (p. v.) and West Carthage⁴ about 30 each. Champion South Roads is a p. o. The first settlement was begun in 1798, by Noadiah Hubbard, as agent for Storrs. The first settlers came by water down the river as far as the Long Falls, and the town was settled with great rapidity.⁵ The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1805.⁶

CLAYTON—was formed from Orleans and Lyme, April 27, 1833, and named in honor of John M. Clayton, U. S. Senator from Del. It is centrally situated on the s. w. border of the co. It embraces two-fifths of Penets Square, a gore w. and another s. of that tract, and Grindstone and several smaller islands in the St. Lawrence. The surface is level, or slightly rolling. Water lime has been manufactured in considerable quantities. Clayton,⁷ (p. v.) situated at the mouth of French Creek,⁸ is largely engaged in the lumber trade and in ship building.⁹ Pop. 896. Depanville¹⁰ (p. v.) is situated at the head of navigation on Chaumont (Shan-oo) River, (or Cattish Creek,) 6 mi. from the bay. Pop. 386. Clayton Center is a p. o. Settlement commenced in 1803, but progressed slowly until after the war. For many years the titles to the portions included in Penets Square and the islands became the subject of much controversy and litigation. In early times the shores of the St. Lawrence in this and adjoining towns became the scene of many lawless adventures in the prosecution of smuggling.¹¹ In 1813, the enemy attacked the advanced guard of Wilkinson's expedition, commanded by Gen. Brown, at Bartlets Point, but were repulsed. The census reports 7 churches in town.¹²

ELLISBURGH¹³—was formed from Mexico, Feb. 22, 1803. Henderson was set off in 1806. It is situated in the s. w. corner of the co., upon the shore of Lake Ontario. The surface is rolling and inclined toward the lake. A range of low sand hills extend along the shore, and these are succeeded by a wide marshy region, producing wild grasses that in dry seasons may be mown. North and South Sandy Creeks are the principal streams. The soil is sandy on the w., clayey through the center, and a slaty loam in the e. There is a sulphur spring in town. This is the wealthiest agricultural town in the co., and is surpassed by but few in the State. Ellis Village,¹⁴ (Ellisburgh p. o.) situated on S. Sandy Creek, 4 mi. from its mouth, has a limited amount of manufactures. Pop. 230. Belleville,¹⁵ (p. v.) is situated on N. Sandy Creek, 3 mi. from Ellis Village, and on the S. H. & E. R. R. Pop. 363. The Union Literary Society (academy) is located here. Pierrepont Manor,¹⁶ (p. v.) at the junction of the W. & R. and S. H. & E. R. R., contains 255 inhabitants. Woodville,¹⁷ (p. v.) is situated on N. Sandy Creek. Pop. 180. Mannsville,¹⁸ (p. v.) on Skimmers Creek and the W. & R. R. R., has a population capacious bay, known as "Basin Harbor," which affords a shelter for boats. The whole island is now a single dairy farm.

⁴ A considerable amount of lumber, oil, flour, and cloth are manufactured in this village.

⁵ Among the first settlers, who came in in 1798-99, were John, Thos., and Salmon Ward, David and Saml. Starr, Joel Mix, Ephraim Chamberlain, Jonathan Mitchell, Bela Hubbard, and David Miller. The first school was taught by E. Chamberlain, in 1800. The first sawmill was built in 1802, by John Eggleston and Wm. Husbald. The first grist mill was built at West Carthage by David Colton, in 1806. A furnace was built at the same place in 1814, and about 1000 tons of iron produced. Several prominent lawyers, among whom were Mess. Kent, brother of the chancellor, Egbert Ten Eyck, and Henry R. Storrs, settled in Champion, in expectation of its becoming the co. seat of the new co. to be erected from Onondaga.

⁶ Rev. Nathl. Burton was the first regular settled pastor in the town and co. There are 6 churches in town; 2 Cong., 2 M. E., Bap., and Union.

⁷ Formerly called "Carthage," and still frequently called "French Creek." A party of Patriots made this place their rendezvous in preparing to invade Canada. The same party took possession of Hickory Island; but upon the approach of the British they fled, leaving their armament behind.

⁸ This stream is called by the Indians Weter, which means here, or "Fallen Fort," from a fort taken by the Onondagas in an earlier time long before the advent of the whites.

¹⁰ Depanville. Named from Francis Depan, an early proprietor. The place was formerly known as "Cattish River." Stephen Johnson built the first mill and opened the first store at this place, in 1824.

¹¹ During the embargo of 1808 a road was cut through the woods, and immense quantities of potash were taken to Canada without restraint.

¹² 4 M. E., and one each Bap., R. C., and Union.

¹³ "Manos," of the "Eleven Towns." Named from Marcellus Ellis, an early proprietor, and Lyman Ellis, the first settler.

¹⁴ The oldest settlement in the co.

¹⁵ Named from Belleville, in Canada.

¹⁶ It is the residence of H. Wm. C. Pierrepont, from whom the village derives its name.

¹⁷ Named from Ebenezer, Ephraim, and Jacob W. and, the first settlers.

¹⁸ Named from Col. H. B. Mann, who erected a factory at this place, but which was afterwards burned.

of 315. Rural Hill¹ (p. o.) and Wardwell² (p. o.) are hamlets. Lyman Ellis and a large number of others made the first settlement, in 1797.³ A tract of 3000 acres in the s. w. corner of the town was sold by Wm. Constable, in 1796, to Brown and Eddy, and was settled by squatters. Upon the advent of the first settlers, near Ellis Village, on Sandy Creek, were found numerous traces of an early occupation by civilized races.³ During the war an engagement took place near the mouth of S. Sandy Creek, between a party of 150 American regulars and a few militia and Indians, under Maj. Appling, and a party of 200 British, who were pursuing a flotilla of boats, commanded by Lieut. Woolsey, laden with stores for Sackets Harbor. The British were defeated, and nearly the whole party were killed or taken prisoners.⁴ The census reports 11 churches in town.⁵

HENDERSON⁶—was formed from Ellburgh, Feb. 17, 1806. It lies on Lake Ontario, s. w. of the center of the co. The surface is rolling; and it is deeply indented with Henderson Bay, formed by a long rocky point known as Six-Town Point.⁷ There are in town two small lakes and several marshes. Stony and Little Stony Creeks are the principal streams. The soil is clay and loam. Henderson⁸ (p. v.) is situated near the center, on Stony Creek. Pop. 404. Henderson Harbor⁹ contains 12 houses; and Smithville¹⁰ (p. o.) 40. Roberts Corners (p. o.) is a hamlet. Settlement was begun in 1802, under Asher Miller, agent for the proprietor.¹¹ At the head of Henderson Bay is a curved embankment or bar of stone, 100 rods long, and a little above the water, known as "Indian Wharf;" and from this point to Stony Creek there was an Indian trail or portage. The census reports 5 churches in town.¹²

HOUNSFIELD¹³—was formed from Watertown, Feb. 17, 1806. It is situated on Black River Bay, on the w. border of the co. Its surface is very level, and the soil is a clayey and sandy loam. Ship building and manufactures have received considerable attention. Sackets Harbor¹⁴ (p. v.) is the principal village. Pop. 994. This was the principal military and naval station on the northern frontier during the last war with Great Britain, and millions of dollars were spent in fortifications and in building vessels. East Hounsfield (p. o.) and Stowells Corners (p. o.) are hamlets. Amasa Fox was the first settler. In 1802 there were 30 families in town.¹⁵ In 1805 several English families came in.¹⁶ During the war this town was the center of important military events. Several expeditions were here fitted out against Canada; and, in turn, the town was invaded on several occasions.¹⁷ Large bodies of troops were frequently quartered here, and the citizens became familiar with the lights and shades of military life.¹⁸ After the war most of the troops were withdrawn, leaving only enough to keep the ⁴ The stores were taken by land from this point to the "Harbor." Among them was a cable weighing 9000 lbs., which was too heavy for loading upon any wagon that could be obtained. It was accordingly placed on the shoulders of 250 men and carried to its place of destination. As the bearers approached the Harbor, the sailors met them with loud cheers, relieved them of their burden, and marched triumphantly into the village.

⁵ 3 Rep., 2 Cong., 2 M. E., Presb., Prot. E., Univ., Union.

⁶ No. of the "Eleven Towns." Named from Wm. Henderson, the proprietor. It embraces the adjacent islands in the lake.

⁷ Upon this point are the remains of a small fortified fortification, evidently built during the French or Revolutionary War.

⁹ The bay upon which this place is situated was called the "Bay of Nipiss" by Henderson, the proprietor.

¹⁰ Named from Jesse Smith, who, from a common laborer, became one of the most extensive lumber dealers in the county, and a man of influence.

¹¹ Among the first settlers were Anthony Sprague, Levi Scofield, Josiah McComb, Samuel Hubbard, Moses Barrett, Wm. Pettit, and Daniel Spencer. Willis Fellows kept the first inn and built the first saw and grist mills. The first child born was Betsey Scofield, and the first death, that of a child of Bessa Beth. Elisha Skinner taught the first school. A small wooden factory was erected in 1814. A Scotch settlement was made in 1804-07, on the bay. A lighthouse was erected on Stony Point in 1837.

¹³ The town embraces No. 1, or "Hesled," of the "Eleven Towns," and was named from Ezra Hounsfield, one of the early proprietors. In the division it fell to the share of Harrison and Hoffman; and by them the w. half was sold to Champion and Stiers, and the remainder to Peter Koublie and E. Hounsfield. It was called "Newport" in early documents. Gull, Snake, Great and Little Galloo, and Stony Islands belong to this town. Upon Galloo Island a lighthouse was erected in 1820.

¹⁴ Named from Augustus Sacket, the first settler. Called by the Indians Gah-bee-go-je-twa-ka-lote, fort at the mouth of Great River. Incorpor. April 15, 1814. A collection district was formed in 1805. Madison Barracks, built in 1816-19 at a cost of $85,000, are the principal military works. Upon a point in the harbor is the hull of the frigate New Orleans, sheltered by a house built over it. It was commenced during the war, but has never been finished. It measured 320 tons, and was pierced for 110 guns. The frigate Chipewaw, of like dimensions, built farther up the bay, has been taken down.

¹⁵ Among these were John and Wm. Evans, Squire Reed, Amasa Hollibut, and Charles Baker.

¹⁶ Among these were Samuel Luff, his sons Edmund, Saml, Jr., Joseph, and Jesse, David Sherman, William Ashley, John Roots, Henry Metcalf, and the Shermans. Dr. Wm. Baker, who settled in 1803, was the first physician; Ambrose Pease and Steg. Simmons were early tinkers; and Loren Buss and Ezekiah Doolittle, early merchants. In 1808 Samuel F. Hooker brought in a stock of goods worth $20,000. Meetings were first held by Edmund Luff, who built a church, and preached many years without fee or reward. Elisha Camp settled in 1804, as a lawyer and agent, and has since been more prominently concerned in the affairs of the town than any other person. Samuel Luff built the first grist mill, Augustus Sacket, the first sawmill, and Solomon Stone, the first cotton factory, on Mill Creek. The first child born in town was Wendell Robinson. At an early period, John Jacob Astor and other capitalists invested large sums here in the manufacture of pot-sh, that article commanding $200 to $250 per ton in the Montreal market.

¹⁸ About a dozen military executions took place here during the war. A duel was fought with muskets, June 13, 1818, between two soldiers, one of whom was killed. During the command of Col. Brady at this station, the remains of Gens. Zebulon M. Pike and Leonard Covington, Col. John Tuttle, Lieut.

works in repair. In 1832 a canal, for hydraulic purposes, was completed from Huntington's Mills, above Watertown, to Sackets Harbor; but in about 10 years it was abandoned.¹ Dr. Samuel Guthrie, one of the discoverers of chloroform, and inventor of the percussion compound for firearms, which has superseded flints, resided at Sackets Harbor. A Union school was established in the village in 1840. There are 5 churches in town.²

LE RAY³—was formed from Brownville, Feb. 17, 1806. Antwerp was taken off in 1810, a part of Wilna in 1813, and a part of Philadelphia and Alexandria in 1821. It is an interior town e. of the center of the co. The surface is level, or gently rolling, and the soil is principally a clayey loam. A strip of barren sand, once covered with pine, but now almost a desert, extends along Black River. The streams are Black and Indian Rivers, Pleasant Creek, and several small brooks. Le Raysville⁴ (p. v.) contains 22 houses. Evans Mills⁵ (p. v.) is situated on Pleasant Creek and the P. & W. R. R. Pop. 410. Sandfords Corners, (p. v.) on the P. & W. R. R., contains a dozen houses. Black River,⁶ a village of 50 houses, is partly in this town. The first settlement was made in 1802, by a party under Benj. Brown, agent for Le Ray.⁷ Le Ray removed to this place in 1808, and began a liberal system of settlement, by opening roads and building bridges and mills. The census reports 6 churches.⁸

LORRAINE⁹—was formed from Mexico, March 24, 1804, as "Milla." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. Worth was taken off in 1848. It is the central town on the s. border of the co. The town is elevated, and is underlain by slate and traversed by immense gulfs. The surface is rolling, and the soil is a clay and loam. It is mostly drained by Sandy and Skinner Creeks. Lorraine, (p. v.) the only village, contains about 30 houses. Settlement was begun in 1802, by James McKee and Elijah Fox.¹⁰ The State Road from Rome to Sackets Harbor was laid through this town in 1804. A sulphur spring is found on the farm of — Totman. The town has 2 churches, Bap. and M. E.

LYME¹¹—was formed from Brownville, March 6, 1818. A part of Clayton was taken off in 1833, and Cape Vincent in 1849. It lies upon Chamont Bay, in the w. part of the co. The surface is very level. The w. border is deeply indented by Chamont Bay¹² and its branches. The soil is principally clay. There are several sulphur springs in town. Near Chamont are extensive and valuable limestone quarries.¹³ Chamont (p. v.) is situated upon the bay at the mouth of Chamont River. Pop. 306. Three Mile Bay¹⁴ (p. v.) lies upon a bay of the same name. Pop. 295. Point Peninsula (p. o.) is a scattered settlement containing 25 houses. The first settlement was begun under Jonas Smith and Henry A. Delamater, agents for Le Ray, in 1801.¹⁵ The first location was $2\frac{1}{2}$ mi. above Chamont; but in 1805 the settlers removed to the site of the present village. During several years much sickness prevailed; but this gradually disappeared as the co. became more settled. In 1812 the inhabitants, numbering about a dozen families, built a blockhouse, which was taken and destroyed by the enemy. The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1816.¹⁶

ORLEANS—was formed from Brownville, April 3, 1821. A portion was annexed to Pamela, April 1, 1829. Clayton was taken off in 1833. The boundary between it and Alexandria has twice been changed. It lies on the s. border of the co., and embraces the w. part of Wells and Cols. Electus Backus, Timothy Dix, Jr., and John Mills, Maj. John Johnson, Capts. Ambrose Spencer, Jr., and Joseph Nicholson, and Lieut. Michael P. Vandeventer, officers who had been killed or had died of sickness during the war, were collected, and buried in one grave. A monument of pruned pine boards was erected to their memory by a grateful country; but it soon rotted down, and there is now a strong probability that the place of their interment will be forgotten.

² M. E., Prot. E., Presb., Christian, and Seventh Day Bap.

³ Named for James Le Ray de Chamont, the proprietor.

⁴ The land office for much of the land in the co. s. and e. of the river was located here until 1863, when it was removed to Carthage. P. S. Stewart has been the agent many years.

⁵ Named from Ermi Evans, who built the first mill in 1805-06.

⁶ This village is locally known as "Lockport." A trace of an ancient Indian fort was found near it; another 1 mi. s.; and another near Sandfords Corners.

⁸ Bap., Friends, M. E., Presb., R. C., and Union.

⁹ This town embraces "Atticus," of No. 1, of the Boylston Tract.

¹⁰ In the following year, Gordon Stanhill, Benjamin Gates, Seth Cutler, John Alger, and others, came in. McKee and Fox kept the first inn. Mr. Frost built the first sawmill, and Mr. Cutler the first grist mill, in 1804. The first death was that of A. M. Child, killed by a falling tree.

¹² Name derived from Le Ray de Chamont. Upon old maps this bay is named "Nachony," "Nachon," and "Nachon." The last name is probably derived from that of the Duc de Nivernois, a French nobleman.

¹⁵ Among the first settlers were Richard M. E. Stacy, T. Wheeler, Peter Pratt, and Jonas Pray, and Timothy S. per. James Horton was the first settler on Point Peninsula, in 1801.

several smaller islands in the St. Lawrence. The surface is level, or slightly rolling. The principal streams are Perch River, Catfish and Mullet Creeks. Perch Lake lies upon the s. boundary. The soil is clay and loam. La Fargeville,¹ (p. v.) on Chaumont River, near the center of the town, is the seat of Orleans Academy. Pop. 295. Omar,² (p. o.) on Mullet Creek, and Stone Mills,³ (p. o.) are small villages. Orleans 4 Corners, (p. o.) Port Orleans, and Collins Landing are hamlets. Penets Square, which embraced most of this town, was settled by squatters.⁴ The first settlements commenced about 1806.⁵ In 1824, John La Farge, a large owner in these lands, came into town to assert his claim. After a great deal of difficulty and some resistance, he succeeded in establishing his title. In 1838 the mansion and farm of La Farge, 1 mi. s. of the village, was purchased by Bishop Dubois as the site for a Catholic seminary. This institution, named "St. Vincent de Paul," combining a theological seminary and classical boarding school, was soon after opened; but in two or three years it was removed to Fordham, Westchester co., and was afterward incorp. as St. Johns College. Rock Island Lighthouse was built in 1853. The British steamer Sir Robert Peel was plundered and burned on the night of May 29, 1838, while taking in wood at Wells Island, in this town, by a party of 22 self-styled patriots, led by Bill Johnston.⁶ The census reports 8 churches.⁷

PAMELIA⁸—was formed from Brownville, April 12, 1819. In 1824 its name was changed to "Lander;" but soon after the former name was restored. A portion of Orleans was annexed April 1, 1829. It is the central town of the co. The surface is level, or gently undulating, and the soil is clay and sand. Near the cascade opposite Watertown are several caves in the limestone rock.⁹ In the vicinity of Perch Lake have been found several barrows, or sepulchral mounds. Pamelia Village and Juhelville¹⁰—the former opposite the lower part and the latter the upper part of Watertown Village—are places of considerable manufactures,¹¹ and have each 200 to 300 inhabitants. Pamelia Four Corners (p. v.) contains about 30 houses. The first settlement began in 1799.¹² The census reports 2 churches.¹³

PHILADELPHIA—was formed from Le Ray, April 3, 1821. It is an interior town, E. of the center of the co. Its surface is level in the E., but rocky and broken in the W. The soil is generally a clayey loam. Indian River and Black Creek are the principal streams. Iron ore is found in considerable quantities. The principal bed that is worked is known as the Shurtliff mine. In Sterlingville is a large chalybeate spring. Philadelphia,¹⁴ (p. v.) upon Indian River, has 55 houses, and Sterlingville,¹⁵ (p. v.) upon Black Creek, 40. At the latter place are a large blast furnace¹⁶ and a forge.¹⁷ The first settlement was commenced in 1804, by Friends from Penn. and N. J.¹⁸ In 1810 the Friends erected a building which for 17 years was used for a school and meeting house.¹⁹

³ Formerly called "Collins Mills," from John B. Collins, owner.

⁵ Among the first settlers were Roderic C. Frazier, Peter Pratt, Dr. Reuben Andrus, Samuel and Daniel Elbs, and others. Alvah Goodman kept the first inn; Lemuel George, the first store; Collins & Platt erected the first grist mill, and Dr. Andrus, the first sawmill, in 1819.

⁷ Two Evangel. Luth., Bap., Cong., M. E., R. C., Wes. Meth., and Unit.

⁸ Named from the wife of Gen. Jacob Brown. Her maiden name was Pamela Williams.

⁹ These caverns have been traced nearly 500 feet. Just below and partly under the village of Juhelville, the open mouths of several caves appear on the river bank, opening at both ends on the cliff. The passages are lined with calcareous deposits, in the form of angular mineral, stalactites, and tufa. These caves are evidently all formed by currents of water flowing through the natural seams in the rock and gradually wearing away the soluble and yielding limestone. In the rear of the principal cavern a large area of land has sunk to a considerable depth, as though a portion had fallen in.

¹⁰ Named from Madame Juhel, a relative of the Le Ray family.

¹¹ These manufactures consist of lumber, spirits, leather, cotton yarn, and portable steam engines.

¹⁴ Often called "Quaker Settlement" by the old inhabitants.

¹⁵ Named from James Sterling, the owner of the iron works. Formerly called "De Louney's Mill," from the builder of the first mill, in 1807.

¹⁶ Built in 1837, by James Sterling. The ore is principally obtained from the Sterling mine of Antwerp, and the Shurtliff mine of this town, near the line of Theresa, the ore from the latter being used principally as a flux.

¹⁷ Built by Caleb Essington, in 1839.

¹⁸ These settlers purchased 16 lots of 440 acres each, lying in the corners of a square containing 25 lots, of which the central range each way was reserved by Le Ray. The center lot (No. 61), embracing the site of the present village, was conveyed to trustees "for the promotion of religion and learning" under the care of the Quakers. This trust afterward occasioned much contention, and led to a miniature anti-bent war. The matter was finally settled in 1844. Cadwallader Child, Mordecai Taylor, and Samuel Evans came in the first year. Robert Confort kept the first inn, Saml. Case, the first store, and Thos. and John Townsend built the first mill. Anna Comstock kept the first school. The first child born was John Townsend, and the first death was a daughter of Robt. Confort, in 1807.

RODMAN¹—was formed from Adams, March 24, 1804, under the name of "Herkules." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A part of Pinekney (Lewis co.) was taken off in 1808. It lies upon the borders of Lewis, in the s. part of the co. The surface is hilly, and broken by the deep ravines of Sandy Creek and its branches. The soil is generally a fertile, gravelly loam. There are 3 sulphur springs in town. Rodman (p.v.) has 45 houses, Zoar and Whitesville² (E. Rodman p.o.) each about 20. Settlement began in 1801, and from 1803 to 1806 it progressed with great rapidity.³ In 1813 an epidemic prevailed, causing 60 deaths in 3 months. The census reports 3 churches.⁴

RUTLAND⁵—was formed from Watertown, April 1, 1802. It lies upon the s. bank of Black River, e. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of the narrow river valley on the s., a terraced plateau in the center, and a hilly region in the s. The central plateau, embracing the greater part of the town, is 300 to 400 feet above the flat country farther s., and it descends by a succession of steep declivities to the level of the river. It is underlaid by Trenton limestone. Upon the s. the surface gradually rises to the summits of the slate hills which occupy the s. part of the co. A remarkable valley, known as "Rutland Hollow," extends through the town upon the lower terrace of the plateau, parallel to the river. It is deeply excavated in the limestone, and appears like the bed of an ancient river. Another smaller and deeper valley extends in the same direction across the summit of the plateau, and forms the bed of a deep, narrow lake, Pleasant Lake, in Champion, is situated in the continuation of this latter valley. These valleys and terraces seem the result of abrasion rather than of upheaval. Upon the edge of the terrace, 100 feet below the summit, may be seen the ancient lake ridge before described. There are 2 or 3 sulphur springs in town. The soil is a very fertile loam upon the plateau, and a sandy loam upon the river. Felts Mills,⁶ (p.v.) on Black River, contains 50 houses; Black River,⁷ (p.v.) on the river, partly in this town and partly in Le Ray, 40; Tylerville,⁸ (South Rutland p.o.) in the narrow valley of Sandy Creek, 30; and Rutland Center,⁹ (Rutland p.o.) 10. This town fell to the share of Wm. Henderson, and settlement was begun in 1799, under Asher Miller, his agent. The greater part of the land was sold¹⁰ to New England farmers, who came in within 3 years after the first settlement.¹¹ An old Indian fort is to be seen on the farm of Geo. Wilson; and a bone pit was found near the line of Watertown. The census reports 5 churches.¹²

THERESA—was formed from Alexandria, April 15, 1841, and named from a daughter of Le Ray. It is the central town upon the n. w. border of the co. The surface along Indian River is broken, and traversed by ridges of gneiss rock, with fertile intervals. A part of the town, underlaid by sandstone, is level or undulating. In the primary regions are a number of romantic lakes; and some of these have highly interesting mineral localities upon their shores and islands.¹³ Theresa, (p.v.) upon the High Falls¹⁴ of the Indian River, was early selected by Le Ray as a favorable point for settlement, and about 1810 he caused several "jobs" to be cleared and a sawmill to be built.¹⁵ West Theresa is a p. o. A furnace, built near Milisaut Lake in 1847, was in part supplied with ores from the vicinity. A private academy has been taught several years. The census reports 3 churches.¹⁶

² Named from Thos. White, sub-agent and early settler.

³ Among the settlers who came in this year were Anson and Ebenezer Moody, Noah, Jonathan, and Aaron Davis, Bong, Thomas, Wm. Rice, and Simon Hunt. Miss M. Nobbs taught the first school, in Anson Moody's barn, in 1803. Willard Skyles kept the first store; and Wm. Rice built the first sawmill, in 1804, and grist-mill, in 1806. The first child born was Walter Harrison Moody; and the first death, that of the same child, 3 years after. His father received 50 acres of land from Mr. Harrison for the name. Timothy Greenely moved into the s. w. corner of the town in 1803.

⁵ No. 3, or "Milan," of the "Eleven Towns." Named from Rutland, Vt. the former home of an early settler.

⁷ Locally known as "Lockport." See p. 359.

⁸ Named from Josiah and Frederick Tyler, early settlers.

⁹ On some maps called "Brooksville," from Curtis G. Brooks, a former citizen. It is never known by this name in town.

¹⁰ 17,754¹/₂ acres were sold, in farms within 2 years, for $70,738.

¹¹ Among the settlers who came in during the first and second years were Levi Miller, Perley and Wm. Keyes, David and Goldsmith Colburn, Amos Stebbins, Raphael Porter, Israel Wright, Jonathan and Clark Ross, Jas. Kilham, Chas. Kelsey, Jephtha

King, John Dale, C. Cummines, Gardner Cleveland, Warren Foster, and John Gates. Miss A. Porter taught the first school, in 1802. Levi Butterfield kept the first store, and David Williams the first store. David Colburn built the first grist-mill in the co., near the mouth of Mill Creek, in the present village of Felts Mills, in 1801, and a sawmill in 1802. The first child born was in the family of Chas. Kelsey, and the first death, that of Mrs. Francis Towne. 12 M. E., 2 Cong., and 1 C. E.

¹⁵ Among the first settlers were James Shurtliff, Anson and Jeremiah Cheeseman, M. R. Ashby, S. V. Carter, B. Shaw, A. Smith, Walton, Col. Bull, Abram Morrill, Joseph Miller, A. B. Fisher, James Lake, Ebenezer and N. W. Lull, and J. D. Bayles, Jr. Mr. Lull built the first store, in 1829. Dr. James P. Cook, the first physician, settled in 1822, and died the next year. The first school was taught by Lindley Gibbs, of H. V. L. Dale. The first child born was Fanny A. Cook, May 26, 1817. The first marriage was that of Mr. Cassiman, who was drowned. A grist-mill and inn were erected in 1819 for the proprietor.

WATERTOWN¹—was formed from Mexico, March 14, 1800. Rutland was taken off in 1802, and Hounsfield in 1806. It lies upon Black River, s. w. of the center of the co. The surface in the s. e. part is broken by the irregular terraces of the Trenton limestone, and in the n. it is level or rolling. The river bank is rocky throughout its whole extent; and in the village, about 3 mi. below, are several extensive caves. It is an important agricultural town; but it is chiefly distinguished for the extent of its trade and manufactures. In amount of business it is unsurpassed by any town in Northern N. Y. Watertown,² (p. v.) the co. seat, pleasantly situated upon the s. bank of Black River, was incorp. April 5, 1816. Pop. 5873. It contains an academy,³ 3 newspaper offices, 5 banks, and 9 churches. Black River here flows, for the space of a mile, in a succession of rapids over the limestone terraces, affording an abundance of water power, which is largely improved, making the village one of the most important manufacturing places in the State.⁴ Three road and 2 r. r. bridges cross the river within the limits of the village: one of the former is a wire suspension bridge. An ice cave, near Whittleseys Point,⁵ extends under a part of the village. By an act passed March 22, 1853, a board of water commissioners was created, with power to borrow $50,000 for the construction of water works for the village. The work was finished during the following summer. The water is taken from the river, near the upper part of the village, and thrown by water power into a reservoir 200 feet above the village, and about 1 mi. distant; and from the reservoir it is distributed through the streets. A beautiful fountain is constructed in the center of the principal square.⁶ At an early day, two rectangular pieces of land were given by the owners of the adjacent lots for public use;⁷ and these now constitute beautiful public squares.⁸ Burr's Mills⁹ (p. o.) is a hamlet, on Sandy Creek, in the e. part of the town. Watertown Center and Fields Settlement are hamlets. Henry Coffeen and Zachariah Butterfield were the pioneer settlers, in 1800; they located upon the present site of the village.¹⁰ An arsenal was built at Watertown in 1809, and a building for an academy in 1811; the latter was used as a hospital during the war. The census reports 10 churches.¹¹

WILNA¹²—was formed from Le Ray, and Leyden (Lewis co.) April 2, 1813. It lies upon Black River, in the extreme e. part of the co. Its surface is somewhat broken. It is chiefly underlain by the primary rock, which rises into low, naked ridges, and by calciferous sandstone. Black River forms its w. boundary; and upon it are a series of rapids, forming an abundance of water power.¹³ The Indian River, in the n. part, also affords water power at several places. At Natural Bridge this stream flows beneath the surface through passages worn in the coarse white limestone which here forms the surface rock. Several interesting minerals are found at this place.

² First settled in 1801; and became the co. seat in 1805. In 1849 the business portion was almost destroyed by fire, but it recovered from the disaster in 2 years.

latter were convinced that there was fraud. By an ingenious course of inquiry and eavesdropping, they were not only confirmed in the belief, but assumed that the family soon intended to remove, and that summary means must be employed to recover the money. They accordingly invited W. to take a walk, which led as it by accident to a lonely spot near the village, previously prepared, where they suddenly charged him with the robbery and threatened instant drowning, unless he disclosed. He was twice submerged and he nearly extinguished, when he confessed and was liberated. The money was found sewed into a pair of drawers fitted to be worn by either husband or wife. Mrs. W. immediately after slipped away from the crowd undetected, rushed 4 mi. to the river, and was drowned.—Hugh's Hist. Jeff. Co., p. 243.

⁷ These lots are respectively 12 by 28 and 9 by 22 rods.

⁸ The principal business of the village is located around the Square and upon Court St.

⁹ Named from John Burr & Sons, who settled here in 1804. Hart Massey built a saw and grist mill here, in 1801, for Low, the proprietor.

¹² Named from Wilna, in Russia, then fresh in memory from its battle.

The soil is sandy and moderately fertile. Carthage¹ (p. v.) is finely situated upon Black River, at the lower terminus of the B. R. Canal improvement. It contains 5 churches, a private academy,² and is the seat of important manufactures.³ Pop. about 1,500. Natural Bridge, (p. v.,) on Indian River, contains 40 houses. Wilma and North Wilma are post-towns, and Wood Settlement is a hamlet. Settlement was commenced in 1778, at Carthage, by Henry Boutin, one of the French Company.⁴ The village and town were chiefly settled under Le Ray.⁵ The census reports 7 churches.⁷

WORTHEN—was formed from Lorraine, April 12, 1848. It lies upon the high, slaty, and shaly ridges in the s. part of the co. It is 1200 to 1500 feet above tide, and is the most elevated land in the co. It is subject to deep snows and early frosts. Wherever the surface is exposed to the action of running water, deep gulfs have been worn in the soft and yielding rock. There are several sulphur springs in town. The soil is principally derived from the disintegration of the underlying rocks, and is well adapted to grazing. About one half of the town is settled. Worthville is a hamlet, and is the only p. o. The first settlement was made in 1802, by an association from Litchfield, Herkimer co., who bought the s. w. quarter, balloted for the lots, built rude mills, and began small improvements.⁸ A part of the settlers left during the war, and during the succeeding cold seasons of 1816-17 the whole settlement was abandoned. Settlement was not recommenced until several years after. The census reports 4 church, (M. E.)

² Erected by Harrison Miller in 1842; now owned and taught by B. F. Bush.

⁵ Jean B. Bossout, familiarly known as "Battee," kept the first inn and ferry.

⁷ 2 Presb., 2 Prot. Meth., Bap., M. E., and B. C.

⁸ Named in honor of Gen. Wm. J. Worth. It comprises No. 2, or "Fondou" of the Boylston Tract. The 1 part was divided among several proprietors, to equalize the division of the "Hollow Towns."

⁹ Among the first settlers were Amos and Wm. Collett, Nathan Matson, W. Flower, Ed. Cook, Edwards, Jean B. Bossout, Asa Sweet, Abner Rising, and Phineas Lee. The first school was taught in a log barn in 1802. The first mill was that of Elisha Sweet. L. B. Collett kept the first inn and store.

KINGS COUNTY.

This county was organized with its present limits, Nov. 1, 1683.¹ It lies upon the w. end of Long Island, adjacent to New York Harbor, and embraces several small islands adjacent to the coast. It is centrally distant 140 mi. from Albany, and contains 72 sq. mi. The surface is generally level or gently undulating. A broad range of drift hills, 50 to 300 feet above tide, extends from the shore of the bay in the s. w. corner in a n. e. direction through the co. From their summits the surface gradually declines both to the e. and s., and terminates upon the shores in extensive salt meadows. The portion lying n. of the hills is moderately uneven, being occasionally broken by low, isolated drift hills. The shores are deeply indented by bays, which for the most part are shallow, and very irregular in outline. The principal of these are Halletts Cove, Newtown Creek,² Wallabout, Gowanus, and Gravesend Bays on the w., and Sheeps Head Bay on the s. Jamaica Bay, a large, shallow, landlocked bay upon the s. shore, is partially in this co. It incloses a large number of low, marshy islands separated by narrow and irregular tidal currents. Wide salt marshes extend along the shores of the bays, and far inland along the courses of the small creeks.³ The soil is mostly a light, sandy loam. A strip immediately surrounding the marshes and embracing a large share of the w. extremity is fertile, and capable of producing almost any crop adapted to the climate. Its close proximity to New York, the great commercial center of the country, renders it favorably situated for the development of manufactures and commerce; and both of these pursuits are largely carried on at the centers of population. The agriculture of the co. is mostly confined to gardening for the N. Y. market. All of the business of the co.—manufacturing, commercial, and agricultural—are so intimately connected with the interests of New York that the co. may be considered as a suburb of the great city.⁴

The county seat is located at the city of Brooklyn.⁵ The courts are accommodated at the City Hall, which belongs exclusively to the city. The jail, located upon Raymond St., is closely surrounded by other buildings, and its ventilation is very imperfect. The average number of inmates is 80, supported at a weekly cost of $2.10 each.⁶ The Kings Co. Penitentiary is located upon a farm of 38 acres near the s. line of Brooklyn. The buildings, now nearly completed, are of stone, and sufficiently spacious for the accommodation and care of all the prisoners of the co. The main building is 490 feet long by 86 feet broad, with two wings of 50 feet each. The total cost up to January 1, 1857 was $190,414.35. The institution is designed to be self supporting. The county clerk's office is kept at the City Hall.⁷ The Kings County Almshouse is located upon a farm of 70 acres in Flatbush, about three miles s. of the City Hall of Brooklyn. This institution consists of four large brick buildings,—the almshouse proper, hospital, nursery, and lunatic asylum. These buildings are spacious and well arranged, but poorly ventilated. A school is maintained through the year, and religious instruction is given upon the Sabbath.

⁴ For more minute description of the business of the co., see town descriptions.

⁵ The courts were originally held at Gravesend; but, by an act of the General Assembly, passed Nov. 7, 1685, they were removed to Flatbush, and a courthouse was built there the succeeding year. This building was used until 1758, when a new combined courthouse and jail was erected. By an act passed April 6, 1784, a tax of £200 was authorized to be raised to repair the injuries which had been done to the courthouse and jail by the Britis-h. The repairs were expended under the direction of Philip Wagel and Jeremyus Vanderbilt. By an act of March 10, 1791, the courthouse and jail were directed to be rebuilt under the direction of Johannes E. Lott, John Vanderbilt, and Chas. Doughty, and £1,200 was appropriated for that purpose. During the next year £300 additional was raised to build the buildings. These buildings were burned Nov. 3, 1852; and by act of Feb. 27, 1854, the co. seat was removed to Brooklyn. The first co. officers after the Revolution were Nicholas Covodover, First Judge; Jacob Sharp, jr., Clerk; Wm. Boerum, Sheriff; and Johannes E. Lott, Sergeant.

⁶ Up to June 1, 1858, 23,090 prisoners had been confined in this jail.

Children are bound out at the age of 12 years. The average number of inmates is 1,800, supported at a weekly cost of about $2.00 each. The farm yields a revenue of $3,500.

The Brooklyn & Jamaica R. R. extends from the s. ferry of Brooklyn eastward through near the center of the co. The Flushing R. R. extends from Hunters Point. (Queens co.) n. of Brooklyn, to the village of Flushing, a distance of 8 mi. In the city of Brooklyn are several local rail roads; and from the city lines of stages extend to every village in the co.

The Long Island Intelligencer, the first newspaper in the co., was published some time before 1807.

Four newspapers—three daily and one weekly—are now published in the co.¹

The first settlements of this co. were made mostly by the Dutch, about 1625. In 1640, a colony of Mass. Quakers, in quest of religious freedom, settled at Gravesend under the protection of the Dutch Government. Long previous to the English conquest of 1664, settlements had been made, mills erected, and churches and schools established in every town in the co. The settlers were so exclusively Dutch that the Dutch language and customs prevailed until within a comparatively recent period. Bushwick, Brooklyn, Flatbush, Flatlands, and New Utrecht were known under the English Government as the "Five Dutch Towns;" and they were associated, for certain purposes, until 1690.² The Five Towns also formed an ecclesiastical society, and joined in the support of their minister until the final separation of the American church from the Classis of Holland, in 1772.

Few events of interest occurred within the limits of this co. during the colonial period. Its Revolutionary annals belong to the general history of the country. During its occupation by the British, from 1776 to 1782, the people were subjected to a series of disgraceful and oppressive acts.³ Many of the inhabitants left the co. from fear of hostile visits during the War of 1812-15; and at times much alarm was felt,—although no hostile visit actually took place. It has shared in the growth of New York City, and is closely identified with it in business. This co. is included in the "Metropolitan Police District" created by act of April 15, 1857, and in the Board of Police Commissioners it is represented by the Mayor of Brooklyn and one other member. Vast schemes of speculation have from time to time arisen, most of which have resulted in loss, and several of them, devised upon a magnificent scale, have seriously retarded the progress of needful improvement.

From 1850 to 1853 about 40 building associations were organized in this co., ostensibly to enable those of humble means to acquire a home, but practically to form contributions to a fund which was loaned to those members who would allow the highest premium. The rates submitted to were often extremely ruinous, and the speculation had but a brief existence.

¹ The Long Island Star was started in June, 1809, by Thos. Kirk. In 1811 it was bought by Alden Spooner, and has been continued by him and his sons until the present time.

The Brooklyn Daily Evening Star was begun by Alden Spooner & Sons, Jan. 4, 1841. It is still issued, by Edwin B. Spooner. A semi-weekly edition was issued from The Star office in 1824.

The Long Island Patriot was started at Brooklyn in 1820 by Geo. L. Breck. In 1833 it was changed to

The Brooklyn Advocate, and was issued by James A. Bennett. In 1835-36 it was changed to

The Brooklyn Advocate and Nassau Gazette.

The Williamsburgh Gazette was started in 1825 by Francis G. Fish. It was afterward changed to

The Williamsburgh Daily Gazette, and was issued a short time. The American Native Citizen and Brooklyn Evening Advertiser, &c., was published in 1836 by F. G. Fish.

The Mechanics' Advocate was issued a short time in 1840 at East New York.

The Real Estate Gazette, also started at East New York, had an ephemeral existence.

The Williamsburgh Democrat was commenced June 3, 1840, by Thomas A. Deyr.

The Brooklyn Daily Eagle was commenced in 1841 by Isaac Van Anden, and is still published. From the same office was issued

The Brooklyn Weekly Eagle, which was changed in 1855 to

The Saturday Evening Miscellany.

The Brooklyn Daily News was started in 1841 by Worthall & Watts, and was continued until Nov. 1843.

The Brooklyn News and Times was issued in 1843 by J. S. Noble. The Arg was started at Williamsburgh in Dec. 1844, and was continued a short time.

The Democratic Advocate was published at Williamsburgh in 1841 by J. G. Wallace.

The Brooklyn Daily Advertiser was started in 1844 by H. A. Lees and W. Foulkes, and was continued about 8 years.

The American Champion was published at Brooklyn a short time in 1844.

The Daily Long Islander was started at Williamsburgh in 1845 by Bishop & Kelley.

The Williamsburgh Morning Post was published in 1847 by Deyr & Taylor.

The Saturday Evening Bee was issued a short time in 1848 at Brooklyn.

The Orbit was issued at South Brooklyn in 1848.

The Kings County Patriot was started at Williamsburgh in 1848 by Geo. Thompson and S. R. Hasbrouk.

The Williamsburgh Times was started in 1848 by Bennet Smith & Co. Soon after the consolidation of Williamsburgh and Brooklyn its name was changed to

The Brooklyn Daily Times, under which title it is now published.

The Eccelesior was commenced in 1848 at South Brooklyn, and was issued a short time.

The Brooklyn Daily Freeman was published in 1849.

The Daily Independent Press was commenced July 16, 1850, at Williamsburgh, by W. G. Bishop and J. A. F. Kelley, and was continued until 1855.

The Brooklyn Morning Journal was established in 1851 by Hogan & Highway.

The Union Ark, a temperance mo., was published at Brooklyn in 18— by J. Schmebly.

The Long Island Anzeiger (German) was started at Brooklyn, Sept. 2, 1854, by Edward Bohr.

The Triangle (German semi mo.) was started at Brooklyn, April 7, 1855, by Edward Bohr.

The Kings Co. Advertiser and Village Guardian (semi mo.) was started at East New York in May, 1857, by C. Warren Hamilton.

The Green Point Advertiser was published a short time in 1847 by L. Musquerier.

² A Secretary or Register was especially commissioned by the Governor to take the proof of wills, of marriage settlements, the acknowledgment of "transcripts" or other conveyance, and such important contracts and agreements as required to be recorded.

³ By an act of March 6, 1784, Kings co. was taxed $13,000 to repay Revolutionary expenses.

BROOKLYN¹—was incorp. by patent, with the usual privileges of townships, under Gov. Lovelace, Oct. 18, 1667, and its rights were confirmed by Gov. Dongan, May 13, 1686. It was recognized as a town under the State Government March 7, 1788. The village of Brooklyn was incorp. as a fire district April 2, 1801, and as a village April 12, 1816, and both town and village were incorp. as a city April 8, 1831. The city of Williamsburgh and town of Bushwick were annexed April 17, 1854.² The city extends along New York Bay and East River to Newtown Creek, occupying the s. part of the co. Its exterior line is 22 mi., and it contains an area of 16,000 acres. The s. and e. borders are occupied by a broad range of low hills, which extend e. into Queens co. Along the shore opposite the lower point of New York is an irregular bluff known as "Brooklyn Heights." A considerable portion of the s. part of the city is low and level. Newtown Creek, forming the n. boundary, is an irregular arm of the sea, receiving several small fresh water streams. Wallabout Bay is a deep indentation lying between the old cities of Williamsburgh and Brooklyn. Gowanus Bay extends into the s. part of the city.³ The land that borders upon these bays is flat and marshy.

Within the limits of Brooklyn are several districts known by the names which they bore when they were distinct localities, before the city was incorporated. These will eventually all be lost in the growth and consolidation of the business of the city. Brooklyn (p. o.) includes the old settled parts of the city s. of Wallabout Bay. Upon East River, in this district, are several large manufactories. The water front is entirely occupied by wharves and warehouses. Williamsburgh (p. o.) includes the thickly settled portions n. of Wallabout Bay. It contains a large number of manufacturing establishments, and its entire water front is devoted to commercial purposes. Green Point, (p. o.) comprising the 17th ward, lies between Bushwick and Newtown Creeks, and occupies the extreme n. w. part of the city. It contains extensive shipyards, and manufactories of porcelain, coal oil, lifeboats, and many other articles. Wallabout (sometimes called East Brooklyn) lies e. of Wallabout Bay. Bedford and New Brooklyn are localities on the R. R., in the e. part of the city. Bushwick Cross Roads and Bushwick Green are villages e. of Williamsburgh. Gowanus is a village near the head of Gowanus Bay. South Brooklyn comprises the portion of the city lying s. of Atlantic St. It has an extensive water front; and along the shore immense works have been constructed to facilitate commerce.⁴ It contains extensive wood, coal, stone, and lumber yards, and numerous planing mills, distilleries, breweries, plaster mills, foundries, and machine shops. The city is connected with New York by 11 steam ferries, all supplied with excellent boats, which perform regular and frequent trips.⁵ From the Atlantic St. Ferry the Brooklyn & Jamaica R. R. extends e. to the e. bounds of the co.⁶

From the principal ferries lines of city railroads extend through the principal avenues and radiate to nearly every part of the city, affording easy, rapid, and cheap means of communication.⁷ The commerce of Brooklyn is extensive, though it scarce has an independent existence, from its intimate relations with that of New York. The docks and piers at South Brooklyn are among the most extensive and commodious in the country. Ship and boat building and repairing are extensively carried on at Williamsburgh and Green Point. The whole water front of the city is occupied by ferries, piers, slips, and boat and ship yards; and the aggregate amount of business

² Bushwick—signifying wood town—was invested with certain powers of government March 14, 1661. Another patent was granted Oct. 25, 1667; but it remained associated with other towns until Aug. 12, 1708. Williamsburgh Village, in this town, was incorp. April 13, 1827, and the town of Williamsburgh was formed March 16, 1840. The village and town were united and incorp. as the City of Williamsburgh April 7, 1851, and the city and town of Bushwick were annexed to Brooklyn April 17, 1854. Bushwick now constitutes the 17th and 18th wards, and Williamsburgh the 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, and a part of the 19th wards.

³ Acts have been passed authorizing a canal, with basins, wharves, and slips, to be constructed along the creek that flows into this bay. The mouth of the creek has been improved for a short distance.

⁴ The Atlantic Dock contains an area of 40 acres, and has sufficient depth of water for any vessel. An outside pier is 2,000 feet long. The warehouses upon the piers are of granite. The Erie Basin and other extensive docks along the bay have been projected and work upon them has commenced. These docks afford perfect security to vessels while loading and unloading, and security to goods against theft. It is estimated that $1,000,000 worth of goods are annually stored in the wharves and slips at New York and Brooklyn.

⁶ This road is leased to the Long Island R. R. during the term of its charter. A tunnel 2,700 feet long is extending and a portion of Atlantic St., commencing near the ferry. It was finished in Dec. 1841 at a cost of $96,000.

⁷ In 1855 the city authorized the granting of charters for the transacted there forms an important item in the commerce of the State. In the extent and variety of its manufactures Brooklyn ranks among the first cities in the country. Located near the great commercial center, it has become the seat of an immense manufacturing interest.¹

The U. S. Navy Yard is located upon Wallabout Bay.² The premises connected with it occupy an area of 45 acres, and are inclosed on the land side by a high wall. Within the inclosure are various mechanic shops necessary in building and repairing vessels, a large and costly dry dock,³ two large buildings to cover ships of war while in process of building, extensive lumber warehouses, several marine railways, and a large amount of balls, cannon, and other munitions of war. The Naval Lyceum is filled with curiosities sent home by naval officers. Upon a gentle rise, a little n. of the Navy Yard, is a U. S. Marine Hospital⁴ for the care of sick and infirm seamen belonging to the navy. Near it is an extensive laboratory for the manufacture of medicines for the navy.⁵ The grounds belonging to these establishments occupy an area of 35 acres. A little s. of the Navy Yard, upon Park Avenue, are extensive Marine Barracks.

The city is well supplied with pure, soft water, derived from Hempstead Hook, Valley, and Spring-city railroads to the parties who should offer to carry passengers on lines, without regard to distance, is 5 cents. The following is a list of these several railroads:—

²The land occupied by the Navy Yard was ceded to the General Government by the State in 1807.

³The site for the dry dock was fixed by Col. Baldwin in 1826; but efficient work was not commenced until 1841. It was subsequently prosecuted under the charge of several engineers, as follows:—

Prof. Edward H. Courtenay; Aug. 3, 1841, to Aug. 1, 1842.....	$ 5,264.25
Gen. William Gibbs McNeil; Oct. 10, 1841, to April 1, 1843.....	114,751.83
W. P. S. Sauer; April 1, 1845, to June 23, 1846.....	115,944.81
Win. J. McAlpine; June 23, 1846, to Oct. 1, 1849.....	1,111,311.99
Gen. Chas. B. Stuart; Oct. 1, 1849, to Aug. 30, 1851.....	7,12,974.03
Total cost.....	$233,175.91

The work was suspended from Aug. 1842, till Oct. 1844. The main chamber is 280 feet long by 35 feet wide at the bottom, and 307 feet long by 98 feet wide at the top. Depth, 30 feet. The masonry foundations are 400 by 120 feet, upon piles driven 40 feet into the earth. It is emptied by steam pumps in 44 hours—Stuart's Naval Dry Dock of the U. S.

⁴This building is faced with white marble and presents a fine architectural appearance. The average number of inmates is about 50.

⁵This laboratory has been gradually formed within the last 10 years, and is said to be the only institution of the kind owned by any Government. The chemical and mechanical arrangements are extremely well adapted to their use.

field Creeks. It is brought $7\frac{2}{3}$ mi. in an open canal and $4\frac{1}{2}$ mi. in a brick conduit, thence pumped into a reservoir on Cypress Hill, 170 ft. above tide, and thence distributed in iron pipes throughout the city. The conduit has a capacity of 40,000,000 gallons per day, and the pumps can raise 10,000,000 gal. per day. The reservoir is 20 feet deep, and has a capacity of 167,000,000 gals. The whole cost of the work is estimated at \$4,200,000.¹ The Fire Departments of the Eastern and Western Districts are separately organized under special acts. The city is supplied with gas by 3 companies.

The City Park, between Park and Flushing Avenues and Navy and Park Sts., contains 7 acres; Washington Park, between Myrtle and De Kalb Avenues and Cumberland and Canton Sts., contains 33 acres. It occupies the site of Fort Green of the Revolution. In the newly surveyed sections several sites for parks have been reserved by the city.

The City Armory, at the corner of Henry and Cranberry Sts., was erected in 1858, at a cost of $14,000. A State Arsenal, on Clinton St., was built in 1856, at a cost of $40,000.

The City Hall, situated at the junction of Fulton and Court Sts., is a fine building, faced with white marble.² Besides these, there are in the city 9 banks of discount, 5 savings' banks, and 10 stock fire insurance companies.

The Public Schools are under the charge of a board of education, consisting of 45 members. The city contains 32 school districts; and in 1857 there were employed 320 teachers,—27 males and 293 females. The whole number of children between 4 and 21 years of age is 46,000, of whom 35,817, or 78 per cent., attended school during some portion of the year. The total expenses of the schools for 1857 was $231,474.61. A normal school for the professional instruction of teachers has been established.

The Packer Collegiate Institute, for girls, occupies an elegant building upon Joroblinon St., w. of the City Hall. It was incorp. May 8, 1845, as the "Brooklyn Female Academy." Its name was changed March 19, 1853, in honor of Mrs. Wm. S. Packer, who endowed the institution with $65,000. An astronomical observatory is connected with it.

The Brooklyn Collegiate and Polytechnic Institute, for boys, on Livingston St., was incorp. April 7, 1854. It was established by a stock company, with a capital of $75,000, and has accommodations for 150 pupils. Besides these, there are in the city 100 private schools and seminaries, several of which are large institutions, with corps of professors and with permanent investments. The aggregate number of pupils in attendance at the schools is 2,600.

The Brooklyn Institute was incorp. Nov. 20, 1824. It occupies a commodious building on Washington St., the gift of Augustus Graham. It has a free library, provides free lectures and lessons in drawing and painting for apprentices, and its rooms are depositories for books, maps, models, and drawing apparatus.

The Brooklyn Athenæum and Reading Room, on the corner of Atlantic and Clinton Sts., was incorp. Jan. 28, 1852. It occupies a large three-story edifice, erected at a cost of $60,000. The first story is used for mercantile purposes, the second for a library and reading room, and the third for public lectures.

The Law Library in Brooklyn, incorp. Jan. 8, 1850, is located at 311 Fulton St.

The Naval Lyceum, within the Navy Yard, was established in 1833 by officers of the navy. It has a fine library and museum.

The Kings County Lodge Library Association, at Williamsburgh, was incorp. Feb. 7, 1847.

Among the societies for intellectual improvement are the Hamilton Library Association, founded in 1830; the Franklin Debating Association, in 1852; the Young Men's Association, in 1853; the St. Charles Institute, in 1851; the Evelston Literary Association, in 1854; and the Columbia Literary Association, in 1855. The Great Northwestern Zephyr Association, designed to encourage native talent in music, painting, and sculpture, was organized in 1838. The Philharmonic Society

¹This great work is just completed. Until a very recent date the city has depended upon wells and cisterns for its supply of water. There were 122 public cisterns in the city; but all the supplies were entirely inadequate to the demand for water. The first agitation for a better supply of water commenced in 1835; but nothing was accomplished until 1847, when a report was made recommending the building of reservoirs to be supplied from wells. In 1849, W. J. McAlpine submitted a plan for obtaining a supply from the streams flowing into Jamaica Bay. The question of prosecuting this work at public expense was repeatedly voted down. Several private companies used surveys to be made, and one of them acquired titles to the streams in question; and June 4, 1850, the Common Council subscribed $1,300,000 to the stock of the Nassau Water Company. The work was commenced July 31, 1856, under the charge of James

P. Kirkwood, Chief Engineer. Feb. 11, 1857, the rights of the Nassau Company were vested in the city. The work was completed in May, 1859. It is contemplated to erect another reservoir upon Prospect Hill.

²The Fire Department of the Western District, under the care of 5 commissioners, has 7 hook and ladder companies, 4 hook and ladder companies, 7 hose companies, and 13 alarm bells. The Fire Department of the Eastern District has 6 fire districts, 33 engines, 3 hook and ladder companies, 14 hose companies, and 2 alarm bells.

of Brooklyn, for the encouragement of music, was incorp. May 6, 1857. The Brooklyn Horticultural Society was incorp. April 9, 1854, and holds annual fairs. The Hunt Horticultural and Botanical Garden was incorporated April 9, 1855, with a capital of $150,000. It has a garden of 16 acres.

The Brooklyn City Hospital, on Raymond St. near De Kalb Avenue, was incorp. May 8, 1845. Its present buildings were opened April 28, 1852. It is supported by voluntary contributions and legislative appropriations. The Brooklyn City Dispensary, located at 109 Pineapple St., was incorp. March 5, 1850. It is supported in the same manner as the hospital. The Brooklyn Dispensary, (Homeopathic,) 83 Court St., was incorp. Dec. 3, 1852. It is supported by private subscriptions. The Williamsburg Dispensary, on the corner of 5th and South Sts., was incorp. March 4, 1851; 2,221 persons received medical treatment at the institution in 1857. It is supported by private contributions. The Brooklyn Central Dispensary, 473 Fulton St., was incorp. Dec. 11, 1855. The Brooklyn German General Dispensary is located at 145 Court St. The Brooklyn Eye and Ear Infirmary, 109 Pineapple St., was incorp. March 27, 1851.

The Orphan Asylum Society was incorp. May 6, 1834. The institution is situated upon a fine site on Cumberland St. near Myrtle Avenue.

The Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum of Brooklyn was incorp. May 6, 1834. The asylum for boys is located at the corner of Clinton and Congress Sts., and the asylum for girls upon Congress St. near Clinton. The former has 120 inmates, and the latter 250. The girls are under the charge of the Sisters of Charity. The support of these institutions is principally derived from the income of a large property bequeathed by Cornelius Heeney and under the charge of the Brooklyn Benevolent Society.¹

The Brooklyn Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor was formed March 26, 1844. It numbers about 180 visitors, whose duty it is to investigate the condition of the poor in every part of the city, afford such temporary relief in the way of food and clothing as the cases may warrant, and to refer the needy to the appropriate sources for permanent relief. This association distributes $6,000 to $7,000 per year. The Brooklyn Benevolent Society, founded upon a bequest of Cornelius Heeney, was incorp. in May, 1845. It is managed by 11 trustees, of whom the Archbishop of N. Y. and the Mayor of Brooklyn are ex officio members. Its funds are principally devoted to the support of various Catholic charities. The Brooklyn Society for the Relief of Respectable and Indigent Females, incorp. in 1851, was founded by John B. Graham, who erected a fine edifice, corner of Washington and De Kalb Sts., as a home for the unfortunates named in the title. It derives its support from private subscriptions. The Children's Aid Society was organized in Feb. 1854, as an industrial school. The Brooklyn Industrial School Association, under the management of ladies of the several churches, was incorp. April 4, 1854. It has established schools in different parts of the city for girls who do not attend the public schools, and who are entirely deprived of moral training. The Brooklyn Female Employment Society, an association of ladies to furnish employment to respectable females who may be reduced to want, was incorp. April 19, 1854. Its office and salesroom is at 65 Court St. The Church Charity Association for the relief of the aged, sick, and indigent was incorp. in March, 1851. It is under the patronage of the Prot. E. Church.

The churches of Brooklyn are justly celebrated for their general elegance and beauty of architectural design. Large numbers of people doing business in New York reside in Brooklyn; and this has led to the erection of so great a number of churches that the city has been denominated the "city of churches." In 1858 there were 139 churches in the city.² Connected with these churches are various religious and charitable societies.³ The Freemasons, Odd Fellows, and Sons of Tem-

¹ The other benevolent Catholic societies in the city are as follows:—St. James's School, Jay St., with 500 pupils under the Brothers of Christian Schools, and 150 pupils under the Sisters of Mercy; St. Paul's Female School, with 100 pupils, under the Sisters of Charity; St. Peter's and Paul's School, with 200 girls, under the Sisters of St. Joseph; St. Mary Star of the Sea, with 300 girls, under the Sisters of Charity; Convent and Female School attached to the Church of the Holy Trinity; Convent and Academy of the Visitation; St. Francis of Assisi's Convent of Sisters of Mercy and Nuns of the Order of St. Dominic. The R. C. Benevolent Society of St. Peter's and St. Paul's Church was incorp. June 15, 1858, to sustain a Sunday school and library, and support the sick and bury the dead. Free schools are connected with all the churches except that of St. Charles.

Greenwood Cemetery, upon the s. line, is mostly within the limits of the city. It is owned by a joint stock company, incorp. April 18, 1838. It comprises an area of 400 acres, beautifully located upon the elevated and broken ground of Gowanus Bay. The grounds were purchased and opened for burial in 1842; and up to Aug. 1878, 61,000 burials had been made. It is one of the oldest and most beautiful of the rural cemeteries connected with the great cities in this country. The grounds are laid out with taste and many of the sculptured monuments are artistically and beautiful specimens of art.

The Cemetery of the Evergreens upon the n. line, is partly in Queens Co. It is beautifully located upon a bluff affording fine views of New York, the bay, the ocean, and the surrounding country. It was opened for interment in 1840.

The French Cemetery lies near the city line, s. of Greenwood. It has a fine location; but, in accordance with the principles of the sect, ornamental monuments are all void to be erected in it.

The Catholic Union Cemetery, incorp. in 1851, contains an area of 20 acres. The trustees allow the burial of persons of color and of the poor for no charge except that of opening and closing the ground.

The first settlements were made under the Dutch Government, in 1625, by several families of French Protestants from near the river Waal, in Netherlands, who located near Wallabout Bay. They named their settlement "Wallobaul" and the bay "Wallobaens Bight," from which is derived its present name Wallabout. Little progress was made in settlement for many years; and no governmental organization was effected under the Dutch. Up to the commencement of the present century the population was principally confined to several little hamlets scattered over the territory now embraced in the city. Since 1840 the increase of population and the growth of the city have been very rapid, scarcely paralleled by the magical growth of the cities of the West.² Albany, possessing a separate municipal government, in all its business and interests it forms an integral part of the city of New York. In the summer of 1776, New York and vicinity became the theatre of stirring military events. After the British had evacuated Boston, Washington marched immediately to New York, believing that the enemy would make this the next point of attack. Every effort was made to construct and strengthen the military defenses of the place. Strong works were erected in Brooklyn and other points upon Long Island, and large bodies of troops were posted there to defend them. The British arrived, and landed their troops upon Staten Island July 3; and on the 22d of Aug. they passed over to Long Island, to the number of 19,000 strong. They landed in New Utrecht, whence three roads led over the hills to where the Americans were encamped. One of these roads passed near the Narrows, the next led from Flatbush and the third far to the right by the route of Flatlands. It was the design of Gen. Putnam, who commanded the American forces, to arrest the enemy upon the heights; and the appearance of a large body of troops early on the morning of the 27th on the middle road led to the belief that the main attack was to be made at that point. While intent upon this movement, it was found that the main army of the enemy were approaching from the direction of Bedford, and that there was imminent danger of being surrounded by them. Attacked in front and rear, the Americans fought with bravery; but a part only succeeded in gaining their entrenchments. The loss of the Americans was more than 3,000 in killed, wounded, and prisoners; and of the enemy, less than 400. Gen. Sullivan, Sterling, and Woodhull were taken prisoners,—the last named of whom died from wounds inflicted after his surrender. The Americans withdrew to New York early on the 29th, under the personal direction of Gen. Washington.³ The American prisoners taken at this battle, and those taken afterward during the war, were confined in the hulks of old ships anchored in Wallabout Bay, of June 1721—was married with 10 children, on the 2d of 1751. She died 27th of June, 1763, and was buried in the church of St. Peter's, in the cemetery. A full and full account of her life was given at her funeral by an anonymous person.

A large and very respectable number of the population of the city were of the Irish race, and they were the main body of the American army which passed over to Staten Island. The Irish were the main body of the American army which passed over to Staten Island.

where they perished by hundreds and thousands from violence, cold, foul air, and stunted food.¹ During the War of 1812 a considerable amount of voluntary labor was expended in erecting a line of fortifications around the city, and bodies of troops were stationed there to protect the people.

FLATBUSH²—was chartered by Gov. Stuyvesant in 1652, and its rights were confirmed by Gov. Nicoll, Oct. 11, 1667, and by Gov. Dongan, Nov. 20, 1685.³ It was recognized by the State Government March 7, 1788. New Lots was taken off in 1852. It is the central town in the co., lying immediately s. of Brooklyn. A low, broad range of hills extends along the s. border, occupying nearly one-fourth of its surface. The remainder of the town is level. The soil is light and sandy, but productive. Flatbush (p. v.) is a long, scattered village, extending through the center of the town. It contains 4 churches,⁴ the Erasmus Hall Academy,⁵ and many elegant dwellings. Greenfield is a thinly settled village plat in the s. w. corner of the town. A part of Greenwood Cemetery lies in the s. w. corner. Galilee Cemetery lies e. of the village. The first settlement was made by the Dutch at an early period.

FLATLANDS⁶—was incorp. by patent under Gov. Nicoll, Oct. 4, 1667, confirmed by Gov. Dongan, March 11, 1685,⁷ and recognized by the State Government March 7, 1788. It is the s. e. town in the co. The surface is very flat, as indicated by the name; and a considerable portion consists of salt marshes bordering upon Jamaica Bay.⁸ Several small, marshy islands belong to the town.⁹ Flatlands (p. o.) is a farming settlement. Canarsie¹⁰ (p. o.) is a hamlet, upon the road leading to the bay. The first settlement was made by the Dutch, in 1636. Ex-Gov. Wouter Van Twiller had a tobacco farm in this town while it was under Dutch rule. There are 3 churches in town; 2 M. E. and Ref. Prot. D.

GRAVESEND¹¹—was granted to English settlers, by patent under Gov. Keift, Dec. 19, 1645, and confirmed by Gov. Nicoll, Aug. 13, 1667, and by Gov. Dongan, Sept. 10, 1686.¹² It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It is the most southerly town in the co. The surface is generally very level. A beach and ridge of sand hills extend along the coast, and in the rear of these are extensive salt meadows. Coney Island is separated from the mainland by a narrow tidal current flowing through the marshes.¹³ Gravesend, (p. v.,) near the center, is compactly built, and was formerly fortified with palisades. It was the county seat prior to 1686.¹⁴ Unionville is a small settlement on the bay, near the w. line. The Cove is a settlement on Sheeps Head Bay. This town was settled before 1640, by English Quakers, from Mass. Lady Deborah Moody—a woman of rank, education, and wealth—was a prominent person in this enterprise. The liberal terms of their first grant were not fully regarded by the Dutch; but the prudence and firmness of Lady Moody eventually secured a good degree of respect and a more indulgent policy toward them. In 1655 the settlement was saved from destruction by North River Indians by a guard from the city. In 1656 the people petitioned for and obtained 3 big guns for their protection. In 1659 the town agreed to give Henry Brazier 500 gilders for building a mill, and ¹ The first prison ship was the Whitly; but this and another were burned, and, in April, 1778, the Jersey became the receiving ship for prisoners. The Hope and the Falmouth, anchored near by, were the hospital ships; and upon these most of the deaths occurred. It is reported that 11,600 prisoners died upon these ships during the war. The persistent barbarity and cold-hearted inhumanity practiced by the British toward these prisoners finds no parallel in the history of civilized nations; and the horrible sufferings of the prisoners in their foul dungeons, reeking with filth, disease, and the air of the charnel house carried through months and years, completely cast into the shade the lesser horrors of the Middle Passage, or of the Black Hole of Calcutta. The graves of these martyrs of freedom were uncovered while grading for the Navy Yard, in 1808. Twenty hogsheds of bones were collected, deposited in 13 casks,—representing the 13 original States,—and, May 26, 1808, they were buried upon Hudson Avenue, near the Navy Yard, under the auspices of the Tammany Society. The land upon which they were interred was given for that purpose by John Jackson. Several years since, Benj. Romane inclosed the remains in a vault; and, April 11, 1851, an association was incorp. for collecting funds to build a monument.

Adrien Hezeman, Jan Suedador, Jan Stryker, Frans Barents, (pastor,) Jacob Stryker, and Cornelius Jansse Bougart were patentees.—Patents, IV, 48, 51.

⁵ This institution, incorp. Nov. 17, 1787, was the first one chartered by the regents.

⁶ Called "New Amersfort" by the Dutch, from a place in Holland.

⁷ The patentees named in the first instrument were Elbert Elberts, Govert Lockermans, Koehille Martens, Pieter Claes, Wm. Gerrits, Thos. Hillebrants, Stephen Coertsen, and Coert Stevens; and those in the second were E. Elberts, R. Martens, Pieter Claes, Wm. Garretsen, Coert Stevens, Lucas Stevenson, and John Tenussen. The annual quitrent was 14 bushels of wheat.

⁸ These marshes and flat lands produce large quantities of hay.

⁹ The principal of these are Bergen Island, on the bay, and Barren Island, upon the coast. Upon the latter island is a large bone-boiling establishment, to which place are removed all the dead animals from New York. The business is very extensive, and large quantities of hides, fat, bones, hair, and manure are annually produced.

¹¹ Named from the English town of this name, or from the deep sounds on the shore.—Tompson's Hist., II, 169.

every man a day's work, with a team, or 2 days without, in building a dam. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1655. Besides this, there are in town 2 M. E. churches.

NEW LOTS—was formed from Flatbush, Feb. 12, 1852. It lies in the extreme e. part of the co. Its surface is generally level, the s. half being occupied by extensive salt meadows. East New York (p. v.) is a prospective city of "magnificent distances" near the s. line.¹ It contains a newspaper office, 4 churches, a manufacture of dyestuffs and colors, several shoe manufactories, and 1,000 inhabitants. Cypress Hills is a newly surveyed village near the s. e. corner. The Cypress Hills Cemetery, Cemetery of the Evergreens, and Cemetery of the Congregation of Emanuel (Jewish) are partly in this town. The first settlement was made by about 20 families from Holland and a few Palatines, in 1654. In 1660 the portions of lands previously held in common were divided into lots and assigned to individuals. During the same year a horse-mill was erected. For many years the deacons of the church were chosen overseers of the poor, and from 1799 to 1812 the schools were under the direction of church officers. A detachment of 1,200 militia was stationed here in the War of 1812, in anticipation of an attack from the British. There are 5 churches in town.²

NEW UTRECHT—was incorp. by Gov. Stuyvesant in 1662, by Gov. Nicoll, Aug. 15, 1668, and by Gov. Dongan, May 13, 1686.³ It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies upon the Narrows, in the w. part of the co. A range of low hills extends across the s. border, and the remaining part of the surface is level. The soil is a light, sandy loam, but for the most part is highly cultivated. New Utrecht, (p. v.) in the s. part, is a small, compact village. In ancient times it was inclosed by a palisade as a defense against Indians and pirates. Fort Hamilton, (p. v.) near the U. S. grounds, is a fine village, chiefly inhabited by persons doing business in New York. Bath is a place of summer resort on Gravesend Bay. Bay Ridge is a suburban village adjoining Brooklyn. Fort Hamilton is a U. S. fortification upon the bluff commanding the passage of the Narrows.⁴ Fort La Fayette is a strong water battery built upon Hendricks Reef, 200 yards from the shore.⁵ There are 6 churches in town.⁶

¹This part of Flatbush was called by the Dutch "O'ronant," East Woods. A patent was granted to 19 of the principal inhabitants, March 25, 1677, by Gov. Andross.

²This city was laid out during the speculative days of 1835-36 as a rival of New York. A ship canal, extending to Jamaica Bay, was to make the place a port of entry.

LEWIS COUNTY.

This county was formed from Oneida, March 28, 1805, and named in honor of Gov. Morgan Lewis. Slight changes were made in the boundary on the erection of Pinckney, in 1808, and of Wilna, in 1813. It lies mostly within the valley of Black River, s. of the center of the State. It is centrally distant 116 mi. from Albany, and contains 1,288 sq. mi. Its surface consists of the broad intervals which extend along the course of Black River, and uplands which rise upon the e. and w. The eastern half rises gradually to the e. border of the co., where it attains an elevation of about 1400 feet above tide. This part of the co. forms a portion of the great wilderness of Northern N. Y. The surface in many places is broken by low ridges or isolated masses of naked gneiss. The streams generally flow over rocky beds, and in places through wild ravines. The soil is a light, yellow, sandy loam and unprofitable for cultivation. In the eastern forests are great numbers of picturesque lakes, many of which are scarcely known except to hunters and fishermen. The streams flowing from the plateau are generally rapid, furnishing an abundance of water power.¹ Magnetic iron ore has been found inter-stratified with gneiss and red specular ore on the s. e. border of the co., and along the margins of the streams is an abundance of iron sand. At the junction of the gneiss and white limestone in Diana are a great number of interesting minerals.²

The w. side rises from the valley of Black River by a series of terraces to near the center of the w. half of the co., whence it spreads out toward Lake Ontario. These terraces are occasionally broken by oblique valleys from the s. w. The summit is 1500 to 1700 feet above tide. The interval along the river, and the banks which immediately border upon it, are underlaid by Black River limestone. Next above this, in an irregular terrace, rises the Trenton limestone, 300 feet thick in the s. part of the co. and gradually diminishing toward the s. This limestone is very compact and strongly resists the action of the elements. In many places it presents the face of steep declivities approaching the perpendicular, and the streams from the w. plateau generally flow over this formation in a single perpendicular fall. This rock underlies an extremely fertile and nearly level tract of 1 to 3 mi. wide. Above it, on the w., the strata of the Utica slate and Lorraine shales rise about 500 feet higher, and from the summit the surface spreads out into a nearly level region, with its waters flowing both toward the e. and w.³ This range in Lewis co. is known as Tug Hill. The soil in the limestone region is sometimes thin, but is everywhere productive. Near the foot of Tug Hill is a strip of stiff clay a few rods wide, extending the whole length of the co., and marked by a line of springs and swamps. The soil upon the slate is deep and well adapted to grazing, but, from its great elevation, it is liable to late and early frosts. Upon the summit of the slate table lands are extensive swamps, which give rise to streams flowing into Black River, Lake Ontario, Oneida Lake, and the Mohawk. Drift deposits are scattered promiscuously, and sometimes lie at a great depth, more particularly upon the northerly sides of the oblique valleys before mentioned.

The streams which rise on the summit of Tug Hill in many places flow through ancient beaver meadows, and upon the brow of the hill they have invariably worn deep ravines into the slates and shales, in some instances 3 or 4 mi. in length and 100 to 300 feet deep. Chimney Point and Whetstone Gulf, in Martinsburgh, are localities of this kind. There are but few ravines in the limestone terraces, though the Deer River Falls, near Copenhagen, are in a gorge worn in this rock. A thin layer of Potsdam sandstone rests immediately upon the gneiss in Martinsburgh. Waterlime of excellent quality has been made from the lower strata of Black River limestone, and veins of lead ore have been worked in the upper part of the Trenton limestone in Martinsburgh and Lowville.⁴ The outline of the hills readily indicates the character of the underlying rocks.⁵

² Zueco, sphene, tabular spar, pyroxene, nuttallite, blue calcite, leucht-crystallized iron pyrites, Rensselaerite, and coesalite are found near the Natural Bridge.

⁴ About the year 1828 a silver mine was announced as discovered near Lowville; and in 1837 a lead mine was somewhat extensively wrought 1 mi. s. w. of Martinsburgh Village, and several tons of lead were made at a great loss. More recently a company of speculators have bought the premises; but work has not been resumed, and probably will not be. Black oxide of manganese has been found in swamps upon the summit of Tug Hill, in the s. w. part of Martinsburgh.

The s. w. part of the co. is drained by Fish Creek and its branches, and the headwaters of the Mohawk. Salmon River rises upon the w. border, and the Oswegatchie and Indian Rivers take their rise in the s. e. The principal tributaries of Black River are Moose¹ and Beaver Rivers,² Otter,³ Independence, and Fish Creeks, and Fall Brook, on the n.; and Sugar River, Mill, Houses, and Whetstone Creeks, Roaring Brook, Lowville Creek, and Deer River⁴ upon the w. Several mineral springs are found within the co.⁵ Spring grains are readily cultivated; but this co. is particularly adapted to pasturage, dairying forming the principal pursuit of the people. Droughts seldom occur; but the uplands are noted for their deep snows. Within a few years, several extensive establishments have been erected upon Black, Moose, Beaver, and Deer Rivers, for the manufacture of leather, paper, lumber, and articles of wood. Two furnaces for the manufacture of iron from the ore are located near the s. border.

The county seat is located at Martinsburgh. A wooden courthouse and jail were built here in 1840-11, upon a site given by Gen. Martin.⁷ The present clerk's office was erected by citizens of Martinsburgh in 1847. Active efforts were made at an early day, and renewed in 1852, to obtain the removal of the co. seat to Lowville, and a fine edifice was built at that place for the courts, in the hope of securing their removal. The co. poorhouse is located upon a farm of 59 acres 1 mi. w. of Lowville. The average number of inmates is about 90. The institution is well managed in regard to economy, neatness, and the health of the inmates. The only internal improvement in the co. is the Black River Canal, connecting Black River below Lyons Falls with the Erie Canal at Rome.⁸ From Lyons Falls the river is navigated to Carthage, a distance of 42½ mi., by small steamers. Three newspapers are now published in the co.⁹

This co. is entirely within Macomb's Purchase, and includes a part of Great Tract No. 1V.,¹⁰ most of the Chassanis Purchase,¹¹ Watson's West Tract,¹² the Brantingham Tract,¹³ and a small part of John Brown's Tract,¹⁴ on the e. side of the river; and 4 of the "Eleven Towns,"¹⁵ 5 of the Thirteen Towns of the Boylston Tract,¹⁶ Constable's Five Towns,¹⁷ and Inman's Triangle¹⁸ on the w.

The first settlers came from New England and settled at Leyden in 1791. The fame of the forms without change; the limestone terraces rise by steep slopes to their level summit; and the slate and shale hills exhibit the yielding character of the rocks which compose them, by their rounded outline and the gorges which every spring torrent has worn upon their sides.

² Indian name Te-ka-lung-shan-to, clearing an opening.

³ Indian name Ne-la-ess-hue, crossing on a stick of timber.

⁴ Indian name De-wen-net, the otter.

⁵ Indian name Gan-ne-go-to-do, corn powder.

⁶ The biggest of these arises from the limestone in Lowville, near the line of Harrisburgh. Others rise from the slate upon Tug Hill. All of them emit sulphuretted hydrogen gas, and some have been used for medicinal purposes.

The Black River & Utica R. R., now finished to Romeville, will probably be extended through the Black River Valley.

⁹ The Black River Gazette was established at Martinsburgh, March 10, 1867, by James B. Robbins, and was removed to Watertown the following year. This was the first paper published in the State S. of Utica.

The Lewis Co. Sentinel was started at Martinsburgh, Oct. 12, 1824, by Charles Nichols, and continued 1 year.

The Martinsburgh Sentinel was commenced in 1828 by — Pearson and continued until March, 1830.

The Lewis County Republican was established at Martinsburgh, in 1821 or '32, by James Wheeler, who - died in Daniel S. Bailey, its present publisher, in 1837. It was removed to Lowville in 1844, but has since been removed to Martinsburgh.

The Lewis Co. Gazette was started at Lowville, in the spring of 1821, by Lewis G. Hoffman, and continued 2 years.

The Black River Gazette was issued at Lowville, Oct. 19, 1825, by Wm. L. Faston. It was sold in 1830 to J. M. Farr, by whom it was continued a year or more.

The Lewis Pioneer was started at Lowville, March 25, 1834, by Le. G. and Burlington, and continued 1 year.

The Northern Journal was commenced at Lowville, Feb. 14, 1828, by A. W. Clark. It has frequently changed owners, and is now published by Henry A. Phillips.

The Lewis County Banner was started at Lowville, Sept. 2, 1836, by N. B. Sylvester, and is now published by Henry Algeoer.

The Lewis Co. Democrat was commenced Sept. 22, 1846, at Turin, by H. R. Lahr. It was removed to Martinsburgh in 1849 and discontinued a few weeks after.

The Dollar Weekly Southern Blade was started at Constableville in 1854. It was changed to

The News Register in April, 1857, by Merrill A. Cook, its publisher, and was afterward removed to Carthage.

¹⁰ This tract was bought by the Antwerp Company, and embraced an area of 4,029,000 acres. See p. 133.

¹¹ This tract was purchased by Pierre Chassanis in 1752, and was supposed to contain 600,000 acres. Upon a survey being made, it was found that the tract fell far short of this, and a new agreement was made, April 2, 1763, for 210,000 acres. A narrow strip of this tract extended along the s. side of the river to High Falls. The settlers of this tract were principally refugees of the French Revolution. Many of them were wealthy, titled, and highly educated, and, in consequence, were poorly fitted for the hardships of pioneer life. Large sums of money were expended to render the settlement successful, but the settlers soon after returned to France and the enterprise was abandoned. Rodolph Teller was the first agent; and in 1800 he was superseded by Gouverneur Morris, who appointed Richard Cox his agent. The first buildings were erected near the present residence of Francis Seger.

¹³ So called from Thomas H. Branting, ham of the city of Philadelphia, who at one time held the title. It is mostly in Otsego, and contains 74,400 acres.

¹⁴ This tract, which is popularly regarded as the whole northern wilderness of New York, included 210,000 acres sold by Constable to John Julius Angersham, and afterward conveyed to John Brown, of Providence, R. I. It was divided into 8 townships, as follows:—

- | | |
|------------------|---------------|
| 1. Industry, | 5. Frugality, |
| 2. Enterprise, | 6. Sobriety, |
| 3. Perseverance, | 7. Economy, |
| 4. Unanimity, | 8. Industry. |

It has been said that all these social virtues are needed for the settlement of this region. The first 4 townships are partly in Lewis co.

¹⁵ Numbers 5, 9, 10, and 11,—now Denmark, Pinkney, Harrisburgh, and Lowville.

¹⁸ Leyden as it existed before Lewis was created. It included 26,250 acres, forming a perfect triangle.

"Black River country" spread through Mass. and Conn., and within the next ten years the country between Tug Hill and the river rapidly filled up with a laborious, intelligent, and enterprising population. A romantic project of settlement formed by refugees of the French Revolution, in which Arcadian dreams of rural felicity were to be realized, was abandoned after a short experience of the real hardships of pioneer life. Except an expensive but ineffectual attempt by Brown to settle his tract, toward the close of the last century, little improvement was made e. of the river until about 1820; and this section has at present less than one-fourth of the population, and a still less proportion of the wealth, of the co. A systematic effort at settlement of the extreme w. part was first made in 1840-46, under Seymour Green and Diadate Pease, agents of the Pierrepont estate. Much of this region is still a wilderness.

CROGHAN¹—was formed from Watson and Diana, April 5, 1841, and a part of New Bremen was taken off in 1848. It lies e. of Black River, in the s. part of the co. The surface has an inclination toward the w. and s., and in the central and e. parts it is broken and hilly. Oswegatchie and Indian Rivers rise in the town and flow northerly into Diana; and Beaver River forms a portion of its s. boundary. In the e. part of the town are several lakes. The soil is light and sandy, and along the river intervals it is moderately fertile. The town is thinly settled along Black and Beaver Rivers, but in the s. and e. it is still a wilderness. Croghan, (p. o.) on Beaver River, and Nanmburg,² (p. o.) in the w. part of the town, are small villages. Indian River, (p. o.) s. of the center of the town, and Belfort, on Beaver River, are hamlets. Settlement commenced before 1830, under P. S. Stewart, agent for Le Ray. Many of the settlers are French and Germans. There are 5 churches in town.³

DENMARK⁴—was formed from Harrisburgh, April 3, 1807. It lies w. of Black River, on the s. border of the co. Its surface descends to Black River on the e. by a succession of irregular terraces. Deer River flows through the town, and upon its course are several falls, affording an abundant water power. The High Falls, one mi. below Copenhagen, descend 160 feet, at an angle of about 80°, and are celebrated for their picturesque beauty. Kings Fall, 2 mi. below, has a descent of about 40 feet. The e. part of the town is covered with deep deposits of drift. Near the mouth of Deer River are extensive flats; and Black River is bordered by a cedar swamp. The soil is very fertile. Copenhagen,⁵ (p. v.) on Deer River, in the w. part, contains 3 churches and several manufactories.⁶ Pop. 505. Denmark, (p. v.) in the e. part, contains about 50 houses; and Deer River, (p. v.) on the river of the same name, 2 mi. from its mouth, 35.⁷ The first settlement was made in 1800, by Jesse Blodget.⁸ The census reports 6 churches in town.⁹

DIANA—was formed from Watson, April 16, 1830, and a part of Croghan was taken off in 1841. This is the extreme s. e. town in the co. Its surface is level, or gently rolling. In the e. part are 2 isolated hills, 300 to 500 feet above the surrounding surface. The principal streams are Oswegatchie and Indian Rivers and their branches. Bonaparte¹⁰ and Indian Lakes, in the s. part, and Cranberry, Legiers, and Sweets Lakes, in the e., are the principal bodies of water. The greater part of this town is yet a wilderness. The soil is light and sandy. Iron ore is found in the s. and e. parts, and coarse, crystalline marble, of a sky-blue tint, on the banks of Indian River, near Natural Bridge. Sterlingbush,¹¹ (p. v.) in the w. part, contains 15 houses; and Harrisville 12. Blanchards Settlement (Diana Center p. o.) is in the s. part. Diana is a p. o., and Alpina¹² is a hamlet. There are 2 churches in town, (Bap. and M. E.) but no church edifice.

GREIG¹³—was formed from Watson, April 5, 1828, as "Brantingham." Its name was changed Feb. 20, 1832. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is rolling in the w., but it is broken, rocky, and in some places hilly, in the e. The principal streams, all tributaries of Black River, are Moose River, Otter, Stony, and Fish Creeks, and Cole and Fall Brooks. The scenery

⁴ This town embraces Township No. 5, or Mantua, of the Eleven Towns.

⁶ About 1830 the manufacture of cordage was commenced here on an extensive scale; but it has recently been abandoned.

⁷ Abel French was the first settler at this place, and it was originally known as "Frenchs Mills."

⁸ Among the early settlers were Freedom Wright, Major J.

Crary, Robert Howe, Asa Piore, Ichabod Parsons, Lewis Graves, Jonathan Barker, J. Bush, and Andrew Mills.

⁹ Bap., organized in 1830, Cong., M. E., Unit., and 2 Union.

¹⁰ Bonaparte Lake was so called in honor of Joseph Bonaparte, who built a log house upon its banks for the accommodation of himself and friends while upon hunting and fishing excursions, during his stay at his summer residence at Natural Bridge.

¹¹ Formerly called "Lansburg." It owes its origin to an iron furnace built here in 1833.

along Moose River is celebrated for its wildness and beauty. The greater part of the town is yet a wilderness. In the e. part are several small lakes, which constitute some of the favorite resorts of fishermen. The soil is principally a light, sandy loam. Iron ore and ochre are found, and near Brauntingham Lake is a sulphur spring. Lumber, leather, and paper are made, and on Otter Creek is an extensive match box factory. Lyonsdale,¹ on Moose River, 3 mi. from its mouth, and Greig and Brauntingham, near Black River, are p. offices. In 1792 the French, under Rodolph Tillier, settled on the Chassanis Tract, near Black River, below the High Falls.² The only church in town (Presb.) was formed in 1807.

HARRISBURGH³—was formed from Lowville, Champion, (Jefferson co.) and Mexico, (Oswego co.) Feb. 22, 1803. Denmark was taken off in 1807, and a part of Pinckney in 1808. It lies upon the slate hills and limestone terraces s. w. of the center of the co. Its general inclination is toward the s. e., its s. w. corner being 300 to 500 feet above Black River. Its surface is generally rolling, but in the s. w. it is moderately hilly. Deer River and its tributaries are the principal streams. The soil is generally a rich loam largely intermixed with disintegrated limestone and slate. Harrisburgh, in the s. e. part, and South Harrisburgh, in the s., are p. offices. Settlement commenced a short time previous to the War of 1812.⁴ The first religious services were conducted by Elder Amasa Dodge, a Free Will Baptist minister. There are 4 churches in town.⁵

HIGH MARKET⁶—was formed from West Turin, Nov. 11, 1852. It lies upon the elevated slate region w. of Black River, a little s. of the center of the co. Its general inclination is toward the s. e. Its surface is rolling in the s., but broken and moderately hilly in the s. and w. Its streams are Fish Creek and its branches, the principal of which are Big and Little Alder Creeks. The soil is a loam mixed with disintegrated slate, and is best adapted to pasturage. High Market (p. o.) is in the s. e. part of the town. Most of the town is still unsettled. Among the first settlers were Alfred Hovey, L. Fairchild, John Felslaw, Sol. Wells, and Benj. Martin.⁷ A large proportion of the people are of Irish nativity.⁸ There are no churches in town.

LEWIS⁹—was formed from West Turin and Leyden, Nov. 11, 1852. It lies upon the elevated plateau in the s. angle of the co. Its surface is generally rolling, but in the w. part it is broken and hilly. Its entire surface is 700 to 1200 feet above the valley of Black River. The principal streams are Fish Creek, the w. branch of the Mohawk, and the w. branch of Salmon River. Most of the town is yet an uninhabited wilderness. The soil is generally a sandy loam, moderately fertile and best adapted to grazing. Owing to the elevation of the town, spring is late, autumn early, and snows deep. West Leyden, (p. v.), situated on the headwaters of the Mohawk, in the e. part of the town, contains about 20 houses. Settlement was commenced about 1800; but the present inhabitants of the town are mostly new comers, of German nativity.¹⁰ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1826. There are now 4 churches in town.¹¹

LEYDEX¹²—was formed from Steuben, (Oneida co.) March 10, 1797. Brownville (Jefferson co.) was taken off in 1802, Boonville (Oneida co.) in 1805, a part of Wilna (Jefferson co.) in 1819, Watson in 1821, and a part of Lewis in 1852. It lies on the w. bank of Black River, upon the s. border of the co. Its inclination is toward the e., the w. border being about 500 feet above the river. Its surface is undulating. Its principal streams are Sugar River and Moose Creek.¹³ The soil is a fertile loam mixed with disintegrated slate and limestone. Port Leyden, (p. v.) on Black River, has a population of 192; Talcottville, (Leyden p. o.) in the center of the town, of 50; and Leyden Hill, in the s. part, of 40. Settlement began in 1794,¹⁴ under the owners

¹ The first settlement was made in this place by Caleb Lyon, in 1819. He died in 1836, the year before his long cherished project of a State canal to the Black River was authorized by law. His son, Caleb Lyon of Lyonsdale, has at this place a Gothic villa, located in the midst of picturesque scenery and adorned with elegant collections of art.

⁴ Among the early settlers were John and Silas Bush, Amos Buck, Geo. Stoddard, and Thomas and Gilbert Morrills.

⁵ Bap., Free Will Bap., M. E., and R. C.

⁶ This town embraces Township No. 9, or Penelope, of the Boylston Tract, and parts of Nos. 2 and 3, or Flora and Lucretia, of Constable's Towns.

⁷ S. C. Thompson kept the first store and inn and built the first gristmill; and James McVickar erected the first sawmill. The first school was taught by Ada Higby.

⁸ They settled in town soon after the suspension of the public works in 1842.

⁹ Named from the co.

¹¹ Presb., Bap., M. E., and R. C.

¹² This town, with that part of Lewis which was set off from it, forms the tract known as "Human's Triangle."

of the Triangle. A Cong. church was formed at a very early period, by Rev. — Ely, and a Bap. church in 1798. There are now 6 churches in town.¹

LOWVILLE²—was formed from Mexico, (Oswego co.), March 14, 1800, and a part of Harrisburgh was taken off in 1803. It lies upon the w. bank of Black River, a little s. of the center of the co. Its w. border is about 400 feet above the river. Its surface is gently rolling. A wide intervale, the s. part of which is swampy, extends along the course of the river. The soil is a deep, fertile loam intermixed with dis-integrated limestone.³ A mineral spring is found near the s. border of the town. Lowville, (p.v.) incorp. under the act of 1847,⁴ is situated near the s. border of the town. It contains 5 churches, an academy,⁵ 2 printing offices, and a bank. Pop. 908. West Lowville, (p.o.) in the w. part of the town, Stows Square, about 3 mi. s. of Lowville, and Smiths Landing, on Black River, are hamlets. Settlement was commenced about 1797, under Silas Stow, agent for N. Low, and the town was rapidly filled with immigrants from New England.⁶ The first church (M. E.) was founded in 1804. There are now 6 churches in town.⁷

MARTINSBURGH⁸—was formed from Turin, Feb. 22, 1803, and a part of Turin was annexed in 1823. It lies upon the w. bank of Black River, near the center of the co. It has an easterly inclination, its w. border being nearly 1000 feet above the river valley. Its surface is rolling, with a wide, level intervale bordering upon the river. The principal streams are Martins and Whetstone Creeks.⁹ The soil is a deep, fertile loam, except along the river, where it is sandy. Near the head of Whetstone Gulf is a sulphur spring. Martinsburgh (p.v.) is situated on Martins Creek, near the center of the town. It contains the co. buildings, 3 churches, and a newspaper office. Pop. 210. West Martinsburgh, (p.v.) in the s. part of the town, has a pop. of 164. Glensdale, (p.o.) in the s. e. part, is a hamlet of about 12 dwellings. Settlement was begun by Gen. Walter Martin, at Martinsburgh, in 1801.¹⁰ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1804, by Rev. — Norton. There are 7 churches in town.¹¹

MONTAGUE¹² (Mon-ta-gu) —was formed from West Turin, Nov. 14, 1850. It lies near the center of the w. border of the co. Its inclination is toward the s. w., and its elevation is 1200 to 1600 ft. above tide. Its surface is generally rolling, but in some places it is broken and hilly. It is watered by numerous small streams, flowing into Deer River. The s. branch of Salmon River flows through the s. w. corner. Upon lot 22, in the s. w. part, is a sulphur spring. The soil is a moderately fertile, sandy and gravelly loam. Gardners Corners (Montague p. o.) is in the s. part of the town. Settlement commenced in 1846, under the agency of Diadate Pease, agent of the Pierrepont estate. There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Bap.

NEW BREMEN—was formed from Watson and Croghan, March 31, 1818. It lies upon the e. bank of Black River, s. of the center of the co. Its surface is level in the w., but rolling, broken, and rocky in the e. It is watered by several tributaries of Black River, the largest of which is Beaver River, on the s. boundary. The e. part is sparsely settled. The soil is a light, sandy loam. Dayansville¹³ (New Bremen p. o.) is in the w. part of the town. Pop. 200. Settlement was commenced in 1798, by Samuel Hingsworth and some French families.¹⁴ In the w. part is a settlement of Germans, and in the s. one of French. There are 4 churches in town.¹⁵

³ In the Trenton lime stone are veins of the sulphurates of lead and iron, intermixed with caliche and fluor spar.

⁵ The Lowville Academy has from the first maintained a high rank. Its 50th anniversary was celebrated July 22, 1858.

⁶ Among the early settlers were Jonathan Rogers, Elud Stephens, Moses Waters, A. Wilcox, B. Hillman, Daniel Kelley, Isaac Perry, J. H. and S. Leonard, John Schull, Wm. Barrow, Jas. Boley, John Bush, A. F. and J. Snell, David and Emy Rice, and Ebenezer Hills. The first birth was that of Harriet Stephens. The first man was kept by Capt. Rogers, and the first store by Fortunatus Layer. The first mill was built by D. Kelley.

⁷ 2 Bap. Cong. Friends M. E. and Prof. E.

⁸ This town embraces Township No. 4, or Cornelia of the Boylston Tract, and Portia and a part of Lucretia, of Constable's Towns.

⁹ Martins Creek was formerly called "Flowing Brook." At Chimney Pond, near the center of the town, this str. on has worn a channel through the shale and T. o. slate, for 2 mi. to the depth of 200 to 250 feet. This remarkable chasm above the "Chimney" is tortuous, with precipitous sides, and in many places is so narrow that the stream occupies the entire space between the ledges. Whetstone Gulf, upon Whetstone Creek, in the s. part of the town, is a similar ravine.

¹⁰ Among the first settlers were Elijah Baldwin, Mrs. Richard Arthur and sons, Reuben Fisher and sons, S. Cheney, Th. Rogers, Elud Stephens, Gains Alexander, Stephen Scaris, Joseph Sheldon, Chubbis Day, A. Conkey, D. Ashley, S. Gowdy, C. and B. Shumway, and Orrin Moore. W. Martin built the first mills, and in 1807 a paper mill.

¹¹ 2 M. E., 2 Union, Bap., Presb., and Second Advent.

¹² This town embraces Township No. 3, or Shakspeare, of the Boylston Tract. It was named from the daughter of H. B. Pierrepont, the proprietor.

¹³ This place was laid out in 1826, by Charles Dayan.

¹⁶ This town embraces Townships 13 and S., or Emerald and Hilda, of the Boylston Tract. It was named from the celebrated S. minute chief.

the s. w. corner of the co. Its general inclination is toward the s. w. Its surface is undulating, and the highest points are 1500 to 1600 ft. above tide. The streams are branches of Fish Creek and Salmon River. The soil is a moderately fertile, sandy loam. Nearly all the town is yet a wilderness. Osceola is a p. o. in the s. part. Settlement was commenced about 1818, by Seymour Green, agent for Pierrepont. There are 2 churches in town, M. E. and Ind.

PICKNEY¹—was formed from Harrisburgh and "Harrison," (now Rohman, Jefferson co.) Feb. 12, 1808. It lies upon the highlands in the s. w. corner of the co., and has an average elevation of 1300 ft. above tide. It forms the watershed between Deer River and Sandy Creek, the head branches of which constitute the principal streams. A series of swamps extend along the e. border. In the town are several mineral springs, one of which has acquired considerable local notoriety for its medicinal qualities. The soil is a light, slaty loam upon the hills, and a deep, black loam in the valleys. Pickney, New Boston, Barnes Corners, and Cronks Corners are p. offices. Settlement was commenced in 1804, under Abel French, agent of Mr. Henderson.² The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1810. There are now 4 churches in town.

TURIN—was formed from Mexico, (Oswego co.,) March 14, 1800. Martinsburgh was taken off in 1802, another portion was annexed to Martinsburgh in 1823, and West Turin was taken off in 1830. It lies upon the w. bank of Black River, s. of the center of the co. Its w. boundary is 800 to 1000 ft. above the river, giving to the town an easterly inclination. The surface is level, except near the w. border, where it ascends to the slate hills, and in the n., where it descends to the river intervals. The soil is generally a deep, fertile loam mixed with disintegrated slate and limestone. Turin, (p. o.,) situated in the s. part, contains 3 churches and several manufactories.³ Pop. 438. Houseville,⁴ (p. o.,) in the s. part, has a pop. of 90. The first settlement was made about 1798, by Nathaniel Shaler, of Middletown, agent of Wm. Constable and part owner, and the town was rapidly settled by immigrants from New England.⁵ The first church (Presb.) was organized Sept. 19, 1802, by Rev. John Taylor. There are 6 churches in town.

WATSON⁶—was formed from Leyden, March 30, 1821. "Brantingham" (now Greig) was taken off in 1828, Diana in 1830, a part of Croghan in 1841, and a part of New Bremen in 1848. It lies upon the e. bank of Black River, and extends from near the center of the co. to its e. border. Its surface is level or gently rolling in the w. part, but in the central and e. parts it is more hilly and broken. It is watered by Beaver River, Independence Creek, and several smaller branches of Black River. The central and e. parts are yet covered with unbroken forests; and a large tract upon the extreme e. border, constitutes a portion of the far famed "John Brown's Tract." In the recesses of these forests are numerous beautiful lakes that are scarcely known except to hunters. Chases Lake, on the s. border, is noted for its beautiful scenery and is much visited by tourists. The soil is light and sandy. Watson,⁷ (p. o.,) situated on Black River, in the w. part of the town, is a hamlet. The early settlers located along the river, and settlements were not made in the interior until about 1815.⁸ The first church (M. E.) was organized in 1820. There are 3 churches and 1 church edifice (M. E.) in town.⁹

WEST TURIN—was formed from Turin, March 25, 1830. Osceola was taken off in 1844, Montague in 1850, and High Market and a part of Lewis in 1852. It lies upon the w. bank of Black River, s. of the center of the co. Its inclination is toward the n., its surface rising by successive terraces from the intervals of Black River to the hills 800 feet above. Its streams are Sugar River, which flows easterly through near the center of the town, and numerous smaller creeks and brooks. Lyons Falls, upon Black River, plunge over a ledge of gneiss rock 63 feet in height, at an angle of about 60°.¹⁰ These falls form an excellent water power but little used.

² Among the early settlers were J. Bonington, Phineas Woodworth, N. E. Moody, Stephen and James Hart, and Stephen Armstrong. French succeeded in 1805 by Jesse Hopkins, and by J. W. Eastwick, a few years after. Owing to its great elevation, the town is liable to deep snows, and, in consequence, its settlement was retarded until a recent date. Since the introduction of slaughtering, it has become an important town for the production of the staple products of the county,—butter and cheese.

⁴ There are 3 grist-mills upon Mill Creek, near Turin, and a wooden factory 1 mi. to the village.

⁵ Named from its founder, Ebenezer House.

⁶ Among the early settlers were, French, J. Ineson, Zac Jones and John, Hugh, Levi, Hugh Justice, and Benjamin W. Swarth, Thos. Killam, Ezra Clapp, P. Whitson, Ebenezer, Z. Bush, and W. and J. Shepleck. The first marriages that took place were Clapp and the last marriage, that of Levi Coates and Mary Bush.

⁷ 3 M. E., 2 Presb., and O. S. Ep.

⁸ Named from James Watson, of N. Y., farmer and proprietor.

⁹ Among the first settlers were, Elijah, Ebenezer, Isaac and Jabez Fuller, Jonathan Bishop, David Durity, George Bush, J. Beach, and R. Stone.

¹⁰ A bridge was built over the river, at this place, in 1828. It has recently been rebuilt at the same expense of the State and town.

¹¹ Ep., Seventh Day Rep., and M. E.

¹² Formerly called "High Falls." The rock is 100 ft. in height, but the river, which flows into it, is only 50 ft. in depth.

The soil is a deep, fertile loam upon the river valley, and a slaty loam upon the w. hills. Constableville¹ (p. v.) is situated upon Sugar River, at the foot of the Slate Hills, near the center of the town. Pop. 472. Collinsville,² (p. v.) in the E. part of the town, contains 2 churches and a population of about 200. Lyons Falls,³ (p. o.) on Black River, is a hamlet. The first settlement was made at Constableville, in 1796, by Nathaniel Shaler.⁴ There are 9 churches in town.⁵

LIVINGSTON COUNTY.

This county was formed from Genesee and Ontario, Feb. 23, 1821. A portion of Allegany was annexed in 1846, and another portion in 1856. It occupies a nearly central position in the w. half of the State. It is centrally distant 205 mi. from Albany, and contains 655 sq. mi. Its surface is an upland, rolling in the n. and hilly in the s. The hills upon the s. border are 1,000 to 1,200 ft. above the valleys and 2,000 to 2,200 ft. above tide. From their summits the surface declines toward the n., the extreme n. border being 500 to 800 ft. above tide. The slopes are usually smooth and gradual, except along the banks of the streams; and nearly every acre of land in the co. is arable.

The streams generally flow in deep ravines. They are usually bordered by steep, and sometimes precipitous, hillsides. The principal stream is Genesee River, flowing n. e. through the w. part of the co. In the s. its course is between steep and often precipitous banks, but further n. it is bordered by broad and beautiful intervals.¹ Its tributaries are Conesus Creek, Fall Brook, and Canaseraga Creek, from the e., and Beards, White, and several other small creeks, from the w. Coshagua Creek is a tributary of the Canaseraga. Hemlock and Honeye Outlets flow along the e. border, and a few tributaries of the Susquehanna take their rise in the s. part. Conesus Lake, near the center, and Hemlock Lake, along the e. border, occupying long, narrow valleys, are the only considerable bodies of water.

The underlying rocks, commencing upon the n. border, are the waterline of the Onondaga salt group, the Onondaga and corniferous limestones, Marcellus and Hamilton shales, Genesee slate, and Portage shales and sandstones. The limestones of the n. are extensively quarried for lime and building stone; and the sandstones of the Portage group furnish excellent building stone and flagging. The soil, derived from the disintegration of these rocks, in all the elements of fertility has no superior in the State. Until the commencement of the ravages of the midge, wheat was the staple production; but it has been principally superseded by the spring grains. Broomecorn is largely cultivated along the Genesee Flats; and considerable attention is paid to cattle and sheep growing and dairying in the s. part.

The county seat is located at the village of Geneseo. The courthouse is beautifully situated upon a fine lot in the n. part of the village.² The jail, in the rear of the courthouse, is an old building, without means of ventilation, and it is impossible properly to classify the prisoners. The clerk's office is a small fireproof building upon the courthouse lot. The co. poorhouse is located upon a farm of 118 acres about 1 mi. e. of Geneseo. Its average number of inmates is 107, supported at a weekly expense of 75 cts. each. The farm yields a revenue of $2,000. A school is taught 9 or 10 months in the year. The house is well constructed and is very well kept.

The Genesee Valley Canal extends along the valley of the Genesee from the n. bounds of the co. to Mt. Morris; thence it turns s. e. to Coshagua Creek and up the valley of that stream to Nunda, and thence s. w. to the Genesee at Portage, where it crosses the river upon a wood aqueduct supported by stone piers. The Dansville Branch Canal extends from Mt. Morris s. e. to Dansville.³ The Canandaigua & Niagara Bridge Branch of the N. Y. Central R. R. extends through Caledonia. The Buffalo & N. Y. City R. R. extends s. e. through Portage and Nunda. The Buffalo, New York & Erie R. R. extends s. e. through Caledonia, Avon, Livonia, Conesus, and Springwater. The Genesee Valley R. R. extends s. through Avon, Geneseo, and Groveland to Mt. Morris.

³ The highest level of the Genesee Valley Canal within this co. is 622 feet above the Erie Canal at Rochester and 1,132 feet above tide.

⁴ The Moscow Advertiser and Genesee Farmer, the first paper published in the co., was commenced at Moscow in 1817 by Hezekiah Epley. About 1821 it passed into the hands of James Percival, who removed it to Geneseo and changed the name to

The Livingston Register. In 1829 Anson M. Wood and Allen Warner became proprietors; and it was successively published by Warren, Percival, Elias Clark, Wm. H. Kelsey, and Richard M. Mcl. In 1835 Mcl. became sole proprietor. He was soon after succeeded by D. S. Curtis. In 1837 its publication was suspended. It was soon after revived, and published for a short time by Hugh Harding. He was succeeded by John Kempshall, who published it until 1846, when it was discontinued.

The Livingston Journal was commenced at Geneseo in 1822 by Chauncey Morse. Asaiah Harvey was subsequently

Before the advent of the whites, this co. was the seat of several of the principal villages of the Seneca Nation. Considerable advances had been made in the arts of civilization, and a large quantity of land had been cleared and was cultivated. Corn, apples, and peaches were extensively produced. The orchards were destroyed, and the whole region was laid waste, by Gen. Sullivan, in 1779. The co. was included in the Phelps and Gorham Purchase, and in the Morris Reserve.¹ The latter tract was subdivided into several tracts, generally distinguished as separate patents.

In Sept. 1797, a treaty was held with the Indians at Genesee, at which they ceded all their lands in this co. to the whites, except several small reservations.² The first settlements were made about 1790, previous to the extinguishment of the Indian title. The most prominent of the early settlers were James and Wm. Wadsworth, from Durham, Conn., who located at Genesee, June 10, 1790. They were large landowners, and by a wise and liberal policy they greatly facilitated the settlement of the surrounding region. The greater part of the early settlers were immigrants from New England. York and Caledonia were settled principally by a colony of Scotch.

AVON—was formed, as "Hartford," in Jan. 1789. Its name was changed in 1808. Rush was taken off in 1818. It is the center town upon the n. border of the co. Its surface is a rolling and moderately hilly upland, terminating in flats on Genesee River. Deming Hill, on Lot 192, is the highest point in town. The principal stream is Conesus Creek, or Outlet, a tributary of Genesee River. The soil upon the uplands is a sandy and gravelly loam intermixed with clay, and on the flats, a deep, rich alluvium. Avon, (p. v.) in the w. part, a station on the G. V., and B., N. Y. & E. R. R's., celebrated for its medicinal springs,³ was incorp. June 13, 1853. It contains 3 churches, 5 large hotels, and 879 inhabitants. East Avon, (p. v.) near the center, contains 2 churches and about 35 houses. South Avon, (p. o.) in the s. part, contains 9 houses. Littleville, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi. s. of Avon, contains a church, gristmill, furnace, and 23 houses. The first associated with him. In 1829 Levi Hovey became proprietor; and it was successively published by Benj. Dennison, H. F. Evans, Evans & Woodruff, and Wm. J. Ticknor. Its publication was suspended in 1834 or '35. In the fall of 1835 the establishment was purchased by David Mitchell and W. H. Kelsey, who revived the paper under the name of

The Livingston Democrat. It was continued until 1837, when its publication was suspended. In the fall of that year S. P. Allen became proprietor of the press, and revived the paper under the name of

The Livingston Republican. In Sept. 1846, it passed into the hands of John M. Campbell; and was successively published by Joseph Kerslimer and Chas. E. Bronson. In 1849 James T. Norton became proprietor, and is its present publisher.

The Danville Chronicle was commenced in 1820 by David Mitchell and Benj. Dennison. Dennison soon retired, and its name was changed to

The Village Record; it was soon after discontinued.

The Western New Yorker was published at Danville a short time in 18— by A. Stevens & Son. It was succeeded by

The Danville Whig, published by Geo. W. Stevens. Chas. W. Hildre was the publisher about 1 year, when it again passed into the hands of Stevens, who in 1848 changed the name to

The Danville Courier. In 1849 or '50 it passed into the hands of H. D. Smead, who changed it to

The Danville Democrat. It subsequently passed into the hands of Geo. A. Sanders, who removed it to Genesee and changed the name to

The Genesee Democrat. In Oct. 1857, it was returned to Danville and published as

The Livingston Sentinel by H. C. Page, the present publisher.

The Livingston Courier was commenced at Genesee in 1831 by C. Dennison. In 1832 it passed into the hands of Henry F. Evans, and was discontinued in 1833 or '34.

The Livingston Courier was published at Genesee in 1832 by A. Bennett.

The Mount Morris Spectator was commenced in 1831 by Hugh Harding. In 1848 he united it with The Livingston County Whig and changed its name to

The Livingston Union, under which title it is still published by Hugh Harding.

The Danville Times was published in 1835 by D. C. Mitchell.

The Nunda Gazette was started in 1841 by Ira G. Wisner. It was continued about 1 year, when it was removed to Mount Morris and its name changed to

The Genesee Valley Recorder. It was discontinued about 1843. The Danville Republican was published in 1842 by David Fairchild.

The Livingston County Whig was started at Mount Morris in 1841 by Geo. B. Phelps. It subsequently passed into the hands of James T. Norton, and in 1848 was sold to Hugh Harding, who united it with The Mount Morris Spectator.

The Genesee Democrat was started at Genesee in 1843 by Gilbert

F. Shankland. It was removed to Nunda in 1847, and in 1848 to Elliottville, Cattaraugus co.

The Livingston Express, semi-mo., was published at Mount Morris in 1843 by J. G. Wisner.

The Mount Morris Daily Whig was issued from the office of The Livingston County Whig in June, 1846, and discontinued in August following.

The Cayleville Telegraph was started at Cayleville in 1847 by Franklin Cowdery. In 1848 it passed into the hands of Peter Lawrence, who soon after removed it.

The Danville Chronicle was started in June, 1848, by Richardson & Co., and was discontinued in 1851.

The Nunda Democrat was started at Nunda in 1848 by Mdo D. Chamberlain. It was soon discontinued.

The Danville, mo., was started at Danville in 1849 by J. R. Trendly, and continued about 2 years.

The Danville Herald was published in 1849 by H. L. & L. H. Barn. In 1857 it was merged in The Livingston Sentinel.

The Nunda Telegraph was started in 1850 by Chas. Atwood. It was discontinued about 1 year.

The Nunda Times was started in Jan. 1852, by N. T. Hackstaff. In July following the office was burned and the paper discontinued.

The Lima Weekly Visitor was started at Lima in 1853 by A. H. Tilton and W. C. Miller. It was subsequently published by Raymond & Graham and by S. M. Raymond, who changed its name to

The Genesee Valley Gazette. It was discontinued about 1856.

The New Era was commenced at Harts Hollow in 1851 by David B. and Merritt Gull y, boys, respectively 15 and 17 years of age. In 1853 it was removed to Nunda and its name changed to

The Young American. It was discontinued in about 1 year.

The Letter Box, mo., started at Glen Haven, Cayuga co., in 1857, by J. M. Jackson and Miss H. N. Austin, was removed to Danville in 1858, and is now published by M. W. Simons.

The Danville Daily Times was commenced in May, 1859, by W. J. Lorne, publisher. In June of the same year its title was changed to

The Danville Daily Register; and it is still published by Lorne; H. C. Page, editor.

² The Indian Reservations within the limits of the co. were: Cannawagus, containing 2 sq. mi. on the w. bank of Genesee River, w. of Avon; Little Beard's Town and Pig Foot, containing 4 sq. mi. on the W. bank of the Genesee, opposite Genesee; Squake Hill, containg 2 sq. mi. on the w. bank of the Genesee, s. of Mt. Morris; and the Garlean Reservation, of 28 sq. mi., lying one-half in this co., s. of Mt. Morris. See p. 711.

settlement was made in 1785.¹ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1795; Rev. Daniel Thatcher was the first preacher. There are 6 churches in town.²

CALEDONIA—was formed, as "Southampton," March 30, 1802. Its name was changed April 4, 1806. A part of York was taken off in 1819. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. The surface is level or gently undulating, and a considerable portion of it is stony. Genesee River forms the e. boundary. Caledonia Spring, in the s. part, covers an area of about 2 acres; and the outlet forms a good water-power, a few rods s. of the spring. The soil is a clay loam, underlaid by limestone.³ In the s. part is a valuable quarry of limestone, yielding excellent lime and a fine quality of building stone. Caledonia, (p. v.) in the s. part, a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. and C. & N. B. Branch of the N. Y. C. R. R., contains 3 churches, a grist and saw mill, a brewery, and 623 inhabitants. The first settlement was made about 1797, by — Peterson, a Dane, and — Brooks, an Englishman.⁴ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1805; and the first settled preacher, Rev. Alexander Denon, was installed Aug. 17, 1808.⁵

CONESUS—was formed from Livonia and Groveland, as "Freeport," April 12, 1819. Its name was changed to "Brewersville," March 26, 1825, and to Conesus, April 15, 1825. It is the central town upon the e. border of the co. Hemlock Lake forms the e. and Conesus Lake a part of the w. boundary. Its surface is hilly. The Marrowback Hills in the e. part, w. of Hemlock Lake, rise to about 1,200 feet above it. A deep valley extends s. e. from near the center into Springwater, through which the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. passes. The principal stream is Mill Creek. The soil is generally a clay loam. Conesus Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches, a grist and saw mill, and about 40 houses. Conesus (p. o.) is a R. R. station. Foots Corners and Union Corners are hamlets. Settlement was commenced at the head of Conesus Lake, in 1794 or '95, by James Henderson, from Penn.⁶ The first church (Meth.) was organized in 1814.⁷

GENESEO—was formed in Jan. 1789. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the co. Its surface is undulating, with an abrupt declivity of 200 to 300 feet toward the river, on the w. Genesee River, forming its w. boundary, is bordered by fertile flats of an average width of about half a mi. The other principal streams are Fall Creek, and several small brooks that flow w. into the river and e. into Conesus Lake. On Fall Creek, s. of the village, is a perpendicular fall of 70 feet. The soil is clay and clay loam. Geneseo,⁸ (p. v.) a station on the G. V. R. R., was incorp. April 21, 1832; it contains the co. buildings, 5 churches, the Genesee Academy,⁹ 2 banks, a library, gristmill, furnace, and machine shop, and about 2,000 inhabitants. Settlement was commenced by Lem'l B. Jenkins and Capt. Noble, about 1788 or '89, near the village.¹⁰ The first church organization is supposed to have been in 1795, in the s. e. part of the town, near Lakeville.¹¹

GROVELAND—was formed Jan. 27, 1789. A part of Conesus was taken off in 1819, and a part of Sparta in 1856. It lies near the center of the co. Its surface is moderately hilly. In the w.

³ Before the ravages of the wheat midge commenced, this was one of the best wheat growing towns in the State.

⁶ Hector McKay settled in 1798. Harvey May in 1800, Davenport Alger in 1808, Jos. Stead and Wm. Arnold in 1810, Thomas Young in 1811, and Andrew Arnold in 1816. The first store was kept U. A. & C. Am. H. at the center, in 1818. The first sawmill was built in 1803 or '04, on Mill Creek, near the center; and the first woolen factory in 1819, by Hosea Gilbert.

⁷ There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Univ.
⁸ Originally called "Big Tree," from an immense pine tree that stood on the banks of the river near the village.

⁹ This institution is located on Temple Hill, in the e. part of the village. The buildings were erected in 1826. James Wadsworth was principally instrumental in starting the school. It is under the control of the Buffalo synod.

part are extensive flats, occupying about one-fourth of the area of the town. The principal streams are Canaseraga and Coshaqua Creeks, which empty into Genesee River near the s. w. corner of the town. The soil upon the upland is clay loam, and upon the flats a rich alluvium. Groveland Corners, (Groveland p. o.,) E. of the center, contains 1 church and 14 houses. Hunts Corners, (East Groveland p. o.,) in the s. part, contains 1 church and 9 houses. Groveland Center is a p. o. in the s. w. part. The first settlement was made by Charles Williamson, agent for the Pulteney Estate, in 1792.³ In that year he built several houses in the s. w. corner of the town, and there located a small colony of Germans, and called the settlement "Williamsburgh." This colony soon after left, and the entire village disappeared. In the s. w. part, at the junction of the Dansville Branch with the G. V. Canal, is a Shaker settlement, numbering 120 persons. They own a tract of 2,000 acres. There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Presb.

LEICESTER²—was formed, as "Licester," March 30, 1802. Its name was changed Feb. 9, 1805. Mount Morris was taken off in 1813, and a part of York in 1819. It is the center town on the w. border of the co. The surface is undulating, with extensive flats in the e. It is drained by Genesee River, which forms its e. and s. boundaries, and by Beards Creek³ and its tributaries. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam on the upland, and a rich alluvium on the flats. Squakie Hill and Big Tree Reservations were within the limits of this town. Moscow, (p. v.,) near the center, incorp. about 1850, contains 3 churches and 320 inhabitants. Cuylerville, (p. v.,) in the e. part, incorp. in 1848, contains a church, a distillery, and 35 inhabitants; Gibsonville, (p. v.,) in the s. w. part, a paper mill, sawmill, and 16 houses. Ebenezer Allen was the first settler, soon after the close of the Revolution, but left soon after. The first permanent settlement was commenced by Horatio and John H. Jones, in 1789.⁴ The census reports 4 churches in town.⁵

LIMA—was formed, as "Charleston," Jan. 27, 1789. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is undulating and hilly. It is drained chiefly by Honoye Creek, which forms the e. boundary. The soil in the s. e. is clay and clay loam, and in the s. w. sandy and gravelly loam. Lima, (p. v.,) near the center, was incorp. ———. It contains 4 churches, the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, Genesee College,⁶ and about 1,200 inhabitants. South Lima, (p. v.,)—Hamiltons Station, on the B. N. Y. & E. R. R.,—in the s. w. corner, contains 13 houses. Settlement was commenced by Paul Davidson and Jonathan Gould, from Penn., in 1788.⁷ The first religious society (Presb.) was organized Oct. 1, 1795, by Rev. Daniel Thatcher.⁸

LIVONIA—was formed from "Pittstown," (now Richmond, Ontario co.,) Feb. 12, 1808. A part of Conesus was taken off in 1819. It lies on the e. border of the co., s. of the center. The surface in the s. part is moderately hilly, and in the n. undulating. Conesus and Hemlock Lakes lie partly within the town. Their outlets, and that of Canalice Lake, are the principal streams. The soil in the valleys is a clay loam, and on the uplands a sandy and gravelly loam. Livonia Center, (Livonia p. o.,) a r. r. station, contains 2 churches and 408 inhabitants; Livonia Station, (p. v.,) 1½ mi. w., on the B. ¹ Among the early settlers were Wm. Ewins, Wm. Lemon, John Ewart, and W. Harris. The first school was taught at "Williamsburgh," by Saml Murphy, about 1793. The first mill was built by Chris. Scholl for Chris. Williamson, on Lot 58, in 1795; the first inn was kept in "Williamsburgh," by Wm. Lemon, in 1796; and the first store, in the same place, by Alexander McDonald, in 1795 or '96.

³ Named from Little Beard, an Indian chief, whose principal village, Little Beard's Town, was situated on the present site of Cuylerville. Little Beard was one of the worst specimens of his race. He was chiefly instrumental in the border warfare of Leut. Boyd in 1796. In a drunken row, in which both Indians and whites were engaged, at Stinson's Tavern, in Leicester, he was pushed out of the door, and, falling from the steps, received a fatal injury.

⁴ Among the other early settlers were Elijah Hunt, Alexander Ewing, and Maj. Wm. Lemon. J. H. G. Thomas, and Wm. Clark, from Schenectady, were also early settlers. The first child born was James Jones, May 4, 1791; and the first death, that of Mrs. H. H. H. Jones, in June, 1792. The first inn was kept by Leonard Stinson, in 1795. He also opened the first store, soon after. The first sawmill was built by Ebenezer Allen, at Gibsonville, in 1794; and the first gristmill, by Oliver L. Phelps, near Moscow, in 1799.

s. w. part of the village. The seminary was founded in 1830 by the Genesee Conference of the M. E. Church. It was opened for pupils in 1832. The first building, erected at a cost of $20,000, was destroyed by fire in May, 1842. The present building was immediately erected of brick, at a cost of about $24,000. It has a main s. front of 135 feet, with an e. and w. front, by wings extending back each 96 feet. Between these wings is a paved court. A farm of 70 acres is attached to the institution. This seminary has sent out more students than any other institution in Western New York. The college was founded in 1849, has ——— professors, and is under the general supervision of the Genesee and East Genesee Conferences of the M. E. Church.

⁷ Almer Miles, from Mass., settled in 1789; John Miner and Asahel Burchard in 1790; Steven Tucker and Solomon Howey, from Mass., in 1791; and Col. Thomas Lee, Willard and Amasa Humphreys, Reuben and Gibson Thayer, Col. David Morgan, and Zebulon Moses, Asahel, Willard, and Daniel H. Warner, from Mass., previous to 1795. The first marriage was that of Simon Gray and Patty Alger, in 1793; the first death, that of Mrs. Abbott, mother of Mrs. Paul Davidson, in 1791. John Salam taught the first school, in 1792 and '93. Reuben Thayer kept the first inn, in 1795, and Troon & Adams the first store, in 1794. The first sawmill was built by Reuben Thayer, in 1790; and Zebulon Norton built the first gristmill, in 1794.

The first wool-carding and cloth-dressing mill was built by Benjamin Hungerford, in 1814; and the first grist-mill, by Samuel Steiner, in 1823.

⁴ Manufactures all kinds of agricultural implements, and turns out $70,000 to $80,000 worth of goods per year.

⁵ Named from David Piffard, a prominent settler of this place.

⁷ The census reports 9 churches in town; 2 Presb., 2 M. E., Bap., Cong., Assn. Presb., Assn. Ref. Presb., and Ref. Presb.

MADISON COUNTY.

This county was formed from Chenango, March 21, 1806, and named in honor of President Madison. That part of Stockbridge E. of Oneida Creek was annexed from Oneida in 1836. It is situated in the central part of the State, is centrally distant 98 mi. from Albany, and contains an area of 670 sq. mi. The extreme n. part is low, level, and swampy; but the central and s. parts are hilly, and constitute a portion of the general system of highlands which occupy Central New York. The hills generally have rounded outlines and steep declivities, their highest summits being 500 to 800 ft. above the valleys and 900 to 1,200 ft. above tide. The highlands are divided into separate ridges by a series of valleys extending n. and s., and they form the watershed between Susquehanna River and Oneida Lake. The principal streams upon the n. slope are Chittenango¹ Creek, forming a part of the w. boundary of the co., Oneida Creek, forming a part of the e. boundary, and the Canaseraga,² Canastota,³ and Cowaselon Creeks; and the principal flowing s. are Unadilla River, upon the e. border, Beaver Creek, Chenango River and its branches, Otsele⁴ Creek, and Tioughnioga River. The principal bodies of water are Oneida Lake, forming the n. boundary, and Owahgena or Cazenovia Lake, near the center of the w. border. The latter, a beautiful sheet of water, 4 mi. long, is 900 ft. above tide, and is completely surrounded by gradually sloping hillsides. The lowest rocks of the co., outcropping along Oneida Lake, belong to the Clinton group. The red iron ore peculiar to this group is found to a limited extent, but not in sufficient quantities to render mining profitable. Next above this successively appear the Niagara and Onondaga groups, underlying the whole swampy region.⁵ The red shales form the surface rock s. of the swamp, and beds of gypsum extend along the base of the hills. These beds are extensively quarried in some sections, and furnish an excellent quality of plaster. Upon the n. declivities of the hills successively appear the water limestone, Pentamerus limestone, Oriskany sandstone, and Onondaga limestone. From these groups are obtained an abundance of waterlime, quicklime, and building stone, all of excellent quality. Next above appear the Marcellus and Hamilton shales, covering more than one-half of the entire surface of the co. The Tully limestone, Genesee slate, and Ithaca groups are found to a limited extent covering the tops of the southern hills. A large share of the co. is covered deep with drift deposits. The soil upon the flat lands of the n. is generally a red clay, with great quantities of muck and marl in the swampy regions. Upon the northern declivities of the hills the soil is a gravelly loam intermixed with lime and plaster, and is very productive. Farther s. the soil upon the hills is a clayey, gravelly, and shaly loam, best adapted to pasturage, and in the valleys a gravelly loam and alluvium. The people are principally engaged in stock raising and dairying. Hops are largely cultivated. Manufactures are principally confined to two or three villages.

The co. seat is located at Morrisville. The courthouse is a two story wooden building, pleasantly situated on a small park, fronting on a main street. It was built in 1849, and contains the court⁶ and jury rooms.⁷ The clerk's office is a small, brick, fire-proof building adjoining the courthouse. The jail was burned in the winter of 1858. The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 135 acres near Eaton village, 5 mi. s. e. of Morrisville. The average number of inmates is 130, supported at a cost of 56 cts. per week each. A school is taught during the whole year. The farm yields a revenue of $1,500.⁸ The principal public works in the co. are the Erie Canal and the N. Y. Central

³ "Ka-ne-to-ta," signifying "pine tree standing alone."

⁵ In the marsh near Canastota a brine spring is found. A boring of 100 ft. was made here; but the water obtained was not sufficiently strong to warrant the further prosecution of the work.

⁶ The first courts were held alternately at "the schoolhouse, near David Bernard's, in Sullivan, [now Lenox,] and at the schoolhouse in the village of Hamilton." The first officers were Peter Smith, First Judge; Sylvanus Smalley, Edward Green, Elisha Payne, and David Cook, Associate Judges; Asa B. Sizer, Clk. Clerk; Jeremiah Whipple, Sheriff; and Thos. H. Hubbard, Surrogate. In 1810, Cazenovia was selected as the site of the co. buildings, and Col. John Luncheon and Capt. Jackson were appointed to superintend the building of a courthouse. A brick building was erected, and the first court was held in it in Dec. 1812. In 1817 the co. seat was removed to Morrisville, and the first court was held there Oct. 7, 1817.

⁸ This institution consists of three two story stone buildings; the poorhouse proper, a lunatic asylum, and a hospital.

R. R., extending through Lenox and Sullivan. Among the hills are several large artificial reservoirs, used as feeders for the canal. Cazenovia Lake is used for the same purpose.

There are seven weekly newspapers published in the co.¹

Nearly all the s. half of this co. belonged to the tract known as the "Chenango Twenty Towns." A strip lying between this tract and the Military Tract, including De Ruyter and the greater part of Cazenovia, was embraced in the Lincklaen Purchase. The Oneida Indian Reservation, originally embracing all the s. part of the co., was subsequently divided into several large tracts. The "New Petersburg Tract," or purchase of Peter Smith, includes nearly all of Smithfield and Fenner, the s. part of Cazenovia, and a strip a mile wide across the s. part of Stockbridge. The remainder of Stockbridge was included in the reservation of the Stockbridge Indians. Lenox and Sullivan constituted the s. w. portion of the Oneida Indian Reservation. The first settlements were made by squatters upon the Oneida Reservation, in 1790.³ The permanent settlements were commenced about 1795, and the co. rapidly filled up with immigrants, principally from New England.

¹ The Madison Freeholder was commenced at Peterboro, before or in the early part of 1808, by Jonathan Bunce & Co. It soon after appeared as The Freeholder, and was continued until 1813. It was then changed to The Madison County Herald, and was continued several years. The Christian and Citizen was published at Peterboro, in 1814, by Pruyn & Walker. The Pilot was established at Cazenovia, in Aug. 1808, by Oran E. Baker, and continued until Aug. 1824. The Republican Monitor was started at Cazenovia, in Sept. 1822, by L. L. Rice. It was published by John F. Fairchild from April, 1825, until Jan. 1826, by J. Irvine, and was continued 2 years. The Cazenovia Republican was commenced May 1, 1854, by Seneca Lake, its present publisher. The Gazette and Madison County Advertiser was established at Peterboro in May, 1817, by John B. Johnson and son. It is removed to Morrisville in 1819, and discontinued in 1822. The Madison Observer was commenced at Cazenovia, in Jan. 1821, by Rice & Hale. It was removed to Morrisville in 1822; and in 1824 Bennett Bicknell became its publisher. In 1829 it was united with The Hamilton Recorder, and was issued as The Observer and Recorder. In 1832 it passed into the hands of H. C. Bucknell and Jas. Norton, and in 1834 into those of Jas. Norton. In 1825 it was changed to The Madison Observer. In 1829 J. and E. Norton became its publishers, and in 1896 Edward Norton, by whom it is still published. The Hamilton Recorder was started in 1817, by John G. Storer and P. B. Stevens. In 1819 it passed into the hands of Storer & Williams, and afterward into those of John P. Van Sice. In 1829 it was removed to Morrisville and united with The Observer. The Madison Pioneer was published at Hamilton, in 1828, by Nathaniel King. The Courier was started July 27, 1830, by Laurin Dewey. In Feb. 1831, it passed into the hands of Lewisson Fairchild, and in Nov. 1831, it was discontinued. The Hamilton Courier was commenced by G. E. Waldron, in Feb. 1834, and the following year it appeared as The Hamilton Courier and Madison Co. Advertiser. It was continued until 1838.

The Hamilton Palladium was started in 1838, by John Atwood, and continued 6 years, a part of the time by J. A. D. Atwood. The Hamilton Eagle was published in 1839, by G. E. Waldron. The Liberty Visitor was published at Hamilton about 1840, by G. E. Waldron, in 1842, by Dennis Rodman. The Democratic Reformer was started at Hamilton by G. E. Waldron, in 1842, and published by Waldron & Co. from 1843 until 1854, and 2 years by Waldron alone, when it was united with The Madison County Eagle, and appeared as The Democratic Republican. It is now published by Waldron & James. The Madison County Journal was commenced in Sept. 1849, by E. F. & C. B. Gould, W. W. Chubbuck, F. B. Fisher, and T. L. Jones, who afterwards interested in its publication; and in 1850 it was united with The Oneida Republican. The Mill Boy () were published during the campaign of 1844, and () the former at the Palladium and the latter at The Bell for office. The Lumber Work was published as a campaign paper in 1850. The New York State Radiant was removed from Fort Plain, Montgomery co., in 1854, by L. S. Jenkins, and continued about 18 months, when it was returned to Fort Plain. The Democratic Union was commenced at Hamilton, in 1856, by Levi S. Barkus, and in 1857 it passed into the hands of W. H. Baber, its present publisher. The Grant & Reister was published in 1859, by S. S. Judd and H. E. Mattison, and in 1861 by H. S. Merritt. The Courier & Times was commenced in 1857, by Geo. H. Maynard, and was discontinued the following year. The Canastota Eagle was started Nov. 4, 1859, by J. E. S. Barkus, its present publisher. The Chateaugay Herald was established in 1862, by Isaac Lyon, and was published successively as The Chateaugay Independent, The Phoenix, and The Democratic Gazette, until 1866, when it was discontinued. The De Ruyter Herald was published in 1854, by A. C. W. Mason. The Protestant Sentinel was brought from Schenectady by De Ruyter in Nov. 1836, and was published by J. A. C. H. Maxon until the fall of 1857. It then passed into the hands of Wm. D. Cochran, by whom it was renamed The Protestant Sentinel and Seventh Day Baptist, &c., &c. In Feb. 1849, J. A. Green became its publisher, and continued it to The Seventh Day Baptist Register. In 1841 it passed into the hands of James Bailey, by whom it was continued until 1845. The National Brainer was commenced at De Ruyter in Oct. 1847, by A. C. Hill, and continued 2 years. The Central New Yorker was published at De Ruyter, by E. F. A. C. B. Gould, from Sept. 1848, until May, 1851. The Brainer of the Times was started at De Ruyter, by Wm. BROOKFIELD—was formed from Paris, (Oneida co.) March 5, 1795; and Columbus (Chenango co.) was taken off in 1805. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the valleys of Unadilla River and Beaver Creek. Unadilla River forms the e. boundary. Beaver Creek flows through near the center, and the e. branch of the Chenango through the s. w. part. Several smaller streams take their rise in the town. The soil is a gravelly loam. Clarkville,¹ (Brookfield p. o.) incorp. April 5, 1834, contains 2 churches, the Brookfield Academy, a hoe and fork manufactory, gristmill, and tannery. Pop. 578. Leonardsville (p. v.) contains 1 church, a bank, and several manufactories.² Pop. 366. North Brookfield (p. v.) has 275 inhabitants. South Brookfield (p. o.) is a hamlet, and De Lancy³ a p. o. The first settlement was made by Daniel Brown, in 1791.⁴ The census reports 6 churches in town.⁵

CAZENOVIA⁶—was formed from Paris and Whitestown, (Oneida co.) March 5, 1795. De Ruyter was taken off in 1798, Sullivan in 1803, Smithfield and Nelson in 1807, and a part of Fenner in 1823. It is the central town upon the w. border of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the valleys of Chittenango and Limestone Creeks. The summits of the hills are 300 to 500 feet above the valleys. Owahgena or Cazenovia Lake, in the s. part of the town, is a beautiful sheet of water about 4 mi. long. Its outlet—Chittenango Creek—forms a part of the boundary between this town and Fenner. In its course it has a fall of several hundred feet, affording a great number of valuable mill sites. At the Chittenango Fall the water plunges in a beautiful cascade perpendicularly over a ledge of limestone rock 136 feet in height. Limestone Creek flows across the s. part of the town. Hydraulic and common limestone are quarried near Chittenango Falls. The soil in the s. and central parts is a gravelly loam, and in the s. a clayey loam underlaid by hardpan. Cazenovia, (p. v.) incorp. Feb. 7, 1810, is beautifully situated on Chittenango Creek, at the foot of Cazenovia Lake. It contains 7 churches, an academy,⁷ a bank, and several manufactories.⁸ Pop. 1177. New Woodstock (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 273 inhabitants. Chittenango Falls is a p. o. Settlement was commenced in 1793, by John Lincklaen, from Amsterdam, Holland.⁹ The first church (Presb.) was organized May 17, 1799, with 5 members; and the Rev. Joshua Leonard was the first pastor. The census reports 9 churches in town.¹⁰

DE RUYTER¹¹—was formed from Cazenovia, March 15, 1798. Georgetown was taken off in 1815, and German (Chenango co.) in 1806. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface consists of hilly upland, broken by the valley of Tioughnioga River. The summits of the hills are 400 to 500 ft. above the valleys. The principal streams are Tioughnioga River and its tributaries. The soil is a gravelly and sandy loam on the hills and alluvium in the valleys. De Ruyter, (p. v.) incorp. April 15, 1833, contains 3 churches, an academy,¹² and several manufactories.¹³ Pop. 727. Sheds Corners is a p. o. The first settlers were Elijah and Elias Benjamin and Eli Colgrove, in 1793.¹⁴ The first church (Bap.) was formed by Elder Joel Butler, Nov. 5, 1799.¹⁵

EATON¹⁶—was formed from Hamilton, Feb. 6, 1807. It is an interior town, situated near the center of the co. The surface is a rolling upland, broken by the valley of Chenango River into two ridges, whose summits are 400 to 600 ft. in height. The Chenango flows s. through the center. The outlet of the Eaton Reservoir flows through a deep, narrow ravine, and affords a large number of valuable mill sites. Hatchs Lake and Bradley Brook Reservoir, and several smaller reservoirs, are in this town. The soil is a gravelly loam, intermixed with clay in the valleys. Morrisville,¹⁷ (p. v.) situated on Chenango River, was incorp. April 13, 1819. It contains 3

Hunt the first gristmill in 1807. J. C. Paine was an early milkkeeper.

¹⁰ Muller settled on the hill, about 3 m. w. of Georgetown, erected a large and spacious dwelling, had out extensive gardens, excavated an artificial pond, and planted 2000 numbers of fruit trees. He attempted the establishment of a village, by erecting 2 storehouses, several dwellings, a blacksmith shop, and a gristmill. It is supposed that he brought with him to this town less than $50,000, and that he carried away not to exceed $10,000. When Bonaparte abdicated, Muller returned to France, leaving his wife and children in New York. He afterwards returned to dispose of his property here. When he reached Georgetown his house was stripped of its furniture, his stock and very movable article had disappeared, woods covered the gardens, the walks, the roads, and fields; his village was forsaken, and the mill deserted. The agent in whose charge he had left his property, had sold every movable article, and deserted the place. Muller left the property and returned to France, and to this day no one knows who or what he was.

¹² Formerly called "Unionville."

¹³ The "Hamilton Theological Seminary," was established in 1820, under the auspices of the Baptist Education Society of the State of New York. In 1846 a collegiate course was introduced, and the seminary assumed the name of the "Huron University and Theological Seminary," and in 1850 a constituent society was incorp. as the Madison University. The theological department is still under the control of the Baptist Education Society. The aggregate number of graduates of the theological department is 302, and of the collegiate department 1942.

¹⁴ Named from Louis Earl, Canal Commissioner.

Hubbardsville¹ (p. v.) 20 houses. East Hamilton (p. o.) is a hamlet, and South Hamilton a p. o. The first settlers were John Wells and Abner Nash, from Mass., and Patrick Shields and John Muir, from Scotland, but late from Oneida co. They located upon Chenango, near Earlville, in 1792.² The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1796.³

LEBANON—was formed from Hamilton, Feb. 6, 1807. It is the central town upon the s. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, lying between the Chenango and Otselic Rivers. The summits in the w. part are 500 to 800 ft. above the valleys. The valley of Chenango River, extending through the e. part, is about 1 mi. wide and is bordered by steep hillsides. The other streams are small brooks. The soil is a yellow loam underlaid by hardpan upon the hills and alluvium in the valleys. Lebanon (p. v.) contains 1 church, a sawmill, tannery, and 25 houses. Smiths Valley⁴ and Middleport are hamlets. The first settlement was made in 1792, by Enoch Stowell and Jonathan Bates, from Vt.⁵ There are 4 churches in town.⁶

LENOX—was formed from Sullivan, March 3, 1809, and a part of Stockbridge was taken off in 1836. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is level in the n. and moderately hilly in the s. Canastota and Cowaselon Creeks flow through the town. Oneida Creek forms its e. boundary, and Oneida Lake a part of its s. boundary. The Cowaselon Swamp occupies a portion of the n. part. The soil in the n. is alluvium and in the s. a gravelly and clayey loam. In the town are beds of gypsum and of red fossiliferous iron ore. Near Cowaselon Creek is a small sulphur spring; and in the marsh near Canastota is a salt spring.⁷ Oneida (p. v.) is the principal station between Syracuse and Rome, on the N. Y. Central R. R. It is situated on Oneida Creek, and was incorp. June 20, 1848. It contains 5 churches, the Oneida Seminary,⁸ a newspaper office, and a bank. Pop. 1713. Canastota, (p. v.) incorp. April 28, 1835, is a canal village and a station on the N. Y. Central R. R. It contains 3 churches, a newspaper office, a bank, and a manufactory of astronomical and optical instruments.⁹ Pop. 1081. Wampsville, (p. v.) a station on the N. Y. Central R. R., contains 1 church and 25 houses. Pine Bush, (Bennetts Corners p. o.), Merrelsville, (Cowaselon p. o.) and Lenox Furnace are hamlets. Clockville,¹⁰ (p. v.) contains 2 churches, a woolen factory, 2 flouring mills, and a sawmill. Pop. 279. Quality Hill (Lenox p. o.) is a thickly settled country street near Canastota. Oneida Lake (p. o.) and South Bay are hamlets. Oneida Valley (p. v.) contains 1 church and about 30 houses. Durbanville (p. v.) contains 1034 inhabitants, of whom 234 are in this town;¹¹ the p. office is in Oneida co. The "Oneida Community," of about 200 persons, organized upon a peculiar religious and social basis, are located upon a farm of 3900 acres on Oneida Creek, 3 mi. s. of Oneida.¹² The first settlement was made in 1792, by Conrad Klok and his sons Joseph, John, and Conrad.¹³ The census reports 14 churches in town.¹⁴

MADISON—was formed from Hamilton, Feb. 6, 1807. It lies on the e. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is a rolling upland. The principal stream is Oriskany Creek. The Madison Reservoir and several smaller ponds of water are in this town. The soil consists of a gravelly loam in the valleys and a clayey loam upon the hills. Madison, (p. v.) incorp. April 17, 1816, contains 4 churches, and has a population of 315. Bouckville¹⁵ (p. v.) contains 1 church and 35 houses, and Solsville (p. v.) 17 houses. The first settlement was made in 1793.¹⁶

³ The census reports 10 churches in town; 4 M. E., 2 Bap., 2 Cong., Prot. E., and Unit.

⁴ Named from Justus Smith, a former resident.

⁶ Bap., Cong., M. E., and Unit.

⁸ The school was opened Sept. 29, 1838, with about 280 pupils and 5 male and 4 female teachers.

¹² This community was organized in 1847, under John H. Noyes, with whom their peculiar religious and social tenets mostly originated. They form a general community, holding a common interest in all things. The relation of the sexes is placed, not like that of civilized society, on the basis of law and constraint, neither on the opposite one of mere freedom, but on that of "inspiration." They are principally engaged in growing the nursery business, milling, and the manufacture of steel traps, sewing silk, traveling bags, cravats, and padded hats. The Circular, a weekly paper, is published by the Communists.

¹³ The Forbeses, Buysas, and Snyders were the early settlers.

¹⁵ Named from Gov. Bouck; formerly called "A. Solsville."

¹⁶ Samuel and Francis Clements, Stephen F. Blackstone, John Niles, Seth Snow and his son Seth, Wm. and David Blair, James Collier, Daniel Perkins, Henry W. and Israel Bond, Elijah Budget, Amos and Jesse Maynard, and Joel Crawford, settled in the town in 1793; Gen. Francis Cleveland, Thos. Mellen, Abiel Hatch, Jas. McClenahan, Geo. C. Inis, and Job Peckham, Peag, Simmonds, Sylvester Woodward, Elijah Thompson, Sam'l Jones, Jas. and Alex. White, Luther, Abiel, and Ephraim Church, and Jonathan Stone, were also early settlers. The first births in town were those of Marcena Collier and Stephen Blackstone, both in 1794. Gen. Cleveland built the first gristmill and kept the first store. Henry W. Bond built the first sawmill, in 1795. Sam'l Clements was an early innkeeper.

The first church (Cong.) was organized in 1735, and the Rev. Ezra Woodworth was the first pastor.¹

NELSON—was formed from Cazenovia, March 13, 1807. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of a rolling upland. The principal stream is Chittanooga Creek. The Erieville and Eaton reservoirs are in this town. The soil is generally a gravelly loam. Erieville (p. v.) contains 3 churches and 191 inhabitants, and Nelson Falls (Nelson p. o.) 2 churches and 116 inhabitants. The first settlement was made in 1791, by Asa and Jothiah Jackson.² The census reports 5 churches in town.³

SMITHFIELD—was formed from Cazenovia, March 13, 1807. Fenner was taken off in 1823, and a part of Stockbridge in 1836. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the co. Its surface is a hilly and rolling upland. The principal streams are Cowaselon and Oneida Creeks. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Limestone and gypsum are obtained in the s. e. corner. Near Siloam is a small sulphur spring. Peterboro,⁴ (p. v.), on Oneida Creek, near the center, contains 3 churches and the Peterboro Academy. Pop. 350. Siloam (p. o.) is a hamlet. The first settler was Jasper Mesworth, in 1795.⁵ Judge Greene C. Bronson resided in this town for several years; and Hon. Gerrit Smith now resides in Peterboro. In 1858, Wm. Evans, of Boston, donated to this town the sum of $10,000, to be invested, and the proceeds devoted to the relief and support of the destitute and needy.⁶ There are 3 churches in town.⁷

STOCKBRIDGE—named from the Stockbridge Indians—was formed from Vernon and Augusta (Oneida co.) and Smithfield and Lenox, May 20, 1836. It lies upon the n. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the deep valley of Oneida Creek, which extends in a s. and s. direction through near the center of the town. The summits of the hills are 500 to 800 ft. above the valley. The falls of Oneida Creek consist of a succession of rapids and low falls, affording numerous valuable mill sites.⁸ Oriskany Creek takes its rise in the s. part. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Limestone is extensively quarried from the ledges that crop out upon the hillsides. Hydraulic limestone is also quarried near the falls of Oneida Creek. Gypsum is obtained near Cooks Corners. In this town are an ancient burial place and the ruins of an old fortification.⁹ Mummsville,¹⁰ (p. v.), on Oneida Creek, contains 1 church and several manufactories.¹¹ Pop. 287. Lenoxville¹² (Stockbridge p. o.) contains 3 churches, and has a population of 138. Cooks Corners (p. v.) contains 1 church, a plaster mill, and about 15 houses. The first settlement was made in 1794.¹³ A mission church was erected on the Indian Reservation, near Cooks Corners, about 1800.¹⁴

SULLIVAN¹⁵—was formed from Cazenovia, Feb. 22, 1803, and Lenox was taken off in 1809. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is level in the s. and rolling in the n. The Cowaselon Swamp extends across the town from Chittanooga Creek to the line of Lenox. South of this swamp is the Vlaie, or natural meadow.¹⁶ Chittanooga Creek flows through the town and ² Joseph Yaw, Ebenezer Lyon, Sam'l and Chas. Swift, Jonathan Bull, Samuel Kinney, and Mitchell Smith in the town in 1791; Oliver Stone and James Humm, in 1795; Joshua Wells, David Wellington, Israel Peterson, Rich. Karley, Bart Adams, Horatio Summs, Abner Camp, and Edmund and Eldad Richardson, in 1796. The first birth was that of Palmer Wells, in 1796; and the first death, that of Mrs. Bishop, about 1801. Jothiah Jackson kept the first inn, in 1794; Jeremiah Clark built the first sawmill, about 1800; and Oliver Poel the first gristmill. Daniel Russell was the first storekeeper. Dea. Pugham was one of the earliest school-teachers.

⁷ Bap., Presb., and Free.

⁸ About 1/4 m. E. of Mummsville, near the center of the town, are several caves, in limestone, which have been explored but partially on account of noxious gases. In the rock that forms the bed of the stream are depressions resembling the footprints of men, cattle, and horses.

⁹ The burial place is on the side hill, about 1/4 m. s. e. of Mummsville. A small bone fragment of a woman, iron and steel axes, gun barrels and fragments of gun locks, brass buttons, and Chinese pipes have been found. The axes were flat, but shaped, and were marked under the eye with three stars. The ruins of the fortification are in the s. w. part of the town.

¹² Named from Herman Knox, an early settler.

¹³ Among the early settlers were Oliver Steward, Nathan, Calvin, Barney, John, and Alfred Edson, Wm. H. Sh., and Joseph Devine, Wm. Sloan, Benjamin House, Amos Redden, Jos. Todd, Aaron, Jarrins, and Matthew Rankin, Jonathan Snow, Isaac Chadwick, Talbot Dixon, W. Adams Graves, and Daniel Thompson. These settlers all located in the s. e. part of the town. The first marriage was that of John Devine and Polly Edson, in 1793; and the first death, that of Widow Anna Hall, in 1795. The first saw and grist mills were built by the Stockbridge Indians, on their reservation, about 1794. The first school was taught by Edward Foster, in 1797.

¹⁵ Named from Gen. John Sullivan.

forms a part of its w. boundary. The Canastota and Cowaselon Creeks unite in the swamp and flow in an artificial channel to the lake. These streams afford numerous valuable mill privileges. On the Canaseraga, near Perryville, is a waterfall 130 feet in height. Black Creek is a tributary of the Chittenango. Gypsum is found in numerous localities and is extensively quarried.¹ Waterlime is also obtained in the s. part.² Marl and peat abound in the swampy regions. There are several mineral springs in town, the principal of which are the "White Sulphur Spring" and the "Yates Spring." The former—known as Chittenango Springs—is fitted up for the reception of visitors; and the waters of both are celebrated for their medicinal properties.³ The soil in the n. is a clayey loam alternating with muck and marl, and in the s. it is a gravelly loam. Chittenango, (p. v.) on Chittenango Creek, was incorp. March 15, 1842. It contains 3 churches, the Yates Polytechnic Institute, a bank, a woolen factory, grist-mill, and tannery. Pop. 916. Perryville (p. v.) is partly in this town. Canaseraga (Sullivan p. o.) contains 1 church and 25 houses, and Bridgeport (p. v.) 1 church and about 35 houses. Lakeport is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1790, by squatters from the Mohawk Valley.⁵ The census reports 9 churches.⁶

² To this town is a bed of waterlime, the first discovered in the State. The material was first quarried and burned for quicklime to be used on the canal; but it was found that it would not slack. Experiments were then made, and the material was discovered to be hydraulic lime.

⁵ These squatters were James and Joseph Pickard, Jacob Bayl and Hendrick Schuyler, Jacob Seebach, Garrett and Geo. Van Slyke, John Pobleby, and John Freemyer. They settled on the Indian Reservation near Canaseraga. The Indians complained to the Governor of their intrusion, and they were ordered to remove. They neglected to do so; and in 1791, Col Colbraith, the Sheriff of Montgomery co., was sent with a posse of 10 men to dislodge them. They still refused; and then movables were taken from their dwellings and their houses burned. They then removed to the neighborhood of Chittenango and settled on lands that the State had lately acquired of the Indians, John G. Moyer, John Walcott, Capt. Timothy Brown, Solomon Joseph, and David Roche, Col. Zebulon Douglas, John Matthews, Philip Delamash, Nicholas Pickard, Cyril Weldon, Peter Daycott, John Keller, John Sower, Wm. Miles, David Burton, Timothy Freeman, and Peter Able settled in the town shortly after. The first birth was that of David S. Sawyer, in 1791; and the first death, that of a child of Paged Freemyer. John G. Moyer built the first saw and gristmill, and Jacob Schuyler kept the first inn.

MONROE COUNTY.

This county was formed from Ontario and Genesee, Feb. 23, 1821. It lies on Lake Ontario, s. w. of the center of the State. It is centrally distant 202 mi. from Albany, and contains 682 sq. mi. The surface is generally level or slightly undulating, with a general inclination toward the lake. The shore of the lake rises in height 10 to 30 ft. in height; and from its summit the surface gradually slopes upward to the lake ridge, a distance of 5 1/2 mi. from the lake. The summit of this ridge is 100 ft. above the lake; and from it the surface declines a few feet to the s., and then rises to the summit of the Mountain Ridge, a distance of 1 1/2 mi., and 110 ft. above the lake. South of this point the surface is gently rolling, the ridges extending s. and s. e. The summits of the ridges along the s. border are about 400 ft. above the lake and 600 to 650 ft. above tide. The principal stream is Genesee River, which flows a little n. of s. through the center of the co. Its valley is 1/2 mi. to 2 mi. wide, bordered by ridges 30 to 60 ft. high. At Rochester the river flows over the solid limestone which forms the Mountain Ridge a distance of 96 ft., forming the Upper Genesee Falls, and 2 1/2 mi. below it again descends 195 ft., to near the level of the lake, forming the Lower Genesee Falls.

The principal tributaries of the Genesee are Outka and Black Creeks from the w., and Honesay Creek from the e. The other principal streams of the co. are Sandy, Little Salmon, Salmon, Buttonwood, and Long Pond Creeks, w. of the Genesee, and Irondequoit and Four Mile Creeks, e. of that river, all flowing into Lake Ontario or some of its bays. In their passage from the central part of the co. to the lake, these streams nearly all flow over the limestone ridge in a succession of falls, forming an abundance of water-power. The principal bodies of water are Lake Ontario, which forms its s. boundary, Irondequoit and Braddock's Bays, and Buck, Long, and Cranberry Ponds, all indentations from Lake Ontario and connected with it by narrow and shallow straits.¹

The lowest rock in the co. is the Medina sandstone, extending in a broad belt along the lake shore. Next above this is a thin stratum of the Clinton group, almost disappearing upon the w. border of the co.; and next above is the Niagara group, forming the abrupt terrace of the Mountain Ridge. This rock forms an excellent building material, and is extensively quarried. It also yields weak brine springs in several localities. The underlying rocks in the s. part of the co. belong to the Onondaga salt group. Lime is extensively manufactured from the Niagara limestone; and the rocks in the s. part yield gypsum and waterlime. A large part of the co. is covered with drift deposits, which mostly assume the character of ridges and rounded hills, many of them rising 50 to 100 ft. above the general surface. Tufa and marl are found in several localities, forming elements of fertility to the soil almost invaluable. A small quantity of iron is found associated with the Clinton group.

The soil is generally very fertile. Along the lake shore it consists of a red, argillaous loam, principally derived from the disintegration of the Medina sandstone. This is succeeded by a clay derived from the disintegration of the Clinton and Niagara shales. The soil in the s. part is impregnated with lime and gypsum,—two of the most important elements of wheat lands. Agriculture forms the leading pursuit. Until within a few years past, wheat has been the great staple; but since the commencement of the ravages of the wheat midge, barley, corn, and oats have become the staple productions. Most parts of the co. are well adapted to the culture of fruit, and apples and peaches are largely produced. Wood growing is extensively carried on, and stock growing and dairying are beginning to receive considerable attention. The manufactures are extensive, though mostly confined to Rochester and vicinity. They consist chiefly of flour, machinery, edge tools, cars, and almost every variety of articles of iron. Rochester is the business center of the co.; and from it a large trade is carried on with the surrounding rich agricultural regions. The canals and railroads centering at this place give it facilities for an extensive inland trade and commerce. A limited amount of commerce is carried on upon Lake Ontario.

¹The Irondequoit Bay is a narrow, deep body of water, extending to the s. border of the State. Its surface extends inland 30 to 60 mi. from the lake shore. From its s. E. end a long, narrow strait that forms a lower, formerly flowed extremely deep valley extends several mi. further s., forming through the valley.

The co. seat is located at the city of Rochester.¹ The courthouse, situated upon Buffalo St., near the center of the city, is a commodious brick edifice, with an Ionic portico supported by four massive pillars. The building is surmounted by a dome, the summit of which is 150 ft. high. It contains the usual offices and rooms for the court and co. officers, the co. clerk's office, and rooms for the city officers.² The jail is an old stone building, situated upon the bank of the Genesee, in the s. part of the city. The poorhouse establishment is located upon a farm of 131 acres in Brighton, just s. of the city line of Rochester. It consists of three large buildings, one of which is used for an insane asylum. The average number of inmates is 360, supported at a weekly cost of 68 cts. each. A school is taught throughout the year. The farm yields a revenue of $3,500.

Four daily, 2 tri-weekly, 8 weekly, 1 semi-monthly, and 3 monthly papers are published in the co.³

² The first courthouse was built in 1821, soon after the organization of the co. It was run over to give place to the present structure in 1862. The present courthouse was built at a cost of $50,000, at the joint expense of the city and co.

The first settler was Ebenezer Allen, a tory, who located upon the Genesee, near the present site of Rochester, in 1788. He soon after removed to Canada. The first permanent settlements were made in 1789, in Wheatland and near the head of Irondequoit Bay. During the next five years settlements sprung up in various parts of the co., though the general growth was greatly retarded by the difficulty of access, the dense forests, and the unhealthiness of the climate when the lands were first cleared. The unsettled condition of Indian affairs also had the effect to retard settlement; and the War of 1812 almost put an end to improvement. At the close of the war, settlers came in more rapidly, and a great business began to develop itself at Rochester. The construction of the Erie Canal gave an impetus to business, and speedily pushed settlements into every portion of the co. From that time the progress of the co. has been rapid and continuous. The co. was contained in the Phelps and Gorham Purchase. The three western towns belonged to the Triangle Tract, and the remainder of the co. w. of the Genesee constitutes a portion of the celebrated "Mill Yard Tract."¹

BRIGHTON²—was formed from "Smallwood,"³ March 25, 1814. A part of Rochester was taken off in 1834, and Irondequoit in 1839. It is an interior town, lying upon the e. bank of the Genesee, a little s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is gently rolling, with a slight inclination toward the s. The deep valley of Irondequoit Bay is on the e. border. Its streams are small brooks, tributaries of the Genesee and Irondequoit. The soil is a sandy loam in the e. and a clay loam upon the river. Near the center are gypsum beds, formerly extensively worked. The people are largely engaged in raising vegetables for the Rochester market. There are several extensive nurseries in town. Brighton, (p. v.), in the s. e. part, contains a church and about 30 dwellings. It is a canal village and a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R., where the two branches from the e. unite. A large brick and tile manufactory is located about 2 mi. s. of the village; and the Genesee Model School⁴ is situated upon a beautiful site 2 mi. s. e. West Brighton, (p. v.), near the Genesee, s. of the line of Rochester, contains about 15 dwellings. In its immediate vicinity are the co. workhouse, poorhouse, and insane hospital, the Mount Hope Rural Cemetery, the Monroe co. almshouses, an extensive glue factory, and several other manufactories. The first settlement was made in 1790, by John Lusk and Oran Stone, who located about 4 mi. e. of the river.⁵ Rev. Solomon Allen, from Northampton, Mass., preached the first sermon and was the first settled minister. There is but one church (Cong.) in town.

CHILI—was formed from Riga, Feb. 22, 1822. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is level or gently rolling, with a slight inclination to the e. Genesee River forms the e. boundary; and Black Creek, a sluggish stream, flows e. through near the center. The soil is a clay loam, mixed with sand. South of Black Creek are several peculiar gravelly knolls, the principal of which is Dumpling Hill, near the river. Chili, (p. v.), in the s. part, contains a church and 15 houses; North Chili, (p. v.), a r. r. station in the s. w. corner, contains a church and 25 houses; Clifton, (p. v.), in the s. w. part, contains 1 church, a saw and grist mill, plaster mill, furnace, and 201 inhabitants; South Chili is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in the e. part, by Joseph Morgan, in 1792.⁶ There are 5 churches in town.⁷

CLARKSON⁸—was formed from Murray, (Orleans co.) April 2, 1819. Union was taken off in 1852. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is level, with slight un-

² This town embraces Township 3 of Range 7 of the Phelps and Gorham Purchase. It was originally purchased by Gen. Hyde, Prosper Polley, Enos Stone, Col. Gilbert, and Joseph Chaplin, from Lenox, Mass.

³ The original town, "Boyle," was organized April 6, 1806, and embraced the six s. towns e. of the river. Penfield was taken off in 1810, and Perinton in 1812. Some time in 1812 or '13 the name was changed to "Smallwood," and March 25, 1814, it was divided into two parts, one taking the name of Brighton and the other of Pittsford.

ncy and Calvin Hyde, Samuel Shaffer, Enos Blossom, Timothy Alyn, and Oliver Culyer,—the last named from Orwell, Vt. In 1800, most of the business upon the lake was done at Irondequoit Landing. In 1798, Judge John Tryon laid out a village 3 mi. above the head of the bay, and built a large warehouse. The place was called "Troyon's Town." Asa Dayton kept an inn at this place, in 1801. A tannery and distillery were afterward built, and the place became quite a lively little village; but it is now entirely deserted. — Turner taught the first school; Ira West kept the first store; and Solomon Hatch and Oliver Culyer built the first mill, on Alyn's Creek, in 1806.

ulations in the s. It is drained to the s. e. by the head branches of Salmon and Little Salmon Creeks. The soil is a sandy loam, mixed with clay. Clarkson, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 2 churches, a brewery, and 325 inhabitants. It is the residence of Ex-Lieut. Gov. Henry R. Selden. Salt was manufactured to a limited extent by the early settlers. East Clarkson, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, contains a church and 20 houses; West Clarkson, in the w. part, 30 houses. The first settlement commenced in 1809, by James Sayres, Moody Truman, and Elijah Blodgett¹. There are 3 churches in town; 2 M. E. and Cong.

GATES²—was formed March 30, 1802, as "Northampton." Its name was changed June 10, 1812. Parma and Riga were taken off in 1808, and Greece in 1822. It is near the geographical center of the co. Its surface is undulating, with a gentle inclination toward the s. Genesee River forms a small portion of the e. boundary on the s. e. corner. It is drained by small streams. The soil is a fine quality of calcareous loam, intermixed with clay. The people are largely engaged in raising vegetables for the Rochester market. Gates (p. o.) is 1 mi. s. of Gates Center. Gates Center and West Gates are hamlets; and Coldwater is a station upon the Buffalo Branch of the N. Y. C. R. R. The first settlement was made in 1809, by Isaac Dean, from Vt.³ The census reports 2 churches in town; M. E. and Presb.

GREECE—was formed from Gates, March 22, 1822. It lies near the center, on the s. border of the co. Genesee River and Lake Ontario form its e. and s. boundaries. Its surface is rolling, with a general inclination toward the lake. It is drained by several streams that flow into the small bays that indent the lake shore. These bays, six in number, beginning at the w., are respectively Braddocks Bay and Cranberry, Long, Buck, Round, and Little Ponds. The shifting sand bars at their mouths destroy their commercial utility. The soil is a clay loam, with large tracts of drift sand along the lake shore. Charlotte,⁴ (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, near the mouth of Genesee River, is a U. S. port of entry in the Genesee District, and the lake port for Rochester, 7 mi. above. It contains 2 churches, a lighthouse, 3 shipyards, a steam sawmill, 2 grain elevators, planing mill, and lumber yard. Pop. 400. Six schooners are owned in the place; and the lake steamers touch here daily during navigation. West Greece, (p. v.) on the line of Parma, contains 2 churches and 30 houses; North Greece (p. v.) a church and 20 houses; South Greece, (p. v.) in the s. w. corner, 25 houses; and Greece (p. v.) a church and 20 houses. Hanfords Landing, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, at the head of navigation on Genesee River from the lake, contains 20 houses. Greece Center and Reeds Corners are hamlets. The first settlement was made at the mouth of the Genesee, in 1792,⁵ by Wm. Hencher and family. The census reports 7 churches in town.⁶

HENRIETTA⁷—was formed from Pittsford, March 27, 1818. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling, Genesee River forming its w. boundary. The streams are small, and usually dry in summer. The soil is a fertile, argillaceous loam. East Henrietta, (Henrietta p. o.) e. of the center, contains 2 churches, the Monroe Academy, and 181 inhabitants. West Henrietta, (p. v.) s. w. of the center, contains a church, a steam mill, furnace, extensive carriage shops, and 40 houses. The first settlement was commenced by Jesse Pangburn, in 1806.⁸ The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1811.⁹

¹ The first settlement was made at Clarkson; and among the early settlers at that point were David Forsyth and Dea. Joel Palmer, from Conn. Eldridge, John, and Isaac Farwell came in 1810, and located w. of Clarkson Village. Dr. Abiel Baldwin, from Saratoga, came in 1811. The first male child born was a son of Mrs. Clarkson; the first female birth was that of Betsey Palmer, in 1812. Charlotte Cummings taught the first school, in 1812. Henry McCall kept the first store, about 1810.

³ Among the early settlers who arrived in 1809 were John Nickles and Augustus B. Shaw. In 1817, Ezra Mason, — Hanford, and Richard, Paul, Philip, Lisle, and Lowell Thomas, located at w. William Williams came in 1819. The first child born was a daughter of Ezra Mason, in 1818. Ira West kept the first store, and Isaac Dean built the first mill.

⁴ In June, 1813, the British fleet, under Sir James Yeo, landed at Charlotte and seized a quantity of provisions and whiskey. In Sept. of the same year the fleet again made its appearance at the mouth of the Genesee, and commenced a heavy fire upon the place; but the American fleet made its appearance, relieved the place, and the British escaped with considerable difficulty. In May, 1814, the British came once more, and, under cover of a flag of truce, a demand was made to deliver up the public stores at Rochester. The few militiamen who were present passed into and out of the woods in sight of the British, giving the appearance of a great number; and the enemy, suspecting an ambush, retired, after having furiously bombarded the woods for an hour.

ROCHESTER¹—was taken from Brighton and Gates, and incorp. as a village, by the name of "Rochesterville," March 21, 1817. Its name was changed April 12, 1822, and it was enlarged and incorporated as a city April 28, 1834.² It is located s. of the center of the co., upon Genesee River, 7 mi. from its mouth; and it contains an area of about 8 sq. mi. The surface is level or gently undulating. The N. Y. C. R. R. track is 280 ft. above Lake Ontario; and Mt. Hope Ridge, the highest point upon the s. border, is 160 ft. higher. The city has a solid foundation of Niagara limestone, cropping out along the course of the river, but in other parts of the city usually covered with drift deposits. The Genesee flows s., dividing the city into two nearly equal parts. Its course through the city is mostly a succession of rapids and falls, affording an extensive and valuable water-power, which is fully improved for manufacturing purposes.³

The city is quite regularly laid out, most of the streets crossing each other at right angles. The n. and s. streets are parallel to the river, and upon the principal e. and w. streets bridges are built across the river.⁴ The streets are usually well paved and bordered by commodious sidewalks. The city is divided into 12 wards.

The immense water-power furnished by Genesee River gives to the city great advantages for manufacturing.⁵ Mills were erected at an early period; and gradually other machinery was added, until the present great amount and variety have been attained. The staple manufacture of the city is flour. There are now in operation 24 mills and an aggregate of 125 runs of stone. The mills have a capacity for grinding 800,000 bbls. of flour per annum; and the aggregate capital invested is $700,000. Since the failure of the wheat crop in Western New York, a considerable portion of the water-power has been directed to other manufacturing purposes.⁶

The culture of fruit and ornamental trees has for many years formed an important business of the city; and now the nurseries are among the most extensive in the country.⁷

² At the first village meeting, held May 13, 1828, under charter, Francis Brown was elected President, and Wm. Collb, Everard Peck, Dan. Mack, and Jehiel Bernard, Trustees. The village corporation embraced 750 acres. The first city officers—elected in June, 1834—were Jonathan Child, Mayor; Louis Brooks, Thos. Kempshall, Lajah F. Smith, Fredk F. Backus, and A.W. Ripley, Aldermen; John C. Nash, Clerk; and E. F. Marshall, Treasurer.

⁵ The situation of this water-power is very favorable for the growth of manufactures. Vessels from Lake Ontario can come up the river to the foot of the Lower Falls, 2 mi. below the center of the city; and above the rapids the river is navigable to Mount Morris, a distance of 33 mi. The first mill was built by Ebenezer Allen, in 1788-89. He soon after sold out to Col. Fish and removed to Canada. This mill and one other were the only ones at this place until 1814, when J. H. and H. H. Fly and Joseph Bissell built another at the Upper Falls. During this year a few hundred bbls. of flour were sent to the Niagara frontier, the first if an ever exported from Rochester. The Phoenix Mills were built in 1818, since that time the number has largely increased, until now Rochester is one of the best flour manufacturing places in the country. It is called the "Flour City."

Axes and Edge Tools are manufactured by 3 firms, with an aggregate capital of $180,000, and employing to 200 men.

Machane Shops, 9 in number, have an aggregate capital of $300,000, turn out goods to the amount of $500,000 per annum, and employ 750 men.

Furnaces, 8 in number, employ 150 men, and have a capital of $320,000.

The Durgan and Forsyth Safe and Sash Manufacturing Co. was incorp. in Dec, 1854, with a capital of $100,000. It gives employment to 250 men, and produces goods to the amount of $250,000 per annum.

Cotton Factories, 2 in number, give employment to 26 men, and produce $220,000 worth of goods annually.

Breweries, 17 in number, have an aggregate capital of $130,000, and produce $250,000 worth of ale and lager beer annually.

Boat Yards, 15 in number, have a capital of $70,000, and manufacture $175,000 worth of boats annually.

Couch and Carriage factories, 8 in number, turn out $150,000 worth of carriages annually.

Boat and Shoe factories, 5 in number, give employment to 900 hands, and turn out goods annually to the amount of $500,000.

Cabinet Shops, 8 in number, employ 625 men, and turn out work to the amount of $500,000 annually.

Chair Factories, 2 in number, employ 300 men, and turn out chairs to the amount of $200,000 per annum.

Among the other articles annually manufactured are woollen cloths to the amount of $50,000, soap and candles to the amount of $50,000, carpets, paper, linseed oil, alcohol, paint, fire-engines, rifles, &c. A carpet manufactory was started in 1822; and in 1828 there were 20 successful operations,—one at the Lower and one at the Middle Falls. The first paper mill was built at the Upper Falls, in 1819. A large paper mill below the Lower Falls now produces paper to the amount of $130,000 annually. It is chiefly engaged in the manufacture of printing paper. There are several sawmills, planing mills, and tanneries in the city. Besides these, there are many minor manufactures, in the aggregate giving employment to a large number of men and making use of a great amount of capital. The city ranks among the first manufacturing towns in the State.

⁷ Ellwanger & Barry's Mount Hope Nursery, occupying 500 acres, is probably the most extensive nursery in the world. Samuel Moulton's and Birch st. Nursery occupies 350 acres; Altony Frost & Co's Genesee Valley Nursery, about 200; J. O. Bloss & Packer & Russell's East Avenue Nursery, about 200; J. O. Bloss & Co., Chas. Moulton, — Burtis, Mattison & Co., Wm. King, and Wm. Bryan & Co.'s nurseries occupy all to 100 acres each.

is carried on by means of the canals, railroads, and Lake Ontario.¹ The exports consist of the products of the Genesee Valley and of the manufactured goods of the city. Pop. 43,877.

Besides the co. buildings, the city contains several fine public edifices.

The City Hall, combined with the co. courthouse, has already been described.

Corinthian Hall contains the reading room and library of the Athenaeum and Mechanics' Association, and is one of the finest public halls in the country.

The Arcade, fronting Buffalo St., is a commodious building, containing the p. o., telegraph offices, and a variety of other offices, stores, &c. It has a broad promenade extending through the center, from which the various rooms open on either side. The roof is built mostly of glass, and the public walk is open to the roof. The rooms of the upper stories open upon galleries, which extend the entire length of the building on either side above the main walk or promenade.

The Central R. R. Depot is one of the finest buildings of the kind in the State. It contains ample accommodations for the various r. r. offices, passenger rooms, and for the cars which arrive on the various roads that center there. Its roof is supported by iron; and the whole structure presents a fine and imposing appearance. Several of the mercantile blocks, the banks, and private residences, are beautiful structures and worthy of becoming architectural models.

The Public Schools of the city are under the control of a Board of Education, consisting of 2 members from each ward and a Superintendent. The schools are graded, and the course of instruction embraces all studies, from the primary through the higher branches taught in academies. The school buildings are 16 in number. The number of teachers employed is 104; 13 are males and 91 females. The number of children between the ages of 4 and 21 is 16,108, of whom 6,320, or 38 per cent., attend school during some portion of the year. The total expenses for 1857 were $58,945.55. Number of volumes in school libraries, 7000.

The University of the City of Rochester was incorp. in Jan. 1850, and is under the patronage of the Baptist denomination. This school has an optional classical and scientific course. The present number of pupils is 140.²

The Baptist Theological Seminary,³ connected with the University, was established Nov. 4, 1850. Its present number of students is 31.

The Rochester Collegiate Institute, corner of Atwater and Oregon Sts., was established in 1854, and is at present a flourishing institution.

The Rochester Female Academy, on Fitzhugh St., was incorp. in 1837.

The Allen Female Seminary and The Tracy Female Institute are flourishing private seminaries. There are 8 parish schools connected with the R. C. churches of the city.

The Rochester Athenaeum and Mechanics' Association was founded in 1849. It has an extensive reading room and a library of 8,000 volumes. It sustains an annual course of lectures.

The Female Charitable Society was organized in 1826, to furnish clothing and other articles of necessity to the destitute.

The Home for the Friendless was organized April 11, 1849, to provide work for the needy who cannot obtain employment.

The House for Idle and Vagrant Children was opened June 2, 1854. It is connected with the school department of the city: and to it are sent all vagrant children that are wandering about the streets.

The Rochester Orphan Asylum was established in 1836 and incorp. in 1838. It is a fine brick edifice, situated in the s. w. part of the city, upon a lot donated by the Hon. John Greig. Its average number of inmates is 84, supported by State and county appropriations and private subscription.

The Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum was opened in July, 1812. It is under the charge of the Sisters of Charity. It is situated in the rear of St. Patrick's Church.

The Cartmen's Mutual Benevolent Society was incorp. in July, 1819.

The St. Andrew's Benevolent Society for extending aid to indigent Scotchmen was formed in 1850.

The St. George's Society was formed in March, 1849, by the English residents of the city.

The other societies in the city are the Monroe Co. Bible Society, organized in 1821; The Rochester

¹ The principal landing for the port of Rochester is at Charlotte, at the mouth of Genesee River, 7 mi. below the city. The amount of imports at this port for the year 1858 was $338,252; exports, $126,137. The principal imports are wheat, flour, fish, lumber, horses, hides and skins, peas, and wood; and exports, castings, fruit, fruit trees, furniture, cheese, potatoes, and machinery.

The lighthouse is 57 ft. high, surmounted by a lantern 11 ft. diameter and 8 ft. high, with a 4th order of lens. It was erected in 1822, at a cost of \$5,000. The pier is $\frac{1}{2}$ of a mi. in length, built of wood and stone; and on the end is a beacon lighthouse.

³ This institution has an endowment of $7,000. It has a German Theological Department. Its library contains 3,500 vols., 1,000 of which belonged to Dr. Augustus Neander, the German ecclesiastical historian.

City Tract Society; the Industrial School Association; the Christian Doctrine Society; Society of St. Alphonsus. (German:) St. Joseph's Convent of Redemption; the Academics of St. Patrick, The Sacred Heart, and Our Lady of Mercy. The St. Mary's Hospital has an average of about 70 patients.

The Western House of Refuge for Juvenile Delinquents, a State institution, established in 1841, is located upon a farm of 42 acres $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi. n. of the courthouse. The buildings consist of a large and imposing main edifice, with wings containing offices, cells, a chapel, &c. and a variety of workshops. They occupy a site of $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres, surrounded by a high wall. The average number of inmates is nearly 400.¹

The first religious services held in the co. were connected with the French missions in the 17th century. The first church at Rochester (Presb.) was formed in 1815, and the church edifice was erected in 1817; Rev. Comfort Williams was the first settled minister, in 1816. Several of the city churches are among the finest church edifices in the State. There are now 46 churches in the city.²

Mount Hope Cemetery is located in Brighton, near the s. line of the city. It embraces a lot of 70 acres located upon Mount Hope, the highest point of land in the vicinity, and one completely overlooking the city. It is laid out in excellent taste, and is one of the finest rural cemeteries in the country.

St. Patrick's Cemetery contains 15 acres, and St. Joseph's Cemetery (German) 9 acres.

The territory about the mouth of the Genesee first became known to the whites in the early exploring expeditions of the French. A map of the region, prepared by Baron La Hontan, was published at London in 1703. Views of the Upper and Lower Genesee Falls had been published as early as 1768.³ Many other adventurers visited the place and gave descriptions of it long previous to the Revolution. The country remained in the peaceable possession of the Indians until after the war, when immigration began to set in toward Western N. Y. The first settler who located at the falls was Ebenezer Allen, the notorious tory.⁴ He built a mill in 1788 or '90, but soon after sold out his improvements to the Pulteney Estate. The mill went to decay; and there were no other white settlers for several years.⁵ Among the earliest settlers were Jeremiah Olmstead, who located a short distance s. of the present site of the House of Refuge, in 1798-99; Wm. Cole, who established a ferry, in 1805; and Enos Stone, who built a mill, in 1808. In 1802, Nath'l Rochester, Wm. Fitzhugh, and Charles H. Carroll, from Md., purchased a tract of 300 acres at the Upper Falls; and in 1812 they caused their land to be laid out for settlement. In the same year Francis and Matthew Brown, from Mass., and Thomas Mumford, laid out a tract of 200 acres adjoining the former, and commenced the erection of mills, &c.⁶

The war with Great Britain broke out at the time when the first efforts were made to build up Rochester, and seriously retarded the progress of settlement. The fear of Indian hostilities and of hostile invasion from Canada caused many of the pioneer settlers to abandon their new homes and emigrate to the more populous sections of the country. At the close of the war, settlements commenced throughout Western N. Y. with increased rapidity; and Rochester immediately felt the new impulse. A large number of settlers came in, mills were built, and the place immediately became the commercial and manufacturing center of the fertile Genesee country. The finishing of the Erie Canal gave a new impetus to the business of the place and served to greatly extend its manufacturing interests. Since that time the city has steadily and rapidly increased both in population,⁷ and business, until it has arrived at a front rank among the inland cities of the State.

RUSSELL—was formed from Avon, (Livingston co.,) March 13, 1818. It lies near the center of the s. border of the co. Its surface is rolling, with a w. inclination. Genesee River forms its w. boundary; and Honeye Creek flows w. through the town and enters the river near the center of the w. border. In the w. part, along the river, are extensive flats. The soil is a sandy, calcareous

¹ The central building is 86 by 60 ft., and 3 stories high. The wings are each 148 by 52 ft.,—making the entire length of the building 352 feet. Juvenile delinquents are sentenced to this institution from the central, northern, and western parts of the State—those from the eastern part being sent to a similar institution on Ward's Island, New York City. The inmates spend a portion of each day in study and a portion in laboring at some useful employment. The principal business carried on is the manufacture of shoes and brushes. A library of 6,000 volumes is at the disposal of the institution. The yearly cost is about $1,000, and the earnings of the inmates $12,000. See p. 42.

⁴ Aaron Burr visited the place in 1795 and made a minute and critical survey of the falls. In 1797 Louis Philippe and his two brothers, then in exile, accompanied by Robert Morris, visited the place.

⁶ Charles Harford built a small mill in 1807,—the first one after that of Ebenezer Allen. The Browns built a race in 1812 and started a store. The same year Samuel J. Andrews and Mass. Atwater laid out a tract of land for settlement. Among the settlers who came in about this time were Rev. Abielard Reynolds, Dr. Johan Brown, (the first physician,) Abraham Strick, John Matlock, (the first lawyer,) Henry Skinner, Israel Scranton, Isaac Knapp, Hezekiah Noble, Joseph Hughes, Ebenezer Kelly, Ira West, Flisha and Henry Ely, Porter P. Peck, Josiah Bissell Jr., Michael Cully, Harvey Montgomery, Charles D. Farman, and Geo. B. Sill. The first child born was a son of Enos Stone, May 1, 1810. Handel Scranton built the first framed dwelling, in 1812, on the present site of the Eagle Tavern.

E. Branch of the N. Y. C. R. R., contains a saw and grist mill and 20 houses; North Rush, (p. v.) in the s. w. part, about 1 mi. e. of Southville station, contains a church and 16 houses. Genesee Valley R. R. Junction is 1 mi. w. of West Rush. The first settlement was commenced in 1799, by Maj. Wm. Markham and Ransom Smith, from N. H.¹ The first settled minister was Elder Goff, (Bap.)²

SWEDEN—was formed from Murray, (Orleans co.) April 2, 1813. It lies on the w. border of the co., near the center. Its surface is level and gently rolling. A high ridge passes e. and w. through the town, s. of the center. Salmon Creek rises in the s. w. part and flows in an e. and s. e. course through the town. The soil is clay and clay loam. Brockport,³ (p. v.) in the s. part, a canal village and r. r. station, was incorp. April 26, 1820, contains 6 churches, the Brockport Collegiate Institute,⁴ a bank, 2 newspaper offices, 4 foundries, a planing mill, a manufactory of mowers and reapers, an extensive carriage manufactory, and a rotary pump manufactory. Pop. 2,143. Sweden Center, (Sweden p. o.) near the center, contains 2 churches and 20 houses; and West Sweden, near the s. w. corner, 2 churches and 15 houses. The first settlement was commenced in 1807,⁵ by Nathaniel Poole and Walter Palmer. There are 10 churches in town.⁶

CLARKSON—was formed from Clarkson, Oct. 11, 1852. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Lake Ontario forms its s. boundary. Its surface is slightly rolling and inclines toward the lake. It is drained by a number of small streams, the principal of which is Sandy Creek. The soil is a sandy, clayey, and gravelly loam. Salt was manufactured to a limited extent by the early settlers. Clarkson Center, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 35 houses; North Clarkson, (p. o.) in the e. part, 8 houses; Kendalls Mills, near the s. w. corner, partly in Kendall, (Orleans co.) is a hamlet. The first settlement was commenced in 1810, by Aretus Haskell.⁷ There are 5 churches in town.⁸ A Fourierite community was organized and located at the mouth of Sandy Creek, in 1843, under Dr. Theller, of Canadian Patriot War notoriety. The bubble soon burst.

WEBSTER—was formed from Penfield, Feb. 6, 1810. It lies on Lake Ontario, in the s. e. corner of the co. Irondequoit Bay forms the w. boundary. Its surface from the ridge in the s. part has a gentle inclination to the lake. The shore rises in places 50 ft., and in the w., on Irondequoit Bay, 80 to 100 ft. The streams are small and flow s. into the lake. The soil is a sandy loam s. of the ridge, and clay and clay loam in the s. Salt was manufactured to some extent by the early settlers. Webster, (p. v.) in the s. part, on the ridge, contains 4 churches, the Webster Academy, and 310 inhabitants; West Webster, (p. v.) in the s. w. part, contains 40 houses. The first settlement was commenced in 1805, under the agency of Caleb Lyon.⁹ The first church (M. E.) was formed in 1812, by Rev. Solomon Pierce.¹⁰

WHEATLAND—was formed from Caledonia, (Livingston co.) as "Inverness," Feb. 23, 1821. Its name was changed April 3, 1821. It lies upon the s. border, in the s. w. part of the co. Genesee River flows s. on the e. border. Its surface is rolling. Oatka (or Allens) Creek flows e. through near the center of the town. It is joined at Mumfords by the Outlet of Caledonia Springs, forming an excellent water-power. The soil is loam, mixed with clay in the interior, and with sand and gravel in some localities, the whole underlaid by limestone. Gypsum is found in large quantities. Scottsville,¹¹ (p. v.) in the e. part, contains 4 churches, a union school, extensive flouring mills,

⁴ This institution is under the supervision of the Baptist denomination, and is in a flourishing condition.

⁵ Samuel Bishop, — Hendons, Joseph White, and Stephen Johnson came in 1807. John Reed, Timothy Tyler, and Edward Parks, in 1808. Beuben Moore, with his sons James, Amos, and Isaac, settl. in 1800 and '10, in the e. part. James Scott (elder) was the first settler in the s. part, in 1809. John Phelps, Rufus Hummel, and — K. 1810 were the original purchasers of the site of Brockport. — Jan. 8, Seymour, George Allen, Thomas R. Roby, Ralph W. Good, Luke Webster, and Charles Richardson were early settlers. Samuel Bishop kept the first inn, in 1809; Charles Richardson the first store; and Brockway & Blodgett built the first mill.

⁶ 2 M. E., 2 Bap., F. W. Bap., Cong., Presb., Prof. F., and P. C.

⁷ Josiah and Samuel Randall, from Maine, settled in 1810; Stephen Baxter and John Newlin, in 1811; — struck settl. at the mouth of Sandy Creek, in 1811; — Bidder, and Alanson Thomas, seen after. — But few settlers came in until after 1817. The first death was that of — struck, in 1812. A. D. Raymond kept the first inn; Daniel Pease the first store; and Alanson Thomas built the first mill, for Le Roy & Raymond.

⁸ M. E., Meth. Prof., Bap., F. W. Bap., and Union.

⁹ John Shoecraft, from Ulster Co.; Isaac Straight, Daniel Harvey, Abiam Foster, Paul Hammond, William Mann, William Harris, John Letts, Samuel Turner, Samuel Goodenough, and Benjamin Barnett, mostly from N. H. and Vt., settl. about 1806. The first birth was in the family of Caleb Lyon, and the first death, that of a child of N. Gaines. Wm. Harris taught the first school in 1810. John Letts kept the first inn; J. B. Craming the first store, in 1825; and Caleb Lyon built the first saw and grist mill, in 1816.

1 Mr. Shaeffer and his sons Peter and Jacob came in Dec. 1789. They found a settlement commenced by Hanszer Allen and his brother-in-law, Christopher Dugan, near the mouth of Allans Creek, a short distance below Scottsville. Allen had a comfortable log house and about 60 acres of improvement. The Shaeffers became the purchasers of his farm, paying $2.50 per acre. After the sale, Allen left with his family by Mount Morris. The valley of the river below Shaeffer's was slow in settling; Joseph Morgan came in 1792, Andrew Wertman in 1794 or '95, Clark Aspinwall, Peter Conkle, Frederick and Nicholas Hezler were early settlers in the Shaeffer neighborhood. Gordon Heath came from Vt. in 1799. The s. w. part was early settled, and the auspices of Charles Williamson, by Scotch emigration, were John McNaughton and family, near Mount Isaac. Scott settled at Scottsville about 1799, and Donald McKean soon after. Zachariah Garbutt and family settled at what is now Garbuttville, in 1803; and Powell Carpenter, near Scottsville, in 1801. The first marriage was that of Peter Shaeffer, jr., and daughter of Jacob Schenauer, in 1790. (Ebenzer, All.) had previously added another inmate to his homestead by a pretended marriage with Lucy Chapman. (See p. 711.) The first death was that of Peter Shaeffer, sen., Jacob Scott kept the first mill, Philip Garbutt and Abram Hamford the first store; and Peter Shaeffer, jr., built the first sawmill, in 1810, and the first gristmill, in 1811. MONTGOMERY COUNTY.

This county was formed from Albany, March 12, 1772, under the name of "Tryon Co."¹ Its name was changed April 2, 1784. Ontario was taken off in 1789, Herkimer, Otsego, and Tioga in 1791, Hamilton in 1816,² and Fulton in 1838. It lies on both sides of the Mohawk, centrally distant 39 miles from Albany, and contains 436 sq. mi. The general system of highlands which forms the connecting link between the northern spurs of the Alleghany Mts. on the s. and the Adirondacks on the n. extends through this co. in a s. e. and s. w. direction. Mohawk River cuts through the upland, and forms a valley 1 to 2 mi. wide, and 200 to 500 ft. below the summits of the hills. The valleys of several of the tributaries of the Mohawk extend several miles into the highland district at nearly right angles to the river valley. The hills bordering upon the river generally rise in gradual slopes, and from their summits the country spreads out into an undulating upland, with a general inclination toward the river, into which every part of the surface of the co. is drained. The principal tributaries of the Mohawk are the East Canada, Garoga, Cayadutta, Chuctenunda Creeks, and Evas Kil, on the n., and Cowilliga, Chuctenunda, Schoharie, Auries, Flat, Canajoharie, and Otsquaga Creeks, on the s. The highest point in the co. is Bean Hill, in Florida, and is estimated to be 700 ft. above tide, and the lowest point is the bed of the Mohawk, on the e. line of the co., 260 ft. above tide.

Gneiss, the only primary rock in the co., is found in patches, the principal locality being at "The Noses," on the Mohawk.³ Resting directly upon this are heavy masses of calciferous sandstone, appearing mostly on the n. bank of the river and extending into Fulton co.⁴ Next above this are the Black River and Trenton limestone, not important as surface rocks, but furnishing valuable quarries of building stone. The slates and shales of the Hudson River group extend along the s. border of the co. and are found in a few places n. of the river. Drift and boulders abound in various places. The soil along the river consists of alluvial deposits and a deep, rich, vegetable mold, and upon the uplands it is mostly a highly productive sandy and gravelly loam. The productions are principally grass and spring grains. The uplands are finely adapted to pasturage, and dairying forms the leading pursuit. Upon the Mohawk Flats immense quantities of bromocorn are raised. There are several important manufactories in the co., consisting chiefly of woolen goods, carpets, paper, agricultural implements, sash and blinds, and castings. Quarrying is extensively carried on.⁵

The principal public works are the Erie Canal, extending along the s. side of the Mohawk, and the N. Y. Central R. R.⁶ on the n. bank. A wire suspension bridge crosses the Mohawk at Fort Hunter, and wooden bridges at Amsterdam, Fonda, Canajoharie, Fort Plain, and St. Johnsville. An iron bridge was built at Fort Plain, in 1858.

The county seat is located at Fonda, a pleasant village on the Mohawk, built on the site of the ancient Dutch settlement of "Coughlaawaga."⁷ The courthouse is a fine brick edifice, containing the usual co. offices.⁸ The jail is a stone building, adjacent to the courthouse.⁹ The co. poorhouse is located upon a farm of 150 acres situated in Glen, about 3 mi. e. of Fonda. The building is old and poor, and has few arrangements for the health, comfort, or convenience of its inmates. The average number of inmates is 125. The farm yields a revenue of $1,000.

The first newspaper in the co. was established at Fort Plain, in 1827.¹⁰

³ This rock here contains pink colored garnets.

⁵ Stone from these quarries were used in the construction of canal locks and other public works.

from Cats-kill at a cost of $400,000. In 1842 it was abandoned, the track sold for $11,000 and taken up.

⁸ By an act passed March 19, 1778, the sheriff's mileage in Tryon co. was directed to be reckoned upon "The Noses," which practice appears to have been continued for some time.

⁹ The jail is so constructed as to answer the requirements of the law in the classification of prisoners. The courthouse and jail were erected at a cost of $20,000.

¹⁰ The Watch Tower was begun at Fort Plain in 1827 by S. M.

The early history of this co. is full of incident and interest. At the time of the first advent of the whites it was the principal seat of the Mohawks, one of the most powerful tribes of the Five Nations. The policy adopted by the early Dutch settlers of the colony, and continued by their English successors, strongly attached a majority of these savages to their interests; and the unprovoked attack of Champlain, in 1609, made them hate the French in Canada with intense bitterness. In the wars that ensued, the Five Nations proved faithful allies to the English, and on many occasions shielded them from hostile attacks. In 1665-66 a French expedition, consisting of 6000 men, under De Courcelles and De Tracy, was sent against the Indians, and proceeded as far as Schenectady; but, after much suffering and the loss of many men, the army returned to Canada without affecting any thing. Within the next few years several French expeditions were sent against the western tribes of the Five Nations, and in return the Indians made a descent upon Montreal in 1689, laid waste whole plantations, and destroyed many lives.¹ In retaliation, Count Frontenac sent several expeditions against the Indians and English, one of which destroyed Schenectady in 1690.² In the winter of 1692-93 the French again invaded the Mohawk country, surprised and destroyed two of their three castles,³ and took about 300 prisoners. In the engagement at the third castle they lost 30 of their number; and in their retreat they were pursued by Maj. Peter Schuyler at the head of 200 regulars and militia, who succeeded in killing 33 and wounding 26 of their number and in rescuing 50 prisoners. Favored by the severe cold, the remainder escaped and fled to Canada through the great northern wilderness. Their sufferings on this journey were intense. As early as 1642-43, a French Jesuit visited the Mohawk settlements; and between that date and 1678, 10 missionaries of this order labored to bring over the Indians of this region to the French interests and the Catholic religion. Though attended with great hardships, and in one or two instances with death, these labors were in some measure successful, and in 1671 a large number of Indians removed from Caughnawaga to Canada.⁴

A military post, known as Fort Hunter, was established near the mouth of Schoharie Creek in 1711. About the same time a large number of German Palatinates, sent over by Queen Anne, settled upon the Hudson, and shortly after removed to Schoharie and the Mohawk Valley and settled upon lands given them by Government. At about the same period a considerable number of Holland Dutch, from Schenectady and vicinity, found their way into the co. and extended their improvements up the valley. In 1730 the first mill s. of the Mohawk was built on the site of "Cranes" Village by two or three brothers named Groat; and this for a time served the settlements at German Flats, 50 mi. beyond.⁵

The land grants in this co. were made in comparatively small tracts. The first were issued as early as 1703. On the 19th of Oct. 1723, a patent of 12,000 acres, called "Stowe Arabia," s. of the

S. Grant, who was succeeded by John Cidboun & Platt. In 1820 it was published as

The Fort Plain Sentinel.

The Fort Plain Gazette was begun in 1823 by H. L. Gros.

The Fort Plain Epistoletta was begun in 1825 by E. W. Gill.

It was succeeded by

The Tocsin in 1836, H. Link, publisher.

The Fort Plain Journal was commenced in 1838 by W. L. Fish.

It changed owners several times, and was finally merged in

The Lutheran Herald, which continued a short time.

The Students Gleaner, by students of the Fort Plain High School, was issued from The Journal office.

The Montgomery Plowman was begun at Fort Plain Feb. 3, 1841, by L. F. Backus, publisher, and D. F. Young, editor. In Feb. 1854 it was changed to

The Mohawk Valley Register, under which name it is now published by Webster & Wendell.

The Mohawk Enquirer was published at Caughnawaga at an early period.

The Canajoharie Telegraph was published by Henry Hoegh-lick in 1825-26.

The Canajoharie Sentinel was published in 1827; Samuel Gold-wick, editor.

The Canajoharie Republican was published in 1827-28; Henry Bloomer, editor, and afterward John McVean & D. F. Sora.

The Montgomery Argus was published by J. McVean in 1831-32, and continued by S. M. S. Grant till 1836.

The Canajoharie Investigator was published from 1833 to '36 by Andrew H. Calhoun.

The Kabi was begun in 1837 by Levi S. Backus, a deaf mute; in Nov. 1840, it was turned out, and removed to Fort Plain; in 1854 it was removed to Madison co., but has since returned to Fort Plain. For several years the steam-roads appropriated for sending this paper took it north throughout the State.

The Mohawk Valley Gazette was published at Canajoharie by W. H. Riggs from 1847 to '49.

The Montgomery Union was published at Canajoharie by W. S. Hawley, 1850-53. Four numbers of another paper were published at the same place in 1854 by S. M. S. Grant.

The Mohawk Advertiser, published at Amsterdam by Darius Wells, was changed to

The Intelligencer and Mohawk Advertiser in 1854. In 1855 it was published by John J. Davis, L. H. Nichols, editor.

In 1836 it was published by S. R. Marsh, and, after several changes, it was changed in 1854 to

The Amsterdam Recorder, which is now issued by H. Hayward, editor and publisher.

The Mohawk Gazette was published at Amsterdam by Josiah A. Noxon in 1833-34.

The Foundry was issued by J. Reynolds, Jr., in 1837.

The Foundry Sentinel was begun in 1845; it is now published by Clark & Thayer.

The American Star, commenced at Canajoharie April 5, 1855, by Wm. S. Hawley, was removed to Fonda May 17, 1865.

In 1857 it was changed to

The Mohawk Valley American, and published by C. B. Freeman.

In 1858 this title was changed to

The American Star, which is now published by Wm. S. Hawley, original proprietor.

The Montgomery Whig was begun at Fultonville in 1840 by B. F. Finkhamp. It passed into the hands of Thos. Horton, and in 1855 its name was changed to

The Montgomery Republican, and is now published by P. R. Horton.

We are indebted to Prof. O. W. Morris, of New York, and to the files of The Phoenix, for the above list. Many changes of ownership are not stated.

Mohawk, was granted to John Christian Garlock and others for the benefit of the Palatinates. The principal grants were made between 1730 and 1740; and in 1762 there remained little, if any, unpatented land in the co.

About the year 1735, the British Admiral, Sir Peter Warren, acquired the title to a large tract of land known as "JJurreasbush," mostly in the present town of Florida, and sent out his nephew, Wm. Johnson, then but 21 years of age, as his agent. Johnson first located at the mouth of Schharie Creek; afterward he removed to 3 mi. above Amsterdam, and finally to Johnstown. Through the influence of his uncle he received the appointment of Agent of Indian Affairs, which gave him great facilities for intercourse and traffic with the natives. Applying himself industriously to the study of the character and language of the Indians, and adopting their habits and dress whenever it suited his convenience, he gained an ascendancy and influence over them never before enjoyed by any white person. His easy and obliging manners made him equally a favorite with the white settlers; and until his death, which took place on the 24th of June, 1774, the events of his life are intimately interwoven with the history of the co.¹ His title and estates descended to his son, Sir John Johnson; but his commanding personal influence could not be inherited. Guy Johnson, son-in-law of Sir William,² Col. Daniel Claus, and Col. John Butler, were attached to the interests of the Johnson family, possessed large estates, and lived in what were then considered sumptuous residences in the Mohawk Valley. They had considerable influence with both whites and Indians. In the controversy between the colonists and the mother country which resulted in the Revolution, the Johnsons and their adherents strongly espoused the cause of the King, from whom they had received so many favors.

As a class, the German Palatinates sided with the colonies, and a majority of the other settlers entertained similar sentiments; but for a long time they were overawed, and their efforts at organization were thwarted by the zeal and activity of the tory leaders. In the spring of 1775, while the court was in session at Johnstown, through the influence of the tories the signatures of most of the grand jurors and magistrates were procured to a document opposing the measures of the Continental Congress.³ This proceeding, coupled with others of a more aggressive and personal character, tended greatly to organize the opposition forces, to separate the friends and enemies of freedom, and to kindle feelings of bitter and vindictive hatred, which naturally led to all the horrors of civil war.

"Tryon co" was divided into 6 districts;⁴ and, for the purpose of a more thorough organization, delegates were appointed in each by the Patriots to form a committee of public safety. Upon a meeting of these delegates a significant remonstrance was addressed to Col. Guy Johnson, Indian Agent, for his aggressive and partisan acts; he withdrew in June, 1775, to Cosby's Manor, above German Flats, under pretense of holding a council with the Indians in the w. part of the co.; and in a short time he fled to Montreal, by the way of Oswego, accompanied by a large number of dependents and followers. He continued to act as Indian Agent during the war, and by liberal rewards and still more liberal promises he greatly stimulated the natural ferocity of the Indians, and incited them to more active hostility. He was joined in Canada by Joseph Brant, a distinguished and educated Mohawk chief, and John and Walter N. Butler, 2 tories who afterward gained an infamous notoriety. At the head of marauding parties of tories and Indians, they afterward returned and committed the most inhuman atrocities upon their old friends and neighbors. Sir John Johnson remained at "Johnson Hall," but continued active in his intrigues, and kept up a correspondence with Col. Guy Johnson in Canada. His preparations to fortify "Johnson Hall" excited alarm; and in Jan. 1776, a committee, consisting of Gen. Philip Schuyler, Gen. Ten Broeck, and Col. Varick, was despatched from Albany to consult with the local committee of safety and satisfactorily arrange matters. Gen. Herkimer called out the militia; and the affair was finally settled by the surrender of Sir John as prisoner, and an agreement that his Scotch tenants should be disarmed. He was sent to Fishkill, but, being released on parole, he soon returned to Johnstown and resumed his intrigues. In May, Col. Dayton was sent with a regiment to again arrest him; but, being warned of their approach, Sir John and his followers fled to the woods, and finally reached Canada by the way of Sacondaga and Racket Rivers, after 19 days of fasting and suffering.⁵ Sir John received a commission as colonel in the British service, raised a regiment of tories known extending up the river to Little Falls, "German Flats," and "Knox," still farther up the river, and "Old Eng." "Dist." w. of the Susquehanna. The first 5 of these districts were formed March 24, 1772. On the 8th of March, 1775, the original name—"Schoharie"—was changed to "German Flats," "Knox," "Old Eng." and "Knipmunt," to "German Flats," "Old Eng." and "Knipmunt," respectively.

as "Johnson's Greens," and was active and bitter in his hostility throughout the war.¹ Through the influence of the Johnsons, all of the Five Nations, with the exception of a portion of the Oneidas and Tuscaroras,² were attached to the British interests, and were liberally aided by arms and provisions in their frequent incursions into the frontier settlements under the Butlers and Brant.³

In the summer and fall of 1777, this co., in common with the whole northern and western frontier, was the scene of great alarm and of stirring military events, produced by the expedition of Burgoyne. Gen. St. Leger, at the head of a large body of Tories and Indians, was dispatched by the way of Oswego to reduce the rebel posts and settlements on the Mohawk and join the main army at Albany. On the 3d of Aug. they laid siege to Fort Schuyler, upon the site of the present village of Rome. The militia of Montgomery co. were called out, and, under Gen. Herkimer, marched to the relief of the fort. On the way the bloody battle of Oriskany was fought, in which 200 of the brave patriots of the co. were killed and as many more carried into Indian captivity.⁴ In the latter part of the same month, Genls. Arnold and Learned, at the head of 900 troops, marched up the river, and St. Leger hastily abandoned the siege and fled.⁵ The destruction of the valley was thus averted, and for several months the inhabitants were allowed to remain undisturbed, save by small scalping parties, that hung round the unprotected frontiers and cut off the defenseless inhabitants.

In the spring of 1778, Gen. La Fayette, accompanied by Gen. Schuyler and Col. Duane, went to Johnstown and held a conference with a body of Indians, which resulted in a treaty of considerable subsequent benefit to the settlers. In the following summer the horrible butcheries at Wyoming, Harpersfield, German Flats, and Cherry Valley were perpetrated; and in the summer of 1779 the army of Gen. Clinton marched from this co. to join Gen. Sullivan's expedition against the chief villages and farming grounds of the Onondagas, Cayugas, and Senecas. On the 21st of May, 1780, Sir John Johnson, at the head of 500 Indians and Tories, suddenly made his appearance at Johnson Hall. He arrived about sunset on Sunday, and, dividing his force into two parties, at daylight the next morning he made a simultaneous attack upon Tribes Hill and Caughnawaga. Several persons were killed and others taken prisoners, and every building upon the route, except those belonging to Tories, was burned. The militia began to collect in considerable numbers, and toward night Sir John hastily retreated, and safely reached Canada by the way of the wilderness w. of the Adirondack Mts.⁶ Near the last of the July succeeding, the militia of the co. were employed to convey a provision train sent to the relief of Fort Schuyler; and on the 2d of Aug., while they were absent, Brant, at the head of 500 Indians and Tories, made an attack upon the settlements in the neighborhood of Fort Plain. Fifty-three dwellings were burned, 16 persons slain, and 60 women and children carried into captivity. Upon the approach of the militia from Johnstown and Schenectady, the party retreated. On the 15th of the following Oct. a large party of Tories, Indians, and Canadians, under Sir John Johnson, Brant, and Cornplanter, made their appearance in the Mohawk Valley, at the mouth of Schoharie Creek, after having laid waste the Schoharie settlements above. From this point they marched up the valley, burning the houses, destroying the property, and murdering or taking prisoners all that they met. The militia under Gen. Robert Van Rensselaer hastily came together and marched to attack the invaders. On the 18th of Oct., Col. Brown, who commanded a small stockade fort at Stone Arabia, acting under the order of Van Rensselaer, marched out with 150 men to attack the enemy: but, receiving no support from the main army, the little detachment was soon routed, with the loss of the commander and 30 to 40 men killed. Sir John halted at Fox's Mills, about 8 mi. above Fort Hunter, in the town of St. Johnsville, and erected a temporary breastwork. At a late hour in the day he was attacked by a detachment under Col. Dubois, and the Indians under his command were defeated.⁷ The Americans, under Van Rensselaer, fell back 3 mi. and encamped; and the next morning, upon marching forward to renew the attack, they found that the enemy had fled.⁸ Sir John finally succeeded in making his escape,

³ The Americans made several efforts to attach the Six Nations to their interests, or at least to induce them to remain neutral. In the winter of 1776-77, Col. Harper was sent to ascertain the object of the assembling of a large body of Indians at Onango, on the Susquehanna. In the succeeding June, Brant, with a party of Indians, made a levy upon the settlers of the Unadilla; and many died to a place of safety. Gen. Herkimer, at the head of 280 militia, marched to meet him; and on the 27th of June, 1777, a conference was held between the general and the chief, but without producing any definite result. All efforts to propitiate the Six Nations were then abandoned, and all conferences ceased until the close of the war, when the Indians were called upon, as vanquished enemies, to confirm the surrender of most of their lands as an atonement for their hostility.

⁷ This engagement is known as the battle of "Klock's Field."

⁸ Du Bois had nearly gained the victory, when Van Rensselaer came up and gave orders not to renew the battle until the signal should be given from headquarters. The forces of the former were under arms all night, momentarily expecting the promised though his force was greatly reduced by hunger, fatigue, and the continual, harassing attacks of the militia, which hung upon their rear.

The prospects of the Mohawk Valley were now gloomy in the extreme. Nearly every settlement had been desolated, and nearly every family had lost some of its members.¹ In the spring of 1781, Col. Willett assumed the command of the American forces on the Mohawk, and, by his military skill, daring, and knowledge of Indian warfare, he not only successfully repelled all attacks made upon the Mohawk settlements, but carried the war into the enemy's own country.

On the 9th of July, 1781, 300 Indians, under a tory named Doxtader, made a sudden attack upon the settlement of Currytown, (in the town of Root.) After burning the buildings and collecting a large amount of booty, they retreated. Col. Willett, at the head of 150 militia, immediately pursued and overtook them at "Dorlach," (Dorlach,) a few mi. over the line of Schoharie co. A severe skirmish ensued, when the Indians fled, leaving 40 of their number dead on the field.² The final incursion into the Mohawk Valley was made Oct. 24, 1781, by a party of 600 British and Indians, under Maj. Ross and Walter N. Butler, and made their first appearance in the neighborhood of Warrens-bush. They marched to the vicinity of Johnson Hall and commenced the usual work of plunder and murder, but were arrested by a sudden attack by forces under Cols. Willett, Rowley, and Harper. A severe engagement ensued, resulting in the retreat of the enemy. Col. Willett pursued, and, coming up with the rear guard at West Canada Creek, another skirmish took place, in which the infamous Walter N. Butler was killed.³ The shattered remnant of the British forces escaped by way of Oswego. This affair practically ended the war in Tryon co., and the remaining citizens, stripped of almost every thing except the soil, were allowed to resume in peace their accustomed employments.⁴ In a few years the ravages of the war were completely obliterated, and the fertile regions of Central and Western N. Y., which had become known through the military expeditions that had traversed them, soon began to fill up with a New England population. The splendid domains of the Johnsons and other royalists were confiscated, and the feudal tenants of the colonial period were replaced by enterprising freeholders under the new government.⁵

AMSTERDAM⁶—was formed from "Coughlawaga,"⁷ March 12, 1793. Perth (Fulton co.) was taken off in 1838. It lies on the N. bank of the Mohawk, in the N. E. corner of the co. Its surface consists of the intervals along the river, and a rolling upland gradually rising for the space of 2 mi. and attaining an elevation of 300 to 500 feet. The principal streams are the Kayaderoseras, 3 mi. W. of Amsterdam Village, Chuctenunda,⁸ at the village, and Evas Kil,⁹ near the E. border. The soil in the valley is a deep, rich alluvium, and upon the hills it is a fertile, gravelly loam. Near Tribes Hill are extensive stone quarries. A considerable amount of manufactures is carried on in town, consisting of mill machinery, agricultural implements, carriages, car springs, and carpets, at Amsterdam Village, and of woolen goods at Hagemans Mills. Amsterdam,¹⁰ (p. v.) incorp. April 20, 1830, contains 4 churches, the Amsterdam Female Seminary, a bank, printing signal; and they had the inexpressible mortification and chagrin to see the beaten foe slipping through the net in which they had been caught, without the possibility of preventing their escape. Had it not been for the indecision or cowardice of Gen. Van Rensselaer, the whole party might have been taken. At the time, he was openly charged of cowardice or treachery by the Oneida chief, and he entirely lost public confidence.

¹ Some idea of the extent of these ravages may be formed from a statement prepared by the supervisors of "Tryon co.," dated Dec. 20, 1780, and addressed to the legislature. They therein stated that 700 buildings had been burned within the co.; that 354 families had abandoned their habitations and removed; 613 persons had deserted to the enemy; 197 had been killed, 121 taken prisoners; and 1200 farms lay uncultivated by reason of the enemy. This statement did not include Cherry Valley, New-town-Martin, Middlefield, Springfield, Harpersfield, and Old England District, which had been totally deserted and abandoned. The population of the co. at the beginning of the war was about 10,000. While the sufferings of the colonists were thus great, the Indian loss was much greater. Their whole country had been ravaged, their homes and crops destroyed, and a large portion of their number had died in battle or by starvation. At the close of the war the miserable remnant of the once powerful nations humbly sued for peace, and were content to accept terms that deprived them of almost their entire country.

² By stratagem Col. Willett succeeded in drawing the Indians into an ambuscade. They fled so hastily that all their baggage and plunder was captured. On their retreat they murdered a number of prisoners to prevent their escape.

human suffering. He surpassed the savages in barbarity; and many a victim was saved from his clutches by the interposition of the Indian chief Brant.

⁵ For several years after the war, ghosts were reported as frequently seen stalking about the old residences of the royalists. The appearances which gave rise to these reports were doubtless the tories themselves, returned in disguise to obtain valances which had been secreted upon their previous hasty flight. The settlers, who had suffered so much, were slow in forgetting the injuries they had received; and for many years after, few either Indians or tories, who had been engaged in the war, could show themselves in the settlement with safety.

office, and several manufactories. Pop. 2044. Hagmans Mills (p. v.) has 124 inhabitants, Cranesville¹ (p. v.) 92, and Mannys Corners 8 houses. Tribes Hill,² (p. o.), on the line of Mohawk, is a hamlet. A wire suspension bridge here crosses the Mohawk to Florida.³ The first settlement was commenced about 1710, by Dutch and Palatinates. About 1740, Sir Wm. Johnson built a large stone mansion upon the w. side of the Kayaderosseras, 3 mi. w. of Amsterdam Village.⁴ This building was fortified and named "Fort Johnson." Col. Daniel Claus and Guy Johnson, sons-in-law to Sir William, occupied fine mansions respectively 1 and 2 mi. below Fort Johnson,⁵ previous to the Revolution. The first settlers at Amsterdam Village were Albert Veeler, E. E. De Graff, Nicholas Wilcox, and Wm. Kline. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1792.⁶ The first settled minister was Rev. Conrad Ten Eyck, in 1799. There had been preaching in town at a much earlier period.

CANAJOHARIE⁷—was formed as a district March 24, 1772, and as a town March 7, 1788. Minden was taken off in 1798, a part of Root in 1823, and a part of Minden in 1849. It lies on the s. border of the co., w. of the center. The surface consists of the intervals of Canajoharie or Bowmans Creek,⁸ and undulating uplands 200 to 600 feet above the valley. The soil is a gravelly loam, derived from the disintegration of the underlying slate, in some places intermixed with clay. The cultivation of hops receives some attention. A small wooden factory is located on Bowmans Creek. Canajoharie, (p. v.) incorp. April 30, 1829, contains 5 churches, the Canajoharie Academy, and a bank; pop. 1500. A bridge crosses the Mohawk at this place, connecting it with the village and r. r. station of Palatine Bridge. Ames,⁹ (p. v.) in the s. part of the town, contains an academy and 204 inhabitants, and Buel,¹⁰ (p. v.) in the s. w. part, 25 houses. Sprout Brook, (p. o.), Mapleton, and Marshville are hamlets. The first settlement in town was commenced in early colonial times; but the precise date is not known.¹¹ During the Revolution the people warmly espoused the American cause, and were afterward among the greatest sufferers in the Mohawk Valley.¹² Gov. Clinton, while marching to join Sullivan in 1779, made this place his headquarters for some weeks.¹³ In Aug. 1780, Brant made an incursion into the valley and destroyed nearly the whole settlement.¹⁴ During the war several other incursions were made; and the people were often driven to the utmost extremity. Several small forts were built in the town, which afforded some protection to the people.¹⁵ In 1795, Archibald and James Kane established themselves as merchants at this place, and commenced a business which soon grew to be one of the largest in the interior of the State.¹⁶ In 1823, the "Central Asylum for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb" was located near Buel, in this town; but in 1836 it was united with the one previously established in New York City.¹⁷ The first church (Free Will Bap.) was organized at Ames, in 1796-97, by Rev. George Elliott.¹⁸

CHARLESTON—was formed from Mohawk, March 12, 1793.¹⁹ Glen and a part of Root were taken off in 1823. It is the most southerly town in the co., and the only one not bordering upon the Mohawk. It lies upon the high plateau region immediately w. of Schoharie Creek; and the

³ A Remington suspension bridge built here some years since fell of its own weight before it was finished.

⁶ This church became Presb. in 1863. There are now 5 churches in town: 2 Presb., 2 M. E., Bap., Ref. Prot. D., Prot. E., and Evng. Luth.

⁸ It is said that the Indian name of this stream is "Bijoharizee." The falls on this creek, about 1 mi. from its mouth, are interesting to scientific men for the different geological forms thus there exposed and the holes of various sizes worn in the rocks.

¹¹ An Indian school was taught at Canajoharie, in 1764, by Philip Jonathon.

¹² At the battle of Oriskany many of the prominent citizens of this place were killed. Among them were Col. Cox, Lieut. Col. Hunt, Maj. Van Slyck, Capt. Henry Bevensford, Robert Crouse, Jacob Bowman, Andrew Dillenback, Capt. Jacob Lecher, Charles Fox, and Lieut. Wm. Lecher.

¹⁶ In 1799 their purchases of potash and wheat amounted to $12,000.

greater part of the surface is an undulating upland. On the e. it descends in steep declivities to the valley of the creek, which is here a narrow ravine. Its streams are small. The soil is generally loam intermixed with clay, and is particularly adapted to spring grains and dairying. The town has a limited amount of manufactures, consisting principally of sash and blinds, woolen goods, and flour. Burtonsville,¹ (p. v.) on Schoharie Creek, in the s. e. corner of the town, contains 32 houses; Charleston Four Corners, (p. v.) in the s. w. corner, 30; and Charleston, (p. v.) near the s. border, 20. Carytown and Oak Ridge are hamlets. A portion of this town was included in the patent of 24,500 acres granted to Wm. Corry in 1637; and others were portions of the "Stone Heap Patent," granted to John Bowen and others in 1770, and Thomas Machin's Patent of 1787. The first settlements were probably made previous to the Revolution.² The census reports 5 churches in town.³

FLORIDA—was formed from Mohawk, March 12, 1793. It embraces that part of the co. lying s. of the Mohawk, and e. of Schoharie Creek. The greater part of the surface is a rolling upland, 600 ft. above the valley. Bean Hill, in the s. w. part, is the highest land in the co. The declivities bordering upon the streams are usually steep. The two principal streams within its borders are Chuctenunda and Cowilliga⁴ Creeks. The soil and productions are similar to those of neighboring towns. Several sulphur springs are found in town, the most noted of which is near Scotch Bush. The Erie Canal crosses the Schoharie Creek between this town and Glen, on a costly aqueduct. Broomcorn is one of the principal agricultural products, and brooms are extensively manufactured. Port Jackson (p. v.) is a canal village on the Mohawk, opposite Amsterdam. Pop. 369. Minaville, (p. v.) on Chuctenunda Creek, near the center, contains 95 inhabitants. Fort Hunter,⁵ (p. o.) at the mouth of Schoharie Creek, and Scotch Bush, (p. o.) near the s. border, are hamlets. One of the 3 Mohawk castles was situated at the mouth of Schoharie Creek at the first advent of the whites. The first white settlement in this co. is supposed to have been made in this town. Fort Hunter⁶ was built here by the whites in 1711. Queen Anne's Chapel was soon after erected, and was furnished with a valuable set of communion plate by Queen Anne.⁷ The fort was garrisoned until after the French War, when it was abandoned. During the Revolution the chapel was enclosed with palisades, and converted into a strong fortress defended by cannon. In Oct. 1780, several houses were burned on the opposite side of the creek by the forces under Sir John Johnson, but the fort was not molested. Before the close of the war several newly arrived German emigrants settled in town, and they were followed soon after by Scotch and Irish families.⁸ The first preacher after the war was Rev. Thos. Romeyn, (Ref. Prot. D.) in 1784. The census reports 5 churches in town.⁹

GLEN¹⁰—was formed from Charleston, April 10, 1823. It lies in the s. w. angle formed by the junction of Schoharie Creek and the Mohawk. Its surface consists principally of uplands about 600 feet high, descending by abrupt declivities to the narrow intervals along the streams. The principal streams are Auries¹¹ Creek, a tributary of the Mohawk, and Irish Creek, a branch of the Schoharie.¹² The soil is generally a clayey loam. One mi. e. of Voorheesville is a chalybeate spring.¹³ Fultonville¹⁴ (p. v.) is situated on the Mohawk and the Erie Canal. Pop. 850. Voorheesville, (Glen p. v.) near the center of the town, contains 40 houses, and Auriesville, (p. v.) a canal village near the mouth of Auries Creek, 170 inhabitants. The land bordering upon the river was granted in 10 patents to different persons in 1722 to 1726, and the greater part of the remainder to James De Lancey in 1737. Peter Quackenboss settled on Scott's Patent, near Auries Creek,

⁷ This chapel was for a long time under the charge of the "Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts," and a missionary and Indian school were supported here. The chapel was demolished in 1820 to make room for the canal. The parsonage, still standing, is probably the oldest building w. of Schenectady. It was sold a few years since for $2,000, and the proceeds were divided between the Prot. E. churches at Port Jackson and Johnston.

soon after it was secured, and was probably the first white inhabitant of the town. About 1740, 16 Irish families, under the patronage of Sir Wm. Johnson, settled on Corry's Patent, a few mi. s.w. of Fort Hunter. After making considerable improvements, they abandoned their location and returned to Ireland in consequence of threatened Indian disturbances.¹ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed at Glen; Rev. Henry V. Wyckoff was the first pastor.² This town was the scene of many interesting incidents connected with the war. It furnished its full proportion of victims at the battle of Oriskany, and sustained an equal share in the losses and sufferings from Indian incursions.³ The last council within the co. previous to the Revolution was held between the Indians and Americans Oct. 13, 1775, on the farm now owned by John S. Quackenboss, on the Mohawk Flats, 2 mi. E. of Fultonville.

MINDEN—was formed from Canajoharie, March 2, 1798. Danube (Herkimer co) was taken off in 1817. It lies upon the s. bank of the Mohawk, in the extreme w. part of the co. Its surface is principally an undulating upland, with steep declivities bordering upon the streams. The principal streams are the Otsquaga⁴ and its tributary the Otsquene. Prospect Hill, called by the Indians "Ta-ra-jo-rhies,"⁵ lies upon the Otsquaga opposite Fort Plain. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly and clayey loam, and is particularly adapted to grazing.⁶ Fort Plain, (p.v.) incorp. April 5, 1832, is situated upon the Mohawk, in the E. part of the town. It contains an academy,⁷ bank, printing office, and 4 churches. Pop. 1502. Mindenville, (p.v.), on the Mohawk, in the w. part of the town, contains 30 houses, and Fordsborough, (Minden p.o.) on the w. border, 25. Hallsville,⁸ (p.o.), Freysbush,⁹ (p.o.) and Hessville, are hamlets. In this town are found the remains of one of those ancient fortifications which are so common in Central and Western New York and throughout the Western States, showing that the co. was inhabited long prior to the advent of the Indians.¹⁰ During the French War, Fort Plain was erected on the summit of the hill, half a mi. s. w. of the village.¹¹ During the Revolution, several other forts were built to protect the people from the sudden attacks of the Indians.¹² The first settlements in this town were among the first in the co. The early settlers were Germans, among whom were the Devendorf, Waggoner, and Gros families, Andrew Keller, and Henry H. Smith.¹³ John Abeel, an Indian trader, settled here in 1748.¹⁴ In common with the other valley towns, these settlements were ravaged by Brant and Johnson in 1780. At the time of Brant's incursion the men were mostly absent, and the women were shut up in the forts for safety. Upon the

² The census reports 4 churches in town; 2 Ref. Prot. D., M. E., True Dutch.

⁵ Said to signify "Hill of Health," or "Fort on a hill."

⁶ The dairy products of this town are greater than those of any other in the co. Hops are also largely cultivated.

⁸ Named from Capt. Robert Hall.

¹⁰ These mounds and ruins are the most easterly of any of the kind yet discovered. They are situated 4 mi. s. of Fort Plain, on a tongue of land formed by the valleys of Otsquaga Creek and one of its tributaries. This tongue is 100 ft. above the streams, and the declivities are almost precipitous. Across the tongue, at its narrowest part, is a curved line of breastworks 240 ft. in length, inclosing an area of about 7 acres. A gigantic pine, 6 ft. in diameter, stands upon one end of the embankment, showing that the work must have been of great antiquity.—Smithsonian Contributions, Vol. II Art. 6.

approach of the enemy the women showed themselves dressed in men's clothes, and the Indians thereupon kept at a respectful distance. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was organized at Fort Plain, long before the war. The census reports 9 churches in town.¹

MOHAWK—was formed from Johnstown, April 4, 1837.² It lies upon the s. bank of Mohawk River and near the center of the s. border of the co. The surface is uneven, and gradually rises from the river to the s. line, where it attains an elevation of about 400 ft. above the valley. Its principal streams are Cayadutta and Das-de-nos-ca-rai³ Creeks. The soil is generally a good quality of gravelly loam. Fonda,⁴ (p. v.) pleasantly situated upon the Mohawk, is the co. seat. Besides the co. buildings, it contains 2 churches, a bank, printing offices, and several manufactories. Pop. 687. Tribes Hill, (p. v.) on the border of Amsterdam, contains 327 inhabitants. The site of the present village of Fonda was called "Coughnawaga"⁵ by the Indians, and was one of the favorite resorts of the Mohawks. It was the scene of some of the earliest labors of the French Jesuits among the Five Nations, two of whom lost their lives here in 1646. The names of the first actual white settlers are not known. Nicholas Hansen⁶ settled at Tribes Hill before 1725, and others, by the names of Fonda, Vanderwerker, Doxtader, and Fisher, at an early day.⁷ Among the other residents of the town before the Revolution were Col. John Butler and his son Walter N., who afterward attained an infamous notoriety for their inhuman atrocities and for the vindictive hate which they seemed to cherish against their old whig neighbors.⁸ The principal weight of the incursion of Sir John in May, 1780, fell upon the two settlements of Tribes Hill and Coughnawaga.⁹ In the autumn of the same year the second incursion of Sir John swept over the town, destroying the greater part of the property that escaped the first. A stone church (Ref. Prot. D.) erected in 1763 is still standing.¹⁰ Rev. Thos. Romeyn was the first pastor. In 1795 he was succeeded by Rev. Abraham Van Horne.¹¹ The census reports 3 churches in town; Ref. Prot. D., True D., M. E.

⁴ Named from Donw Fonda, who removed from Schenectady and settled here in 1751. At the time of the Revolution he was living on the flats, between the present turnpike and the river, a few rods e. of the road leading to the bridge, at which place he was murdered by the Indians under Sir John, May 22, 1780. At the time of his death he was 84 years old. In former years he had greatly betrayed the Johnson family; but the ruthless savages led by Sir John spared neither friend nor foe. His three sons, John, Jellis, and Adam, were stanch whigs, residing in the neighborhood. Indian name, Gana-wa-da, "on the rapids."

⁵ Meaning "stone in the water," or "the rapids."

⁷ The first birth s. of the river, of which there is any record, was that of Henry Hansen. — Collins taught a school in 1774. Jellis (Giles) Fonda is said to have been the first merchant w. of Schenectady. He carried on an extensive trade with the native tribes, and with the whites at Forts Schuyler and Stanwix and the Falls at Oswego, Niagara, and Schlosser. His sales consisted chiefly of blankets, trinkets, ammunition, and rum, and his purchases of peltries, gin-seng, and potash. At one time before the Revolution his ledger showed an indebtedness of over $100,000 in the Indian country. John Chesley was an early settler at Tribes Hill. He was in the war, and found his own brother arrayed against him.

⁹ The detachment against Tribes Hill was led by Henry and Wm. Bowen, who had lived in the vicinity. Passing the tory settlement of Albany Bush (in Johnstown) without molestation, they proceeded to the home of Gerrit Putnam, a stanch whig at Tribes Hill, and there by mistake murdered two tories, who had hired the place a short time before. From this place they went up the river, plundering the houses and murdering their old friends and neighbors. Every building was burned except the church and parsonage, and several slaves and white male prisoners were carried to Canada. The women were not particularly molested on this occasion. At the house of Col. Field, Fisher they were warmly received by the Col.'s family, consisting of himself, his mother, and his two brothers John and Harmon. The Col.'s wife and children had been sent to Schenectady for safety; and his two sisters and an old negro, on the first alarm, fled to the woods and escaped. The Indians made a desperate attack upon the house, and a constant firing was kept up by the minutes until their ammunition was exhausted. They then all retreated to the chamber except John, who stood in the stairway and defended it with a hatchet until he had killed 7 Indians. He then retreated above, and slipping upon some peas which lay upon the floor, he fell, and was dispatched with a tomhawk. Harmon jumped out of the window to put out the fire that had been applied to the roof, and while standing on the fence he was shot, and fell across the fence dead. The mother was knocked down with the breach of a gun and left for dead. The Col. was also knocked down by a tomhawk, dragged down stairs by his hair, and thrown upon the ground, when an Indian jumped upon his back, drew a knife across his throat, as was supposed, cutting it from ear to ear, then, cutting round the scalp, seized it by his teeth and tore it from his head, and finally gave him a blow in the shoulder with his hatchet and fled. The Col. had not lost his senses through all this mangling, and his throat, being protected by a bather belt worn inside of his cravat, was only slightly wounded. As soon as the Indians disappeared, he arose, went up stairs and brought down his mother, placed her in a chair and leaned her up against the fence; returned, and brought down the body of his brother John and laid it on the grass; then, becoming exhausted from loss of blood and the effect of the scalping, he lay down upon an old rug that lay out of doors,—as he supposed, to die. The old negro and girls soon returned, and found the house burned down and the dead and wounded as described. By signs the Col. made known to the negro that he wanted water, who immediately brought it from the creek near by and gave it to him to drink, and also bathed his head, which he asked of his speech. A tory named Clement passing by, the negro asked what he should do; the reply, given in German, was, "Let the dead be dead." According to the directions of the Col., the negro carried the colts, which had never been broken, harnessed them to the wagon, and took him to the house of Putnam, at Tribes Hill. From there he, together with his mother, sisters, and the bodies of his brothers, was conveyed across the river to Wamples, and thence in a canoe to Schenectady, where they arrived about midnight, and he had his wounds dressed for the first time. After five years' suffering, he nearly recovered from the effects of his wounds. He built a new house on the site of the old one, and lived 29 years after he was wounded,—for several years holding the office of First Judge of the co. His mother also recovered from her wounds, and lived with him. After the war the Indian who scalped him returned to the settlements, and stopped at a tavern kept by a tory at Tribes Hill. The wife of the landlord, who was a whig, sent word immediately to the house of Col. Fisher that the Indian was there and would soon call at his house. The family, knowing that the Col. had sworn revenge, and wishing to prevent any more blood-hed, kept the news from him. As they were all in the front room about the time the Indian was expected they overset a pot of lye upon the hearth, and persuaded the Col. to go into the back room and his down until they cleaned it up. While the Col. was gone, the Indian came to the door, where he was met by the old lady, who addressed him in the Indian tongue, told him he was son's intentions, and pointed to a gun which was always kept loaded in readiness for him. The Indian listened, gave a grunt, and ran away with all speed.

PALATINE—was formed as a district, by the name of "Stone Arabia," March 24, 1772, and its name was changed March 8, 1773. It was formed as a town March 7, 1788, embracing all the territory between "Little Falls and The Noses," and extending from the Mohawk to Canada. Salisbury (Herkimer co.) was taken off in 1797, Stratford (Fulton co.) in 1805, Oppenheim (Fulton co.) in 1808, and Ephrata (Fulton co.) in 1827. It lies along the s. bank of the Mohawk, w. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly an upland, 200 to 500 ft. above the valley, much broken by deep, narrow ravines, and descending irregularly toward the river. The principal streams are the Kau-a-da-rauk,¹ in the e. part of the town, and the Gargoa, in the w. The soil is fertile, and well adapted to grazing.² Stone Arabia, (p. v.) near the center of the town, contains about 50 houses, and Palatine Bridge, (p. v.) on the Mohawk opposite Canajoharie, 40. Palatine Church, (Palatine p. o.) on the w. border, is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in town in 1713, by German Palatinates, who came over in 1710. The larger part of the Stone Arabia Patent was within the limits of this town.³ Wm. Fox settled near Palatine Church, and Peter Waggoner a little below, on the Mohawk, in 1715. The early records of the settlement are lost.⁴ A stockade called Fort Paris, the ruins of which are still visible, was built at Stone Arabia, and another, called Fort Keyser, 1 mi. s. The disastrous engagement resulting in the death of Col. Brown was fought within this town, between Stone Arabia and the river.⁵ The Ref. Prot. D. church at Stone Arabia is one of the oldest in the valley.⁶ The stone church (Luth.) at Palatine Church was built in 1770.⁷ The census reports 3 churches in town; 2 Ev. Luth., Ref. Prot. D.

ROOT—was formed from Canajoharie and Charleston, Jan. 27, 1823. It lies upon the s. bank of the Mohawk, near the center of the co. The hills which border upon the river rise abruptly to a height of 630 feet,⁸ and from their summits the country spreads out into an undulating upland. The high hills just below Sprakers, on opposite banks of the river, are called "The Noses." The high ridge near the e. border is known as "Stone Ridge." The principal streams are Platte Kill, and Lashers and Flat Creeks. Mitchells Cave,⁹ in the vicinity of The Noses, consists of several apartments, with the roof hung with stalactites. The soil is a fine, gravelly loam. Leather-ville (Root p. o.) contains 15 houses, and Currytown,¹¹ Sprakers Basin, (p. o.) Flat Creek, (p. o.) and Browns Hollow, about a dozen each. Yatesville is a hamlet on the canal. The first settlers were Jacob Devendorf, at Currytown, Rudolph Keller, David and Fred. Luce, and Jacob Lainer.¹² The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed at Currytown. Rev. Peter Van Buren became its pastor in 1806.¹³ The principal incursions into this town during the war were those made in the summer and fall of 1781. The weight of the first of these, led by the tory Doxtader, July 9, 1781, fell upon the settlements in and near Currytown.¹⁴ In Oct. of the same year Ross and Butler passed through the town, but committed no depredations, except capturing part of a funeral procession, and taking a few prisoners at Stone Ridge.

ST. JOHNSVILLE¹⁵—was formed from Oppenheim, (Fulton co.) April 18, 1838. It lies upon the s. bank of the Mohawk, in the w. part of the co. Its surface consists of a broad river intervalle and a broken upland gradually rising s. of it. Its streams are East Canada, Crum, Fox, Zimmermans, Caldwell, and Mother Creeks. Upon East Canada Creek, 1½ mi. from its mouth, are a succession of falls and rapids descending 75 feet in a distance of 80 rods. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam. St. Johnsville, (p. v.) on the Mohawk, was incorp. in 1857. It contains a woolen and pitchfork factory, and is an important station on the Central R. R. Pop. 648. The first settlement at the village was made by Jacob Zimmerman, in 1776.¹⁶ During the Revolution

² More cheese is made in this town than in any other in the co. The aggregate is more than 500,000 lbs.

³ This purchase extended along East Canada Creek, in the rear of Heusen's and Van Slyke's patents.

⁴ The German was the language taught in the first schools.

⁷ The records of this church commence in 1779, when it had but 10 members. The present edifice was erected in 1785, and the church was re-organized in 1790. A Luth. church built at Stone Arabia in 1770 was burned in 1780.

⁸ The subscriptions for this church were mostly furnished by the Nells families, who became Tories; and in consequence the church was not burned. Several shots were fired into it by the party under Sir John Johnson, one of the shot holes being still visible.

¹⁰ As surveyed by Capt. Thomas Machin.

¹¹ Named from the former owner of the farm on which the cave is situated.

¹² Named from Wm. Curry, the patentee.

¹⁵ Upon the alarm being given, the settlers hastened to a packeted blockhouse near the dwelling of Henry Lewis, closely pursued by the enemy. Every house in the village except one was set on fire, but the flames were extinguished by the vanguard of Col. Willitt's forces, under Capt. Robert Keen. Frederick, son of Jacob Devendorf, was scalped, but he recovered. Jacob, jr., another son, was taken prisoner, and was scalped on the retreat of the Indians. He also recovered, and lived to the age of 85 years. He died in 1854, one of the wealthiest farmers in the valley. Mary Miller, a little girl, was scalped and found alive, but died soon after. Several other prisoners were murdered. Most of the cattle driven away were abandoned, and found their way back to the settlement.

¹⁶ Named from St. John's Church, built in the village at an early day.

¹⁷ The first settlers of the town came in long prior to this,

the house of Christian Klock, three-fourths of a mi. w. of Palatine Church, was stockaded and named "Fort House." The house of Jacob Zimmerman was also stockaded. These forts were both attacked, but never taken. Fort Hill, situated on an eminence E. of East Creek, was erected during the French War. It was repaired and used during the Revolution. The battle between the forces of Sir John and the advanced guard of Van Rensselaer's army, under Col. Dubois, was fought at "Klocks Field," near "Fort House," Oct. 18, 1780. The enemy forded the river, and retreated up the valley during the night following. The Indians, in small parties, continued to prowl about the settlement during the war, and shot and captured several of the inhabitants.² A church was built by Christian Klock in 1756; the Rev. Mr. Rosekrantz was the first preacher, and John Henry Disland the second. The census reports 2 churches; Ref. Prot. D. and Union.

but the precise date is unknown. They were Germans, and among them were families named Hellebrat, Waters, Getman, Van Biepen, Walrath, and Klock. A German school was taught by Henry Hayes at an early day. The first English school was taught by Lot Ryan, an Irishman, in 1792. Chris. Nellis kept an inn in 1783, and a store in 1801. Jacob Zimmerman built the first gristmill, during the Revolution, and Geo. Klock the second, in 1801.

² In the spring of 1780 Philip Belmer deserted to the enemy.

He had previously been paying his addresses to a daughter of Philip Bellinger, and upon a plan being formed to take the family of the latter prisoners, he forewarned them in time to rally a party to their assistance. An ambuscade was formed, and the Indians would have been killed or captured, had it not been for the intercession of one of the party, who, upon their approach, yelled out, at the top of his voice, "Lo! God Almighty, friends, here they are!" The Indians fled with the loss of only one.

NEW YORK COUNTY.

THE city of New York¹ was incorp. by Gov. Stuyvesant in 1652, and its municipal powers were confirmed and enlarged by Gov. Dongan, April 22, 1686, and by Gov. Montgomerie, April 19, 1708. An act was passed Oct. 14, 1732, confirming its rights; and subsequent enactments were embodied in one act in the revised laws of 1813 and in the revised statutes of 1828. Numerous changes in the details of the municipal government have been made from time to time.²

The co., from the beginning, has embraced Manhattan, Governors, Bedloes, Ellis's, Blackwells, Wards, and Raulalls Islands, and the lands under water to low water mark on the shores opposite, in Westchester, Queens, and Kings cos., and in New Jersey.³ Manhattan Island is $13\frac{1}{2}$ mi. long, by $2\frac{1}{2}$ mi. wide at the broadest part. It is centrally distant 130 mi. from Albany, and contains an area of 22,000 acres.⁴ It is separated from Westchester co. by a strait known as Spuyten Duyvil Creek,⁵ and Harlem River. The surface of the island was originally quite broken by ridges of gneiss and hornblendic slate, especially in the s. part; and immense masses of rock and earth have been removed in grading.⁶ A deep valley extended across the island on the line of Canal St.;⁷ another near Carmansville;⁸ a third at Manhattanville; and a fourth at Tubby Hook, near the s. extremity. The s. part of the island was covered with drift and boulders, presenting conical hills, some of which were 80 ft. above the present grade of the streets. Fresh water was readily obtained by wells sunk to the surface of the rock; and the porous nature of the soil has greatly favored the construction of deep foundations and vaults without annoyance from water.⁹

Along the e. shore, from 94th St. northward, and around Harlem, the surface is very level, and to some extent covered with salt marshes. On the w. side, toward the n., the valleys are often deep and the hills precipitous. The highest point, at Fort Washington, is 238 ft. above tide.

Both sides of the island afford ample facilities for commerce; and the noble harbor embraced within the shores of New Jersey, Staten Island, Long Island, and the city has scarcely an equal for extent, safety, and facility of access, and for the amount of its commercial transactions.¹⁰

The preservation of this harbor from injurious encroachments has been a subject of solicitude; and investigations which these have occasioned have developed many interesting facts connected with its interests.¹¹

² Important acts were passed in 1830, 1849, 1851, 1853, and 1857, the last mentioned embracing all the essential features of the city government.

⁴ The widest part of the island is at 88th St., where it is 12,500 feet across.

⁵ The creek flows from Hudson to Harlem River, at Kingsbridge.

⁶ White limestone of coarse quality appeared at the surface on the e. side, between Eth and 10th Sts., and on the w. from 29th to 31st Sts. The strata of gneiss are nearly vertical, often bent and contorted, and in places they contain interesting minerals.

¹⁰ The strait known as Harlem River and Spuyten Duyvil Creek is too shallow and crooked to be available for commerce. Various plans have been proposed to improve it; but none have been carried into effect. Harlem River is about 800 to 1,000 ft. wide, and mostly bordered by narrow, marshy flats, behind which the banks rise into hills. At Kingsbridge the bank is 180 ft. high and nearly perpendicular. The Hudson River R. R. and the Harlem R. R. cross these waters, and also the High Bridge, used only for the Croton Aqueduct and foot passengers; and the Harlem Bridge, at the head of 3d Avenue. The latter was a toll bridge until the expiration of the charter in the spring of 1858. Macomb's Bridge, formerly at the head of 7th Avenue, was much used; but it is now down. A dike was constructed at this place for using tide water; but, being found to impede navigation, it was removed. In 1827 a company formed to build a canal across the upper end of the island, and in 1836 a similar plan was proposed, and a canal was partly built, traces of which may be seen on the e. side of the island, at 190th St. One of the objects of this canal was to gain access to a marble quarry; but the stone was found to be of inferior quality, and the project was abandoned. The capacity of the harbor of New York is limited only by the depth of water on the bars at its entrance near Sandy Hook. Vessels of about 23 ft. draft can pass at high tide. The approaches by way of Long Island Sound have no practical limitation of this kind; and vessels of 60 ft. draft could approach the upper part of the island and land on the Westchester shores adjacent without difficulty.

1686.—All vacant lands on Manhattan Island to low water mark, with rivulets, coves, and ponds, were secured by the charter granted by Gov. Dongan.

Although the city forms but a single organization, it has localities known by distinct names as villages or neighborhoods; but the number of these is gradually becoming obliterated as population increases; and most of them will soon be known only to the student of history.¹

Of the several islands, other than Manhattan, comprised in New York City and co., those in the harbor are owned by the General Government, and occupied as military posts, and those in the East River are chiefly owned by the city and devoted to charitable and penal institutions.²

1708.—All vacant lands on Long Island shore, between high and low water marks, between the Navy Yard and Red Hook, were granted.

1730.—Land under water, 400 ft. wide, between junction of Charlton and Washington Sts., and Marketfield St. on the Hudson, and from Whitehall to Houston St. on the East River, was secured.—These grants, with the previous ones, comprise 203 acres.

1807.—Land under water, 400 ft. wide, extending northward from previous grant 4 mi. on the Hudson and 2 mi. on the East River, was granted.

1826.—The same was extended to spayten Duxval Creek on the W. and Harlem R. on the E.

1821.—Land 600 ft. wide in front of the Battery was added.

1837.—Land under water on the W. to 15th Avenue line was secured.

1852.—Land under Harlem R. from such exterior line as the corporation might fix, to the shore, was granted. Other extensions were authorized in 1828, 1830, 1833, 1846, & Ann. Dig., 8, 1850.

In 1811 the exterior line was fixed by the commissioners for laying out the city into streets; but changes of their plan and the extension of streets led to encroachments upon the channel, requiring remedial measures. An act was accordingly passed, March 30, 1815, appointing 25 commissioners in full-manege of advice of a Senate committee of the year previous, and those persons, associating with themselves several officers of the General Government, proceeded to examine the subject. The harbor and shores were surveyed, and some of the objects of titles and encroachments examined, maps constructed, and lines for the limitation of piers and bulkheads recommended, and mostly confirmed by law, April 7, 1817. These surveys were performed by 10 parties of about 200 persons from the U. S. Coast Survey, at a cost of $85,000. The reports of the commission embrace a large amount of statistical and historical information.—U. S. Ann. Dig., 8, Ann. Dig., 40, 126, 187.

The first street was laid in Broad to Beach St., on the East River. There are now 66 piers on the W., and 78 on the E. side of the city. A part of these are built and owned by the corporation, others by individuals or companies, and others jointly by the city and individuals. Of the first class the city pays one-third the cost of building and receives one-half of the revenues. The city owns 39 piers and 7 halfpiers on the Hudson, and 51 piers and 20 halfpiers on the East River,—the former valued at $1,428,500, and the latter at $4,820,000. They are under the care of the street Department.

The wants of commerce led to the erection of a lighthouse on Sandy Hook, at the expense of the colony of New York, in 1762, which was supported by special duties upon commerce until ceded to the U. S., Feb. 3, 1790. The commissioners for its erection were John Cruger, Philip Livingston, Leonard Lapsard, and Wynn Bayard. It was burned in 1775. Within the Hook are lights at Prince's Bay, Fort Tompkins, Rodens Reef and Whitehall Landing, and numerous buoys to mark the channels.

The tide enters at Sandy Hook at 7 a. m., past the moon's southern, and rises at Governors' Island from 2.2 to 6.1 ft., the mean rise being 4.3 ft. The harbor was frozen over in 1780, and again in 1826. On the former occasion persons passed on the ice to Staten Island. It sometimes happens that the Hudson and East Rivers will be closed for two hours in intensely cold seasons, and people have on these occasions rashly attempted to cross, but the occurrence is not common.

The following is a list of the principal of these localities:—

Bloomfield, on Broadway, between 100th and 110th Sts., 7 mi. from the City Hall, presents a very neat appearance, and consists mostly of suburban dwellings. It is the seat of an orphan and a lunatic asylum,—the latter forming a branch of the N. Y. Hospital. It was called by the Dutch "Bloemfeldt." Flowey Valley.

Carmanville, on Both Ay above 155th St., named from families named Carman, former owners of the adjoining lands, is chiefly made up of country seats.

Corlears Hook, at the angle in the East River near Grand St., named from Arent Van Corlear, was ceded by the Indians to Nechtok.

Domites Hook lies on the Hudson, between Duane and Canal Sts., embracing 92 acres. It was acquired by ground brief from Stevensant July 4, 1634, and was afterward granted to the English church.

Fort Washington, Washington Heights (p. 6.) a short distance above Carmanville, is an elevated site, once fortified, and now occupied by fine dwellings. The Deaf and Dumb Asylum is located near this place.

Greenwich, now merged in the city, was 3 mi. above the City Hall, on the Hudson. It was named by Capt. afterward Sir Peter, Warren, who owned it. The Indian name was "Sapokancon." The N. Y. State Prison was formerly located here.

Harlem (p. 6.) lies between 8th Avenue and East River, about 10th St. The principal business is on 4th Avenue. It has several churches, important manufacturing establishments, churches, academies, libraries, and rowing clubs, and seven or eight private schools.

Kings Garden, west of Broadway, between Fulton and Reine Sts., is now partly held by Trinity Church and leased.

Lispenards Meadows was an irregular tract on both sides of West Broadway from Reine to North Spring St., including Canal St. from the Hudson to Orange St.

Manhattanville, (p. 6.) on the Hudson, between 12th and 124th Sts., W. of 9th Avenue, contains a convent, Catholic college, and manufactory of iron, paint, and refined sugar.

Strykers Bay, on the Hudson, at 20th St., is a large station.

Tubby Hook lies on the Hudson, one-half mi. S. of Spuyten Duyvil Creek.

Turtle Bay is on the East River, 2 mi. S. of the Hook. Its name is a corruption of the Dutch "Dontel Bay" for "Dont Bay."

Yorkville, on the east side of Central Park, extends to the East River, from 79th to 90th Sts.

Governors' Island was formerly called "N. Y. or Island," and by the Indians "Paganck." It has 1,000 yards S. E. from the Battery, and contains 72 acres. It is separated from Long Island by Bottermill Channel, formerly shallow, but now of sufficient depth for the largest ships. This island was bought by Gov. Van Twiller, and has always been reserved for public defence. Quarantine was located here from 1701 to 1757. In the settlement of accounts with the U. S. New York indebted to the next fortifications for a payment for her proportion of the expenses of the Revolution. Jurisdiction was ceded to the U. S., Feb. 16, 1800, with Fort Jay, then partially completed. By the authority of an act passed March 26, 1754, $20,000 were expended by the State in fortifications under the supervision of Gen. Clinton, Matthew Clarkson, James Watts, Richard Varck, Nicholas Fish, Eleazer Stevens, and Archibald Hammond. A further sum of $20,000 was granted April 1, 1756, to complete the works on this and "Ogden's" (now Ellis) Islands. Castle William (named from Gen. Williams of the N. Y. Militia) is a round tower on the W. shore of the island, 100 feet in circumference, and 60 feet high, mounting 30 guns, 6 or 40 barbette guns. The land side is open, and a covered way leads to the works in the center of the island. Fort Columbus is a star-shaped work of 5 points on the summit of the island, mounting 19 guns, and South Battery, forming Bottermill Channel, has 13 guns. These works from 18 to 1838 cost $285,597; and they are adapted for a garrison of 800 men. The island is used as a receiving station for newly enlisted troops, and a school for instructing boys in music. A part of beds of 14 years and upward are annually under instruction upon the drum, bugle, and other instruments.

Bedloes Island, 2.9 acres S. W. from the Battery, was named from Isaac Bedloe, the painter and Gov. Noell. It was known for some years as "Keweenaw Island." It was ceded to the U. S. in 1800, having been previously used for quarantine purposes. It is now occupied by Fort Wood, erected in 1841 at a cost of $215,000, on the site of a fort built at the beginning of the century. It mounts 77 guns, and accommodates a garrison of 350 men. During several months in 1849 it was used by the Commissioners of Emigration as a hospital.

Ellis Island, formerly known as "Ogden's" "Bedloes," and "Adelphi" Island, has 2,600 yards S. W. from the Battery, and is occupied by Fort Gibson, a work built in 1841, 44, at a cost of $509,600, mounting 15 guns and comprising 4,000 and 500 ft. The private Gibbs and B associates were lying here April 24, 1851.

Blackwells Island is a long, narrow island in the East River, extending from 1st to 88th Sts., and containing 120 acres. It was named from the Blackwell family, who owned it for a hundred years or more. It is now owned by the city corporation, and is the seat of various public and charitable institutions. This island was formerly called "Manhasset Island," from Capt. John Manning, and by the Indians it was named "Manhannock." It was patented to Gov. Van Twiller, and contained private property until 1828, when it was sold by James Blackwell to the city for $20,000. In 1843 the city paid $20,000 more for a part of the title.

Wards Island, named from Jasper and Bartholomew Ward, former proprietors, extends along the East River, opposite New York, from 104th St. to 114th St., and contains 200 acres. It was formerly called "Great Bedloe's" or "Great Bedloe's" Island, and by the Indians was named "Tenkenas." It was

The city is divided into 22 Wards, which are again subdivided into 140 Election Districts, and such other civil divisions as the election of State, city and co. officers, the administration of justice, and the regulation of municipal ordinances require.¹

The Board of Supervisors in New York co. is composed of 12 persons, who are so classified that 2 are elected or appointed annually. A ballot can have but one name; and it is the duty of the canvassers to declare that the two persons having the highest number of votes are elected.² Their general powers and duties—which chiefly concern taxes and assessment—are the same as those of Supervisors in other cos.

The Legislative Power of the city government is vested in the Common Council, consisting of 2 co-ordinate branches,—a board of 17 Aldermen and a board of 24 Councilmen.³ The former are elected by single districts for 2 years, and the latter are elected annually, 6 to each Senatorial district.⁴ Ordinances must be passed by both bodies the same year, and receive the assent of the Mayor, to become valid.

The regular sessions of the Board of Councilmen commence at 5 o'clock p. m. on the first Monday in each month, and continue on each Monday and Tuesday until the business of the month is concluded. Each house elects a presiding officer, clerk, and other officers; and the journals of each are published.

The Executive Power is vested in a Mayor,⁵ elected for 2 years, and in 7 Executive Departments, viz., those of Police, Finance, Streets, Croton Aqueduct, Almshouse, Law, and City Inspector,—most of which are subdivided into bureaus, each having specific duties to perform. The Mayor is charged with the general administration of the city, nominates for the approval of the Aldermen certain officers, and may suspend or remove officers within limits fixed by statute. He communicates annually and from time to time to the Common Council such messages as he deems proper.

The Police Department has general charge of police regulation in New York City, Kings, Richmond, and Westchester cos. By act of April 15, 1857, it was placed under the Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police District,⁶ of whom the Mayors of New York and Brooklyn are ex officio members.

bought by Van Twiller in 1637, confiscated in 1664, and granted to Thos. Delavel. The Wards bought it in 1806; and in Dec. 1817, a part was leased by the Commissioners of Emigration for an Emigrant Refuge and Hospital. The Commissioners have since purchased 100 acres; and a portion of the remainder is used as a Potter's Field. The cost of buildings and improvements up to 1858 was $200,000. The structures erected before 1850 were slight barracks and shanties; but those built since are chiefly of brick. The island is supplied with Croton water; and a ferry connects it with 10th St.

Randalls Island, named from Jonathan Randall, who purchased it in 1784 and resided here nearly 50 years, lies S. of Wards Island, near the Westchester shore. It was formerly known as "Little Horn" Island. It was patented under the Dutch Government, but was confiscated in 1664 and granted to Thos. Delavel. It was subsequently named "Bellish," "Tallots Island," and "Madonnas Island." The city purchased it in 1825 for $50,000. It is now occupied by nursery schools and by the establishment of the S. city for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents. A ferry connects it with 123d St.

The Department of Finance is under a Comptroller, elected by separate ticket for a term of 4 years. This officer has charge of the fiscal concerns of the city, and reports the condition of its finances annually to the Common Council. The Department is divided into the Auditing Bureau, a Bureau of Arrears, a Bureau of Taxes, a Bureau of City Revenue, and a Bureau of Deposits and Disbursements, the officers of which are appointed by the Comptroller.

During 24 years ending with 1898, 38 persons have been sentenced to death at the Court of Sessions, 14 of them for capital crimes, of whom 17 have been executed, 14 had their sentences commuted to imprisonment for life, 5 were pardoned, 1 committed suicide, and 14 a new trial was granted, of whom 3 were convicted of manslaughter and 1 discharged. One was under sentence of death at the beginning of 1899.—Common Council Manual, 1899, p. 75.

The Street Department is under the charge of the Street Commissioner, who is appointed for 2 years by the Mayor with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen. He has the general direction of opening, altering, regulating, grading, guttering, and lighting streets, roads, places, and avenues, of building, repairing, and lighting wharves and piers, and of the construction and repair of public roads and the filling up of sunken lots, under the ordinances of the Common Council. The paving of streets is not under his charge. The department has a Bureau of Street Improvements, of Repairs and Supplies, of Lands and Places, of the Chief Engineer of Fire Department, of Collection of Assessments, of Wharves, of Roads, and of Lamps and Gas. Of each of these bureaus there is a superintendent, or chief, and several clerks, numbering in the several offices of the Department nearly sixty persons.¹

The Streets of the portion covered in this survey generally extend from the Hudson to the East River direct, and are known by their numbers, the highest being at the time of first survey 154, but since extended to 228. Above 10th St. these are known only by their numbers and the lots upon them are numbered e. and w. from Fifth Avenue. They are each 60 feet wide except 14th, 23d, 34th, 45th, 57th, 72d, 79th, 86th, 96th, 100th, 116th, 125th, 155th, 145th, and 165th, each of which is 100 feet wide.

The blocks between them vary from 184 to 212 feet, being generally about 200 feet, or about 20 feet less to the mile.

The Avenues run nearly S. and N., and are numbered from E. to W., beginning upon the East River. Several short avenues on the S. side of the city are designated by letters, as, Letter A, beginning at the one next E. of First Avenue. These avenues are each 100 feet wide, except S. of 23d St., where Avenues A and C are 80 feet and Avenue B 60 feet. North of 23d St. Fourth Avenue is 125 feet wide. The blocks between the avenues are 60 to 90 feet, being generally 80 feet.

The Lots and Places belonging to the city date their title from De Witt's charter, by which all waste and unappropriated lands on Manhattan Island, to low water mark, and all rivers, bays, and waters adjoining, were confirmed to the city. The real estate now belonging to the Corporation, amounting to $41,453,939, is mostly in use for Waterworks, Police, Fire, Almshouse, School, or Market purposes, or as parks, piers, bulldozes, and wharves, ferries, and public buildings for municipal purposes. The city owns, besides these, Uncommuted quitrents reserved on property when sold, and water grants yet to be issued, $9,000.00 Lots under lease without covenants of renewal, 2,500.00 " " " with " " " " 100,000.00 Common Docks, 100,000.00 Sun-dial lots and corners of land, 200,000.00 Real estate in Brooklyn, 50,000.00

The city contains 20 public and several private parks, most of which are inclosed with iron railing and handsomely laid out.

The Fire Department in some form has existed since 1653, when the city enjoyed the privilege of collecting a beaver for each house and a guildler yearly for each chimney to support a fire apparatus. The Fire Department in its present form was incorporated April 16, 1831, and its powers have been modified by acts of March 25, 1851, and April 3, 1855.

The City of 1837, for the purpose of construction, is an authorized special Board of Commissioners, consisting of 10 members, who serve without pay, and report annually to the Common Council. The history of this park is briefly as follows:

On the 16th of April, 1837, Mayor King and, in a special message to the Common Council, called attention to the importance of a public park sufficient ample to meet the growing wants of the city population. The message was referred to a select committee, who reported in favor of purchasing the tract of 150 acres between 96th and 77th sts., and 3d Avenue and the East River, known as Jones's Wood. An act was passed July 11, 1837, allowing this to be taken but from some errors in the act, the Supreme Court refused to appoint Commissioners, and the law was repealed April 11, 1837. On the 30th of August, 1837, a committee was appointed to examine whether any more suitable site for a park could not be found, and the result of the inquiry was the selection of the site now known as the Central Park, between 5th and 8th Avenues, originally extending from 4th to 10th sts., and in 1839 extended to 110th St. The act for creating this park passed July 23, 1837, and an act for its regulation and government April 17, 1837. The grounds are 2,700 acres, 2,700 ft wide, embracing 840 acres, of which 150 are occupied by Clinton reservoirs. It will be crossed by 4 thoroughfares, sunk below the general surface and passing under the carriage ways and other avenues of the park, so as not to obstruct the movement of visitors. Access to the grounds cannot be had from these transverse roads. This park is now under construction, and will embrace a parade ground 500 acres in extent, for the maneuver of five companies of infantry, cavalry, and artillery; a botanical garden, cricket grounds, playgrounds, ponds for skating in winter, and every variety of scenery which a surface naturally rugged and broken can be made to present. The plan embraces carriage drives and formal paths, windmills, ways for pedestrians and broad, noble avenues for monuments, fountains, lawns, terraces, and every variety of woodland scenery. Ground is reserved for a public hall, intended for concerts, for a large conservatory, and exotic terraces. There is a geometrical flower garden, with all fountains, for an architectural terrace, with a large jet and Tazza fountain; for public houses of refreshment; for residences of the Superintendent and head gardener, for a police station, a zoological garden, and for an astronomical observatory, chartered in 1839. The grounds now include the building erected and still used for a State Arsenal, but sold to the corporation, and the Mount of Vincent Artery of the Sisters of Charity. There will be over 25 miles of walks, 5 miles of bridle paths, and 1.5 miles of carriage road. The main entrance will be at the corner of 8th Avenue and 5th St.; but other entrances will be provided at convenient points on 7th Avenue on both ends, and along 5th and 8th Avenues.

The Battery comprises a tract of about 20 acres at the S. point of the island, planted with trees and a fountain upon the hilltop. It was formerly a place of fashionable resort. But in the extension of commerce, it has lost most of its prestige. It is still at tractive on account of its old houses and its refreshing shade. The point, formerly called S. Battery, showed a number of rocks above water, upon which a platform was built in 1693 for a battery. This shallow spit was afterward filled in, and in 1846 it was further extended so as to embrace its present limits. It is valued at $200,000.

The Bowling Green is a triangular park between Broadway and Whitehall St. and Battery Place. It is supplied with a fountain, but is not open to the public. This Park or Green formerly fronted the fort upon the Battery. Prior to the Revolution, a noble equestrian statue of George III. was placed in it, which had the commencement of the war was thrown down and melted into bullets. The Green is valued at $150,000.

The Park is a triangular space of 1.6 acres between Bond way, Chatham, and Chamber Sts., near the present center of commercial business in the city. The City Hall, Hall of Records, Robinson, and New City Hall, used for courts and public offices, are located upon it. It has a large fountain, which is sold in use. This tract, formerly called The Piazza or The Exchange, from the beginning has been owned by the city, and used for public purposes. While distant from the site of the park, it was used as a place of execution, and the victims of the guillotine were here beheaded. In the only part of the Revolution in the Sons of Liberty here rallied to assert their rights, and at that period it became the scene of publicity as the prison and execution ground of American patriots. The spot was formerly of marble, beautifully finished, and surrounded by two marble balustrades from the Turkish Government to Commodore Perry, and by iron presented to the city. They had been made for cannon balls. The foundation of this gateway was laid with great pomp, the Mayor presiding and 1,500 citizens in various coats, papers, and memorials. The Park is now partly surrounded by an iron railing. There is a fountain at some distance to allow the cooling of the pipes. The central fountain feeds at a fountain of 100 pipes, 6 inches in diameter, and from the through cast-iron pipes 200 jets of water can be swelled to thousands in a brief space of time. The park is valued at $200,000.

Washington Square, containing 11 acres, formerly De Witt's Field, lies between Waverley Place, Madison Ave. and West 4th Sts. It is handsomely laid out, and is a park with residences of a superior class. It has a fountain, and is a favorite resort for promenades. It is a famous equestrian statue, which was burned here before the ground was taken for a park. It is valued at $80,000.

Union Park is an oval area with a fine fountain, on Broadway, bounded by University Place, 4th Avenue, 11th and 12th Sts. It is much frequented in summer by sunbathers and children. It is valued at $600,000. Alighting the park, but not even its paling, is the equestrian statue of Washington, erected by H. V. Brown, erected in 1846 at a cost of over $100,000. It is 14 feet high, and stands on a granite pedestal of about the same height.

Toughen Square, formerly a parade ground is bounded by Avenues A and B and by 6th and 10th Sts. It is still a vacant lot, and will become an ornament to the western side of the city. A fountain is under construction, and other improvements are in progress.

Mohr's Square, comprising 10 acres, between 5th and Madison Avenues and 2d and 4th Sts., is not yet laid out, and planted with trees. The adjoining streets are built up with first class dwellings, and it is one of the most fashionable places of promenade in the city. It is valued at $1,200,000. Alighting this square on the west is a monument to the memory of General Worth.

Stuyvesant Square, lies between 15th and 17th Sts. and 4th and 5th Avenues, the 2d Avenue passing through it. It has a fountain on each side of 2d Avenue, and is tastefully laid out and planted with trees and shrubs. It was presented to the corporation by the late Peter B. Stuyvesant, and is valued at $1,600,000.

Reservoir Square, adjoining the distributing reservoir, lies between 40th and 42d Sts., on 6th Avenue, from 1847 to 1858 was occupied by the Crystal Palace. It is valued at $1,000,000, and is at present unimproved as a park.

Madison Square, between 8th and 9th Avenues and 77th and 81st Sts., is a rough, unimproved piece of land, valued at $80,000.

Beaumont Square, at Yorkville, between 3d and 5th Avenues and 68th and 69th Sts., has a fine surface, mostly above the level of adjoining streets, and is unimproved and unimproved. The corner stone of a monument to Washington was laid with pompous ceremonies on this park Oct. 4, 1847, but the party to whom that motif of the onerous was expended in the effort, and the work was abandoned without further action. The park is valued at $7,000.

Mount Morris Square, between 120th and 124th Sts., on both sides of 5th Avenue, not yet laid out, is valued at $400,000.

A square of 17 acres was reserved for a park at Bloomingdale, between 8th and 9th Avenues, and 1st and 7th Sts., but the location of the Central Park has taken its place. In various parts of the city are several small fragments of parks at the intersection of streets, valued at $100,000 in all. The city also contains several parks in its territory, which are laid out with great care and are truly ornamental.

St. John's Chapel and Hall Square, fronting St. John's Church, and bounded by Hudson, Varck, Beek, and Lorain Sts., belongs to Trinity Church, and is valued at $400,000. It is kept for the exclusive use of the individuals living near it, who pay three cents of the keeper at each entrance. It contains a beautiful fountain.

Greenwich Park, between 20th and 21st Sts., and 4th and 5th Avenues, is owned by those living in it, but having been sold to them by Samuel B. Litchfield. It is enclosed with a fine railing and a thick hedge of sweet pine, and is planted with ornamental trees and shrubs. It has a fountain in the center.

This department has a Police and Fire Board, consisting of 44 members, a Police Board, of 15 members, and 120 men. A system of 222 numbered streets, 222 squares, 422 of horse companies, and 22 of fire companies, and 1,000 companies. The bodies of men are not paid salaries, but are employed in their own service, although the bodies are employed in every respect as a private army, and when called to the city authorities by their police regulations. The city is divided into five fire districts, furnished with 11,500 feet of alarm bells, all equipped by 16 engineering companies, 1,300 fire engine companies, 37 horse companies, 1,100 hook and ladder companies, and 4 hydrant companies. The first class companies have companies of

The Bureau of Lamps and Gas has in charge the lighting of the streets.

The Croton Aqueduct Department is under a board styled the Croton Aqueduct Board, consisting of a President, Commissioner, Chief Engineer, and Assistant, appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen for five years. It has charge of all structures and property connected with the supply of Croton water and the collection of water rents, of the underground drainage of the city, of public sewers, of permits for street vaults, of paving and repairing streets, and of digging and constructing wells. It has a Bureau of Water Rents, and one of Pipes, Sewers, and Pavements. The department was organized in July, 1849, under an act passed April 11 of that year. Previous to this the Water Commissioners were appointed by the Governor and Senate.

79 men, the second of 60, and the third of 50. The hook and ladder companies have each 50 men, and the hose companies each 30. The number of fires in the year, ending Feb. 17, 1853, was 291, and of alarms, 190. The loss by fire on buildings was $393,647, and on stock $514,990,—of which the Crystal Palace, burned in Oct. 1858, formed a large item. During the last year two large steam fire-engines have been obtained; but, except in extraordinary cases, they are not used. The city owns about 80,000 feet of hose. The Department elects one Fire Commissioner annually for a term of 5 years from among exempt firemen. These commissioners form a Board to decide upon the formation of new volunteer companies, to investigate applications for admission to companies, to examine into charges against members, and for cause to suspend or remove them. The Fire Department possesses a fund derived from special trusts, donations, festivals, concerts, fines for violation of fire laws, and other sources, the income of which is applied in aid of the families of deceased and disabled firemen. The report of 1857 showed an expenditure of $29,567.91 by the trustees of this fund. Among the items of this expense were 1,378 pairs of shoes and 500 tons of coal. The invested fund amounts to $45,250. Two scholarships for educating the sons of firemen in the University of New York have been endowed by Myndert Van Schick.

The city gas lights are furnished by three general companies, as follows:—

The New York Gas Light Company was incorporated, March 26, 1823, with a capital of $4,000,000. It has works on 21st and 22d Sts. from 1st Avenue to East River, and has 6 large gas holders at that station and 7 others at different parts of the city. It supplies the lamps of Grand St., and has about 130 miles of mains under the streets.

Manhattan Gas Light Company was incorporated, Feb. 26, 1820, with a capital of $4,000,000. It has 2 manufactories of gas,—one on the Hudson, at the foot of 13th St., capable of making daily 2,000,000 ft., and one on East River, at the foot of 14th St., making 400,000 ft., and when completed will be capable of making 3,000,000 ft. daily. It supplies the city 8, of Grand St., and has about 200 miles of street mains. It lights 8,000 street lamps and supplies 22,000 stores and dwellings. In 1857 it made 600,000,000 feet of gas.

Harlem Gas Light Company was incorporated, Feb. 8, 1855, with a capital of $250,000. Its works are situated upon Harlem River, at the N. extremity of 1st Avenue. There are also several minor gas works for furnishing light to hotels and private establishments.

The Croton Aqueduct is the most extensive and costly work in America for supplying a city with water; and its magnitude justifies a somewhat minute account of its origin and subsequent history.

In 1741 the General Assembly passed a law (which was continued by repeated enactments) for mending and keeping in repair the public wells and pumps of the city. In 1774 Christopher Colles contracted to erect a reservoir on Broadway, between Pearl and White Sts.; and the plan was partially carried into effect before the Revolution. In 1785 schemes were again agitated, which led to surveys and examinations; and in 1799 the Manhattan Company was formed, ostensibly to supply the city with water, but really as a banking institution, with a perpetual charter and large privileges. Its principal well was at the corner of Duane and Cross Sts., whence the water was raised by steam and distributed in pipes; but the supply was limited in amount and was of very impure quality. During the next thirty years various schemes were proposed for constructing common and artesian wells, and open conduits from the Bronx and other streams in Westchester co. and Conn., and several companies were formed; but no practical steps were taken to secure the result. An act was passed May 2, 1834, which authorized the city to supply itself with "pure and wholesome water" and to raise its stock to defray the cost. The Governor and Senate appointed Stephen Allen, R. M. Brown, Charles Du-rant, Saul Alley, T. T. Woodruff, and William W. Fox Commissioners, and for whom accurate surveys were made and various plans and estimates considered, which resulted in recommending that the water of the Croton be taken near its mouth and brought in an aqueduct to a reservoir on Murray Hill, 114 ft. above tide. This plan was approved, March 11, by the Mayor, and in April, 1835, by the people, by a vote of 11,337 to 3,263; David B. Douglass was appointed Chief Engineer; but in Oct. 1836 he was succeeded by John B. Jervis. The work was begun in the spring of 1837, and so far completed as to allow the admission of water into the distributing reservoir, July 4, 1842.

Its completion was commemorated by a grand civic celebration Oct. 14 of the same year.

This aqueduct is a covered canal, of solid stone and brick masonry, arched above and below; 8 ft. 5½ in. high, 7 ft. 5 in. wide at the widest part, and 40½ mi. in length from the dam to the distributing reservoir. It has a descent of 47.9 ft., or 13 in. to a mi., and a capacity of supplying 60,000,000 gallons of water per day. At intervals of 1 mi. are openings, through small towers, for ventilation. The flow of water is generally 2 to 3 ft. in depth, or 27,000,000 gallons a day. It is covered below the reach of frosts; and the surface works are carefully guarded by fences from injury by cattle. It passes through 16 tunnels in rock varying from 160 to 1,233 ft., with a total of 6,844 ft. In Westchester co. it crosses 25 streams, 12 to 70 ft. below the line of grade, besides numerous small brooks furnished with culverts. Harlem River is crossed near High Bridge in two 48-inch mains, 12 ft. below the level of the grade of the aqueduct, and furnished with gate chambers at each end. This bridge is of granite, 1,450 ft. long, 21 ft. wide between the parapets, 100 ft. above the surface of high tide to the crown of the arch, and 114 ft. to the top of the parapets. It rests upon 15 arches, 8 of which are of 80 ft. span and 7 of 50 ft. Upon one of the piers is inscribed the following record of the construction of the bridge:—

The aqueduct of masonry is continued from the bridge 2 mi. to the Manhattan Valley, a depression which is 4,171 ft. wide and 102 ft. deep. This is crossed by an inverted siphon of iron pipes 4,180 ft. in length, with a gate chamber at each end. The masonry is then resumed, and the aqueduct is carried 2 1/2 mi. to the receiving reservoir in the Central Park, or 88,536 ft. thus distance the Crotoning Valley, 1,900 ft. across and 50 ft. deep, on an aqueduct, with archways for three streets, each of which has 30 ft. span for carriage way and 10 ft. span on each side for foot passengers.

The receiving reservoir in the Central Park is 1,526 ft. long, 836 ft. wide, covers an area of 5,505 acres, and has a capacity of 150,000,000 gallons. The banks are of earth, 18 ft. wide at top, and rise 9 ft. above the level of the water. The pipes pass through brick vaults. A new reservoir is now under construction adjacent to the former one, and also upon Central Park. It will cover an area of 106 a res. and will be surrounded by an earth bank of five or six outline, which will constitute a broad promenade. The distributing reservoir at Murray Hill, between 40th and 42d Sts., and 5th and 6th Avenues, is a stone structure in 2 divisions, designed to contain 36 ft. or 20,000,000 gallons. Its surface is 415 ft. above mean tide.

The cost of the work was $8,575,000 including water rights and land, besides $1,800,000 for distributing pipes. The expense was within 5 per cent. of the estimate of Mr. Jervis, the Engineer. The annual interest, amounting to $655,000, is paid by direct water taxes and by some indirect taxes; and a sinking fund is provided for the final liquidation of the debt. The construction of this work has lowered the annual rates of fire insurance about 40 cts. on every $100 insured. Sing Sing Prison is supplied from the aqueduct as it passes near that place.

The amount of pipe laid in different years has been as follows, up to 1859:—

The Almshouse Department is under the charge of a Board of Ten Governors of the Almshouse, generally known as the "Ten Governors."¹ The department was organized under an act of April 6, 1849, and was modified the succeeding year. This board has charge of the Almshouse, of the Relief and Support of the Poor, of the County Lunatic Asylum, of the Nurseries for Poor and Destitute Children, the Penitentiary, and all the city prisons and houses of detention, except the sheriff's jail in Elbridge Street and the House of Refuge. All ordinary appropriations for this department must be submitted to a board consisting of the Presidents of the Boards of Aldermen and Councilmen, the Mayor and Comptroller.² If this board approves, it reports to the view of ascertaining its topography minutely, the better to decide upon future reservoirs or other structures as they may be found necessary. The ridge line or watershed inclosing the valley above the dam is 100 mi. in length. The stream is 39 mi. in length, and its tributaries 136 mi. The total area of the valley is 352 square mi.; and within it are 31 natural lakes and ponds, of which are available as reservoirs, and 16 of which have been minutely surveyed and estimated.

The revenues from water rents from Oct. 5, 1842, to Dec. 31, 1858, have amounted to $6,725,947.98; and the amount has increased from year to year,—except in 1851 and 1856, when it fell off.

The public sewers connected with this department, since Feb. 6, 1846, have cost an expenditure of $163,527.13; and the amount of $248,572.00 has been collected from permits to connect premises with the public sewers. The length of sewers constructed by this department since its organization in 1849 has been 92 mi. 1,340 ft.

The Governors of the Almshouse are elected by single ballot, one being voted for and two elected. This places the board above the control of party politics.

Public measures for the relief of the poor are among the first necessities of a civilized government; and one of the earliest statutes of the General Assembly in 1685 was for this object. In 1699 a law was passed for the relief of the poor at their homes; and about 1744 the first almshouse was built, on the present site of the City Hall. In 1795 a lottery of £10,000 was granted for a new almshouse, and the large brick building on the Park near Chambers St. (burned in 1834) was erected. In 1811 a tract on the East River, at the foot of 29th St., was bought; and the first stone was laid Aug. 1, 1811. The present main edifice at Bellevue Hospital was opened April 22, 1816, as a hospital, penitentiary, and almshouse, at a cost of $421,109. The management was for many years intrusted to five commissioners appointed by the Common Council. In 1822 the average number of paupers was 1,547; and the cost of the establishment for several years was as follows:—

In 1817.....	$90,886	In 1820.....	$81,420
" 1819.....	105,509	" 1822.....	82,200

The law then required paupers to be returned to the town where they had gained residence; but this was often difficult, and vessels then, as since, often landed paupers in or near the city from distant places. In 1822 two vessels put about 100 paupers on shore a few miles from the city, and brought on their baggage. Efforts were made to remedy these abuses; but it was found difficult in a large population to distinguish those coming into the city liable to public charge, until they applied for relief in the early winter months.—See, Doc. No. 86, 1824.

Meanwhile the affairs of the institutions at Bellevue became very corrupt and mercenary, but a malignant fever, which broke out in 1825 and committed frightful ravages in the filthy wards and leathsome cells, forced the question of reform upon the public. In 1845 the Almshouse was placed under the care of a single commissioner, and in 1849 the present system of supervision went into operation.

Blackwells Island was bought in 1828, and Randall's Island in 1835. In 1848 the Almshouse was completed on the former; and the whole of both islands is now devoted to objects of charity and reform, Randall's Island being in part under the care of the Governors of the Almshouse and in part under the Trustees of the House of Refuge.

Upon Blackwells Island, commencing at the s. end, are located respectively the Small Fox Hospital, the Penitentiary, Island Hospital, female and male Almshouses, Workhouse, and Lunatic Asylum. Upon Wards Island is the Potters' Field, under the charge of the Ten Governors; and upon Randall's Island are the extensive nurseries and hospitals for poor children. Bellevue Hospital, the largest in the city, remains under the charge of the Governors as a fever, surgical, and general hospital. The Colored Orphan Asylum, Colored Home, four city prisons, and the out-door poor, are also under the care of this department. A short sketch of these several charges is essential to a full knowledge of the city.

Bellevue Hospital is 350 ft. long, the center portion 5 stories high and the wings 4 stories. Upon each story are verandas and outside stairways of iron. Its arrangements throughout are ample and judicious, and it can accommodate 1,250 patients. It has a clinical theater fitted up for the accommodation of large classes of students. In 1858 the number of prescriptions was 145,503; and the number of births is about 350 annually.

The results of its operation during 10 years have been as follows:—

The Small Fox Hospital, Blackwells Island, was commenced April 1, 1854, and was finished in the same year. It is built in the English gothic style, of stone quarried upon the island. It is 104 ft. by 44, 3 stories high, and cost $20,000. It is not designed for the treatment of paupers only, but is fitted up with express reference to receiving persons, able and willing to pay for their treatment, and where, secluded from friends to whom they might impart their disease, they may receive every attention that science and the most attentive nursing can bestow. It is the only hospital of the kind in or near the city, and takes the place of some old wooden buildings previously erected on the island.

Its statistics have been as follows:—

The Penitentiary, opposite 55th St., is built of brown stone and rubble masonry. It consists of a middle building, 65 by 70 ft., and two wings, each 50 by 200 ft., making the whole length of the building 465 ft. A new wing was finished in 1857; and another is needed for the accommodation of the inmates. The total number of cells is 1,736. The convicts are employed on occasion requires in quarrying and dressing stone for buildings upon the island, and as blacksmiths, shoemakers, carpenters, weavers, cooper, painters, wheelwrights, &c. This establishment was finished in 1848,—since which time there have been admitted and discharged the following numbers:—

Much the largest number of convicts are received from the police courts; over a third are females, and a very large proportion are foreigners. Over half are committed for petty larceny; and the next largest number for assault and battery. The term of sentence is usually 1, 2, or 4 months, and but very few are sentenced to 1 year and upward. The longest term of years reported in 1858 was 10, and this in only a single instance.

The Island Hospital, Blackwells Island, was first erected in 1848, under the name of the "Island Hospital." Its name was changed Dec. 13, 1857. The building was found to be constructed in a most reckless and careless manner, and as a public building was a reproach to any city. It continued in use, however, until destroyed by fire, Feb. 13, 1858. At the time-of the fire-it contained 600 inmates; but they were all removed without loss of life. In Feb. 1858, a most humane regulation was adopted by which the suffering poor are relieved without being committed as vagrants. The building now in the process of erection to supply the place of the former is 2½ stories high, includes 14 wards and accommodations for 744 patients. As on other buildings on the island, convict and workhouse labor is largely employed in the erection. The statistics of the hospital have been as follows:—

Almshouses.—Of these there are two separate and similar structures, 150 ft. apart, entirely distinct in their arrangements, and each devoted to one sex only. They are each composed of a central building 30 ft. square, 57 ft. high to the roof, and 87 ft. to the top of the cupola, and two wings, each 60 by 30 ft. and 40 ft. to the roof. They are devoted to the care of the aged and infirm, and present the following result of operations:—

Less than one-fourth of the whole number thus thrown upon the charities of the city are of native birth; and more than one-half are females. The present almshouses have been in use since 1848.

Workhouse.—This establishment was authorized by act of April 11, 1847, and grew out of a recommendation of the Prison Association of New York, in which the Society for Improving the Condition of the Poor concurred. A plan for buildings was adopted the succeeding season, and work was begun Oct. 5, 1849. The N. wing, 3 stories high, has 150 rooms, opening upon galleries around a common central hall, and capable of lodging 600 persons. At the S. end is a cross wing 4 stories high, containing work-shops. A central building contains the residence of the Superintendent, the kitchen, storerooms, offices, chapel, and a E. wing, for females, is constructed upon the plan and of the size of the N. wing. This establishment was designed for those able to work and who, not finding means of support, were willing to be committed, as well as such paupers, vagrants, and others as might be deemed fit subjects for employment. The males are usually kept employed as circumstanced permit, in quarrying and grading, and as carpenters, coopers, wheelwrights, painters, boat builders, blacksmiths, tin-smiths, shoemakers, and tailors. The females are employed in knitting, sewing, and other light occupations. This institution has scarcely received the care of the Government, and of all the charities under the care of the Government is, perhaps, the only one that might possibly be dispensed with. It is found unpracticable to keep all hired, probably employed, and the name of "workhouse" loses its force when coupled with the idea of leisure hours, comfortable quarters, and sufficient food.

Its statistics have been as follows:—

YEARS.	Admitted.	Discharged.	Remain- ing.	Dead.
1849	757	504	328	28
1851	667	501	286	8

1857	4,317	3,669	1,701	1
1858	4,194	4,585	1,210	40

The number discharged does not include those escaped or sent to other institutions.

The Lunatic Asylum, near the S. end of Blackwells Island, consists of an octagonal building 80 ft. in diameter and 50 ft. high, with a cupola and two wings at right angles to each other, each 245 ft. long. One wing is devoted to either sex; and the arrangement of the wards admits of classification. Apart from this, on the E. side of the island, is a building of some 30 by 90 ft. and 43 ft. high, with a veranda on each side, which is exclusively devoted to the noisy and violent class, where they cannot disturb the more quiet. This structure is named "The Lodge," and, for obvious reasons, is not usually open to visitors. The Lunatic Asylum proper was begun in the spring of 1835, and after some months of suspension, the work was resumed in 1837, and the W. wing was finished June 10, 1839. The S. wing was built in 1847; and this, with "The Lodge," was finished in 1848. The statistics during 10 years have been as follows:—

This institution is admirably managed, but the proportion of recoveries is necessarily less than in those asylums in which only recent cases are admitted and the patients discharged when there is no longer a hope of recovery. This is, in one sense, an asylum of the incurable.

The Path's Field, on Randalls Island, was placed under the charge of the Governors of the Almshouse June 19, 1850; but its location and quality of soil were made a subject of complaint, and it was repeatedly presented by grand juries. A tract of 69 acres was purchased on Wards Island, and brought into use in June, 1852, since which time the former field has not been used. About 2,500 internments are made annually at the public charge.

The Nursery and Nursery Hospitals on Randalls Island consist of about a dozen detached buildings, not arranged on any systematic plan. The grounds are inclosed and of ample extent; and a farm is connected with the institution, which goes far toward furnishing it with culinary vegetables. The institution is provided with ample schools and playgrounds. The numbers remaining here at the beginning of 1859 were 88 men, 96 women, 833 boys, and 333 girls. The children are indentured, given for adoption, or returned to friends, as circumstances warrant.

The Colored Orphan Asylum was begun in the fall of 1836, and was opened, April 16, 1838. It is situated on 5th Avenue, between 43d and 44th Sts., and is under the immediate charge of lady managers, who report to and receive funds from the Governors of the Almshouse Department. The numbers remaining at the close of the several years since, under this arrangement, have been as follows:—

1851	201	1856	234
1852	207	1857	225
1853	219	1858	219

In 22 years it has received in the aggregate 950 colored orphans. This institution is partially supported by benevolent contributions and partially by occasional appropriations from the State.

The Colored Home, on 1st Avenue, between 64th and 65th Sts., has 11 lots of ground, on which substantial buildings are erected. It was originally intended as a House of Industry. In Oct. 1858, the foundations of a new building were laid, 90 ft. by 40, with a corridor from 6 to 12 ft. wide on the S. side, extending from each wing of the present building nearly 120 ft., so that access may be had from all parts of the house without exposure to the weather. It contains departments for male and female hospitals, home for the aged and infirm, schools, and lyceum and nursery accommodations. This is also under the immediate care of lady managers, and is sustained by contributions, legacies, and grants from the State. In point of order and neatness it equals any hospital in the city. The male hospital usually has about 30 inmates, the female hospital 75, the lying-in department 40 and the home of the aged 150. The average number of births is about 90 annually.

The City Prison—four in number, under charge of the Governors—are situated as follows:—

The Hills of Justice, or "Tombs," is situated on Center St. between Leonard and Franklin. A portion is occupied by court-rooms and prisons for persons awaiting sentence. The house

The Commissioners of Emigration were incorp. by an act of May 7, 1847, and consist of 6 commissioners appointed by the Governor of the State, and of the Mayors of New York and Brooklyn, and the Presidents of the German Society and the Irish Emigrant Society. They have charge of the Marine Hospital at Quarantine, the Emigrant Depot at Castle Garden, and numerous buildings on Wards Island for the accommodation of the sick.

The Law Department is under a chief officer called the "Counsel to the Corporation," elected for three years. He has charge of all the law business in which the city is interested, when so ordered by the corporation, and institutes all legal proceedings necessary for the opening and widening of streets. He draws all leases, deeds, and other papers connected with the finances of the city. This department has a Bureau of Corporation Attorney, and another of Public Administrator.

The City Inspector's Department is under a chief officer styled the City Inspector, who has cognizance of all matters affecting the public health, pursuant to the ordinances of the Common Council and the lawful requirements of the Commissioners of Health and of the Board of Health. It has a Bureau of Sanitary Inspection and Street Cleaning, of Records and Statistics, and of Superintendent of Markets. Coroners report to this department all inquests made by them. The Inspector is required to report all births, marriages, and deaths within the city. He also appoints 2 Inspectors and Sealers of Weights and Measures, who hold office upon the same terms as Chiefs of Bureaus. One Street Inspector is appointed to each of the 22 wards, 1 clerk to each of the 11 markets, and a keeper and assistant to each of the corporation yards.

of detention adjacent is an isolated building, containing 148 cells.

The Jefferson Market Prison, at the corner of Greenwich St. and 6th Avenue, was enlarged in 1856, and 36 new cells were built.

The Essex Market Prison, at the corner of Grand and Ludlow Sts., was completed in 1857.

The Prison at Yorkville was abolished in March, 1856; but it has since been revived.

The commitments during the year 1858 were as follows:—

Castle Garden, (formerly Castle Clinton), at the lower point of the Battery, on the Hudson, was granted by the corporation of the city to the United States, in May, 1807, for the purpose of erecting a fortification. The present structure was built soon after; but the foundations were found not sufficiently strong for heavy ordnance, and the site was re-conveyed to the corporation under an act of Congress passed March 30, 1822. The building was subsequently used for the public reception of distinguished strangers, and for concerts, operas, public meetings, the annual fairs of the American Institute, and similar purposes, until leased in 1856 to the Commissioners of Emigration as a landing place for emigrants.

The Emigrant Refuge and Hospital, upon Wards Island, consists of several large buildings for hospitals, nurseries, and other purposes, located upon a farm of 150 acres. The total number of emigrants who have arrived in the port of New York since 1849 has been 2,486,463, distributed as follows:—

1847.....	12,001	1851.....	289,515	1856.....	136,234

The greater number of these proceed to their destination without expense to the Commissioners.

The Marine Hospital is noticed under Richmond County, See page 506.

§ The Markets of New York are owned by the city, and leased in small portions to occupants. They are as follows:—
Catharine—Catharine St., East River.
Center—Grand and Center Sts.
Clinton—Washington and Canal Sts.
Essex—Grand and Ludlow Sts.
Friedman—Old Slip, East River.
Fulton—Fulton St., East River.
Gouverneur—Water, corner of Gouverneur St.
Jefferson—Sixth Avenue, corner of Greenwich Avenue.
Tomplins—Third Avenue and Sixth St. (now building of it.)
Vanoy—Second and Houston Sts.
Washington—Fulton St., Hudson River.

The principal market for wholesale is the Washington Market; and thither most of the teams from the surrounding country resort for the sale of produce. The principal fish market is adjacent to Fulton Market, where facilities are provided for unloading fishing vessels. The immense supply of animal food required by the population of New York has led to enormous investments of capital for the production, and corresponding arrangements for the bringing forward, of this class of provisions. Cattle are now seldom driven to market on foot. Illinois is the greatest beef producing State in the Union, and its market cattle are brought by a regular steamer on the way only 3 or 4 times to rest and feed. About 512,000,000 are annually expended by New York and its suburbs for beef alone. The measures taken for supplying the city with fish, oysters and game are correspondingly great, and have been in these several departments led to organized systems for improving their production with great regularity and in quantities proportioned to the demand.

The markets for live stock in New York are provided entirely by individual enterprise, and the principal ones are now on 14th St. and 5th Avenue. The great market days are Tuesdays and Wednesdays; and since supplies can reach the city at all seasons with equal facility, the amount of stock is distributed throughout the year in a proportion nearly uniform. This market occupies 14 acres, and has 130 yards, and with its stalls, can accommodate 5,000 headlocks, and an equal number of sheep and calves. The largest hog markets are at the foot of 27th St. There are 2 other market places,—one on 6th St. and 2d Avenue, and one in Robinson St., where nearly 400,000 sheep have been sold, besides cows and calves. There are also extensive markets at Bergen Hill.

of the State, with 5 justices, the Superior Court, with a chief justice and 5 justices, the Court of Common Pleas, with 3 justices, the Marine Court, with 3 justices, and the Surrogate's Court. The criminal courts consist of a Court of Oyer and Terminer, held by a justice of the Supreme Court, a Court of General Sessions, held by the Recorder or city judge, Courts of Special Sessions, held by the police justices, 4 Police Courts, and 6 Justices' or District Courts.

The Burials from the city are regulated by law; and none can take place without a certificate from the Inspector's Department, and a record of the time, cause, and circumstances of the death, as far as can be ascertained.¹

The Board of Health consists of the Mayor and Common Council. The Mayor is President. The Mayor, the Presidents of the two branches of the Common Council, the Health Officer, the Resident Physician, the Health Commissioner, and the City Inspectors, are constituted a Board of Commissioners, who render advice to the Board of Health. The Health Officer is appointed by the Governor and Senate. The Mayor, with the advice of the Board of Aldermen, appoints an Inspector of Vessels. It is the duty of the Board of Health to watch over the health of the city and port, and conduct and attend to the business of the Quarantine establishment.²

Ferries are established from New York to Brooklyn, Jersey City, the islands, and to numerous points around the harbor. Up to 1810 the ferry boats were propelled by horse and man power; but during that year steam was introduced, and now it is exclusively used on all important routes. A few of the islands are reached only by row boats.³

The facilities for passing from one point to another in the city are numerous, cheap, and con-

The number of animals sold during 5 years from the several States sending to this market, in 1858, was as follows:—

The number of bullocks from the several States sending to this market, in 1858, was as follows:—

	No.	Weekly Average.	No.	Weekly Average.
New York	30,980	595	Virginia	895	17
Pennsylvania	1,664	45	Connecticut	590	11

Illinois	52,818	1,015	Iowa	2,724	52
Kentucky	9,409	181	Michigan	1,682	32

The mode of reaching market was as follows:—

Bullocks, by Harlem R. R.	10,558
" Hudson River R. R.	50,916
" New York & Erie R. R.	93,829
" on foot	2,863
Swine, by New York & Erie R. R.	201,671

The above statistics do not include barreled beef and pork, and animals slaughtered elsewhere and sent thither for sale. In some seasons over 3,000 sheep are slaughtered per week, at Albany, for the New York market; and the amount from other places is very large.

The Burial Place of New York were originally around the churches; and in 1822 there were 22 places of interment, of the City Hall. The practice was found to be offensive to the senses and prejudicial to the public health, and was accordingly prohibited in the older parts of the city. The plan of marble cemeteries within the city was proposed, and two were constructed between 2d and 3d Sts. and the Bowery and 2d Av. These contained 224 and 156 vaults, respectively, were built entirely of stone, and intended to receive such a large number of bodies. The plan was found unsuccessful, and soon after was superseded by that of rural cemeteries. This appropriate custom, introduced at Greenwood in 1842, has led to the laying out of many similar grounds, each rivaling the other in beauty of location and in plans for the adornment of the resting places of the dead. The principal of these are Greenwood, Cypress Hills, Evergreen, Mount Olivet, Calvary, Citizens' Union, Friends, Shearith Israel, and Washington, on Long Island; Trinity, on New York Island; Beekwood, at New Rochelle, Dale, at Sing Sing; Oak Hill, at Nyack; and Maplehurst, in Westchester co.; and New York Bay and others, in New Jersey. The Pottery Field belonging to the city is on Wards Island. By an ordinance of Feb. 3, 1851, no burials are allowed, of 86th St.; and Trinity Church Cemetery, embracing 27,940 acres between the Hudson and 10th Av. and 153d and 155th Sts., is the principal one now in use on the island. It was purchased in 1842.

² Pestilence has on several occasions committed frightful ravages among the population of the city. Among these visitations the following are worthy of record:—

1792.—A pestilence, probably yellow fever, was brought from St. Thomas, of which 500 died up to Sept. and 70 more during the first week of that month, out of a population of 6,000 to 7,000.

1792.—In autumn an infectious fever prevailed, of which 70 died in a few weeks.

1743.—A "bilious plague" broke out, of which 217 died in one season. It was confined to swampy ground. This is the first official report on mortality to the Mayor.

1745.—Malignant yellow fever prevailed.

1747.—The bilious plague re-appeared.

1791.—The yellow fever prevailed, of which 200 died.

1791.—Yellow fever again prevailed, occasioning much alarm,—though only 29 to 30 died.

1795.—The yellow fever prevailed, carrying off 730, of whom 500 were foreigners recently arrived.

1796.—A malignant fever prevailed, from filling in of docks, of which 70 died.

1797.—The yellow fever occasioned 45 deaths.

1798.—Mortifiable for its pestilence,—probably yellow fever,—which appeared in New York in the first week in August, and proved fatal to 2,086 persons, of whom 1,110 were men, 589 women, and 885 children.

1799.—Yellow fever again prevailed, but much less aggravated.

1801.—About 100 died of yellow fever.

1802.—From 600 to 700 died in New York of yellow fever. Since this year regular statistics of mortality for the city are preserved for each year, from which it appears that yellow fever in 1805 destroyed 270, and in 1822, 1093, and that cholera destroyed 3,513 in 1832; 971 in 1834; 5,671 in 1849; and 374 in 1852. The mortality tables show during the 50 years ending with 1853 a total of 254,698 deaths.

³ The ferries running to and from New York are under the exclusive jurisdiction of the corporation, and derive their authority by lease, usually for a term of years. The following is a summary of those now running:—

Staten Island Ferry, from Whitehall St. to Quarantine, Clifton, and Stapleton. Also extends to West Brighton, Factory Village, and Fort Richmond. It is leased to the Staten Island & New York Ferry Co. until 1865, at an annual rent of $5,100.

Hamilton Avenue Ferry, from Whitehall St. to Hamilton Av., Brooklyn, 1,765 yards in length, is leased to the Union Ferry Co. until 1861.

South Ferry, from Whitehall St. to Atlantic St. and Long Island Rail Road, Brooklyn, 1,476 yards in length, is leased to the Union Ferry Co.

Wall Street Ferry, from Wall St. to Montague Place, Brooklyn, 1,350 yards in length, belongs to the Union Ferry Co., and is leased until 1862, at an annual rent of $5,000.

Fulton Street Ferry, from Fulton St. to Fulton St., Brooklyn, 730 yards, belongs to the Fulton & Union Ferry Co., and, including the South and Hamilton Avenue Ferries, rents for $5,000. It is leased until 1861.

Park Ship Ferry, from Park Ship, foot of Ferry Street, to South 5th Street, Williamsburgh, 2,800 yds., is leased to J. V. Mersevole & Co. until 1869, at an annual rent of $21,000.

venient, and the establishment of all of them is so recent as to be within the memory of every adult citizen. They consist of 5 city rail roads and 29 lines of omnibuses.¹ Since the introduction of rail roads and the multiplication of steam ferries and steamboat routes, a large number of persons transacting business in the city have been enabled to provide residences in the country adjacent, where they can enjoy the comforts and luxuries of a rural home without a sacrifice of business interests. A large proportion of the inhabitants of Brooklyn, and great numbers residing within 30 mi. of the city, on Long Island and Staten Island and in the adjacent parts of Westchester county and New Jersey, are in this manner closely identified with the business of the city, and might in one sense be included in its population. New York and its immediate suburbs are thus so united in interests that they virtually constitute one great metropolis, and would probably at this time number, within a radius of 10 mi. from the City Hall, about a million and a quarter of inhabitants.²

The institutions of New York designed to meet the intellectual and social wants of the people in extent and variety have no equals in America; and many of them surpass all similar institutions in the world. These institutions, noticed under special heads, are devoted to education, both general and special, to benevolent objects in various forms, to religion and morality, to intellectual culture, and to the promotion of the useful and fine arts. They do not strictly all belong to the city, nor do they adequately represent the wants of the city population. Many of the schools and other institutions, from their peculiarities and excellence, attract great numbers from abroad; and, on the other hand, a great number of educational institutions in the adjoining counties depend for support almost entirely upon city patronage. A reciprocity of interests between city and country is thus kept up in intellectual as well as in business affairs.

The Public School System of New York now constitutes one of the most important interests of the city, both in regard to its effect upon the social position of the people and in the amount of its annual expenditures. There were reported, at the close of 1858, a free academy³ for the complete collegiate education of boys, 4 normal schools for the instruction of teachers, 57 ward schools, including 51 grammar schools for boys, 48 grammar schools for girls, and 55 primary departments for both sexes; 35 primary schools, 42 evening schools, of which 23 are for males and Roosevelt Street Ferry, from Roosevelt Street to Bridge Street, Brooklyn, 1,450 yds., is leased to the Union Ferry Co. until 1867, at $2,000 per annum.

Catharine Street Ferry, from Catharine Street to Main Street, Brooklyn, 777 yds., is leased to the Union Ferry Co. until 1863, at $16,000 per annum.

Division Avenue Ferry extends from Grand Street to South 7th Street, Williamsburgh.

Houston Street Ferry, from Houston Street to Grand Street, Williamsburgh, 700 yds., is leased to the Houston Street Ferry Co. until 1863, at $6,500 per annum.

Tenth Street Ferry, from Tenth Street to Green Point, is leased until 1875, at $250 per annum.

Twenty-Third Street Ferry, from 23d Street to Green Point, is leased until 1863, at $100 per annum.

Hunters Point Ferry, from 34th Street to Hunters Point, Queens co., is leased to A. W. Winants until 1867, at $100 per annum.

Blackwell's Island Ferry extends from 61st Street to Blackwell's Island.

Hellgate Ferry, from 86th Street to Astoria, Queens co., is leased to S. A. Halsey until 1867, at $40 per annum.

Wards Island Ferry extends from 10th Street to Wards Island.

Randalls Island Ferry extends from 122d Street to the Institutions under the charge of the Ten Governors, and from 117th Street to the House of Refuge.

Jersey City Ferry, from Cortland Street to Jersey City, 1 mile, is leased to the Jersey City Ferry Co. until 1866, at $5,000 per annum.

Bayley Street Ferry, from Barclay Street to Hoboken, N. J., is leased to J. C. & R. L. Stevens until 1865, at $100 per annum.

Canal Street Ferry, from Canal Street to Hoboken, N. J., is leased to J. C. & R. L. Stevens until 1865, at $400 per annum.

Christopher Street Ferry, from Christopher Street to Hoboken, N. J., is leased to J. C. & R. L. Stevens until 1862, at $350 per annum.

Woolwich Ferry extends from 42d Street to Woolhaken, N. J. Elysian Field Ferry extends from 19th Street to Elysian Fields, N. J.

The Union Ferry Co. owned on the 1st of Nov. 1858, eighteen boats, valued at $48,800.

Cars run at frequent intervals and use horse-power. Fare, uniformly 5 cts.

Second Avenue extends from Peck Slip, through Pearl, Clatham, Bowery, Grand, and Chrystie Streets and 2d Avenue, to 23d Street; thence to 42d Street. Returns through 2d Avenue, 23d Street, 1st Avenue, Allen and Grand Streets, Bowery, Clatham, Oliver, and South Streets.

Third Avenue extends through Park Row, Clatham, Bowery, and 3d Avenue, to 61st Street, Yorkville.

New York & Harlem R. R. extends through Park Row, Center, Broome, and Bowery Streets, to 4th Avenue, and up to 42d Street, where locomotive-trains stop.

North Avenue extends through Vesey, Church, Chambers, W. Broadway, Canal, Varick, and Carmine Streets, and 6th Avenue, to 44th Street.

Eighth Avenue extends through Vesey, Church, Chambers, W. Broadway, Canal, and Hudson Streets and 8th Avenue to W. 5th Street.

Ninth Avenue, track laid but not used.

The Hudson River R. R. and New Haven R. R. run no city cars.

The omnibuses all have the names of their routes painted upon the outside. The rates of fare are 15c. or 6cts., which is paid without regard to distance traveled up or within them. Licenses are granted annually; and in 1858, 429 stage licenses were taken at $20, and 5 out of town lines, at 50 per stage, amounting in the aggregate to $10,255. All other conveyances for public hire are also licensed, the number in 1858 being hacks, 402, and special hacks, 329.

² Most of the suburban districts of New York within this State are particularly noteworthy in this work in the counties and towns in which they are located. Jersey City, which has grown up within a few years, had, in 1855, 21,745 inhabitants. It is the terminus of the New Jersey R. R., connecting with lines S. and W., and the Union R. R., connecting with the New York & Erie and the Northern New Jersey R. R. It is the landing place of the Canal steamers, the seat of important manufactures, and the residence of multitudes doing business in New York City. Hoboken City is also a place of considerable importance from its proximity to the city. It had, in 1855, 6,725 inhabitants. Hudson City, in the rear of these, had 3,322 inhabitants; and numerous other places along the Hudson in N. J. are receiving attention as desirable places for homes.

19 for females, and 11 corporate schools.¹ In the same year there were employed 1,729 teachers, —of whom 440 were males and 1,289 were females.

The Public Schools are managed by a Board of Education, consisting of two commissioners from each ward. The local affairs of each ward are managed by local Boards of Trustees. The present system was organized under an act of 1812; but it has been modified by various acts since. In 1853 the Public School Society was dissolved and the schools under its control were merged in the ward schools of the city. The Board of Education distributes its duties among committees, and appoints a City Superintendent to exercise a general supervision over the schools.²

Academies and Colleges. There are in the city 3 academic institutions, 2 colleges, 4 medical colleges, 2 theological schools, and a great number of schools for perfecting students in special branches of education.³ In addition to the schools sharing in the distribution of the school fund, there are a great number of mission, charity, parish, denominational, and private schools, of

1,000 pupils. The cost of the grounds, buildings, furniture, apparatus, and library was $100,501.48; and the cost of maintenance to Jan. 1, 1859, was $3,238.17. The students and the graduates in each year have been as follows:—

Students.....	201	285	383	498	536
Graduates.....	17

Graduates.....	20	32	20	21	25

Applicants for admission to this school must reside in the city, be 14 years of age, and must have been students in the common schools 12 months, and must sustain an examination in the ordinary English studies. The school has a 5 years' course of study, and its graduates receive the degree of A.B. Several medals and money prizes have been endowed, and societies of students and alumni have been formed.

¹ The number of pupils in 1858 was as follows:—

Evening schools, about,	20,000

² The "Free School Society," afterward the "Public School Society," was founded in June, 1805, and its first school was opened May 17, 1806. During its long career this honored society displaced millions of dollars of public money, afforded education to 600,000 children, and fitted 1,200 teachers at its normal schools. It twice tendered its property to the city authorities to satisfy a popular objection that so much property should not be managed by a corporation; but in both instances the tender was declined. After the society was dissolved, its books and papers were deposited with the New York Historical Society. Its real estate used for school purposes consisted of 15 public school-houses, a trustees' hall on Grand street, and a workshop on Crosby street.—Dissolution of Pub. School Soc. and Rep. of Com. p. 7.

The 11 corporate schools share in the public money, but are in no sense under the care of the Board. The expenses of the public schools in 1858 were as follows:—

Salaries of teachers and painters.....	$ 556,145.93
New school-houses, repairs, purchase of new sites, &c.....	238,819.43
Fuel.....	25,217.08

³ The academies subject to the visitation of the Regents are—The Deaf and Dumb Institution, in corp. April 15, 1839. Grammar School of Columbia College, incorp. April 7, 1838. New York Free Academy, incorp. Oct. 31, 1840.

Butlers Female Institute, incorp. Jan. 25, 1840. Columbia College was chartered as "King's College" Oct. 31, 1754, and under the Colonial Government was aided by a lottery, grants of lands, and liberal private donations from England. A plot of ground between Murray, Barclay, Church, and Chapel streets was given by Trinity Church for the college site, and the corner stone was laid July 25, 1756. The building was finished in 1760, and during the Revolution it was used for a hospital. In 1792 the trustees established a medical school, and sustained it until 1813. The college remained in its first location until the premises were greatly enhanced in value by the growth of the city and the spread of commercial establishments around and beyond it. An act was passed March 19, 1857, authorizing the purchase of another site for college purposes, in accordance with which the grounds at the foot of Park Place were sold for $596,650, the college still retaining many lots on Barclay street, Park Place, Murray street, and College Place, which are rented for long periods, and whose prospective value it is impossible to estimate. The premises lately owned by the Trustees of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum on 4th street, near 4th Avenue, were purchased, with 4 other lots, for $75,366.10, and fitted up at a total cost of $114,336.01. This change is understood to be only a temporary one, the ultimate intention being to locate on the premises of the Botanical Garden, between 47th and 51st streets, on 5th Avenue. This garden, originally embracing about 20 acres, was laid out by Dr. David Hosack, early in the present century, for the introduction of exotic plants, experiments in agriculture and horticulture, and the promotion of science. The Governor, in his message of 1806, commended the object as worthy of public aid. In 1810 a memorial from the corporation of New York, the County and State Medical Society, and the Governors of the New York Hospital was addressed to the Legislature, in pursuance of which the Garden was purchased for $73,000, upon the appraisal of 3 commissioners, and placed in charge of the Regents of the University. The latter placed it in the hands of the Trustees of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, April 1, 1811. In 1814 it was granted by the legislature to Columbia College, upon the condition that within 12 years the College should be removed thither; but in 1819 this condition was rescinded, and $10,000 was given to the College to aid in extending the premises upon the original location. These grounds have also increased greatly in value, and the College is at this moment perhaps the wealthiest in the Union, with this important feature; that its wealth is not coupled with like some conditions and provisions, but left free to the discretion of its trustees. A grammar school has been many years connected with the College.

The University of the City of New York, located on the e. side of Washington square, occupies a fine marble building in the English collegiate style of architecture. It is 100 by 200 ft. on the ground; and besides the portion occupied by the College, it contains rooms leased to societies, artists, and professional persons. This College grew out of a discussion with regard to a University on a more extended plan than any in the Union. A convention of literary and scientific gentlemen was held in the fall of 1839, and in that year a subscription was opened to raise $100,000 for the establishment of a University. An unhappy controversy arising directly upon the appointment of a chancellor, the institution did not get into the prominence to which it aspired. Its course of study is essentially the same as that of other American colleges.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons is located on 23d St. and 4th Avenue. The site and grounds are leased with privilege of purchase, and funds derived from the proceeds of the sale of the building on Crosby st., formerly owned by it, have been raised to effect the purchase. The edifice now used is 75 by 100 ft., and is valued at $90,000. The first story is leased for stores. The College was incorp. by the Regents in 1807, by virtue of an act passed March 21, 1791. Lectures were first held in 1807-08. The Medical Department of Columbia College was merged in this Nov. 1, 1853. The College has 2 courses of lectures annually, and a library of 1,200 volumes.

The University Medical College, formed under an act of Feb. 11, 1837, as a branch of the University of New York, is located on 14th St. between Irving Place and 3d Avenue. The building is 80 by 103 ft., 4 stories in front and 5 in rear, and is valued at $50,000. Its charter provides that 5 students of the Free Academy shall be admitted free of charge except the matriculation fee. Its library numbers 5,000 volumes, and its museum is valued at $25,000. Two courses of lectures are delivered annually.

The New York Medical College, located on E. 12th St., was incorp. in 1850. The college building is 60 by 120 ft., and is valued at $50,000. It has a 5 months' course of lectures annually. Ten students are admitted upon payment of $20 and matriculation fee.

The Metropolitan Medical College, located at 68 E. Broadway, which no reports are made collectively to the public. Many of these have special courses of study, or are limited to objects not embraced in a general plan of education. Several of these are numerously attended; and in some the extent of the course of study is equal to that in our colleges.¹

About 250 periodicals, embracing daily, tri-weekly, semi-weekly, weekly, semi-monthly, monthly, and quarterly, are issued in the city of New York, counting under one title the several editions issued from the same press, unless bearing different names.²

was incorp. March 28, 1857. It has 2 courses of lectures annually.

The New York Preparatory School of Medicine, incorp. April 13, 1879 has not been fully organized. Its charter allows it to confer the degree of Bachelor of Medicine upon persons of not less than 19 years of age, after sustaining an examination in the studies embraced in its course, and places it under the visitation of the Regents.

The Coll. of Pharmacy, chartered April 25, 1831, has rooms in the New York Medical College, at which lectures are delivered 4 months annually, on Chemistry, Materia Medica, and Botany, and diplomas are given. By an act of March 11, 1879, a diploma from this college is necessary for a person not otherwise duly qualified to act as an apothecary in the city.

The New York County Medical Society was formed July 12, 1840, and now numbers 140 members.

The Pathological Society for improvement in medical practice meets semi-monthly.

The Academy of Medicine was formed in 1817 and incorp. in 1851. It meets monthly at the University, and sends 5 representatives to the State Medical Society. There are several other medical and surgical societies in various parts of the city.

The General Theological Seminary of the Presb. E. Church of the U. S. was established at New Haven in 1819 and removed to this city in 1822. It was incorp. April 5, 1822, and is well endowed. Its library numbers over 12,000 volumes. It occupies 2 handsome stone buildings, on E 59th St., on 20th St., between 9th and 10th Avenues. Its trustees consist of the Bishops of the U. S., and others appointed in proportion to moneys granted to the seminary.

The Union Theological Seminary (Presb.) was founded in 1826, and incorp. March 27, 1839. It is located in Waverly Place, on 8th St., and near Washington Square. It has a library of 16,000 volumes. Its Board of Trustees are clergyman and laymen; an equal number of each, elected for 4 years.

Commended colleges, writings, books, and studies for instruction in the fine arts, are numerous in the city. The School of Design at the Cooper Union is eminent among these for the extent of its facilities and the numbers that avail themselves of them. Music, drawing, and painting are carefully taught in many of the city schools; and the facilities at the Fine Arts Academy for these studies are superior to those in most other institutions.

The Protestant Episcopal Public School was founded in 1740, and has continued until the present time. At some future time it will be largely aided by a bequest made Sept. 20, 1790, by Dr. John Baker, who, having no heirs, devised his country seat near 80th St., on the East River, embracing 46 acres, for a charity school. With a prudent Foresee, the estate preserved the property from sale until after the death of 9 persons then living; and the dense part of the city has already approached the premises. An act passed April 16, 1870, authorized the sale of portions, but no benefit has hitherto been received. In April, 1869, 5 of the 9 lives were existing.

The following are the principal of the Roman Catholic schools:—

The College of St. Francis Xavier, 29 W 15th St., is an institution under the care of 10 Jesuit priests.

Convent of the Most Holy Redeemer, on 54 St., is under the care of 7 priests of the Order of Redemptorists.

St. Vincent's Academy, 44 2d St., is under the care of the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

Academy of the Holy Infants, in Manhattanville, and the Carew and Academy of the Sacred Heart, in Manhattanville, are under the charge of the Ladies of the Sacred Heart; the latter has 180 pupils. An institution of the same name at 49 W. 17th St., under similar direction, has 50 pupils.

Mother House and Academy of Mount St. Vincent, on 165th St., upon the premises of the Central Park, has 180 pupils.

St. Mary's School, at 229 East Broadway, is under the charge of Sisters of Charity, and has 108 pupils.

St. Peter's School, at 16 Barclay St., is under the charge of Sisters of Charity, and has 80 pupils.

St. Joseph's School, on 6th Avenue, is under the charge of Sisters of Charity.

St. Lawrence School, Yorkville, is under the charge of Sisters of Charity, and has 40 pupils.

St. Stephen's School.

St. Vincent's School has 80 boys and 50 girls; and 65 girls in the preparatory department.

Five Catholic Schools.—There are 25 schools of this class reported in the city; at which 4,920 boys and 5,530 girls are taught. Most of the schools have male and female departments; and of those 7 are taught by Brothers of the Christian Schools, 9 by Sisters of Charity, 2 by Ladies of the Sacred Heart, 2 by Sisters of Notre Dame, 1 by Sisters of Mercy, and 1 by lay teachers. Of several the teachers are not specified. These schools are named St. Patrick's, St. Mary's, St. Joseph's, St. James's, St.

Francis Xavier's, Manhattanville, St. Brigid's, Triumphant, Union Mount St. Vincent, St. Lawrence, Sacred Heart, Free School, St. Catharine's, Most Holy Redeemer's, St. Alphonsus, St. Vincent de Paul's, Nativity, St. Columba, Holy Child, Sacred Heart, St. John the Evangelist's, St. Paul's, Immaculate Conception, St. Nicholas, St. Francis's, and St. Johns's.

¹ New York Gazette, the first paper published in the City of New York, was commenced in 1725 by William Bradford. It was the fifth then in existence of the American Colonies. Bradford continued it until he died at 17 years. In 1742 its name was changed to the New York Gazette and W. B. P.'s Herald, and it was published by James Parker and a successor and owner until 1753, when it was discontinued.

New York Weekly Journal, the second paper in the Colony, was commenced in New York in 1743 by John Peter Zenger. He died in 1746, and the paper was continued by his widow, and afterward by his son, until 1762, when it was discontinued. This paper opposed the administration of Governor Cosby and supported the attorney, Rip Van Dam, who had previously conducted the administration. The ballads, sermons, songs, and, above all, the home truths in his democratic journal irritated Cosby and his Council to madness. Zenger was confined several months by order of the Governor and Council for printing and publishing scoldings, libels, treated with unwarrantable severity, deprived of pen, ink, and paper, and denied the visits of his friends. The popular feeling, however, was strongly against these proceedings. The Assembly, notwithstanding the application of the Governor, refused to concur with him and his Council. The Mayor and the magistrates also refused to obey the mandate of the Governor and Council, and treated the language of the libels in papers as "by the common language and whippersnapper of the poltroon." The grand jury manifested equal contempt, and ignored the presentment against Zenger. The attorney general was then directed to file an information. The judges refused to hear and allow the exceptions taken by Zenger's counsel, and excluded them from the bar; but he was ably defended by other counsel, and especially by Andrew Hamilton, the champion of Philadelphia. Zenger pleaded not guilty. His counsel admitted the printing and publishing of the papers, and offered to give their truth in evidence. The counsel for the prosecution then said, "The jury do not find a verdict for the king; and give the most strict definition of a libel, asserting that "whether the person defamed was a private man or a magistrate, whether living or dead, whether the libel was true or false, or whether the party against whom it was made was of good or evil fame, it was nevertheless a libel." He then quoted from the Acts of the Apostles, and from one of the Epistles of Peter, to show that it was a very great offense to speak evil of dignities, and insisted upon the criminality by the laws of God and man. "Exalting those in authority, and consequently that Mr. Zenger had offended in a most notorious and gross manner in scandalizing his Excellency our Governor," who said to the counsel, "Is the king's name a bare profession of law, and supreme magistracy of this province?" Mr. Hamilton remarked in his reply, that we were charged with printing a certain false, malicious, scurrilous, and seditious libel. The word false must have some meaning, or else how came it there? and he put the case, whether the information had been for printing a true or a false libel, would that be the same thing? and to show the court that I am in good earnest," said he, "I will prove that if he can prove the facts charged upon me, that false, I will own them to be scurrilous, seditious, and a libel." He then further offered that, to save the possession, the trouble of proving the facts to be false, the defendant would prove the matter to be true. To this Chief Justice D. James objected, "You cannot be admitted to give the truth of a libel in evidence; the law is clear that you cannot justify a libel." Mr. Hamilton maintained that leaving the court to determine whether the words were libels or not, and not to judge useless, or worse. "It was true," he said, "in that sense past it was a crime to speak truth, and in that terrible court of St. Chamberlain withy and bay we men suffered for so doing; and yet every man that court and in those bad times a great and good man might say, what I hope will not be taken notice in me to say in this place, to wit—'The practice of imputing an offence to a man in the hands of a wicked king, and an arrant coward to cut down and destroy the innocent,

The Benevolent Institutions of New York are numerous, and comprehend measures for the relief of nearly every variety of human suffering. Those under the direct charge of the city have already been noticed. The greater part of other institutions of like character are under the management of companies incorporated for limited and special objects. Prominent among these are the hospitals and dispensaries, affording relief to every class of the sick and distressed. Up to 1857, at these various institutions, 179,377 persons had been vaccinated; 1,666,559 patients had been treated; and $297,761.60 had been expended. The Legislature usually appropriates money to several of these institutions.¹ Several of the more important of the benevolent institutions are supported wholly, or in part, by the State, among which are the Deaf and Dumb Asylum,² the Institution for the Blind, and the Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents.

The one cannot, because of his high station, and the other dare not, because of his want of courage, defend himself in another manner." The jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict of not guilty, to the great mortification of the court and of Zenger's persecutors, but with great satisfaction to the people. Such was the struggle which the press had to maintain only one hundred years ago, and only forty years before the Revolution gave to its freedom the sanction of Government and the impress of authority.—Introduction to the Nat. History of the State by Wm. H. Seward.

The New York Evening Post was commenced in 1746, but was soon discontinued.

The New York Mercury was commenced by Hugh Gaime, and continued by him 31 years. It was discontinued at the close of the Revolutionary War.

The New York Gazette was commenced in 1759 by Wm. Wyman. It continued irregularly until 1767, when it was discontinued.

The American Chronicle was commenced by S. Farley in 1761, and was discontinued the next year.

The New York Packet was commenced in 1763. It had only a brief existence.

The New York Journal and General Advertiser was commenced in 1766 by John Holt.

The New York Chronicle was commenced in 1768 by Alexander and James Robinson, and continued until 1772.

Rivington's New York Gazetteer; or, The Connecticut, New Jersey, Hudson's River, and Quebec Weekly Advertiser, was commenced in 1773 by James Rivington. This paper appeared during the Revolution as

The Royal Gazette, semi-w., published by "James Rivington, printer to the king's most excellent majesty."

New York Packet and American Advertiser was commenced in 1776 by Samuel London. No other papers appeared in New York until the close of the war.

The New York Hospital, founded in 1779, was incorp. June 13, 1771, and is under the care of 26 governors. It has two very extensive establishments,—the hospital proper, upon Broadway, between Worth and Duane Sts., and the Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylum, on 117th St. near 4th Avenue. The first hospital, built in 1773-75, was burned. A new one was soon after begun, and while still unfinished was occupied by British and Hessian troops for barracks, and it was not finally opened for patients until Jan. 3, 1791. On the 14th of March, 1806, the Legislature enacted that $12,500 should be given to the hospital annually for 50 years, on condition that apartments for various forms and degrees of insanity should be prepared, and that an annual report be made to the Legislature. The sum thus appropriated was to be chargeable upon duties on auction sales. In 1801 a lying-in ward was opened, and continued 20 years. In 1806 the lunatic department was organized, and one of the buildings of the present hospital was erected; but in 1816 a change of site was authorized. A library was founded in 1796, and a pathological cabinet in 1849; but a suitable building was not provided for the latter until 1856. In 1853 a new and spacious building, 8, of the main hospital, was erected, upon a plan the most perfect that experience could devise. It was finished in 1855, at a cost of $149,104.92. Clinical instruction, both medical and surgical, has long been given; and two operating theatres have been provided for this purpose. The hospital on Broadway is now limited to the receiving of cases of sudden injuries from accident, and non-contagious diseases in which there is prospect of improvement; and it is not intended for the support of the incurable, or to supply in any sense the place of a poorhouse. Those received are either supported gratuitously, or pay at a rate barely sufficient to defray cost of support. The former constitute about 40 per cent. of the entire number treated. Seamen are received and their expenses are paid wholly or in part from the hospital money paid by the U. S. Government. From Feb. 1, 1792, to 1856, 109,111 patients had been received, of whom 77,390 had been cured and 4,768 relieved. Of the 10,823 who died, many were brought in from the street in a dying condition. Nearly 4,000 now receive the benefits of the hospital yearly.

The Lunatic Asylum, in 1818, was located at Bloomingdale. A building was commenced May 7, 1818, and was opened to patients in June, 1821. The plan comprehends a center building 211 by 60 feet, with 2 detached wings. A wing for the violent insane male patients was built in 1830, and another for the like class of females in 1837, making the whole cost, up to 1859, $290,000. In 1854 two spacious 2 story brick buildings were erected, at a cost of $52,000. From May, 1821, to Jan. 1856, 4182 patients were received here, of whom 1,911 were cured, 851 improved, and 471 died. The grounds have an extent of about 40 acres, and are finely adapted to outdoor exercise in fine weather. The annual expense of both institutions is about $146,000.

St. Vincent's Hospital, at 102 and 104 E. 13th St., was established by, and is under the care of, Sisters of Charity.

St. Luke's Hospital is located at the corner of 6th Avenue and 54th St. The building was erected in 1854, and is designed to accommodate 250 patients.

Jews' Hospital is on W. 28th St., between 7th and 8th Avenues. The society was formed and a building erected in 1854. The hospital has received a bequest of $20,000 from the late Mr. Toussaint of New Orleans.

Woman's Hospital, on Madison Avenue, was established in Feb. 1856, by Dr. A. Marion Sims, and incorp. April 18, 1857, under 27 governors.

New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, at the corner of 2d Avenue and 13th St., was incorp. March 23, 1822. The present building was completed in 1856, at a cost of $41,272.339, including the lot. It has usually received appropriations from the city and State. Previous to 1856, 51,580 persons had received treatment in the institution.

New York Ophthalmic Hospital, on Stuyvesant St., was incorp. April 21, 1852, and opened May 25 following. A course of lectures upon diseases of the eye is delivered annually.

The Children's Hospital, on E. 51st St., near Lexington Avenue, was established for the cure of poor children otherwise destitute of aid. It is under the care of an association of ladies.

New Asylum for Lying-in Women, at 83 Marion St., is under the care of lady managers.

The New York Dispensary, on White, corner of Center St., was established in 1790, and incorp. April 8, 1795. It supplies the district S. of a line passing through Spring, Broadway, 14th, 1st Avenue, Allen, and Pike Sts.

The Larkin Dispensary, at 74 Ludlow St., was incorp. April 25, 1832. It supplies the district E. of the latter and S. of 14th St.

The Northern Dispensary, on Christopher, corner of 6th St., was incorp. Nov. 28, 1828, and opened in 1829. Its district lies W. of Broadway, between Spring and 23d Sts.

The De Witt Dispensary, on the corner of 23d St. and 2d Avenue, was incorp. May 7, 1851. It was founded upon the bequest of Miss Bennet, and cost about $30,000. Its district is E. of 6th Avenue, between 14th and 40th Sts.

North Western Dispensary, at 511 8th Avenue, was incorp. May 24, 1852. Its district is W. of 5th Avenue, between 23d and 60th Sts.

The German Dispensary, at 122 New Canal St., was organized in Jan. 1857. Professors of the College of Physicians serve gratuitously, and have distributed the labor into divisions.

The Homeopathic Dispensary, at 59 Bond St., was established in 1855 by Dr. Otto Fulgraff, and is supported entirely by private subscription.

The New York Institution for the Deaf and Dumb was incorp. April 15, 1817, and opened May 12, 1818. It was located in the "New City Hall" until 1839, when it was removed to E. 50th St., corner of 4th Avenue,—the premises now occupied by Columbia College. If there remained until the wants of the institution required more ample accommodations and the growth of the city suggested a retreat from the approaching pressure of business. A fine tract of nearly 40 acres at Fanwood, on the Hudson, on 164th St., was accordingly purchased, and the erection of buildings was commenced in 1853. They are in the aggregate 650 feet in length, and cover 2 acres. The institution has accommodations for 450 pupils. The work was sufficiently advanced to justify removal toward the close of 1856. The cost greatly exceeded the estimate; and under an act of April, 1857, the institution was assumed by the State, with all the property connected therewith. Pupils are received from every co. of the State, and to a limited extent from New Jersey. It is strictly an educational institution, and is designed to impart a useful amount of literary instruction, and the knowledge of some mechanical operation by which to gain support. Dr. Harvey P. Peet has been for many years President of the Institution.

The New York Institution for the Blind, incorp. April 21, 1831, was opened March 15, 1832, principally through the influence of Dr. Samuel Akerly, Samuel Wood, and Dr. John D. Russ. A

NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN

The city of New York has a large number of charitable corporations chiefly dependent upon private subscriptions for support; and their management is highly creditable to those who have bestowed their time and money for the relief of the suffering and friendless. Several of these have received aid from the State and the city in their organization and support.¹

school with 6 pupils was opened May 19, 1832, at 47 Mercer St., under Dr. Russ. By the aid of gifts and donations from individuals and the city, a piece of ground and buildings on 8th Avenue were obtained of James Boorman at a nominal rent, with a covenant to sell. An instructor in the mechanical arts was procured, and Dec. 2, 1833, the first public exhibition was held at the City Hall. The success in teaching from raised letters and characters, the proficiency of the 16 pupils in reading, geography, arithmetic, and especially in music, and the skill of their workmanship in mats, mattresses, and baskets, excited great interest. The present site, between 8th and 9th Avenues and 33d and 34th Sts., was purchased of Mr. Boorman at a reduction of more than $10,000 below what it could have been sold for; and on the 30th of April, 1836, $12,000 was given by the State, committed to the raising of $2,000 more by the managers. In 1839 $15,000 was given to erect buildings. Annual reports are made to the State Legislature. State pupils have been received since 1834; and for many years the institution has received pupils from New Jersey. The site, originally beyond the improved portion of the city, is now in the midst of a densely settled quarter, and the square which it occupies is valued at $400,000. The managers are endeavoring to obtain leave to sell and erect new buildings on the upper part of the island. The proceeds of the sale would, it is believed, procure new and superior premises without other aid. The institution now has 200 pupils, and employs 11 blind instructors and assistants. The manual trades taught are broom, mat, bandbox, and mattress-making and needle work. Musical instruction is received with great facility by the blind; and with those that evince decided talent it often becomes a means of support. Those of proper age are instructed in the common and higher branches of English education; and the number of books with raised characters now prepared for the blind is quite extensive, including the entire Bible, and volumes upon almost every branch of useful learning.

The New York Juvenile Asylum is intended to secure the maintenance and promote the welfare of children under 14 years of age who may be in destitute circumstances. This asylum was incorporated June 20, 1851. Its office is located at 23 W. 43rd St., and its temporary asylum is at the foot of E. 50th St. A permanent asylum, erected on 175th St., near High Bridge, was opened April 2, 1856. This society takes children between 7 and 14 entrusted to it by parents, guardians, or other competent authority, and affords them the means of a moral and industrial education. A fund originally of $50,000, and afterward of $200,000 in addition, was raised by subscription; and to this $40,000 was added by the city. The total number sent to the house of reception up to Jan. 1859, was 4,805. Several companies of children are sent annually to the Western States, to be indentured to farmers and others, under the direction of a pious person. Children are also bound out in the city and vicinity as apprentice officers. An act of March 25, 1856, directed a sum not exceeding $75 per annum to be levied by tax and paid to this asylum for each child committed by the city and supported by the society, and gave $20,000 toward the erection of a new house of reception on 134th St. The edifice is now nearly completed.

The Society for the Prevention of Pauperism, formed Dec. 16, 1817, after promoting the establishment of the first Savings Bank and other institutions of public utility, resolved itself into

The Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents, Dec. 19, 1825, and measures were taken to carry the purpose implied by the name into effect. An act of incorporation was obtained March 29, 1824; and, having in that year raised $17,000 and obtained possession of the U. S. Arsenal near Madison Square, the establishment was opened Jan. 1, 1825, with 9 inmates. This place was burned in 1839, and the location changed to a building on the East River at the foot of 234 St., erected for a fever hospital. In 1851 the society exchanged a parcel of land it possessed on Ward's Island for about 20 acres on the S. end of Randall's Island, where the corner stone of a new building was laid Nov. 24, 1852, by the Mayor. The buildings were opened Nov. 24, 1854. The male department will consist of a central building and 4 wings, of which 2 are parallel to the front of the center building and form together with it a front of 500 ft. upon the river. The other two wings are to radiate from the center of the rear at angles of 60°; they have not yet been erected. The arrangement admits of the necessary classification and embraces every modern improvement. A work-shop 3 stories high and 20 by 100 ft. is erected in the rear of each of the front wings. The female department, when completed, will be on a plan similar to the other, of 250 ft. front, and otherwise proportionally smaller. With the refuse stone obtained in excavation and grading, a sea wall was built out to low water mark; and some seven acres were thus added to the grounds. The entire cost, including the fitting up, to Nov. 1854, was $210,441.15, of which $14,199.29 had been for the Female Department. The whole number of inmates from its first opening to 1859 was 7,659; and at the beginning of that year it contained 463 boys and 77 girls. A female department is now in course of building, and when complete will afford to the whole a capacity for 1,000 inmates. Juvenile offenders from the several counties have been as follows:—

Of the cos. not enumerated, Westchester has sent 15, Ulster 11, Queens 10, Dutchess 9, Orange and Columbia each 8, Sullivan 7, Greene 6, Schenectady, Saratoga, and Oneida each 4, Monroe and Sullivan each 3, Otsego, Putnam, and Rockland each 2, and Erie and Richmond each 1. Of 24,441 received in 8 years, 20,639 were white boys, 439 white girls, 138 black boys, and 25 black girls; as to nativity, 1,544 were Irish, 145 American, 278 German, 150 English, 53 Scotch, 30 French, 10 Italian, 4 Swedish, and 1 each Spanish, Polish, Russian, Prussian, Dane, Dutch, Welsh, and Belgian.

The Prison Association of New York, incorporated in 1846, for the relief and encouragement of discharged convicts, is also, whenever fully notified, it has a female department, organized in 1841, to provide employment for discharged female prisoners.

The Orphan Asylum Society of New York was incorporated April 7, 1807. It was located on the banks of the Hudson, near 80th St., in 1840. It has 9 acres of grounds and a building 120 by 60 ft., pleasantly situated. About 200 orphans are supported in the institution.

The Society for the Relief of Half-Orphans and Destitute Children was established Dec. 16, 1835, and incorporated April 1, 1837. It is located at No. 7 10th St., and is usually known as the "Protestant Half-Orphan Asylum." It has received donations of $20,000 from John Hurlburt and of $5,000 each from James Boorman, John Jacob Astor, Peter G. Stuyvesant, and the daughters of John Mason. The whole number of inmates received up to 1859 was 1,884, and the number then remaining was 136 boys and 101 girls.—Common Council Manual, 1859, p. 589.

The Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, on Prince St., was incorporated April 29, 1836. It is under the charge of Sisters of Charity, and has 200 inmates,—all females.

St. Patrick's Orphan Asylum has a male and female department. The male department, on 51st St., has 400 inmates, and the female department, on Prince St., corner of Mott St., 200. They are both under the same trustees, and are managed by Sisters of Charity.

The Orphan's Home of the Protestant Episcopal Church, at 74 Hammond St., was incorporated April 16, 1838.

Leake and Watts Orphan House is located at Manhattanville, between 9th and 10th Avenues and 111th and 112th Sts. This noble charity was founded by the bequest of J. A. Leake, and enhanced by the liberality of Mr. Watts, who waived a claim he had upon the legacy. It is incorporated under the general law.

St. Luke's Home for Indigent Christian Females is at 455 Hudson St.

House and School of Industry, at 100 W. 16th St., is for the gratuitous instruction of poor females in needle work.

Association for the Relief of Respectable and Indigent Females is located at 20th St., between 2d and 3d Avenues.

Nursery for the Children of Poor Women, at 225 6th Avenue, is under lady managers.

Magdalen Female Benevolence Asylum, between 88th and 89th Sts. and 4th and 5th Avenues, is under the care of lady managers, has 40 inmates, and is designed to encourage reform in abandoned females.

Anti-Slavery Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless, on E. 30th St., between 4th and Madison Avenues, was formed in 1834. It received by donations in 1857 and '58 $14,713.79. The home school had 108 girls and 112 boys, industrial school No. 1, 340 girls, and No. 2, 163 girls. It is managed and chiefly supported by ladies.

St. Catherine's Church and House of Protection, on Houston St., corner of Murray St., is under the charge of Sisters of Charity.

New York Ladies' Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, on the site of the "Old Brewery," at Park St., was incorporated March 20, 1856.

St. Joseph's Asylum was incorporated April 15, 1859. It is designed to support and educate in some useful employment poor orphan, half-orphan, homeless, and neglected children, especially of German origin. It has 16 managers.

Five Points House of Industry is located on North St., Nos. 155, 157, 159.

Numerous institutions of beneficence are established upon the principle of mutual support, all of which derive their means from fixed contributions of members. The number of these is very great, including many which are limited to particular nationalities and to certain mechanical or other occupations.¹ The city has a large number of religious associations and societies for the promotion of morality,—some national or cosmopolitan in their field of operation, and others local in their range. While some of these oppose vice and wrong in their widest sense, others restrict their efforts to narrower limits of labor and concentrate upon a single object the united efforts of their members. There are at present about 200 churches in the city of New York.²

Children's Aid Society, office No. 11 Clinton Hall, Astor Place, was formed in 1853. It has for its object to provide homes and employment for destitute children, and, to a limited extent, for adults of both sexes. Up to 1858 it had provided homes for 3,576. In 1867 it sent 468 boys, 200 girls, 28 men, and 37 women to other States. It had opened 8 industrial schools, with a total of 968 pupils, maintained a lodginghouse for newboys and peddlars, at a low charge, and another one for girls, and had under its direction several boys' meetings and libraries. Its annual expenses are about $15,000, not including a large amount of gratuitous services.

New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor was formed in 1843, and incorp. Dec. 6, 1848. Its object is to afford temporary relief to such as do not come within the sphere of other existing charities, and to elevate the physical and moral condition of the indigent. To discountenance indiscriminate almsgiving and street begging, it inquires through its visitors into the merits of applications, and for this end has a supervisory council of 5 to each ward, and as many visitors as may be needed. It is supported by annual donations and collections, and in the year ending Oct. 14, 1857, expended $41,489.88.

The American Bible Society, formed May, 1816, as a national institution, claims notice in this place from the spacious and elegant edifice which it has erected. This structure occupies three fourths of an acre, and is nearly triangular, extending 198 ft. on 4th Avenue, 292 ft. on 5th St., 96 ft. on 3d Avenue, and 232 ft. on 9th St., with a court within. It cost nearly $500,000, and contains the offices of numerous religious and denominational societies. Its manufacture of Bibles and Testaments, when in full operation, employs 600 persons. A City Bible Society was formed several years before the one above noticed; and numerous kindred associations have been formed at different periods.

Of this class are Masonic, Odd Fellows, and other secret societies who possess funds for the relief of the sick, the support of widows and orphans, and the burial of the dead. Others, limited to particular occupations, some of which have been discontinued, have been chiefly as follows:—

The Marine Society of New York was created by patent April 12, 1770. It has for its principal object to collect moneys, by admission fees and yearly dues of members, for the relief of the widows and orphans of seamen. Up to 1826 it had distributed $88,100 for these objects. Its meetings are held at the United States Hotel, corner of Pearl and Fulton Sts.; and its chief importance now arises from the circumstance that its president is one of the trustees of the Sutors' Saug Harbor, on Staten Island. The importance of that noble trust will serve to perpetuate this society.

The New York Nautical Society was established in 1820, for charitable purposes and the promotion of useful improvements. Its members were those who had been shipmasters or commanders of vessels.

The New York Watermen's Society was formed in 1825, for benevolent purposes and the promotion of useful improvements in navigation. It is supposed to have been discontinued.

The Pilots' Charitable Society was formed in 1817, for benevolent and charitable purposes.

The Hanse Society was formed in 1877.

The Association for the Relief of Disabled Firemen is a charity devoted to the objects expressed in its title.

General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen was incorp. March 14, 1792.

The Mutual Benefit Society and the Mutual Aid Society of the City of New York are now extinct. The H. van Corpuars' Society; the New York Society of Journeymen Shipwrights; the Provident Society; and the Benevolent Society are charitable associations, from which we have no returns.

Manhattan Provident Society of the City of New York was formed Nov. 17, 1708.

Brooklyn Society of the Town of Harlem was formed Feb. 10, 1809.

New York Masons' Society was formed Feb. 20, 1807.

Saint David's Benevolent Society (Welsh) was formed in 1800. It was soon discontinued.

Albion Benevolent Society was formed about 1800. It was soon discontinued.

Angel's British Benefit Society was formed about 1805, from the two latter, and incorp. Feb. 27, 1807. It continued until 1835, when the Saint David's Benefit & Benevolent Society was formed. It divided 3 years after; and in Jan. 1841,

Saint David's Benefit Society and

The Welsh Society were formed. These were merged in the Saint David's Benefit Society, which is still continued.

Saint Patrick's Society and the Hebrew Periodic Society of the City of New York were formed in April, 1807.

Saint Andrew's Society (Scotch) was formed in 1756. Its anniversary is Nov. 30.

Caledonia Society of the City of New York was formed April 6, 1807.

Saint George's Society is a society of English.

Saint Nicholas Society (Dutch) is chiefly composed of the descendants of the old Dutch colonists.

New England Society holds its anniversary Dec. 22.

Besides these, there are and have been a great number of societies and unions, particularly among the German, Irish, Italian, and other foreign classes, and among the Jews and other denominations, concerning which it is difficult to procure full statistics, or even the names. The "George Clinton Society," "Washington Benevolent Society," "Tammam Society," or "Columbian Order," (the latter founded in 1805, and still existing, are among those memorable for their political influence; the "Society of Cincinnati," for its Revolutionary associations, and the "Wilberforce Philanthropic Society," "Manumission Society" of 1783, "Society for the Relief of Imprisoned Debtors," and a great variety of others, for their labors in the field of charities, but which have disappeared with the abuses they combated, and their elements re-organized under other names, for new labors which the misfortunes, vices, and crimes of mankind are constantly providing.

The following table contains some of the principal statistics of the churches in the city. The dates of first churches in the several denominations are given upon the authority of Greenleaf's History of the Churches of New York. The lists given by that author include several societies not owning church edifices, on which account the numbers are larger than those of the census:—

The Literary and Library Societies of the city exert an important influence upon the intellectual condition of the people. Many of the libraries are extensive and are provided with ample accommodations for the preservation and care of the books and for the convenience of students.¹

The population of New York has increased with great rapidity since the commencement of the

in New York. He suffered martyrdom at Cumbawaga, Sept. 27, 1642, at the hands of the Iroquois. The first religious services of this Church were held by Father Farnier, of Philadelphia, about 17-1-82. The first church was built in 1786, and named St. Peter. Its chief benefactor was Charles III., King of Spain, who gave $20,000.

The first church edifice was erected near the Fort, in 1623, and in 1642 was superseded by one built of stone within the Fort. The Reformed Dutch Church returned the ascendancy until 1664, when the chapel in the Fort was devoted to the English service. Trinity, formed in 1697, received grants of property from the Government, which by the subsequent growth of the city have become enhanced in value beyond parallel in America, if not in the world. Its revenues are usually considered adequate not only for the support of its several chapels and other edifices of worship, but for aiding liberally the poorer churches of this denomination throughout the country. Its income, already very large, will in a few years be greatly increased as leases at a low rate for long periods expire and the property is again offered for lease. The property of the Collegiate Dutch Church is also of great value, and surpassed only by that of Trinity Church. During the Revolution the Presbyterian and Dutch Churches were used by the British as riding schools, prisons, and for other military purposes. Within a few years most of the church buildings in the lower part of the city have been sold, their sites occupied for commercial purposes, and costly edifices of great architectural beauty have been erected "up town."

100 ft., adjoining the library, upon which has been erected a building similar to the first, the two forming the most spacious library rooms in America. The buildings will contain 200,000 volumes, and half that number are already in the library. This noble institution is situated on La Fayette Place, in a quiet quarter of the city, and is open to all without charge. Books are not allowed to be taken from the rooms. The trustees are required to report annually to the Legislature.

The Printers' Free Library, located at No. 3 Chambers St., was founded in 1823 by the New York Typographical Society, for the benefit of those employed in printing and binding books. It has 3,500 volumes.

The Apprentices' Library, at Mechanics' Hall, 472 Broadway near Grand St., is free to apprentices, and open to journeymen upon payment of $1 annually. It numbers 16,000 volumes.

The Libraries of the City Corporation, of Columbia College, of the Free Academy, of the several hospitals, of the medical colleges, of the theological seminaries, of the Bible Societies, and of several other institutions, are extensive, and some of them are very valuable in their several departments.

The Cooper Institute, a fine edifice of brownstone, covers an entire block between 3d and 4th Avenues and 7th and 8th Streets. It was erected by Peter Cooper, Esq., at a cost of $2,000,000, to promote the advancement of science and a knowledge of the useful arts. The first and second stories are to be rented and the avails devoted to the expenses of the establishment. In the basement is a lecture room, 125 ft. by 82 ft., and 21 ft. high. The three upper stories are arranged for purposes of instruction, and contain a very large hall, with a gallery designed ultimately as a free public exchange. A school of design is in operation in these rooms, and is attended by some 50 young ladies under instruction in engraving, lithographic drawing, and painting. The design of this institution is eminently creditable to the enlightened views of its magnificent projector, and will associate his name with those who have done much for the useful arts and deserved well of mankind. The building is known as "The Union," and, in accordance with an act of February 17, 1857, it has been placed in charge of trustees.

The American Institute was incorporated May 24, 1829, for the purpose of encouraging and promoting domestic industry in this State and the United States, in agriculture, commerce, manufactures, and the arts. It aims to promote these objects by an annual exhibition of machines and manufactures, the awarding of premiums, and the formation of a repository of models and a library of books relating to the useful arts; and for this purpose it may hold property producing an income of $50,000 per annum. It is connected with its organization a farmers' club, which holds monthly meetings, and occasional cattle shows, plowing and spading matches, as its officers may direct. The annual fairs of the Institute were formerly held at Castle Garden, but in 1857 were transferred to the Crystal Palace, where its 20th fair was prematurely ended by the burning of the Palace Oct. 5, 1858. The amount awarded for premiums from 1835 to 1857, both inclusive, has been distributed as follows:—

1836, 1,039.50	1842, 1,155.96	1848, 3,089.82	1853, 3,366.67
1837, 1,093.50	1843, 1,191.55	1849, 2,482.61	1854, 3,229.95
1839, 1,155.44	1845, 1,848.17	1851, 4,091.76	1857, 5,100.34

This society has successively occupied premises on Liberty St. near Broadway, at 41 Cortland St., 187 Broadway, the City Hall, Broadway, corner of Anthony St., and 354 Broadway. The last named premises it now owns. In 1859 it removed to the Cooper Institute building. In 1855 it commenced the publication of a monthly journal that continued through several volumes. The annual reports of the Institute to the Legislature since 1841 are voluminous and valuable.

The Lyceum of Natural History, located on 14th St., was incorporated in 1818. It has a large library relating to the natural sciences, and a cabinet. It was first opened in the rear of the City Hall; thence it was removed to Stuyvesant Institute, and finally to its present locality.

The American Geographical and Statistical Society was incorporated under the general law April 30, 1852, and, after several years' sojourn in the University Building, has recently been removed to Clinton Hall, Astor Place. It holds monthly meetings at the rooms of the Historical Society, and is forming an extensive and valuable statistical library. The objects of the society are expressed in its name. It publishes a monthly journal, chiefly of original papers.

The New York Academy of Music, corner of Irving Place and 11th St., was incorporated April 10, 1852. The building is 121 ft. by 114 ft., and will seat 4,000 persons. It is richly decorated, and is constructed with express reference to fine acoustic effect. The cost is estimated at $20,000.

The city has about 15 theaters and a great number of

The New York Historical Society was organized Dec. 10, 1804, and incorporated Feb. 10, 1809. After occupying rooms many years in the New York University Buildings, it was removed in 1857 to a new, fireproof building on 2d Avenue, corner of 11th St., which was dedicated Nov. 17 of that year. This society possesses a library of 20,000 volumes, particularly rich in historical works, and manuscripts, a choice gallery of paintings and collection of antiquities, coins, medals, and charts. Among its collections are a series of large tablets of Assyrian sculpture, the gift of James Lenox, Esq. Under a special act of April 12, 1853, the premises were made exempt from sale on execution, and the law is so framed that the society's property cannot be encumbered by mortgage. Regular meetings of the society are held on the first Tuesday of each month.

The Mercantile Library Association, at Clinton Hall, Astor Place, was organized in 1820, and has a library, reading room, lecture room, and cabinet. It was originally intended for the use of merchants' clerks, but is now accessible to all. Its library, especially full in periodicals, numbers 55,000 volumes; and the association has about 4,500 members. It formerly occupied the premises of Old Clinton Hall, on Beekman St., near the Park.

New York Law Institute, founded through the exertions of the late Chancellor Kent, was formed in 1828 and incorporated Feb. 22, 1830. It contains about 6,500 volumes, forming one of the most valuable and perfect collections of the kind in the United States. It is located at 45 Chambers St., to which place it was removed in 1855. Membership is confined to counsellors, solicitors, and attorneys. Judges of the Federal and State Courts, and strangers generally, are allowed to visit and use the library.

The Mechanics' Institute, located at No. 29 4th Avenue, was incorporated April 24, 1833. Its objects are to diffuse knowledge among the mechanical classes, to found lectures on natural, mechanical, and chemical philosophy, and scientific subjects, to open schools, and hold annual fairs. It has established classes in modeling, machinery, architecture, and ornamental drawing, a winter course of lectures, a reading room, and a library of 6,000 volumes, all of which are free to mechanics, workmen, and apprentices of the city.

The Astor Library was founded upon a bequest of $400,000 made by John Jacob Astor in his will, Aug. 22, 1830. Its trustees organized in May, 1848, and employed Dr. Joseph G. Cogswell to visit Europe for the purchase of books. On the 10th of Dec. 1849, they adopted a plan for an edifice, 120 by 65 ft., which was opened to the public Feb. 1, 1854. On the 21st of Oct. 1855, Wm. B. Astor presented to the trustees a lot, 80 by present century.¹ The completion of the Erie Canal gave an impetus to its growth and greatly increased its business transactions. The commerce of the city, without a parallel on the Western continent, has already been noticed in the general article upon the commerce of the State. The financial institutions are of a number and magnitude commensurate with its wants as the great center of commercial wealth in the nation.²

The manufactures of the city form one of the most important branches of the industry of the inhabitants. They embrace nearly every variety of article produced in the civilized world, and the aggregate capital employed is very great. The last State census reported 2,424 manufacturing establishments. In single instances the capital invested exceeds a million of dollars, and the number of persons dependent upon these large establishments for employment extends to several hundred. The above estimate does not profess to include the minor trades, in which little is invested beyond an industrial education and a small stock of implements and materials, but which in the aggregate amount to considerable sums. A large number of manufacturing establishments legitimately belonging to the city are located in the several suburban places for economy of rent and for room; and if these were added to those located in the city the aggregate would probably be nearly equal to that of the most noted manufacturing cities of Europe.

The Public Buildings of New York are many of them elegant and substantial structures, combining strength and durability with architectural beauty. Among the most noted of these is the U. S. Custom House, the Merchants' Exchange, and the City Hall.³

minor places of amusement, generally of a special character and devoted to exhibitions of art, curiosities, and other objects of attraction. The first theater in New York was opened in Nassau St. Sept. 17, 1753, and the first play acted was "The Conscious Lovers."

There are 16 savings banks in the city, with an aggregate amount of $36,804,419 on deposit, and with $82,757,660 in resources.—Report of Sup't. Bank Department, 1859; Assoc. Doc., No. 87.

The first movement toward a savings bank was made Nov. 25, 1816, when at a public meeting the plan was discussed and approved. The first deposits were made July 3, 1819, and within six months the $153,378.31 had been deposited by 1,527 persons, and of this sum $6,006 had been withdrawn. Up to 1857, $17,529,097 of had been deposited in these institutions. They owe their origin to the Society for the Prevention of Pauperism.—Common Council Manual, 1858, p. 624.

The Cleaning House Association was formed Oct. 1, 1853, for the purpose of facilitating the settlements of banks with each other. Its office is on Wall, corner of William St. The arrangements are so perfected that the entire daily settlements of all the banks in their business transactions with each other are made in six minutes. The whole amount of bank funds which passed through this institution up to Aug. 31, 1858, was $29,975,913,556.56; and during that period so perfect has been the system of balances that the error of one cent has never been made.

Fire Insurance Companies, to the number of 75, with an aggregate capital of $17,654,000, are located in the city. Besides these, a large number of agencies for companies in other States and in foreign countries are established in the city. The amount of capital invested in marine, life, and other insurance companies is not known, as no general reports are published. A list of these companies is elsewhere given. There are also several trust companies, with large capital, and a very great number of companies, associations, and individuals engaged in the business of banking and exchange, of which no statistics are attainable.

The Chamber of Commerce was instituted in 1768, and incorp. by patent March 13, 1770. It probably owes its origin to the necessity felt toward the close of the colonial period, of concerted action to protect the interests of trade against the usurpations of the British Government. Its rights were confirmed April 13, 1784, and it has since continued in operation without material interruption. Its objects are to adjust disputes and establish equitable rules concerning trade, and to operate upon public sentiment in the promulgation of such facts and regulations as the commercial interests require. Within a short time it has commenced the formation of a library of statistical and commercial works, and opened rooms sufficiently ample and convenient for the wants of the association. Its first report was published in 1820.

The Custom House, located on Wall St., on the site of the old Federal Hall, is a marble structure, in the Greek order of architecture, with a Doric portico at each end. It has a marble roof, and is trepoc throughout. It was commenced in May, 1854, and finished in May, 1841, at a cost of $5,000,000.

The Merchants' Exchange, on Wall St., built of Quincy granite, is 171 by 144 ft., and 57 feet high. A portico in front is supported by 18 Ionic columns, 38 feet high, each formed of a single stone weighing 45 tons. The rotunda is 80 ft. in diameter and 80 ft. high. The building is owned by an incorporated company, and cost over $1,000,000.

The City Hall, on the Park, is 216 by 105 ft., with two stories and a high basement. It is built in the Italian style, and is faced with marble except on the north side. It was begun Sept. 26, 1803, and finished in 1812, at a cost of over half a million of dollars. The upper story and cupola were burned Aug. 17, 1858, and have not been rebuilt. It is occupied by the Common Council, County Clerk, and various city and county offices. The first City Hall, built in 1698, stood on the present site of the Custom House, at the head of Broad St.

The Hall of Records, on the Park, is chiefly interesting from its historical associations. It was formerly the debtors' prison, and in the Revolution it was the prison into which American prisoners were crowded, and from which great numbers were taken to execution. In 1832 it was a cholera hospital. The pillars upon the ends are of modern origin.

The Rotunda, on the Park, was built by John Vanderlyn in 1818, for the exhibition of panoramic views, and is now an office of the Almshouse. It reverted to the city at the expiration of a ten years' lease.

The Halls of Justice, or "The Tombs," on Center St., is a structure built of Maine granite, in the Egyptian style of architecture. It is a hollow square, 252 by 209 ft., with a large central building. It was erected in 1838. Executions take place in the open courts within its walls.

The New Arsenal, or Down-Town Arsenal, corner of White and Elm Sts., is 131 by 84 ft. and 2 stories high. It is built of blue stone, and is supplied with narrow windows for easy defence against mobs. It is used as a parade for a part of the artillery of the 1st Division N. Y. State Militia, and as a drill room.

An arsenal was built by the State a few years since, on ground

The Commercial Buildings and Private Residences of New York are many of them on a scale of great magnificence. The first of these are built of marble or a beautiful kind of brownstone; and in the upper part of the city are numerous streets which for miles present unbroken lines of palatial residences. Within the past few years a great improvement has taken place in the character of the commercial buildings erected, and many of them now in size and elegance have no superiors in the world.¹

The Bay of New York was first discovered by Henry Hudson, then in the employ of the Dutch East India Co., Sept. 12, 1609. A settlement was made upon Manhattan Island by a company of Dutch traders, under the auspices of the West India Co., in 1612; but no permanent agricultural occupation began until 1623. During this year 30 families of Walloons from the Flemish frontiers, and a number of domestic animals, were sent over to form the nucleus for the permanent occupation of the country. Sarah Rapelje, a child of one of these families, born soon after their arrival, was the first white child born in New York. In 1626, Peter Minuet, the first Dutch Governor of the colony, purchased Manhattan Island of the natives for $24, and during the same year he caused a fort surrounded by cedar palisades to be erected. A new fort was begun in 1633 and was finished 2 years after.² The Colony of New Netherlands increased slowly; but in 1652 a feud arose between the company and settlers, which continued during the entire period of the Dutch occupation. The interest of the company was solely to make money by their operations; and they pursued their object by the exercise of an arbitrary power and without any regard to the prosperity of the settlers. This controversy tended greatly to develop democratic sentiments in the hearts of the people, and prepared them for the events which subsequently happened. In 1664 the colony fell into the hands of the English, and a new immigration took place, which materially changed the character of the population. A city charter, granted in 1652 and confirmed in 1686, secured many of the privileges since uninterruptedly enjoyed by the people, and formed the basis of all subsequent enactments. From the English conquest to the Revolution the history of the city is merged in that of the State and has no features of special interest.

Trade and commerce have been from the first the leading elements of the industry and wealth of the city, and in colonial times every measure of Government tending to embarrass trade occa-

now within the Central Park, and which has recently been sold to the Commissioners of the Park for $275,000. It was constructed very poorly, and was hardly finished before it began to tumble down. From a part of the proceeds of this property a new arsenal was built, in 1858, corner of 7th Avenue and 35th St.; but, before it was finished, the roof, constructed on a novel plan, fell in by its own weight on the morning of Nov. 16, 1858.

The Post Office occupies the old stone edifice of the Middle Dutch Church, on Nassau, Pine, and Liberty sts. It is small and inconvenient, and poorly adapted for the purposes of a post office. In the Revolution the pews of the church were broken up for fuel, and the building was used as a prison, and at one time as a riding school. The project of a building for a post office on or near the Park has been agitated; but there is at present no arrangement tending to that result.

The Treasury Office occupies an unassuming marble building adjacent to the Custom House, formerly one of the branches of the United States Bank. Its operations are elsewhere noticed See p. 122.

² The first fort was built in the rear of Trinity Church, near the river, and portions were found in 1751 by some workmen in digging through a bank. The next fort stood on what is now the Bowling Green, then a high island of earth overlooking the bay and adjacent country. A threatened invasion by the forces of Cromwell, in 1653, led to the construction of an embankment and ditch across the then S. line of the city. This fortification extended along the present line of Wall St., and from it that street derives its name. In 1692 a war with France occasioned a further attention to the defenses of the city and led to the erection of a battery on the rocky point at the S. end of the island. A stone fort with 4 bastions, all toward built at the same place, included most of the Government offices, and bore the name of the reigning sovereign for the time being. It remained until finally taken down in 1788. In the summer of 1756, while an attack was expected from the British army, the city was strongly fortified. On the S. point was the Grand Battery, of 23 guns, with Fort George Battery, of 2 guns, just above it and near the Bowling Green. McDonnell's Battery, of sioned great uneasiness. This city was among the first to feel the effects of the arbitrary measures of Great Britain, and was among the earliest to resist their tendencies.¹ The aristocratic element was probably stronger in this city than in any other part of America; and this was arrayed in favor of the British measures and against the "Sons of Liberty." Many prominent citizens, who had warmly sympathized with the popular movement in the hope of gaining redress of grievances, at length yielded their opposition when there appeared no alternative but war, and continued active or quiet friends of the Royal Government while it lasted. Several members of the first Provincial and Continental Congress afterward became friends of the king. The British forces took possession of the city immediately after the battle upon Long Island, Aug. 26, 1776, and remained until Nov. 25, 1783. The anniversary of this last event, known as "Evacuation Day," is still held in grateful remembrance, and is usually celebrated by military parade or other ceremonies.

In 1785 the first Congress of the United States after the war met in this city and held its sessions in the City Hall, corner of Wall and Nassau Streets. In the gallery of this building, facing Broad St., Gen. Washington was inaugurated first President, April 30, 1789. The New York Legislature returned to this city in 1784 and continued its sessions with intervals until finally removed to Albany with the State offices in 1797. The Port of New York was made a port of entry soon after the peace. Its revenues were collected under the State Government till 1789, but have since formed a most important source of income to the Federal Government. The receipts from customs at this port considerably exceed those of all the other commercial cities of the Union together, and defray nearly one-half the expenses of the General Government. In the midst of its general prosperity the city has had seasons of adversity.² At different times destructive fires have occurred, which have for a time seriously retarded business.

- ¹ The principal events which occurred in the city during the troubles leading to the Revolution are briefly as follows:—
- 1765, "Sons of Liberty" were organized to oppose the Stamp Act.
- 1765, Oct. 31.—A committee of correspondence with other colonies was appointed.
- 1765, Nov. 1.—The Stamp Act took effect, and popular excitement became extreme. The Lieut. Governor was burned in effigy before the fort.
- 1765, Dec. 26.—The ship Minerva was boarded by the Sons of Liberty in search of stamp paper. The paper was traced to a brig soon after, and ten packages were seized and burned.
- 1766, June 29.—The Assembly petitioned for a bronze statue of Pitt to be erected.
- 1766, Oct. 18-22.—The liberty pole on the Common (Park) was repeatedly destroyed and there was imminent danger of a collision between the populace and the troops.
- 1770, Jan. 13.—New attempts were made to destroy the liberty pole, and the soldiers became riotous.
- " Jan. 17.—At a meeting of 3,000 citizens, resolutions were passed not to submit to the acts of oppression.
- " Jan. 18.—A collision took place between the soldiers and citizens at Golden Hill.
- " Jan. 30.—The Corporation forbade the erection of a new liberty pole, and the populace after planting one on their own land, inscribed "Liberty and Property."
- " March 29.—Another attack was made upon the pole, which excited great indignation, and led to the being nightly guarded, until May 3.
- " May.—A committee of 100 was formed to resist the importation of goods under the obnoxious laws; but they receded from their purpose July 9, and agreed to import every thing but tea.
- " Aug. 21.—A leaden equestrian statue of George III. was erected in Bowling Green. This statue was then worn down by the populace on the receipt of the Declaration of Independence. July 16, 1776. It was subsequently melted up into bullets in the family of Gov. Wood, of Connecticut. It is said that 42,000 bullets were made from the metal, and these did service against 400 British soldiers afterward sent into Conn. by Gov. Tryon.
- " Sept. 7.—A marble statue of Pitt was placed in Wall Street, in gratitude for his services in the repeal of the Stamp Act. In consequence of the course of Pitt after he became Lord Chatham, this statue was mutilated by a mob May 21, 1772, and, having been seen in daylight, leadless trunk, it was removed, under an act of - March 7, 1788. It is now preserved in the Fifth Ward Hotel, West Broadway.
- 1773, Nov. 5.—The Committee of Vigilance denounced the importation of tea and agreed to resist its landing.
- 1774, April 21.—A vessel laden with tea arrived at Sandy Hook, but was not permitted to land; and in a few days it was sent back to London. About the same time 18 chests of tea privately brought into port were destroyed.
- " May 19.—A great meeting was held in the "Fields," at which strong revolutionary resolutions were passed. A committee of 51 were appointed; but the next day a majority of them receded from their position, and the Whigs requested their names to be struck off.
- 1775, April 3.—The Colonial General Assembly finally adjourned.
- " July 25.—Delegates were elected to the Continental Congress.
- " Aug. 23.—Capt. Lamb was ordered by Provincial Congress to remove the cannon from the battery in the city for the forts in the Highlands. Resistance was offered from the Asia, man-of-war, stationed off the battery; but 21 pieces—all that were mounted—were safely carried away.
- ² Two dreadful fires occurred while the city was in possession of the enemy. On the 21st of Sept. 1776, a fire spread from Whitehall Slip w. of Broadway, s. of Barclay Street, burning 492 houses, or one-eighth of the entire city. Another broke out on Conger's Wharf, Aug. 7, 1778, which burned 300 houses in Great and Little Dock and the adjacent streets. Commissioners were appointed May 4, 1784, to settle claims to the soil and lay out streets in these burned districts. Destructive fires have since occurred, as follows:—
- 1811, May 19.—Upon Chatham Street 80 to 100 buildings were burned.
- 1828, $100,000 worth of property was burned.
- 1833, Dec. 16.—A fire broke out in the lower part of the city, which was not arrested until 40 acres, mostly covered by large stores, were burned over, and $18,000,000 worth of property was destroyed. It was the most disastrous fire that ever occurred in the city.
- 1845, July 19.—A fire broke out near Wall Street, and extended to Stone Street, ravaging the entire district between Broadway and the E. side of Broad Street. Five to eight million dollars' worth of property was destroyed.
- 1858, Oct. 5.—The Crystal Palace was burned.
- Theaters in New York have been burned as follows:—Park, 1820, 1848; Bowery, 1828, 1836, 1838, 1843; Mount Pitt Circus, 1828; La Fayette, 1829; National, 1839, 1841; Niblo's, 1846; and Franklin, 1849.

Papers and Periodicals discontinued since the Revolution.

Since the Revolution, the following papers have appeared and been discontinued. The list is very imperfect; as, among the constant changes that are going on, it is impossible to ascertain precise data. It is possible that a few in this list may be still issued, and very probable that others may continue to exist under a different name:

NIAGARA COUNTY.

This county was formed from Genesee, March 11, 1808. Erie was taken off April 2, 1821. It lies upon the w. border of the State, in the angle formed by the junction of Niagara River and Lake Ontario. It is centrally distant 255 mi. from Albany, and contains 558 sq. mi. The surface is generally level or gently undulating. It is divided into 2 distinct parts or terraces by a ridge extending e. and w. The lake shore is a bluff 10 to 30 feet high, and from its summit the lower terrace slopes gradually upward to the foot of an elevation known as the mountain ridge, where it attains an elevation of 100 to 150 feet above the lake. This ridge extends e. and w. through the s. part of Royalton and Lockport, and near the center of Cambria and Lewiston, and forms the s. declivity of the s. terrace.

At its w. extremity it has an elevation of 250 feet above the lower terrace, and is nearly perpendicular. This height gradually declines toward the e., and upon the e. line of the co. it has an elevation of 80 to 100 feet. Through the central part of the co. the ridge is divided into two declivities, separated by a plateau from a few rods to a half mi. in width. The upper ridge is limestone, and for many mi. presents the face of a perpendicular cliff. Throughout the co. the ridge is too steep for cultivation. The s. half of the co., extending s. from the summit of this ridge, is very level. It has a slight inclination toward the s., and terminates in the Tonawanda Swamp. The whole inclination of the slope within the limits of the co., however, does not exceed 30 feet. The lake ridge—supposed to have been the ancient shore of the lake—extends w. from Orleans co. through Hartland and Newfane, thence turns s. w., and appears to terminate near Lockport Village. It appears again farther w., and at Cambria it is divided into two parts, the n. extending s. w. about 3 mi. and gradually declining to a level of the general surface, and the s. extending s. w. and uniting with the mountain ridge 4 mi. e. of Lewiston.¹ This ridge is composed of sand and gravel and the usual debris thrown up by a large body of water, and in character is essentially different from the surrounding surface. It varies from 5 to 25 feet in height, and is 20 to 150 feet in width. The n. descent is generally slightly longer and steeper than the s. The lowest rock in the co. is the Medina sandstone, which crops out in the ravines along the shore of the lake. It is the underlying rock of the w. half of the co., and extends to the foot of the mountain ridge. This ridge is composed of the sandstones and limestones belonging to the Niagara and Clinton groups, the heavy masses of compact limestone appearing at the top. The Onondaga salt group occupies a narrow strip along the s. border of the co. Nearly the entire surface is covered with deep deposits of drift, the rocks only appearing on the declivities of the mountain ridge and in the ravines of the streams.

Springs of weak brine are found in the ravines throughout the n. half of the co. They exude from the Medina sandstone; but none of them are sufficiently strong to be profitably worked. The Medina sandstone which lies at the foot of the mountain ridge has been quarried at several places for paving and flagging. Above the sandstone is a layer of impure limestone, about 4 feet thick, from which water cement is manufactured. The Niagara limestone furnishes an excellent building material and a good quality of lime. The principal quarries are situated in the vicinity of Lockport, and from them were obtained the stone for the construction of the canal locks at that place.² A vein of this stone filled with fossils admits of a high polish, and is used for ornamental purposes, presenting a beautiful variegated appearance.

Niagara River forms the w. and a part of the s. boundary of the co. It flows almost due w. from the e. extremity of Grand Island to the Falls, and thence nearly due s. to Lake Ontario. It contains several small islands belonging to this co., the principal of which are Tonawanda, Cayuga, Buckhorn, and Goat Islands. In its passage from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario, a distance of about head of the latter ravine is a nearly perpendicular precipice, at which point must have been a waterfall.

² This stone is found along the whole course of the mountain ridge, and can be quarried in every town. The deep cut in the canal w. of Lockport is through this strata, and the perpendicular edges of rock on each side present the most favorable location in the co. for quarrying.

30 mi., the river descends 334 feet, the difference of level between the two lakes. Above Schlosser and below Lewiston the current of the river is not very rapid, and the descent is trifling, so that nearly the whole fall is condensed into a space of about 8 mi. The plateau in which the basin of Lake Erie is situated extends to the mountain ridge at Lewiston, the summit of the ridge being 34 feet higher than Lake Erie. The river originally must have flowed over the face of this precipice, at which time Niagara Falls were 7 mi. below their present position. By the wearing away of the rocks the falls have gradually receded, becoming lower at each period of their progress, and leaving a deep, rocky channel, with ragged and precipitous banks 200 feet high, to mark their course and attest their power.¹ At the present time the falls are at the abrupt angle where the river changes from a w. to a s. course, and the water is precipitated in part over the front or extremity of the chasm and in part over the side, the two parts of the fall being at nearly right angles to each other. Goat Island, having an area of about 70 acres, lies between the two falls, its w. edge being a continuation of the precipice over which the water flows.² The principal fall at the head of the chasm on the w. side is known as the Canadian or Horse Shoe Fall,³ and the fall e. of Goat Island as the American Fall. The Canadian Fall is 2000 feet wide and 154 feet high, and the American Fall 900 feet wide and 163 feet high; and it is estimated that 100 million tons of water flow over the two falls every hour. A mi. above the edge of the falls a series of rapids commences, the water descending 60 feet before taking the final plunge.⁴ From the foot of the cataract the river flows about 2 mi. in a comparatively still current, but from that point to Lewiston it is compressed within narrow banks, and flows through the tortuous, rocky channel in a perfectly tumultuous and resistless torrent. The immense body of water in Niagara gives to the falls, and to the rapids both above and below, a grandeur scarcely equaled by any other of nature's works. Here one of the largest rivers in the world, forming the outlet of the great internal fresh water seas of North America, plunges down the shelving rapids and leaps into the profound chasm below, and then whirls and struggles with an apparently almost irresistible force in its rocky channel for 7 mi., and at last emerges from its mountain barrier and spreads out into the calm and peaceful waters of Ontario. Scenes of surpassing sublimity and grandeur open upon the view at every point, and pilgrims from every part of the world flock hither to offer their devotions at one of the great shrines of universal nature.

Tonawanda Creek forms the greater part of the s. boundary of the co. Along its course are a series of extensive marshes known as the Tonawanda Swamp.⁵ The other principal streams are

² Goat Island lies upon the precipice N. of Goat Island, and is separated from it by a strait 150 feet wide, which forms a distinct fall. Beneath the shelving rock over which this small cataract flows is a recess of 20 feet, known as the Cave of the Winds. Three small islands lying near the head of Goat Island are called the Three Sisters. Bath Island lies between Goat Island and the American shore, about 50 rods above the falls. A bridge extends from the American shore to Bath Island, and another thence to Goat Island. The first bridge was built in 1817, but the next spring it was swept away by the ice. The one built in 1818, and rebuilt in 1829, was replaced by the present iron bridge in 1857. The cribs were sunk in the rapids from the end of a long platform projecting from the shore and heavily loaded with stone to keep it firm. As one crib was sunk and filled with stone, the platform was pushed forward and another sunk at its extremity; and so on to the island. Before the bridge was built, access to the island was attended with great peril, and very few persons had attempted it. It was done by shooting down in boats from above, a strong rope being fastened to the shore, by which the boat in returning was swung back. It is related that the first white person who visited the island was Israel Putnam, in 1755, while on a campaign against Fort Niagara.—Dough's Travels, II, 88. The Indians appear to have crossed occasionally, and traces of their graves are still seen. On the 23d of Feb. 1811, Augustus Porter applied for the purchase of the island, upon which to keep sheep, and alleged in his petition that the wolves that infested the settlement rendered this business next to impossible without some asylum like this for their preservation. It was afterward bought by the Porters.

⁵ This swamp could be drained if the State dam at the mouth of Tonawanda Creek was removed; and thus only is needed to convert the tract into the most productive region in the co. As the land is cleared, it becomes sufficiently dry for agricultural purposes. The muck and marl which abound in the swamp, and the limestone and gypsum which underlie it, are all sources of great agricultural wealth.

Four Mile, Six Mile, Twelve Mile, and Eighteen Mile Creeks,—named from their respective distances from the mouth of Niagara River,—Fish and Golden Hill Creeks, all emptying into Lake Ontario; Mud Creek and East Branch, tributaries of Tonawanda Creek, and Cayuga and Gill Creeks, tributaries of Niagara River. The streams that flow s. have all worn deep ravines in the drift deposits; and they are frequently interrupted by falls, furnishing abundance of water-power.

A strip of land extending from the summit of the mountain ridge about 2 mi. s. is covered with a sandy loam, and the remainder of the upper terrace is clayey, largely intermixed with muck along the s. border. The soil between the mountain and lake ridges is a clayey loam, and along the lake ridge and s. of it it is a sandy and gravelly loam. The people are principally engaged in grain raising, for which the co. is most admirably adapted: barley, oats, corn, and potatoes are the staple agricultural products.¹ The manufacture of flour and other articles is largely carried on at Lockport, and the manufacturing interests at Niagara Falls are on the increase. The vast water power that can be made available at the falls will continually attract the attention of practical men, until eventually an immense manufacturing interest will be built up.

The co. seat is located at the village of Lockport.² The courthouse is a stone building erected upon a fine lot in the w. part of the village.³ The jail, situated upon the same lot, is a well constructed stone building, but destitute of means of ventilation. The average number of inmates is 27. The co. clerk's office is a stone fire-proof building contiguous to the courthouse.⁴ The poor-house is located upon a farm of 130 acres 3 mi. s. w. of the courthouse. The average number of inmates is 95, supported at a weekly cost of 50 cts. each. The farm yields a revenue of $1000. A teacher is constantly employed to teach the children and to exercise a constant supervision over them. The insane are properly provided for, and are uniformly treated kindly.⁵

The Erie Canal enters the co. near the s. line of Royalton, and extends s. w. to Lockport, thence nearly due s. to Tonawanda Creek, and thence along that creek to its mouth. The heaviest and most extensive work upon the canal is at Lockport, where the passage of the mountain ridge is effected. A series of combined double locks, 5 in number, overcomes an elevation of 56 ft., and from the summit a deep cut through the solid limestone extends several miles westward.⁶ The Rochester, Lockport, & Niagara Falls Division of the N. Y. Central R. R. extends through Royalton, Lockport, Cambria, and Niagara, and a corner of Lewiston and Wheatfield, terminating at Suspension Bridge upon Niagara River. The Buffalo & Lockport Branch R. R. extends s. w. from Lockport through Cambria, Pendleton, and Wheatfield. The Buffalo & Niagara Falls R. R. extends along Niagara River through Niagara and Wheatfield, and a s. branch is extended to Lewiston. The Canandaigua & Niagara Falls Branch R. R. unites with the B. & N. F. R. R. at Tonawanda.⁷

Three daily and five weekly newspapers are published in the co.⁸

¹Wheat formed the great staple of the co. until about 1850, when the millage commenced its ravages.

²When the co. was first erected, the co. seat was fixed at Buffalo. The buildings were given up to Erie co. upon the erection of the latter county.

³This building was erected in 1824. The first co. officers were, Augustus Porter, First Judge; Louis S. Le Conteux, Co. Clerk; Asa Ransom, Sheriff; and Archibald S. Clarke, Surrogate.

⁴Built in 1836, at a cost of $15,000.
⁵The Senate Committee in 1856 concluded the report upon this institution as follows:—"The house is well kept, and by the result proves that, as a question of economy merely, it is less expensive to maintain a good poor-house than it is a poor one."

⁶The project of building a ship canal around Niagara Falls has from time to time excited much attention, and several surveys have been made, but thus far without result. The earliest incorporation for this object was in 1798.

⁷In 1828 a horse-car R. R. was built from Lewiston, 3 mi., to connect with the Lockport & Niagara Falls R. R.; but the track has been transferred to the Central R. R. Co. The Niagara & Lake Ontario R. R., extending from Niagara Falls to Youngstown, has been built, but it is not yet in operation.

⁸The Niagara Democrat, the first paper published in the co., was started at Lewiston in 1821 by Benjamin Ferguson. In the following year it was removed to Lockport, and soon after changed to

The Lockport Observatory. In Aug. 1822, it passed into the hands of Orasmus Turner, and in 1828 it was united with the Niagara Sentinel and issued as

The Sentinel and Observatory. In 1828, Peter Besançon, jr., became the proprietor, and changed it to

The Lockport Journal. In 1829 it was purchased by Asa Story and changed to

The Lockport Balance. In 1834 it was united with The Gazette, under the name of

The Balance and Gazette. It was soon after-ward changed again to

The Lockport Balance. It was successively published by Isaac C. Colton and T. H. Hyatt until 1837, when it was sold to Turner & Lyon and merged in the Niagara Democrat.

The Lewiston Sentinel was commenced at Lewiston in 1825 by James O. Daily. It soon after passed into the hands of Oliver Grace, who removed it to Lockport and issued it as

The Niagara Sentinel. In 1828 it was united with the Lockport Observatory.

The Gazette was started at Lockport in 1833 by P. Baker. In 1834 it was united with the Balance.

The Niagara Democrat was started at Lockport in 1835 by Turner & Lyon. In 1837 it was united with the Balance and issued as

The Niagara Democrat and Lockport Balance. The latter part of the title was soon dropped. In 1839 it passed into the hands of P. P. Seawall; and in 1846, into those of Turner & McCallum. It was continued by different publishers until 1858, when it was united with the Lockport Advertiser. The weekly edition is now issued as

The Niagara Democrat, by John Campbell.

The Lockport Daily Advertiser was commenced in Feb. 1854, by A. S. Prentiss. June 1, 1858, it was united with The Democrat as

The Lockport Daily Advertiser and Democrat, under which title it is still issued.

The Niagara Courier was started at Lockport, May 1, 1827, by M. Caldwell. It was successively issued by Geo. Reese, T. C. Fiegler, Crandall & Bingham, C. L. Skeels, and S. S. Demorey.

The Lockport Daily Courier was commenced by Penroy & Fox in 1847, and continued until 1859, when both the daily and weekly were united with The Journal; the daily as

This co. was a portion of the domain of the Seneca Nation, though none of its principal villages were located within its limits. The first European visitant of whom there is any record was La Salle, a French adventurer, who, accompanied by Tonti and Father Hennepin, conducted an expedition up the lakes for the double purpose of traffic with the Indians and of extending the French influence among the native tribes. In the fall of 1678 he established a trading post on the present site of Fort Niagara, at the mouth of Niagara River, and soon after laid the keel of a small vessel of 60 tons, at the mouth of Cayuga Creek, above the falls. This vessel was launched in the commencement of the following summer, and christened the Griffin; and on the 7th of Aug. the party set sail upon Lake Erie.¹ The first work at Fort Niagara was a simple palisade; but in 1687 De Nonville, the French commander, constructed there a fort with four bastions. This was soon after besieged by the Senecas; and, a fatal sickness having destroyed most of the garrison, it was soon after abandoned. Joneaire, another French adventurer, built a house on the present site of Lewiston in 1721; and about 4 years after another defensive work was erected on the old site of the palisade of La Salle. This fortress was afterward enlarged, and became one of the most important French posts w. of Montreal. In the summer of 1759, Gen. Prideaux, at the head of a large force of regulars and provincial troops, was sent to reduce the place. The fort was besieged about the 1st of July; and on the 25th it was surrendered to Sir Wm. Johnson, upon whom the command of the expedition had devolved upon the death of Gen. Prideaux.²

The fortress was repaired and garrisoned by the English; and during the Revolution it became the headquarters of the marauding parties of Tories and Indians that desolated the frontier settlements along the Mohawk, Susquehanna, and Delaware.³ Fort Niagara continued in possession of the British until 1796.⁴ The portion of the Tuscarora Indians who were allies of the English during the Revolution removed to the neighborhood of Fort Niagara after the destructive campaign of Sullivan, in 1779, to obtain means of preventing absolute starvation. The Senecas donated them a square mi. of land, and subsequently the Holland Land Co. 2 sq. mi. In 1804 they purchased an additional tract of 4329 acres, for $13,722. On the 19th of Dec. 1813, Fort Niagara, then in possession of an American garrison, was surprised and taken by the British; and it continued in their possession until the close of the war. The villages at Lewiston and Niagara Falls were burnt about the same time. In 1826, Fort Niagara was the scene of Morgan's imprisonment previous to his final disappearance.⁵ The land in this co. was all included in the Holland Purchase, except the small reservations of the Tonawanda and Tuscarora Indians, and a strip of a mile in width along Niagara River, reserved by the State for the purposes of a portage road around Niagara Falls. The first settlements were commenced about the beginning of the present century, and the growth of the co., in common with the whole territory of the Holland Purchase, was rapid. The great impetus to growth, however, was given by the completion of the Erie Canal in 1825 and the subsequent construction of railroads. In 1837 the co. became the seat of great excitement connected with the so-called Patriot War. Most of the Patriot forces that rendezvoused upon Navy Island—within British territory, and just above the rapids of the falls—were transported from Schlosser, upon the Priestcraft Exposed was published from 1828 to 1830 at Lockport by L. A. Spaulding.

The Lockport Journal was started in July, 1851, by M. C. Richardson; and in 1852

The Lockport Daily Journal was commenced, and both editions were continued until 1859, when they were united with the daily and weekly Courier, as already noticed.

The Frontier Sentinel was published at Lockport in 1857, during the "Patriot War" excitement, by T. P. Seaside.

The Lockport Chronicle was started at Lockport April 9, 1859, by S. S. Pomroy & Co.

The Love, Love Telegraph was started at Lewiston in 1836 by John A. Harrison & Co., and was continued about 3 years.

The Niagara Falls Journal was published a short time in 1837 by Francis & Ward.

The Niagara Chronicle was published at Niagara Falls in 1828 by J. Simpson.

The Niagara Cataract was started in 1846 at Niagara Falls by Stephens & Humphreys, and continued a short time.

The Iris was commenced at Niagara Falls in 1846 by George H. Hackett, and was continued until 1861.

The Niagara Times was published at Niagara Falls from Oct. 1855 to Oct. 1857, by W. E. Tins,.

The Niagara Falls Gazette was started May 17, 1854, by Paul & Sleeper, by whom it is still issued.

The Niagara City Herald was started at Suspension Bridge in Oct. 1856, by G. H. Hackett; and in the following year it passed into the hands of N. T. Hackett, by whom it is now published.

Bay, where it cast anchor and remained some time. After being freighted with a rich cargo of furs, it started on its return voyage; but soon that time no tidings ever came of the vessel or crew. La Salle and Father Hennepin left the vessel on its upward voyage at Detroit, and afterward penetrated the western wilderness to the Mississippi River.

² While Sir Wm. Johnson remained at this place he made a contract with Wm. Stedman to construct a road for a portage from Lewiston to Schlosser above the Falls. This road was finished in 1763; and on the 20th of June of that year the contractor started with 25 loaded wagons from Lewiston, under the convoy of 60 soldiers. As the party were passing a deep gulf upon the very edge of the cliff known as the Devil's Hole, they were assailed by a large force of Senecas who were lying in wait for them, and the whole party except one were driven off the precipice, which here has a perpendicular height of 180 ft. Wm. Stedman escaped by forcing his horse through the ranks of the Indians; and one soldier—a drummer—was saved by his belt catching in the top of a tree below and so breaking the force of his fall.

American shore; and great excitement prevailed in consequence. The steamer Caroline, engaged in furnishing re-inforcements and supplies to the insurgents, was cut from her moorings, on the night of Dec. 20, by a British force, set on fire, and sent over the falls. This event was the occasion of a long diplomatic controversy between the Governments of the United States and Great Britain, and at one time war seemed almost inevitable. Since that time no event has occurred to disturb the peaceful progress of improvement.

CAMBRIA—was formed from "Willink," (now Aurora, Erie co.) March 11, 1808. Hartland, Niagara, and Porter were taken off in 1812, Lewiston in 1818, and a part of Lockport in 1824. It is an interior town, w. of the center of the co. The mountain ridge¹ crosses through the center of the town and divides it into two nearly equal portions. In the s. and s. e. the surface is level or undulating. The lake ridge crosses the s. part of the town. The principal stream is Twelve Mile Creek. The soil consists of alternations of sandy and clayey loam. Pekin (p.v.) lies partly in Lewiston, but principally in this town. It contains 2 churches and about 60 dwellings. North Ridge and Cambria, in the s. part of the town, are p. offices. The first settlement was made in 1800, by Philip Beach, from Le Roy.² There are 2 churches in town, Cong. and M. E.

HARTLAND³—was formed from Cambria, June 1, 1812. Royalton was taken off in 1817, Somerset in 1823, and a part of Newfane in 1824. It is the central town upon the e. border of the co. The surface is level or gently undulating, the greatest inequality being along the lake ridge, which crosses the s. part of the town. The principal streams are Eighteen Mile and Johnsons Creeks. The soil s. of the ridge is a clayey loam, and s. e. it is a sandy and gravelly loam. Johnsons Creek, (p.v.) located on the creek of the same name where it crosses the lake ridge, contains 1 church and has a population of 114. Hartland Corners, (Hartland p. o.) on the ridge in the w. part of the town, contains about 18 dwellings. Middleport⁴ is partly in this town. The first settlement was made in 1803, by John and David Morrison.⁵ The first church (Bap.) was organized at Johnsons Creek in 1817. There are 5 churches in town.⁶

LEWISTON⁷—was formed from Cambria, Feb. 27, 1818. It is the central town upon the w. border of the co. The mountain ridge extends through the town, dividing it into two nearly equal portions. Along the base of this ridge the surface is broken or rolling, but elsewhere it is level. Gill and Six Mile Creeks, and several smaller streams, take their rise in this town, and Niagara River forms its w. boundary. The soil is a sandy loam. The Devil's Hole—a dark chasm, 150 ft. deep, upon the high bank of the Niagara, in the extreme s. part of the town—was the scene of a sanguinary battle during the Old French War.⁸ Five mi. above Ft. Niagara, bordering upon the river, is a flat of several acres, about 65 ft. lower than the surrounding country. It is called Five Mile Meadow; it was here that the British forces landed the night before the capture of Fort Niagara, in Dec. 1814.⁹ Lewiston,¹⁰ (p.v.) incorp. April 17, 1822, was reserved by the State and patented by single lots. It is situated on Niagara River, at the base of the mountain ridge. It is the terminus of the Lewiston & N. F. R. R., and the head of navigation from Lake Ontario. It contains 4 churches, and has a pop. of 1,014. The Lewistown Suspension Bridge across the Niagara River was erected in 1850 and '51.¹¹ Dickersonville (p. o.) is a hamlet. South Pekin is a p. o. in the s. e. part. Pekin lies partly in this town. Fort Gray, a temporary fortification erected during the War of 1812, occupied the verge of the mountain ridge just above the village of Lewiston. The Seminary of our Lady of Angels, a Catholic institution, is situated on

² John Forsyth and Walter Neal settled in the town in 1804, and Chapman Hawley, Daniel Howell, Joseph Hewett, James Prentice, and Amariah Stoughton soon afterward. The first birth was that of Philip Beach, jr., in 1803; and the first death, that of Nehemiah Street, a traveler, who was numbered in 1790. Philip Beach opened the first inn, in 1800, and Joshua Shepard the first store, in 1815. Joseph Hewett built the first saw-mill, in 1800, and Christian Bowler the first grist-mill, in 1815. The first school was taught by Mrs. Neal, in 1808.

⁵ Zebulon Barnum, Jedediah Riggs, Isaac Southwell, and Dan'l

Brown moved into town the same year, and Abel Barnum and Oliver Castle in 1805. The first death was that of Isaac's wife, in 1806; the first inn was opened by Jephtha Barnum, in 1809; and the first store by Dan'l Van Horn, in 1810. The first school was taught by Nancy Judson, in the summer of 1813.

¹⁰ An academy was established at this place in 1828. Beside a participating in the general fund it was endowed by the Legislature with the proceeds of the ferry house, which some years yielded $800 to $900. When the Lewiston Suspension Bridge was finished, the ferry was abandoned and the academy discontinued.

the river bank in the s. w. part of the town.¹ The site of the village of Lewiston was occupied by the French at different times previous to and during the Old French War; but the first permanent settlements were made about the year 1800.² The first church is said to have been founded by Brant, at the Mohawk settlement, a little e. of Lewiston.³ There are now 8 churches in town.⁴

LOCKPORT—was taken from Cambria and Royalton, Feb. 2, 1824. It extends from the central part to the southern bounds of the co. The surface in the northern part of the town, through which the mountain ridge extends, is broken and hilly; in the central and southern parts it is level. Eighteen Mile and Mud Creeks are the principal streams. The soil is a clayey loam intermixed with marl, and in the n. it is stony. The Niagara limestone crops out along the mountain ridge, and extensive quarries have been opened in and near the village of Lockport.⁵ Underlying this is a stratum of hydraulic limestone, from which waterlime is made; and sandstone belonging to the Medina formation is also quarried s. of the ridge.⁶ The manufactures of the town are extensive, and consist principally of flour, lumber, leather, and machinery. Lockport,⁷ (p. v.), the co. seat, was incorp. March 26, 1829. It is situated on the Erie Canal and the declivities of the mountain ridge. It is an important station on the Niagara Falls R. R., and is the terminus of the branch road to Buffalo. The water-power created by the canal locks at this place has given rise to numerous and extensive manufacturing establishments.⁸ The village contains 15 churches, a high school,⁹ 3 newspaper offices, 3 banks of issue, and 1 savings' bank. Pop. 8,939. Wrights Corners, (p. o.), in the n. part of the town, and Rapids, (p. o.), in the s. part, are hamlets. Hickory Corners, in the w., is a p. o. The first settlement was made at Cold Spring, about 1 mi. e. of Lockport Village, by Charles Wilbur, in 1805.¹⁰ There are 21 churches in town.¹¹ Ex-Gov. Washington Hunt is a resident of this town.

NEWFANE—was formed from Hartland, Somerset, and Wilson, March 20, 1824. It extends from near the center of the co. to the lake shore. The surface is level. Eighteen Mile Creek crosses the town, dividing it into two unequal portions. The soil is generally a sandy loam; but in some parts it is clayey. Olcott, (p. v.), on the lake shore, at the mouth of Eighteen Mile Creek, contains 3 churches and about 30 dwellings. Charlotte, (Newfane p. o.), on Eighteen Mile Creek, near the center of the town, contains 2 churches and about 25 dwellings. Hess Road, in the e., and Coomer, in the w. part, are p. offices. The first settlement was made in 1807, by Wm. Chambers¹² and John Brewer, from Canada.¹³ The first religious services were conducted in 1811, by a colored Methodist minister from Canada. There are 5 churches in town.¹⁴

NIAGARA—was formed from Cambria, June 1, 1812, as "Schlosser;" its name was changed Feb. 14, 1816. Pendleton was taken off in 1827, and Wheatfield in 1836. It is the s. w. corner town of the co., occupying the angle made by the abrupt northerly bend of Niagara River. Its

² Among the settlers who were in the town in 1800 were Jos. and John Howell. — Middaugh, Henry Hough, Henry Mills, — McBride, Thos. Hustler, Wm. Gambel, and Fred'k Woodman. Geo. Howell was the first child born in the town and in the co. in 1799. Middaugh kept tavern in 1788, and McBride built a tannery about 1799. The first sawmill was built by Jos. Howell, in 1808, and the first gristmill by John Gray, in 1815. The Tuscarora Reservation is in this town.

⁶ The principal quarries from which sandstone is obtained are at Rattlesnake Hill, s. w. of the village. This stone is used principally for flagging and paving.

⁸ Five flouring mills, with an aggregate of 30 run of stone, 7 sawmills, 5 stove and shingle factories, 1 sash, door, and blind factory, 1 planing mill, 2 tanneries, a woolen factory, 2 machine shops and foundries, a plow factory, a distillery, and a plaster-mill. A hydraulic canal three-fourths of a mi. long has been constructed upon the declivity of the ridge, from which the water is distributed to various manufactures. The water is taken from the upper level of the canal and returned to the lower. A considerable proportion of the water-power is obtained from the water taken from the lower level.

⁹ The "Lockport Union School" was incorp. March 31, 1847. Connected with it is an academic department, under the supervision of the regents. The number of pupils in attendance in 1856 was 742.

¹⁰ Job-diah Darling settled in the town in 1808. — Gregory in 1809, Thomas Miles, William Wakeman, David Carlin, and Geo. Miller in 1810, and Alex. Freeman and John Dye in 1811. The first inn was opened by Chas. Wilbur in 1800; the first sawmill was built by Alex. Freeman, in 1811, and the first gristmill by Otis Hathaway, on Eighteen Mile Creek. This was a small mill, which was built in 20 days. L. A Spaulding was then building, and soon after finished, a stone mill of 7 stories in height. Simeon Ford erected a wooden factory in 1798. The first school was taught by Orinda Moore, in the summer of 1816.

¹³ Cotton settled in the town the same year, Burgoine, Kemp, and Peter Hopkins in 1808, and Wm. and James Windsor in 1810. Levi Ellis built the first saw and grist mill, in 1811, for James Van Horn. Asa Douglas opened a store at 06 ct. in 1812. The first school was taught by Bezaiah Smith, in 1815.

surface is level. Cayuga and Gill Creeks are the principal streams. The soil is a heavy clay. Goat Island and the American part of Niagara Falls belong to this town. At Suspension Bridge, on the river bank, is a sulphur spring, which has been fitted up for the accommodation of visitors. Niagara Falls, (p. v.), incorp. July 7, 1848, is situated on Niagara River, at the cataract. It is the terminus of the Rochester & N. E. R. R., of the N. E. & Lewiston R. R., of the Buffalo & N. E. R. R., and of the Canandaigua & N. E. R. R. It contains 5 churches, 1 newspaper office, 11 hotels, and several manufacturing establishments.¹ Pop. 2,976. The village owes its existence to its proximity to the great cataract. Thousands of visitors, from every part of the U. S., and from almost every country in the world, annually visit this, one of nature's greatest wonders. Nearly all the business of the community is connected with this periodical visitation, and consists of hotel keeping, livery business, and matters of a kindred nature. A large and by no means unimportant business has grown out of the sale of spar ornaments and fancy articles made by the Indians. Niagara City, (Suspension Bridge p. o.) incorp. June 8, 1851, is situated on Niagara River, 2 mi. below the falls. The Rochester & N. E. R. R. connects at this place with the Lewiston & N. E. R. R., and with the Great Western Railway across the Suspension Bridge.² The village contains 6 churches, a newspaper office, 15 hotels, and a charitable institution known as the De Veaux College for Destitute Orphans and Children.³ Pop. 1,365. This place participates with Niagara Falls in the business made by the annual influx of visitors to the cataract. No place of equal size on the Continent has a greater amount of hotel accommodations than these. La Salle is a p. o. at the mouth of Cayuga Creek. In the fall of 1678 the French voyageurs La Salle, Tonti, and Father Hennepin, with their companions, established themselves at the mouth of Cayuga Creek and remained until the "Griffin" was launched the following season.⁴ Other places along the river were temporarily occupied by the French at different times; but the first permanent settlement was made at Schlosser in 1759, by John Stedman, accompanied by his brothers Wm. and Philip.⁵ The first religious services were conducted by Father Hennepin, at the time of the French sojourn at Cayuga Creek.⁶ There are now 12 churches in town.⁷

PENDELTON⁸—was formed from Niagara, April 16, 1827. It is the central town on the s. border of the co. The surface is level or gently undulating. Tonawanda Creek forms the s. bounds of the town, and Sawyers Creek crosses the w. part. The soil is generally a clayey loam. Pendleton, (p. o.), on Tonawanda Creek, contains 1 church and 16 dwellings. Pendleton Center, Beach Ridge, and Mapleton are p. offices. The first settlement was made in 1805, by Jacob Christman.⁹ There are 5 churches in town.¹⁰

PORTER¹¹—was formed from Cambria, June 1, 1812. Wilson was taken off in 1818. It is the most westerly town on the lake shore. Its surface is level. Four Mile and Six Mile Creeks, and the w. branch of Twelve Mile Creek, cross the town in a northerly direction, and Niagara River forms its w. boundary. The soil along the lake shore is composed principally of a marly clay; in the central and southern parts it is a sandy and gravelly loam. Besides the crops which

³ The De Veaux College was established according to the provisions of the will of Samuel De Veaux, who bequeathed for that purpose personal property to the amount of $134,442 and real estate valued at $30,215, besides 330 acres of mediocare land. The building was erected in 1855-56. It is built of stone, has 2 stories and another above the ground story, and a front of 100 ft., with a depth of 54 ft. The members of the school are supplied by the institution with food, clothing, and books. By the provisions of the will of Mr. De Veaux, the president of the college must always be a clergyman of the Prot. Church, and the institute itself under the control of the Diocese of Western New York. Members of the school are appointed by the board of trustees, the children of parents belonging to the Prot. Church having the preference. When once received, the children are under the sole charge of the trustees until they attain their majority. See North. Doc. 1858, No. 118. The college reports annually to the Legislature. See page 452.

⁶ In his account of their sojourn Father Hennepin says, "I had one hut especially designed for observing prayers in holy-days and Sundays."

The first settlement was made in 1803, by Thos. Slayton and Gad Warner.¹⁰ The first religious services were held in 1806; the first religious society (Christian) was organized in 1817, and the first church edifice was built the same year.¹¹ There are 12 churches in town.¹²

SOMERSET—was formed from Hartland, Feb. 8, 1823, and a part of Newfane was taken off in 1824. It is the most eastern town upon the lake shore. The surface is level. Golden Hill and Fish Creeks cross the town in a s. e. direction. The soil is generally a sandy loam; but in some places it is clayey. Near the mouth of Fish Creek is a small salt spring, from which salt was formerly made. Somerset, (p. v.) s. of the center of the town, contains 3 churches and about 30 dwellings. County Line, on the line of Orleans co., and Lake Road and West Somerset, are p. offices. The first settlement was made in 1810, by Jacob Fitts and Zacharias Patterson.¹³ The first religious services were conducted by Daniel Shepardson, in 1816, and the first church (Bap.) was organized in 1820. There are 5 churches in town.¹⁴

WHEATFIELD—was formed from Niagara, May 12, 1836. It is the most southerly town in the co., and lies partly on Niagara River and partly on Tonawanda Creek. The surface is level or gently undulating. Cayuga and Sawyers Creeks cross the town, the former in the western part and the latter in the eastern. The soil is generally a hard, clayey loam, difficult to cultivate. About a mi. e. of Tonawanda is a sour spring, and about 2 mi. n. a sulphur spring. A considerable part of the town is yet unimproved. The greater proportion of the population consists of immigrants from Prussia and other parts of Germany.¹⁵ Bergholtz,¹⁶ (p. v.) near the center of the town, contains 1 church and about 80 houses; Martinsville, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, 1 church

³ See pages 45, 452.

⁴ John Lloyd, who was a soldier stationed at Fort Niagara in 1799, settled in town in 1801, 3 mi. from the fort. Silas H. Atkins settled in 1802, Thos. Brown, Elijah Doty, John Clement, and John Watchouse, in 1803, and John Brown in 1806. Robert Gurnsett kept the first inn, and John Young the first store, in 1808. John Clapsaddle built the first sawmill, in 1810, and the first gristmill, in 1817. The first school was taught by Wm. Cogswell, in the winter of 1806.

⁶ Named from Royalton, Vt.

⁷ So named from its being midway on the canal between Neepawa (now Albion) and Lockport.

⁹ Founded in 1854.

¹⁰ Joshua Slayton, — Elsworth, London Andrews, and Alex. Heskins, settled in town in 1801, Stephen Bugby, Stephen Hoyt, and Samuel Capron in 1803, and Baranum Trevelick in 1806. The first birth was that of Paul Vaughn; the first marriage, that of Henry Elsworth and Polly Gurnish, in the spring of 1809; the first death, that of — Elsworth, in 1804. Gad Warner built the first sawmill, in 1817. The first tavern was opened in 1819, by — Fish.

¹¹ This was one of the first churches upon the Holland Purchase. It was painted red, and was called "The Red Meeting House."

¹² M. E. Bap., Christian, Cong., F. W. Bap., Luth., Presb., R. C., Univ., and Wes. Meth.

and about 60 houses; Johnsburg, in the central part, 1 church and about 50 houses; and Walmore,¹ (p. v.) in the s. w. corner of the town, 2 churches and 12 houses. There are straggling German villages. Shawnee, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner of the town, contains 1 church and 15 houses. Tonawanda, (p. v.) on the line of Erie co., lies partly within this town. The first settlement was made by Geo. Van Slyke, in 1802, at the mouth of Tonawanda Creek.² There are 7 churches in town.³

WILSON⁴—was formed from Porter, April 10, 1818, and a part of Newfane was taken off in 1824. It is situated on the lake shore, s. w. of the center of the co. The surface is level. The e. branch of Twelve Mile Creek⁵ crosses the town near the center, and the w. branch in the s. w. part. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. Wilson, (p. v.) incorp. June 25, 1858, is situated on the e. side of Twelve Mile Creek, near its mouth. It contains 3 churches and the Wilson College Institute. Pop. 666. East Wilson, South Wilson, and North Wilson are parishes. The first settlement was made in 1810, by Stephen Sheldon, Reuben Wilson, — George Mann, John Eastman, and Gilbert Purly.⁶ The first church (Presb.) was organized Jan. 18, 1819. There are now 3 churches in town; Bap., Presb., and M. E.

ONEIDA COUNTY.

This county was formed from Herkimer, March 15, 1798. Lewis and Jefferson were taken off in 1805, and a part of Oswego in 1816. Portions were annexed to Clinton in 1801 and to Madison in 1836. A portion of Chenango was annexed in 1804.¹ It lies near the center of the State, 100 mi. from Albany, and contains 1,215 sq. mi. A broad valley, nearly level, extends e. and w. through the center of the co., and from it, both n. and s., the surface rises into a broken and hilly region. The highlands which occupy the s. part are arranged in ridges extending s. and s., the highest summits, on the s. border, being 600 to 1,000 ft. above the valley of the Mohawk. North of the central valley the surface rises abruptly to a height of 800 to 1,200 ft., and spreads out into a nearly level plateau, broken by the ravines of the streams. The e. part of the central valley is drained by the Mohawk, flowing e., and the w. part by Wood Creek, flowing w. This valley affords a natural road from the Hudson to the great lakes, and is the lowest pass through the Appalachian Mt. system. The Mohawk rises upon the n. border of the co., and flows in a southerly direction to Rome, and thence s. e. to the e. border of the co. Its principal tributaries from the n. are Nine Mile Creek and Lansing Kil, and from the s. Sauquoit and Oriskany Creeks. Black River flows across the n. e. corner of the co. East Canada Creek forms a portion of the e. boundary; the head branches of the Unadilla and Chenango drain the s. border, and Oneida, Wood, and Fish Creeks drain the w. part. Oneida Lake, extending several mi. along the w. border, is the only large body of water in the co. In the extreme n. e. corner are several small lakes and ponds.

The rocks of this co. include nearly the whole series lying between the gneiss, which covers the n. e. part, and the Hamilton group, which outcrops on the s. hills. The Trenton limestone, Utica slate, Oneida conglomerate, and Clinton group have received their names from being so distinctly developed in this co. Of useful minerals the co. has the lenticular clay iron ore of the Clinton group, bog ore in the swamps near Oneida Lake, and, probably, magnetic ore in the n. e. part. Marl and peat have been found in some places. Waterlime and gypsum quarries have been wrought to some extent. Building stone in great variety and of superior quality has been extensively quarried. Mineral springs are found in several places. The soil in the n. e., derived from the disintegration of the primitive rocks, is light and sandy, and is capable of producing only a scanty vegetation. This region is sparsely settled, and is not capable of supporting many inhabitants. The central valley is one of the most fertile portions of the State. The soil is a fine quality of sandy and gravelly loam and alluvium, finely tempered with lime and gypsum. The highland region s. of the river has a soil composed of clay and sandy and gravelly loam, and is best adapted to pasture. The richness and diversity of the soil make this co. one of the best agricultural regions of the State. The people are chiefly engaged in agriculture, the principal branches of which are grain raising in the valleys and dairying and stock raising upon the hills. Hops are largely cultivated in the s. towns. The manufactures of the co. are extensive, though principally confined to Utica and the villages along Oriskany and Sauquoit Creeks.

The county is a half-shire, the co. buildings being respectively located at Utica and Rome.² The courthouses and jails at both places are well built and conveniently arranged. The clerk's ¹ Montg. m. s. Herkimer, and Oneida counties originally extended in long narrow strips to the St. Lawrence. In 1801, Madison, then an uninhabited town upon the N. border—was annexed to Clinton co. It is not certain whether Tracts 1, 2, and 3 of Madison's Ont. were intended by this arrangement to belong to Clinton; but in 1802 they were annexed to St. Lawrence co. Oneida co. was named from the Oneida Indians, who inhabited and owned this and some adjoining countries. The word Oneida signifies "the people of the stone." The Indians had a strange opinion concerning a certain stone, which followed them in their wanderings and finally rested on the summit of one of the highest hills in the co., from which their language could be seen to a great distance, and upon which they assembled to hold council or prepare for war. A boulder of gneiss, which is often identified as this palladium of the Oneidas, a few years since was taken from the farm of James H. Gregg, in the town of Stockbridge, and placed in a prominent position near the entrance of the Utica Cemetery.

² The co. seat of Herkimer co. was originally located at Whitesboro; and upon the division of the co. the records were retained by Oneida. The act creating Oneida co. directed the first courts to be held at the schoolhouse near Fort Schuyler, (Rome) and required the courthouse to be built within 1 mi. of the fort. By an act of April 6, 1801, Thomas Jenkins and Bez. L. Husmer, of Hudson, John Thompson, of Stillwater, and Burk Lane, of Troy, were appointed to locate the courthouse and jail of Oneida co. These buildings were completed several years afterward and the courts were held here and at Whitesboro during many years. The courthouse and jail at Rome were burned about 1848, and rebuilt within 3 years after. The clerk's office was removed to Utica in 1816, and the academy at office is a fireproof building, located at Utica. The poorhouse is situated upon a farm of 1.7 acres about 2 mi. s. w. of Rome. It has an average of 222 inmates, supported at a cost of $1,000 per week each. Separate buildings have been provided for lunatics and for a pesthouse.¹

The Erie Canal extends through Utica, Whitestown, Rome, and Verona. The Chenango Canal extends s. from Utica, up the valley of Oriskany Creek, through New Hartford, Kirkland, Marshall, and a corner of Augusta, connecting with the Susquehanna River at Binghamton. The Black River Canal extends n. from Rome along the valleys of the Mohawk and Lausling Kill through Western and Boonville, connecting with Black River above Lyons Falls, in Lewis co. The Oneida Lake Canal extends w. from Rome to Wood Creek and along that stream to its mouth. The N. Y. Central R. R. extends through Utica, Whitestown, Rome, and Verona. The Black River & Utica R. R. extends from Utica s. through Marcy, Trenton, Remsen, and Stenben to Bensonville.² The Watertown & Rome R. R. extends from Rome s. w. through Amsville and Camden. A large number of plank roads have been built in the co.; but they are mostly abandoned.

Four daily, 9 weekly, 1 semi-monthly, 1 quarterly, and 4 monthly newspapers are now published in the co.³

At an early period of the English occupation of New York the colonists became acquainted with that place was used for holding courts for many years. A new courthouse was built at Utica in 1841-73. The first co. officers were Joseph Zainger, Fox & And. p., Geo. Huntington and David Ostrom, Jays p.; James Platt, Clark; Wm. Collinath, Shuffe; and Arthur Biese, Sargeant.

¹ An act was passed in 1879 for the sale of the poorhouse premises and the purchase of a new site.

² This road has been partially built along Black River through Lewis co.; but work upon it is now suspended. It was the original design to extend the road to Clayton and Ogdensburg.

³ The Western Courier was commenced at Whitesboro' in Jan. 1794, by Oliver P. Eaton. He was succeeded by Lewis, and afterward by Lewis & Webb. The paper was continued about 6 years.

The White-stone Gazette was commenced in June, 1796, by Wm. McLean. In 1798 it was removed to Utica and continued as

The White-stone Gazette and Cuba's Patriot. In 1806 it was purchased by Joan H. Lathrop, and was soon after merged in

The Utica Patriot, commenced by Asabel Seward and Ira Merrill, Mr. Lathrop continuing as editor. In 1811 it passed into the hands of Wm. H. Maynard; and in 1816 it was united with

The Patriot, commenced in Jan. 1815, by Seward & Williams, and the combined paper was published as

The Patriot and Patriot, W. H. Maynard, editor, and Seward & Williams, publishers. In 1821 its name was changed to

The Utica Herald. In 1825 it was united with the Columbian Gazette and published as

The Sentinel and Gazette. In 1828 S. D. Dakin became proprietor, and in 1829 he sold to Rufus Northway and D. S. Porter. In 1831 Mr. Porter withdrew. In 1834 Mr. Northway united the Liberator with it and changed its name to

The Oneida Whig. In 1848 it was merged in the Oneida Weekly Herald. In 1842 Mr. Northway commenced

The Utica Daily Gazette, Wm. Allen and R. T. Sherman, editors, Francis Clark, Wm. H. Underhill, Ezekiel Barron, Alex. Seward, H. C. Potter, J. M. Lyon, John Auburn, S. D. Jewell, and Ellis & Roberts were successively interested in its publication. In Jan. 1857, it was united with

The Utica Morning Herald, and assumed the name of the Utica Morning Herald and Gazette, and is still published.

The Columbian Patriotic Gazette was commenced at Rome by Thos. Walker and Ebenezer Eaton in Aug. 1799. In 1800 Mr. Eaton retired, and in 1805 it was removed to Utica and published as

The Columbian Gazette; and in 1825 it was united with the Utica Sentinel by Wm. J. Bacon and S. D. Dakin.

The Liberator was commenced in 1829 by B. B. Hotchkiss, editor, and W. Williams, publisher. It was united with the Oneida Whig in 1834.

The Oneida Morning Herald was commenced by E. W. Roberts, R. U. Sherman, and Geo. R. Colston, in Nov. 1847. A weekly edition was also published, called

The Oneida Weekly Herald. In 1848 Mr. Colston withdrew, and in 1857 the papers were united with the Utica Daily Gazette.

Utica Christian Magazine was commenced by the Oneida Association and Presbytery in 1813, and was published about 3 years.

The Owl was published at Utica by Henry Goodfellow & Co. about 3 months in 1814.

The Civil and Religious Intelligencer was started in 1815 at Sangerfield by Jos. Tenney. In 1825 it was changed to The Sangerfield Intelligencer, and in 1825 it was removed to "Fronlen Village," now Fabius, Oneida Co.

The Utica Observer was commenced by E. Dorchester in 1816,

In 1818 it was removed to Rome and its name changed to

The Oneida Observer. In 1819 it was returned to Utica and its original name was resumed. A. G. Parry, J. A. Maynard, Eli Maynard, C. C. Griffith, John F. Pugh, John F. Kittle, and A. M. Beardsley were successively interested in the publication. In 1848 a daily edition was issued, called

The Utica Daily Observer. In 1856 the papers united with the Utica Democrat, and are now published by D. C. Grove, the weekly edition as the Observer and Democrat.

The Utica Democrat was commenced by John G. Hoyt in 1836. It was successively published by Edward Morris, Charles M. Hatch, and Benjamin Webb. In 1854 D. C. Grove became owner, and united it with the Observer.

The Utica Christian Repository, now, was commenced by Merrill & Hastings in 1822, Wm. Williams, publisher. About 1825 its name was changed to

The Western Recorder, a weekly religious paper, G. Tracy, publisher. It was continued several years.

The Baptist Register was commenced by Elders, Ophsha & Wiley. In 1825 it was published under the auspices of the Baptist denomination, Alex. Beeley, editor, and Ophsha Bennett, publisher. In 1830 it was leased to Bennett & Bright for 5 years; and in 1836 it was renewed for 7 years. In 1840 Mr. Bright withdrew. It was successively published by Bennett, Dakin & Hawley, Dolphus Bennett, A. M. Foote, and D. B. Pratt, and in 1854 it was sold and united with the New York Recorder, of the city of New York.

The Baptist Standing-School Journal, now, was commenced in 1828 by C. Bennett.

The Universalist, now, was commenced at Utica by J. S. Thompson, L. K. Smith, A. G. B. Fisher in 1827. It was removed to Philadelphia in about 1830.

The Western Sunday School Festival and Christian Magazine was commenced at Utica by G. S. Wilson in 1827.

The Utica Intelligencer was commenced by U. S. Fly in 1829. In 1830 Joseph H. Buckingham became editor, and Joseph Colwell, publisher, and in 1833 the paper was united with

The Mechanics' Press, commenced by J. M. Ladd & S. H. Kim in 1829. The united papers were published collectively as

The Utica Intelligencer and Mechanics' Press, by Joseph Colwell, publisher.

The Utica Magazine was commenced in 1827. It soon passed into the hands of Rev. Dolphus Bennett, who issued it semi-monthly as

The Evangelical Magazine. In 1830 he united it with the Gospel Advocate of Auburn, and published it weekly as the Evangelical Magazine and Gospel Advocate. In 1841 it was merged in the Christian Ambassador, since published simultaneously in New York and Auburn.

The Gospel Messenger was commenced at Auburn by Rev. John C. Rudd in 1827, and was removed to Utica about 1855 and published as

The Gospel Messenger and Church Record. After the death of Mr. Rudd, Rev. Wm. A. Matson became editor. The paper is still published as

The Gospel Messenger.

The Oneida Citizen was published at Utica by G. S. Wilson—Bennett & Bright, publishers—in 1837.

The Christianian Journal was published at Utica in 1841 by E. S. Barrows.

The Oneida Observer, semi-weekly, was published at Utica in 1842 by Augustus Graves, M. R. Bailett, editor.

The Liberator was published at Utica by Wm. S. Pugh in 1842. The Oneida Democrat was commenced at Utica in 1853, and continued about 2 years.

the wonderful natural channel of navigation that extended through this co., and which, with a short and easy portage, connected the Mohawk with the great lakes and the fertile regions of the West. About the commencement of the last century, plans were proposed for improving this route and for fortifying the most important points upon it. The portage at Rome, from the Mohawk to Wood Creek, became a point of the first importance, and it was occupied as early as 1725; and a fortification known as Fort Bull was built upon Wood Creek soon after. On the 27th of March, 1756, this fort was surprised by a party of French and Indians, under M. De Lery, who had penetrated through an interior route from La Presentation, on the St. Lawrence, by an exhausting march of 15 days. The garrison was unprepared; yet they made a spirited but ineffectual resistance, and nearly every person perished. Alarm was carried to Fort Williams, on the Mohawk, 4 mi. distant, and a force was hastily sent to relieve Fort Bull, but arrived too late to render assistance. The enemy, after wasting the stores and provisions, retired with their prisoners and plunder toward Black River. Oswego was besieged by the French during the summer, and was surrendered on the 14th of Aug. Alarmed at the success of the French, and greatly in fear for his personal safety, Col. Webb, then commanding on the Mohawk, destroyed Forts Williams and Craven, and hastily retreated down the valley to Albany, leaving the frontiers to the mercy of the savages; and the sequel is written in blood in the annals of the Upper Mohawk Valley.

Fort Stanwix was erected in the summer of 1758, on the site of the present village of Rome. It was heavily armed; but the war ended without furnishing occasion for its use, and upon the peace it was allowed to fall into ruin. In June, 1776, Col. Dayton was sent by the Continental authorities to rebuild this fort, which was from this time named Fort Schuyler. Col. Peter Gansevoort was ordered hither in April, 1777, with the 3d Regiment, and while still unfinished the fort was besieged by the Tories and Indians under St. Leger. This movement formed part of a plan of operations against the colonies which contemplated the reduction of this fort and the ultimate meeting at Albany of the three British armies from Lake Champlain, the Mohawk, and New York. To relieve this post, Gen. Herkimer was sent with a detachment of troops chiefly raised in "Troy's" co. This army fell into an ambuscade at Oriskany, where the memorable battle, elsewhere noticed, was fought on the 5th of Aug. 1777. While most of the savages were absent from their camp, a well conducted sortie from Fort Schuyler, by a party under Colonel Willett, attacked the camp of the enemy and took a large quantity of baggage and stores, 5 British standards, and the papers of most of the officers. The discontent which this incident occasioned among the Indians was increased to insubordination by the mysterious reports brought in by the emissaries of the Americans; and on the 22d of Aug. the siege was raised, and the enemy retreated by the way of Oswego to Montreal. Portions of these troops subsequently joined Gen. Burgoyne and shared the fortunes of that officer. The fort was destroyed by fire and flood in May, 1781. Through the influence of Rev. S. Kirkland and others, the Oneidas were induced to remain neutral or join the American cause, and were rewarded by liberal concessions at subsequent treaties.¹

Settlement had extended into the borders of the co. before the Revolution; but every vestige of improvement was swept away during the war. Civilization re-appeared with peace; and before the beginning of the present century the hardy pioneers of New England had pressed into nearly every town. The completion of the Western Inland Navigation Co.'s improvement in 1796, and of the Seneca turnpike and other early thoroughfares for emigration, and the construction of the Erie Canal and the 3 lateral canals which here join it, and of the railroads which cross it, have formed marked eras in the improvement and prosperity of the co. In wealth, population, and enterprise it now ranks among the first cos. in the State.

ANNVILLE²—was formed from Lee, Florence, Camden, and Vienna, April 12, 1823. It lies on the N. border of the co., W. of the center. Its surface is broken with ridges or swells, running E. and W., gradually increasing in height toward the N. There appear to have been at some period three small lakes in the town, two of which have broken through their barriers and left fine, fertile valleys. The E. branch of Fish Creek³ forms a part of the E. boundary, and flows through the S. E. part; and the W. branch of the same stream forms a part of the S. boundary. Several small streams are tributaries of the E. branch, the principal of which are Furnace and Fall Creeks. On the latter, near its mouth, are three falls, of 14, 20, and 60 ft. respectively. The soil is clayey in the S., and sandy, gravelly, and stony in the other parts. Glennmore, (p. v.) near the center, contains 2 sawmills, 1 gristmill, and 15 houses. Taberg,⁴ (p. v.) in the S. part, contains 2 churches, 3

AUGUSTA³—was formed from Whitestown, March 15, 1798. A part of Vernon was taken off in 1802, and a part of Stockbridge (Madison co.) in 1836. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is a rolling upland. Two ranges of hills extend n. and s. through the town on opposite sides of Skanandoa Creek, affording limestone of excellent quality for lime and building purposes. Oriskany Creek flows through the extreme s. e. corner, and Skanandoa Creek flows s. through near the center. The soil is a fertile, clayey and sandy loam. Augusta, (p. v.) near the center, contains 2 churches and 100 inhabitants. Knox Corners, (p. v.) s. w. of the center, contains a church and 200 inhabitants. Oriskany Falls, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, contains a church, a saw and grist mill, machine shop, distillery, and 711 inhabitants. The first settlement was made by — Gunn, in 1793.⁴ The first religious services were held at the house of — Fairbanks, in 1794.⁵

AVA⁶—was formed from Boonville, May 12, 1846. It is the central town on the n. border of the co. Its surface is a moderately uneven upland, 700 to 1,000 ft. above the Rome level. It is drained by Fish Creek, the e. and w. branches of the Mohawk, Point Rock, and Blue Brooks. Several small sulphur springs have been found in town. The soil is a gravelly loam. Ava Corners, (Ava p. o.) w. of the center, contains 20 houses. The first settlement was commenced by Ebenezer Harper, in 1798.⁷ A Friends meeting house is the only place of worship in town.

BOONVILLE⁸—was formed from Leyden, (Lewis co.) March 28, 1805. Ava was taken off in 1846. It lies on the n. border of the co., e. of the center. Its surface is a hilly, broken upland, 800 to 1,000 ft. above the canal at Rome. Black River flows through the s. e. part, and Lansing Kil rises near the center and flows s. to the Mohawk. Its soil is clayey loam, in many places thickly covered with boulders and often inclining to sand. Near the village are immense deposits of drift. Its e. border extends into the great forest, and presents the meager, sandy soil and naked rocks peculiar to that region. There is a gas spring $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi. w. of the village, and a sulphur spring $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi. s. The latter has acquired some local celebrity. Boonville, (p. v.) in the s. w. part, was incorp. in 1855. It contains 3 churches, a printing office, several manufactories, and 1,000 inhabitants. It is the present n. terminus of the Black River & Utica R. R. It is on the summit level of the Black River Canal, and has a large trade with the country n., w., and e. Alder Creek, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, contains a church and 20 houses. Forest Port, (p. v.) near the s. e. corner, on the line of Remsen, contains 20 houses. Hawkinsville, (p. v.) s. w. of the center, contains a saw and grist mill, chair factory, curdling mill, and 339 inhabitants. Hurlbutville is a p. o. The first settlement commenced in 1795.⁹ The first church was formed in 1805.¹⁰

BRIDGEWATER¹¹—was formed from Sangerfield, March 24, 1797. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is uneven. The valley of the w. branch of the Unadilla and its tributaries, locally known as "Bridgewater Flats," in the n., is about a mi. wide, but decreases to about Glass and Iron Manufacturing Co. began operations here in 1809. In 1811 a blast furnace was erected. Formerly hollow ware was extensively made; but at present pig-iron is the chief product.

² Presb., M. E. Bap., and R. C.

³ This town is included in the s. part of the tract leased from the Onondas in 1794 to Peter Smith. The lease is said to have been for 99 years. The tract was divided into 4 allotments, the first of which lies wholly within this town. The lease was assigned by the State in 1795-97, and patents were granted to settlers, Smith retaining 6 lots in the town as part payment for his lease. The first settlers took their lands as tenants under Smith. Part of the Oneida Reservation, purchased in 1795 and sold at auction in 1797, is included in the s. part of the town.

⁴ Among the early settlers were Benjamin Warren, David Mont n., John Allen, Ichabod Stafford, Joseph and Abraham Forbes, Isaac and Benjamin Allen, Amos Parker, Thos. Cassady, Ozias and Lemuel Hart, James Reyns 948, Abel Prior, Thomas Spauld., Eben Saxton, Abel Lindsey, and Francis O'Toole. The first birth was that of Peter Smith Gunn; the first marriage, that of Daniel Hart and Catherine Putnam; and the first death, that of Ebenezer Putnam, in 1795. T. Cassady built the first sawmill, in 1795, at Oriskany Falls. A gristmill was built the next year.

⁶ Named from a city in Burmah.

⁸ Named from Gerrit Boon, agent of the Holland Land Co., who made the first settlement. In early times it was called "Boon's Upper Settlement."

of the s. e. part. The soil is of good quality and well adapted to grain and grass. Floyd Corners (Floyd p. o.) contains a church and 20 houses. The first settlement commenced about 1790, by Capt. Benjamin Pike.¹ There are 4 churches in town; Cong., Welsh Meth., Union,² and R. C.

KIRKLAND³—was formed from Paris, April 13, 1827. Marshall was taken off in 1829, a part was annexed to New Hartford in 1834, and a part of Paris was annexed in 1839. It lies in the interior, s. of the center of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, divided into two general ridges by the valley of Oriskany Creek. The hills are 200 to 500 ft. high, and the declivities are generally steep. Oriskany Creek flows s. e. through near the center. The soil is a rich, calcareous loam. Near Clinton Village are quarries of good building stone. Iron ore is found; and several thousand tons are annually shipped by the Chenango Canal, to Constantia, Taberg, and Penn. Great attention is paid to fruit growing, and this town excels every other town in the co. in the amount of fruit raised. The town derives its greatest interest from its extensive educational institutions, which entitle it to the appellation of the Literary Emporium of Oneida co. Clinton (p. v.) was incorp. April 12, 1843. Hamilton College⁴ is located upon a hill overlooking the Oriskany Valley. Its buildings consist of Dexter Hall, or North College; Kirkland Hall, or Middle College; Hamilton Hall, or South College; a chapel, laboratory, and an observatory. The course of study embraces a collegiate and a law department. A grammar school, under a separate board of trustees, is connected as a preparatory department. The college libraries contain about 10,000 volumes, and the cabinet of natural history contains about as many specimens. The village also contains 5 churches, 2 newspaper offices, the Clinton Liberal Institute,⁵ a grammar, a boarding, and a high school, and a few manufactories. Pop. 1,174. Manchester. (Kirkland p. o.) a manufacturing village,⁶ in the s. part, contains 30 houses. Franklin, near the center, contains the Franklin Iron Works⁷ and 35 houses. Clarks Mills,⁸ in the s. corner, is a manufacturing village, and contains a cotton factory, grist and saw mill, and 40 houses. The first settlement commenced in 1787, by 8 families.⁹ Religious services were first held in the cabin of Capt. Foot.¹⁰

¹ Among the early settlers were Stephen Moulton, Wm. and Nathaniel Allen, James Chase, Elisha Lake, — Howard, Hope Smith, David Bryan, Samuel Denison, James Bartlett, — Putney, Jarvis Pike, Capt. Nathan Townsend, and Thomas Bacon—nearly from Conn. The first death was that of — Foster; the second, that of Nathan Thompson, who was killed by a falling tree.

² The plan of ownership of the union church is peculiar. The seats are owned and transferred by purchase, and the owners meet on the first Monday in each year and vote what denomination shall occupy the house the ensuing year.

These causes have embarrassed the finances of the college; but efforts are about being made to relieve it from debt. The sum of $50,000 was granted by the State, June 19, 1842, to aid in founding the college. Wm. H. Maynard, of Utica, in 1832 gave $20,000 to endow a professorship of law; and S. Newton Deaver, of Whitesboro, in 1836 gave his personal obligations for $15,000 to endow a professorship of the Greek and Latin languages. The observatory was built in 1834, at a cost of $5,000 besides the instruments, which have cost more than twice that sum.

⁵ The Clinton Liberal Institute was founded in 1822; it is under the patronage of the Universalist denomination, and has a male and a female department. The building for the former is of stone, 96 by 52 feet, 4 stories above the basement, and has accommodations for 100 students. The female department is an elegant structure, 114 by 60 ft., 2 stories high above the basement, and has an average attendance of 50 pupils. A small monthly paper, named the "Lead-Bed," "Summer Leaves," "Autumn Leaves," or "Wintergreen," according to the season, is published at this institution. Home Cottage Seminary is a private institution, established in 1834 as a ladies' seminary, by Mrs. L. M. Barker. The edifice is 69 by 112 ft., and cost—including acres of land—$2,000. It has been united with another ladies' school under Miss A. Chapman, and is very prosperous. An issue styled the "Home Cottage quarterly" is published by the pupils. This seminary forms the female department of the grammar school. The Clinton High School, for males only, was established May, 1858, by Rev. E. W. Dwight and D. A. Holbrook. It is located 2 mi. from the Village, cost $18,000, and has accommodations for 80 students.

⁹ Moses Foot, his three sons—Tronson, Luther, and Ira, and his son-in-law, Erasmus Pond, were of this number. Levi Shearman, Solomon Hovey, Ludin Blood, Timothy Tuttle, Samuel Hubbard, Pandell Lewis, Gardal stores, John Bullen, and Capt. Cassey were early settlers. Mrs. S. Hovey was the first white woman who moved into town. The first child born was Clinton Foot; the first marriage was that of Roger Leverett and Elizabeth Chesborough; and the first death was that of Mrs. Merah Tuttle. Skeauddinh, an Oneida chief, died in this town, March 11, 1816, aged 110 years. Capt. Cassey built the first gristmill, in 1787, and a sawmill the next year. The village was early named from Gov. Clinton; and the vicinity was known by the Indians as Ka-de-waday.

¹⁰ There are 5 churches in town; 2 Cong., Bap., R. C., and Union.

LEE¹—was formed from Western, April 3, 1811. A part of Annsville was taken off in 1823. It lies in the interior, n. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly, gradually rising from the lowlands in the s. to an elevation of 500 to 800 ft. above the canal at Rome. The w. branch of the Mohawk flows through the n. e. corner, and Fish Creek forms a part of the w. boundary. The soil is a clayey, sandy, and gravelly loam, and in some localities very stony. Lee Center (p. v.) contains a church, saw and grist mill, tannery, and 40 houses. Lee, (p. v.) in the s. w. corner, contains a church and 20 houses. Delta, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, on the line of Western, contains a foundery, tannery, and 228 inhabitants. West Branch, (p. v.) in the n. e. corner, contains a saw and grist mill and 20 houses. Stokes² (p. o.) is a hamlet. The first settlement commenced in 1790, at Delta, by Stephen and Reuben Sheldon.³ The first religious society (Cong.) was formed in 1797, under Rev. James Southworth.⁴

MARCY⁵—was formed from Deerfield, March 30, 1832. It lies on the s. bank of the Mohawk, e. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling; a wide intervalle borders upon the river, from which rises an irregular table-land 300 to 500 ft. above the valley. Nine Mile Creek flows through the w. corner. The soil on the upland is a rich, sandy and gravelly loam, and on the flats an alluvial deposit, which is annually increased by the spring floods. Stittsville, (p. v.) on the line of Trenton, contains a church, saw and grist mill, cotton factory, and 40 houses. Marcy is a p. o. The first settlement commenced in 1793,⁶ by John Wilson. The census reports 6 churches in town.⁷

MARSHALL—was formed from Kirkland, Feb. 21, 1829. It lies in the s. part of the co., the s. w. corner bordering on Madison co. The surface is a hilly upland, the hills rising 200 to 300 ft. above the valleys. Oriskany Creek flows n. e. through the w. part. The soil is a fertile, sandy loam. Beansville,⁸ (p. v.) on the s. border, contains 2 churches, an academy, and 185 inhabitants. Hanover, (Marshall p. o.) near the center, contains a church and 15 houses. Forge Hollow contains a church, a forge, and 35 houses. The first white settlement was commenced in 1793,⁹ by David Barton. The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1797.¹⁰

NEW HARTFORD—was formed from Whitestown, April 12, 1827. A part of Kirkland was annexed in 1834. It lies upon the e. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is level or gently undulating, except in the extreme e. part, where is a low range of hills. Sauquoit Creek flows n. through near the center. The soil is a rich, calcareous loam. New Hartford (p. v.) contains 4 churches, 2 cotton factories, a hatting factory,¹¹ a flouring mill, tannery, and 892 inhabitants. Washington Mills (p. v.) contains the Washington Steam Mills, Oneida Woollen Mills, and 50 houses. New York Upper Mills, (New York Mills p. o.) on the s. border, contains a church, a cotton factory, dye house, steam mills, and 40 houses. Willow Vale, in the s. part, contains a factory for making cotton machinery,¹² a foundery, and 40 houses. The first settlement was commenced by Jedediah Sanger, in 1788.¹³ The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1791, by Rev. Jonathan Edwards; and the first settled minister was Rev. Danl. Bradley. The census reports 6 churches in town.¹⁴

PARIS¹⁵—was formed from Whitestown, April 10, 1792. Brookfield, Hamilton, and a part of

² Sometimes called "Nishets Corners," and "Lee corners."

³ Among the early settlers were David Smith, John and Benj. Spinning, Stephen and Nicholas Salisbury, Nathan Barlow, Wm. Tott, Dan, and Seth Miller, Frederic Sprague, — Hall, Jas. Young, Chas. Gilford, Eliza Parke, and — Potter. The first birth was that of Femer Sheldon, in 1791; the first marriage, that of Dan, Miller and Amy Taft; the first death, that of Job Rand, in 1798. David Smith built the first sawmill, at Delta, and Gen. Floyd the first gristmill, in 1796.

⁴ There are 4 churches in town; 2 M. E., Friends, and Union.

⁷ 2 Cong., 2 Ep., M. E., and Calv. Meth.

⁸ Named from Thos. Deam, long an agent of the Brothertown Indians.

⁹ The Brothertown Indians were settled previous to the Revolution on a reservation in this town and Kirkland given them by the Oneidas. They were remnants of New England Hudson River, and Long Island Indians, who were collected toward the close of the Colonial period, and numbered when first removed thither, about 400 souls. Coming from many different stocks, they adopted the English language and some of the arts of civilized life. They were mostly scattered during the war, but afterward returned, and many of them became thrifty farmers; but the greater part acquired the ways of the whites, and a part of them sold out and went to Green Riv. In 1850 the last of the tribe had either to their homes and moved West. Among the early white settlers were Warren Williams, Hezekiah Eastman, Capt. Simon Hubbard, and Levi Baker. The first birth was that of Col. Lester Baker.

¹⁰ It was called the Hanover Society; and their edifice, after standing 40 years, was rebuilt in 1841. There are now 4 churches in town; 2 Cong., M. E., and Unit.

¹¹ The "Vtrea Cotton Mills" have a capital of $100,000, run 8,000 spindles and 150 looms and employ 200 hands, and turn out 1,800,000 yds. of cloth annually. They have a dye house, machine shop, and gas works.

¹² This establishment has a capital invested of $100,000, and employs 80 hands.

¹⁴ Presb., M. E., Prot., E., Bap., Union, and Friends.

¹⁵ Named by the inhabitants in acknowledgment of the kindness of Isaac Paris, a merchant of Fort Plain, who, in the year

Cazenovia, (Madison co.,) Sherburne, (Chenango co.,) and Sangerfield, were taken off in 1795, and Kirkland in 1827. A part of Kirkland was annexed in 1839. It lies on the e. border, near the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the valley of Sauquoit Creek. The hills bordering the valley are 200 to 400 ft. high, and their declivities are generally steep. Sauquoit Creek flows n. through the town, e. of the center. The soil is a sandy, calcareous loam. East Sauquoit and West Sauquoit, (Sauquoit p. o.,) contiguous villages on opposite sides of Sauquoit Creek, contain 2 churches, extensive cotton factories,¹ 2 paper mills in the immediate vicinity,² 2 sawmills, a gristmill, a tannery, and 690 inhabitants. Clayville, (p. v.,) near the center, contains a church, 2 furnaces, an agricultural implement manufactory,³ extensive woolen mills,⁴ and 817 inhabitants. Cassville, (p. v.,) near the s. border, contains a church, gristmill, tob. factory, and 40 houses; Paris Hill, (Paris p. o.,) in the w. part, a church and 30 houses; Holman City, in the e. part, a furnace, a whiffletree iron manufactory, and 12 houses. The first settlement commenced in 1789.⁵ The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1791, by Rev. Jonathan Edwards; Rev. Eliphalet Steele was the first pastor. There are now 8 churches in town.⁶

REMSEN—was formed from Norway, (Herkimer co.,) March 15, 1798. A part of Steuben was annexed in 1809. It is the n. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is an elevated upland, broken by hills and ridges and with a mean elevation of 1,200 to 2,000 ft. above tide. Black River and its tributaries drain the central and n. parts; and West Canada Creek forms a small part of the s. e. boundary. Otter, Long, and White Lakes are in the n. part. The soil is generally a light, sandy loam. A large part of the town is still covered by the primitive forests forming a portion of the great Northern Wilderness. Remsen, (p. v.,) a station on the B. R. & U. R. R., in the s. w. corner, contains a church, furnace, steam mill, and 510 inhabitants. Forest Port, (p. v.,) on the line of Boonville, contains 20 houses. Port Woodhull is a hamlet. The first settlement commenced in 1792, by Barnabas Mitchell.⁷ There are 12 churches in town.⁸

ROME—was formed from Steuben, March 4, 1796. It lies upon the Mohawk, a little w. of the center of the co. Its surface is level, and some portion of the w. part is low and marshy. The Mohawk flows s. e. through the e. part, and Wood Creek flows w. through the s. w. part.¹⁰ Fish Creek forms the n. w. boundary. The soil is generally a highly productive, gravelly loam. Rome, (p. v.,) upon the Mohawk, s. e. of the center of the town, was incorp. March 26, 1819. It is a half-shire of the co., and it contains the co. buildings, 12 churches, 4 banks, 2 newspaper offices, the Rome Academy, and several manufactories.¹¹ It is the s. terminus of the W. R. & C. V. R. R. and of the Black River Canal, and is an important station upon the Central R. R. and the Erie Canal. Pop. 7,083. West Rome is a thickly settled suburb just w. of the limits of Rome. Stanwix, (p. v.,) a canal village, contains about 15 houses. Greens Corners is a station on the Central R. R., near the s. w. corner. Ridge Hills, near the center, contains 15 dwellings; and North Rome is a hamlet. The first settlement was made at the "Carrying Place," before the ¹²French of severity, 1789, supplied them with Virginia corn on a liberal credit, and finally accepted payment in such produce as they were enabled to supply.

¹The "Quaker Woolen Factory," established in 1812. In 1827 it commenced the manufacture of cotton, and now employs 100 hands, runs 110 looms, and can make 3,000 yards per day. The same Co. have another mill, that employs 50 hands and runs 60 looms.

²These mills employ 30 hands, and make about 11 tons of printing paper daily.

³The manufacture of saxes was commenced in 1834. The business has since been largely increased; and at present about $200,000 is invested in the works. Saxes, looms, forks, and other farming tools are extensively manufactured.

⁴The woolen mills were started in 1813. They manufacture broadcloths and blankets, and employ 80 hands.

⁶2 M. P., 2 Pr. E., 2 Cong., Bap., and Presb.

⁷Named from Henry Remsen, Patentee of Remsenburgh. The town embraces most of Remsenburgh Patent and portions of Easton's Woodhull's, Service's, and other tracts.

⁸Among the early settlers were John B. and Nathl Rockwood, Bells Le-Clerc, Perez Farr, and Joseph Dayton, in 1793. In 1808, David Monro, John Gas, Griffith J. Jones, John Owens, and Hugh Hutches, Welsh immigrants, settled, and were soon followed by a large immigration of their countrymen. This town contains more natives of Wales than any other town in the State; and, including their children of American birth, the Welsh number more than half the population. The first birth was that of Polly Mitchell; and the first death, that of Capt. Peck. Broughton White kept the first store, in 1805.

⁹5 Calv. Meth., 3 Cong., 2 M. E., and 2 Bap.

¹⁰Between the Mohawk and Wood Creek was a portage of about 1 mi. in length over level ground. Early in the last century propositions were made to build a road across this point; and in 1796 the Western Inland Navigation Co. constructed a canal between the two streams, and the route speedily became the great thoroughfare of travel. This canal was most of the way on the line of the present Erie Canal, through the village. The Indians called the place Deo-wan-sta, "a carrying place for canoes." Wood Creek was called Ka-mes-go-dic. The old canal was constructed under the superintendence of Peter Colt.

¹¹The principal manufactories are a plow factory, foundery, planing mill, several sawmills, and the repair shops of the W. R. & C. V. R. R.

¹²The first settlers came in at an early period, but their names are unknown. John Roof and — Brodick were engaged in the carrying trade at this place in 1760. The former was first store and inn keeper. Joseph Phelps, John Barnard, George and Henry Huntington, Joshua Hathaway, Dr. Stephen White, Russell Fellows, Matthew Brown, son and jun., Seth Emery, David Brown, Ebenezer, Daniel W., and Thomas Wright Thomas Solon, Solomon and John Williams, Peter Colt, Wm. Giddarth, Abajah and Clark Putnam, Caleb Reynolds, Rufus Landon, Thos. Gilbert, Moses Fish, Stephen Luntman, James Welsh Stevens, and John Sales were early settlers.—Oneida's Annals, p. 572. The first birth was in the family of John Roof, Aug. 28, 1769. The first sawmill was erected in 1758, and the first gristmill in 1795. A State Arsenal was erected here in 1808, on the present site of St. Peter's Church. The U. S. erected an arsenal and workshop a

War of 1755. The subsequent history of the place is full of incidents of general interest.¹ The first church (Cong.) was formed Sept. 5, 1800.²

SANGERFIELD³—was formed from Paris, March 5, 1795. Bridgewater was taken off in 1797. It was transferred from Chenango to Oneida co. April 4, 1804. It is the w. town on the s. line of the co. Its surface is a moderately hilly upland, 700 to 800 ft. above the Mohawk at Utica. The streams are small, and flow n. to the Mohawk and s. to Chenango River. The soil in the valleys is a rich alluvium, and on the hills a gravelly loam. Waterville,⁴ (p. v.), near the n. border, contains 4 churches, a bank, an academy, a newspaper office, a saw and grist mill, distillery, and 1,100 inhabitants. Sangerfield Center (Sangerfield p. o.) contains a church and 30 houses; and Stockwell Settlement, in the s. part, about 20 houses. The first settlement was commenced by Zerah Phelps, from Mass., in 1791.⁵ There are now 7 churches in town.⁶

STEBUX⁷ was formed from Whitestown, April 10, 1792. A part of Mexico (Oswego co.) was annexed, and Floyd and Rome were taken off, in 1796; and Leyden (Lewis co.) and Western in 1797. Parts of Steuben's Tract in Western and Remsen were annexed in 1803; and a part was annexed to Remsen in 1809. It lies in the interior, n. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is a hilly, broken upland, rising 800 to 1,200 feet above the Mohawk.⁸ The streams are small. Cincinnati Creek rises in the interior, and forms part of the e. boundary. The soil is a gravelly loam; and boulders are numerous. Quarries are worked, from which a good quality of building stone is obtained. Steuben Corners (Steuben p. o.) is a hamlet, in the s. part. Steuben Station, on the B. R. & U. R. R., is on the line of Boonville. The first settlement was commenced in 1789,⁹ under Baron Steuben. The census reports 7 churches in town.¹⁰

TRENTON—was formed from Seluyler, (Herkimer co.,) March 24, 1797. It lies up on the w. bank of West Canada Creek, near the center of the e. border of the co. The surface rises from the creek to the height of 400 to 600 feet; and from the summits it spreads out into an upland broken by ridges of drift. Cincinnati Creek flows through the n. part, and Nine Mile Creek through the s. part. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam, best adapted to grazing. The celebrated Trenton Falls, upon West Canada Creek, are within the limits of this town.¹¹ Trenton,¹² (p. v.) upon Cincinnati Creek, at the mouth of Steuben Creek, contains 3 churches and 50 houses. Trenton Falls, (p. v.), a short distance below the Falls, contains a church, gristmill, sawmill, and 20 houses. South Trenton, (p. v.) upon the old Utica turnpike, contains 2 churches and 30 houses. Holland Patent,¹³ (p. v.) in the w. part of the town, is a station upon the B. R. & little w. of the village, in 1813, under the direction of Major James Duffin. It is still owned by the General Government, but is not in use. In 1784, Gen. Washington came thus far on a tour of business and pleasure. He, in company with Gen. Clinton, owned a tract of land in this co. of about 2,000 acres, comprising a part of Coxsborough and Carolina Townships in the town of West-mo-dul.

¹ Fort Williams, on the Mohawk, and Fort Bull, on Wood Creek, were built on the line between Albany and Oswego about 1755. Fort Bull was surprised by M. De Lery and a party of French and Indians, numbering 562 men, March 27, 1759. The English lost the fort and all the stores which it contained and 90 men. Forts Williams and Craven, located on the Mohawk, just below Rome, were destroyed by Gen. Webb in 1756, after the reduction of Oswego by the French. Fort Stanwix was begun July 25, 1758, by Brigadier Gen. John Stanwix, of the royal army. It was a square work, with bastions at the corners, and stood a few rods s. of the present park in the village. It was of earth and timber, surrounded by a ditch, and mounted with heavy cannon. In June, 1758, Col. Dayton took possession of it and named it Fort Schuyler. It was besieged in 1777 by St. Leger. Within the first few years the ground upon which the fort stood has been levelled, and not a vestige of it now remains. Fort Newport was a small square fort on Wood Creek, built in the French War. An octagonal block-house was built about 1765, during the alarm from Western Indian wars.

² These new reports 17 churches; 2 C. M., 2 Ep., 2 M. E., 2 P. S., 2 B. C., 1 Ev. Luth., 1 Germ. M. Ch., 1 Prot. F., and 1 Unit.

⁴ Called by the Indians Skarewis, "Large Swamp."

⁶ 2 Cong., M. E., Prot. E., Presb., Bap., and B. C.

⁷ Named from Baron Steuben. In May, 1788, the Legislature granted him 16,000 acres in this town. He settled soon after, built a log house, and collected a colony of tenants, but did not live to see his contemplated improvement carried out. He was struck by paralysis Nov. 25, 1790, and died 3 days after. He was wrapped in his cloak and laid in the earth with his star of knighthood upon his breast. Shortly before La Fayette's visit in 1826, his remains were taken up and reinterred under a flag upon raised masonry. His property was partly bequeathed to the Wm. North and Bong Walker, his sons. His library was given to a young man named Mullicum. Col. Walker gave a W. L. Bap. Society a lease of 60 acres of land, of which was wood-land, around the grave, with no other aid than the obligation to keep this woodland fenced and the range of animals prevented thereon. This condition is carefully observed.

⁸ Stars Hill is the highest point in the co. On a clear day, Lake Ontario, parts of 7 counties, and the buildings of Hamilton College can be seen from its summit.

⁹ Samuel Sizer, Capt. Simon Fuller, and David Starr were early settlers. The first birth was that of Stephen Prokes, in 1792, and the first marriage, that of William Caswell and Abigail. The town was extensively settled by W. P. H. immigrants. A religious magazine, (W. L. S.) "A Goodly Land," American Advertiser, published in this town. — 2 M. E., 2 Cong., 2 P. S., and C. M. M. Ch.

U. R. R. It contains 6 churches, the Holland Patent Academy, and 353 inhabitants. Prospect, (p. v.) on West Canada Creek, above the Falls, contains 2 churches, Prospect Academy, an extensive sawmill, a tannery, and 60 houses. Stittsville, (p. v.) on the line of Marcy, in the s. w. corner of the town, contains a church, cotton factory, sawmill, tannery, and about 40 houses. It is a station upon the B. R. & U. R. R. Settlement was commenced in 1793, by Gerrit Boon, from Holland.¹ The first church (Presb.) was formed soon after; Rev. — Fish was the first pastor.²

UTICA³—was incorp. as a village April 3, 1798. It was formed as a town, from Whitestown, April 7, 1817, and was incorp. as a city Feb. 13, 1832. It lies upon the s. bank of the Mohawk, on the e. border of the co. A wide intervalle extends along the river; and from it the surface rises in gradual slopes toward the s. w. It lies upon the Erie Canal, and is the n. terminus of the Chenango Canal. It is an important station upon the N. Y. C. R. R., and the s. terminus of the B. R. & U. R. R. It is the center of one of the best agricultural sections of the State; and its trade is extensive. It is largely engaged in manufactures, among which are cotton and woolen goods, mill-tones, screws, musical instruments, telegraphic apparatus, and a great variety of other articles.⁴

The City Hall is a fine, large, brick building on Genesee St., s. of the canal. It contains a large public hall, common council room, and rooms for the several city officers.

The Public Schools are under the charge of a Superintendent and Board of Education. They are graded, and include all departments from the primary to a thorough academic course. They employ 45 teachers,—6 males and 39 females. The whole number of children between the ages of 4 and 21 is 8,000, of which 3,226, or 40 per cent., attend school during some portion of the year. The total expenses of the schools for 1858 were $15,546.82. The number of volumes in the district libraries is 3,018.

The Utica Academy, long an independent school, now constitutes the High School of the public school system of the city.

The Utica Female Academy is a flourishing institution, situated between Washington St. and Broadway, near Genesee St. It was founded in 1837, and its property is valued at $25,000.

The Academy of the Assumption is under the care of the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

The State Lunatic Asylum is located upon a large lot on an eminence near the w. line of the city. It receives insane persons subject to co. charge, where there is a reasonable prospect of relief, and such others as its accommodations will admit. Until recently it has received insane convicts; but this class will hereafter be sent to the asylum built for that purpose at Auburn. The average number of inmates during the last 16 years has been 381 annually.⁵

¹ Boon was an enterprising pioneer and agent of the Holland Land Company, the same that purchased in Western New York, alone, or with Le Roy, Bayard, McVeys, and Burleigh, purchased in trust for that company 40,057 acres of Orin-bull's Patent, 63,225 of Stoben's Patent, 1,200 of Alchin's Patent, and 23,000 of Servis's Patent. The last named, lying mostly in this town, was granted in 1708 to Peter Servis and 24 others for the benefit of Dr. Wm. Johnson. This tract was conveyed by the trustees above named to the Holland Company in 1801. Among the other early settlers were Col. Adam G. Mappa, Dr. Fr. A. Vander-Kemp, Judge John Storrs, Col. Robert Hicks, Peter Schuyler, John F. Little, Cheney and John Garrett, Wm. Bello, Col. Thos. Hicks, Edward Hughes, and Hugh Thomas. Boon returned to Holland, where he died many years after. The first child born was Adam Parker, in 1790; the first marriage, that of Jacob Joyce and Widow Peck; and the first death, that of — Nelson, in 1795.

² The census reports 15 churches; 4 M. E., 3 Bap., 2 Presb., (1 S. Bap., Cong., Calv. Meth., Prot. E., Union, and Unit.)

⁴ The Eagle Mills give employment to 120 hands, and produce 1,500,000 yards of cotton cloth annually.

The Utica Steam Cotton Mills employ 330 hands, and produce 1,100 yds. of cotton cloth daily.

The Utica Wagon Mills employ 180 hands, and use 350,000 lbs. of wood in the manufacture of carriages annually.

The Utica Steam Wagon Co. gives employment to 250 hands, and uses 1,800 lbs. of wood per day.

The Utica Screw Manufacturing Co. employs 50 hands, and turns out goods to the amount of $90,000 annually.

The Utica Millstone Manufacturing and Plaster Mills give employment to 50 men, and turn out $50,000 worth of products annually.

The city also contains extensive manufactories of starch, flour, clothing, organs, pianos, castings, machinery, stone ware, fire brick, carpets, oilcloths, leather, lumber, beer, and cigars.

⁵ An asylum of this kind was recommended by the Governor in 1830, and was annually urged by its friends, until an act was passed, March 10, 1833, appointing 3 commissioners to purchase a site not exceeding $100,000 in value, and to contract for building. N. Dayton, C. McVean, and B. Withers were appointed; and in 1837 a farm of 130 acres was bought at the joint expense of the State and the citizens of Utica, ($20,000 of $105,000), and in that year Wm. Clarke, Francis L. Spangler, and Elam Lynds were appointed commissioners to erect buildings. The first plan (prepared by Clarke) embraced 4 buildings, each 500 feet long, facing outward, connected by open verandas, and including a court of about 13 acres. The main building was erected and the foundations were laid, when the plan was rescinded and attention given to finishing the main building. By act of April 7, 1842, the asylum was put in charge of 9 managers, appointed for a term of 3 years each by the Gov., and Senate, a majority of whom must reside within 5 mi. of the asylum. Dr. Amariah Brigham was chosen Superintendent, and upon his death (Sept. 8, 1849) Dr. Nathan D. Bonshur succeeded. The present Superintendent is Dr. John P. Gray, who was appointed in 1853.

The building was partially destroyed by a fire set by one of the inmates July 14, 1857. The walls remained standing, and the premises have been refitted without interruption of operations, and with improvements far exceeding in safety and convenience those that were destroyed. The sum of $68,712 was granted in 1858 to rebuild the premises; and the labor is now

Besides the foregoing institutions, there are in the city 10 private schools, 5 banks, and 24 churches.¹

The site of the city is included in the colonial grant of 1734, styled Cosby's Manor. Settlement began soon after the Revolution; and in 1787 there were 3 log huts at this place.² The construction of the Seneca Turnpike and of a bridge gave the first impulse to its growth; and the Erie Canal in a few years doubled its business and population. Although the city has experienced disasters, its general growth in wealth and numbers has been steadily forward, and its geographical position, lines of communication, and natural advantages are guarantees of its future increase.³

VERNON—was formed from Westmoreland and Augusta, Feb. 17, 1802. A part of Stock-bridge (Madison co.) was taken off in 1836. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center.⁴ Its surface is rolling, the mean elevation being about 200 ft. above the Mohawk. The principal streams are Oneida Creek, forming the w. boundary, and Skanandoa Creek,⁵ flowing through the E. part. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly and clay loam, underlaid by limestone, waterlime, and gypsum. Very few towns in the State surpass this in all the elements of fertility. A mineral spring is found a mi. s. w. of Vernon Center. Vernon, (p. v.), upon Skanandoa Creek, s. of the center, was incorp. April 6, 1827. It contains 2 churches, the Vernon Academy, a private seminary, bank, newspaper office, and tannery. Pop. 330. Vernon Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 30 dwellings. Oneida Castle, (p. v.), on the w. line, contains a church, academy, and 337 inhabitants, of whom 275 are in this town. Turkey Street is a nearly completed. The buildings are well supplied with water and gas, and have ample fixtures for the extinguishment of fires in future, including steam force pumps, ample reservoirs of water, and pipes for filling the attic and upper rooms with steam. The asylum has shops and gardens for the employment of such as prefer it, and various amusements,—fairs, festivals, musical and theatrical entertainments, books, pictures, innocent games, and such other modes of occupation as are found to exert a salutary influence upon the "mild diseased." The Opal, a monthly magazine, is edited and printed at the asylum by its inmates; and the American Journal of Insanity, a quarterly journal, is conducted by its officers. The aggregate statistics of the asylum from Jan. 16, 1843, to Dec. 1, 1868, have been as follows:—

placements; 8 were in trade, and 4 had no occupation, 210 were natives of New York; 44 of Ireland, 19 of Eng.; 16 of Germany; 6 of Conn.; 4 each of Canada, Scotland, France, Penn., Vt., and Mass.; 3 each of N. H. and Wales; 2 each of Maine and Switzerland, and 1 each of R. I., Ohio, Ill., and Sweden. The principal causes were, so far as ascertained, all 13, 40, 48; 13; 28; 28; predisposed, 22; intemperance and vice, 20; religious excitement, 19; excessive labor and anxiety, 17; various maligencies and domestic troubles, each 15; business perplexities, 12; menstrual irregularities, 11; and periparturient and excessive labor and exposure, each 10.

² Fort Schuyler at this place was built in 1758, and named from Col. Peter, an uncle of Gen. Philip Schuyler. It was a stockaded work, and stood between Main and Mohawk streets, bet w. Second Street. A blockhouse was built before the close of the Revolution on the site of the present court. Among the early settlers were Ulrich Alversen, Philip Mery, Francis Foster, Stephen Butler, Joseph Patton, Jason Plunkett, John Cunningham, Jacob Christman, and Matthew Howell. The first store and inn were kept by John Post in 1761, on the S. corner of Genesee and White-streets. Post had been a dealer among the Indians, and purchased large quantities of gunpowder. Some years after, he imported 500 lbs. of passenger-guns, for sale privately. In 1761, Parker & Stephens received a grant of the sole right of running a stage to Canada, to run every week between May and October. Mail-coaches landed from Canada at this place in 1762, and ran on along the route paying the expense. Fry and Johnson in 1767, commenced purchasing produce for cash, and began to observe that it had been justly monopolized by the Knickerbocker Society. The latter soon removed to Utica, and the spirit of rivalry of these men, and others who soon joined in it, drew a large population to the place as a market town. John Devoe, Cox, Werts Shearman, John Russell, and Daniel Thomas were early merchants. Nathan Williams, Francis Clark, Ernie A. Blockwood, and Joseph Kirkland were early lawyers.

³ The population of the town and city of Oneida has been as follows:—

Of the 3,516 patients received up to Dec. 1, 1858, 48, 6 were discharged, of whom 2,226 recovered, 801 were improved, and 1,191 were unimproved; 636 had died, and 39 were not insane. Great success attends the treatment in most cases when received at an early stage; but when the disease has continued a year or more the chances of recovery rapidly diminish, and in a few years cease altogether. The asylum is not designed as a hospital for incurable; and when the prospects of recovery or improvement cease, it is its general aim, to return patients to their friends or to local institutions of support.

Of those admitted in the year ending Nov. 30, 1858, 172 were males and 164 females, 23 were between 10 and 20; 91 between 20 and 30; 108 between 30 and 40; 62 between 40 and 50; 36 between 50 and 60; and 11 between 60 and 70. 98 males and 87 females were married; 79 males and 64 females were single; 6 were widows and 10 widows; 17 had received academic and 230 a common school education, 1 could only read and write; 12 could read but not write; and 11 were entirely without education. 236 had laborers, and 25 professional and literary, em-

VERONA—was formed from Westmoreland, Feb. 17, 1802. It lies on the w. border of the co., near the center. Its surface is generally level, slightly rolling in the e., and marshy in the w. Oneida Lake and Creek form the w. boundary, and Wood Creek³ the n. boundary. Several small streams in the town are tributaries to these. The soil is a deep, rich, alluvial loam. There is a mineral spring in the e. part of the town.⁴ Verona (p. v.) contains 2 churches, a tannery, and 30 houses; Durhamville, (p. v.), on the w. border, partly in Madison co., contains 2 churches, a glass factory, foundry, tannery, and 1,034 inhabitants; Verona Depot, (p. o.), a station on the N. Y. C. R. R., contains 10 houses; State Bridge (p. v.) contains 20 houses; Higginsville (p. v.) 25 houses; New Louden, (p. v.), in the n. part, 30 houses; Seonondoa, (p. v.), in the s. part, on the line of Vernon, 20 houses; Verona Mills (p. v.) 20 houses; Dunbarton a glass factory and 20 houses; and Staceys Basin 10 houses. Settlement was commenced in 1792, by Geo. A. Smith;⁵ Rev. Joseph Avery preached the first sermon. There are now 10 churches in town.⁶

VIENNA⁷—was formed from Camden, April 3, 1807, as "Orange." Its name was changed to "Bengal," April 6, 1808, and to Vienna, April 12, 1816. A part of Annsville was taken off in 1823. It lies on the w. border of the co., n. of the center. Its surface, rising from Oneida Lake on the s. border to an elevation of about 100 ft., spreads out into a rolling plateau. The n. w. part is hilly. Wood Creek and Oneida Lake form the s. boundary. Fish Creek forms most of the e. boundary, and unites with Wood Creek before it enters Oneida Lake. The w. branch of Fish Creek forms a part of the n. boundary. The soil is a light, sandy loam, underlaid by clay; in the s. w., along Fish Creek, it is alluvium. Good building stone is quarried in the e. part, and large quantities of bog ore have been raised from the marshes near the lake. Vienna, (p. v.), in the e. part, contains a church and 110 inhabitants. North Bay, (p. v.), in the s. part, near the lake, contains 2 churches, 3 sawmills, a shingle mill, and 25 houses. McConnellsville, (p. v.), in the n. part, on the line of Annsville, contains 20 houses; Elpis, a church and 8 houses. Fish Creek Landing contains 20 houses; West Vienna, (p. v.), on the lake, 20 houses. Pine is a hamlet, in the e. part. The first settlement was commenced near the close of the last century.⁸ There are now 6 churches in town⁹.

WESTERN—was formed from Steuben, March 10, 1797. Lee was taken off in 1811. It lies in the interior, n. of the center of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by numerous gulleys worn in the slate by the streams. Mohawk River and Lansing Kill Creek meet near the center and flow s. and s. w. into Rome. The soil in the valleys is alluvium. Stone quarries are worked which have furnished large quantities of stone for the Black River Canal. Westernville (p. v.) contains a church, a tannery, and 287 inhabitants. North Western (p. v.) con-

¹ The first settler was Josiah Bushnell, in 1794. Upon the relinquishment of the Indian title in 1797, a large number of families from Mass. and Conn. came in; and within 2 years every farm in town was taken up. Among the early settlers were families named, Bills, Broun, Wetton, Holmes, Stone, Gridley, Smith, Bissell, Foot, Goodwin, Lisbee, De Votie, Austin, Sturmyel, Griswold, Alford, Thrall, Wilder, Church, Spencer, Carter, Marshall, Tuttle, Bush, McEwen, Whiteoxon, and Webster, on Bas Church's location, around Vernon Center; Rev. John Sargent, and families named Colburn, Marvin, and McKean, on Sargent's Patent; Skinner, Lawrence, Shedd, Gratton, Deland, Spaulding, Grant, Kellogg, Tryon, Carter, Moore, Simons, Boone, May, Nathan, Page, Ingraham, Crocker, Graves, Soper, Norton, Dix, Vaughan, Wright, Cady, Kelsey, Raymond, Alling, Busch-trom, Carpenter, Hinzert, rd, Buxley, and Dubing, on the "Boersa Patent;" Griffin, Webster, Stone, Hotchkiss, Warren, Youngs, Willard, Langdon, and Nelder, in the s. w. part; Brockway, Ephim, Cole, Davis, Blount, Brookins, Day, Frank, Noyes, Campbell, Huntington, and Cook, in the N.; and Van Eps, Hubbard, Warner, Pierson, Patten, and Root on the Van Eps Patent. The first death was that of a daughter of Josiah Bushnell, in 1795. — Sessions taught the first school, in 1798; A Van Eps kept the first store, in 1798; and Asabel Gridley built the first grist-mill.

² There are now 8 churches in town; 3 Presb., 2 M. E., Bap., Cong., and Unit.

³ A royal black-hole was built at the mouth of this creek about 1722. It was about 8 rods square, on a slight elevation, and surrounded by a ditch.

⁴ A hotel and water cure has been erected for the accommodation of visitors and patients. The water is nearly saturated with sulphuretted hydrogen gas, and yielded to Prof. Noyes's analysis the following ingredients to the gallon:—

Muriate of soda.....720 gr.

Lime, with a little magnesia..... 68 "

Sulphate of lime..... 60 "

The water resembles in many respects that of the Harrogate Springs in England.

⁶ 3 M. E., 2 S. D. Bap., Presb., Bap., Friends, Unit., and R. C. Thru. A Hamilton, John Lawrence, and John H. Church, under proceedings in chancery, became owners of this town.

⁷ Timothy Halsted, — Fisher, — Jarvis, Peter Gibbons, Isaac Babcock, Alex. and Jonathan Graves, Ephim Stoddard, Allen Nichols, and David Stone, were early settlers. The first birth was that of Holly Babcock, in 1803; and the first death, that of Alex. Graves, by an accident in a sawmill, in 1804. Lyanus Mothers taught the first school; Wm. Smith kept the first inn, in 1801. Ambrose Jones built the first saw-mill, in 1803; and Wm. Smith the first grist-mill, about 1804.

tains a church and 15 houses. Hillside (p.o.) contains 8 houses. Big Brook (p.o.) is a hamlet, near the E. line. Delta (p.v.) is in the s. w. corner, mostly in the town of Lee. The first settlement commenced in 1789, by Asa Beckwith and his sons Asa, Barben, Wolcott, and Lemuel, and Henry Wager.¹ The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1798; Rev. Stephen Parsons preached occasionally. There are now 6 churches in town.²

WESTMORELAND—was formed from Whitestown, April 10, 1792. A part of Whites-town was annexed March 15, 1798. Verona and part of Vernon were taken off in 1802. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, with a mean elevation of 150 to 250 ft. above the Mohawk. The streams are mostly small brooks. Iron ore has been obtained in large quantities for the Westmoreland, Lenox, Onondaga, and Paris furnaces. Several quarries of fine building stone have been wrought; and from some of these grindstones were formerly manufactured. The soil is principally a gravelly and clayey loam, adapted to grain raising and pasturage. Hampton, (Westmoreland p.o.) in the E. part of the town, contains 3 churches, several manufactories,³ and 400 inhabitants. Lowell, (p.v.) in the s. w. part, contains a church and 25 houses. Heck Works, (p.v.) s. w. of the center, contains a large furnace⁴ and 16 houses. Lairdsville,⁵ (p.v.) in the s. part, contains a church and 15 houses. Spencer Settlement, on the s. line, and Eureka, 2 mi. s., each contains about 15 houses. The first settlement was made by James Dean, upon a patent granted to him under an act of May 5, 1786.⁶ The first church (Cong.) was formed Sept. 20, 1792.⁷

WHITESTOWN⁸—was formed March 7, 1788, and originally included an indefinite amount of territory extending westward, at the present time forming several counties. Steuben, Mexico, Paris, and Westmoreland were taken off in 1792; Augusta in 1798; Utica in 1817; and New Hartford in 1827. It lies upon the s. bank of the Mohawk, a little s. e. of the center of the co. A broad, flat intervale extends along the Mohawk; and from it the surface rises in gentle slopes about 100 ft. and from the summits spreads out into a rolling upland. Oriskany Creek⁹ flows N. E. through near the center, and Sauquoit Creek through the E. part. The soil is mostly a fine quality of gravelly loam and alluvium, well adapted to grain raising. Whitesboro',¹⁰ (Whitestown p.o.) in the Mohawk Valley, in the s. e. part of the town, was incorp. March 26, 1813. It contains 4 churches, the Whitestown Seminary, a bank, and several small manufactories. It is a canal and R. R. station. Pop. 953. Oriskany, (p.v.) near the mouth of Oriskany Creek, is a canal village and R. R. station. It contains 5 churches and several extensive manufactories.¹¹ Pop. 711. Yorkville and New York Mills, in the s. part, are manufacturing villages, upon Sauquoit Creek, the former containing about 50 houses and the latter 3 churches and 60 houses.¹² Walesville, (p.o.) Colemans Mills, and Pleasant Valley are hamlets or thickly settled farming neighborhoods. The first settlement was made by Judge Hugh White and his 5 sons, Daniel C., Joseph, Hugh, jr., Ansel, and Philo, in May, 1781.¹³ This was the first settlement in the co., and became the nucleus of civilization for Central N. Y. The first church (Presb.) was formed Aug. 20, 1794; the first settled pastor was Rev. Bethuel Dodd.¹⁴

⁵ Named from Samuel Laird, an early settler.

⁶ This patent names Dean's Creek as Koughtanaga, and a small branch of Oriskany Creek, Kan-yo-sto-tu. Among the other early settlers were Jonathan Dean, Silas Phelps, Ephraim Blackmer, Nehemiah Jones, Joseph Blackmer, son, Amos Smith, John Morse, Daniel Sedly, Elijah Smith, Samuel Starr, Alexander Dickinson, and Stephen Bingham located in town. Mr. Dean was an Indian trader, acquired the language of the natives, and exercised much influence over them. He received this grant through a stipulation made by the Indians as a reward for services rendered to their nation. Although greatly attached to him, these savages upon one occasion came near taking his life to avenge for the death of one of their number who was accidentally killed by a Dutchman on the Mohawk. He died Sept. 10, 1823, aged 70 years. See Geo. & Co. p. 740. A MS. account of Indian mythology, written by him, is in the State Library.

⁷ The census reports 6 churches in town, 3 M. E., Bap., O. S. Bap., and Friends.

⁸ Named from Hugh White, the pioneer settler.

⁹ Signifying "river of nettles."

¹² The New York Mills, an extensive mill and factory, has branches at Yorkville, New York Mills, and Upper New York Mills, the last named in New Britain. It has a capital of $200,000.

¹³ Among the other early settlers were Amos Wetmore, Jona. Platt, Geo. Dodd, Jr., Thomas E. Gidd, Leuben Wiley, Arthur Rice, French Stacy, Uzum Mosley, G. D. Douglass, Wm. C. Tracy, Gerrit Y. Lansing, and Henry R. Stearns. The first child born was Esther White, and the first death, that of Mrs. Black Eye, soon after the first settlement. The first gristmill in the town and co. was built in 1788, by Judge White, Amos Wetmore, and John Beardsley.

¹⁴ There are now 13 churches in town, 3 Presb., 3 M. E., 2 Bap., 2 Prot. E., Cong., Calv. Meth., and Union.

ONONDAGA COUNTY.

This county was formed from Herkimer, March 5, 1791, and included the original Military Tract. Cayuga was taken off March 8, 1799; Cortland, April 8, 1808; and a part of Oswego, March 1, 1816. It was named from the Onondaga tribe of Indians, whose principal residence was within its border. It lies near the center of the State, centrally distant 127 mi. from Albany, and contains 812 sq. mi.

Its surface is naturally divided into two nearly equal parts by an e. and w. line, the s. half being nearly level, and the n. broken by ridges of hills and gradually sloping upward to a height of about 1,000 feet on the s. border. These highlands constitute a portion of the most northerly spurs of the Central Allegany Mountains, where they sink down to a level with the lowlands which surround Lake Ontario. They are divided into five distinct ridges, all having a general s. and s. direction and separated by narrow and deep valleys. The most eastern of these ridges enters the town of Manlius from the e., and extends northward to the immediate vicinity of the Erie Canal, the valley of Limestone Creek forming its w. boundary. Its highest point is 600 to 800 ft. above the valley. The second ridge lies between the valleys of Limestone and Batternut Creeks and embraces the highlands of Fabius and Pompey, the w. part of Manlius, and the e. part of La Fayette and De Witt. In Pompey this range attains an elevation of 1,743 ft. above tide. The lower or s. part of this ridge is subdivided by the deep valley of the w. branch of Limestone Creek. The third range, between the valleys of Batternut and Onondaga Creeks, comprises the highlands of the central part of La Fayette, the w. part of De Witt, and the e. portions of Tully, Onondaga, and Syracuse. Its highest point, in La Fayette, is several hundred ft. lower than the hills of Pompey. The fourth range, between Onondaga and Nine Mile Creeks, comprises the highlands of Otisco, the w. portions of Tully, La Fayette, Onondaga, and Geddes, and the e. portions of Marcellus and Camillus. The highest point of this range, in Otisco, is but a few ft. lower than the highest point of Pompey. The fifth range, lying between Nine Mile Creek and Skaneateles Lake and Outlet, comprises the highlands of Spafford, the w. parts of Marcellus and Camillus, and the e. parts of Skaneateles and Elbridge. Its highest point, Ripley Hill, in Spafford, is 1,981 ft. above tide. The axis of this whole system of highlands, extending through Pompey, Fabius, and Tully, forms a part of the watershed between Susquehanna River and Lake Ontario. The declivities of these hills are generally steep; but their summits are rolling and crowned with forests or cultivated fields.

The geological formation of the co. consists of alternate strata of shale and limestone, overlying each other in nearly horizontal layers. The lowest of these, cropping out on the s. shore of Onondaga Lake, is the Clinton group of shale, and successively above these, toward the n., the Niagara limestone, the red and green shales and gypsum belonging to the Onondaga salt group, the waterlime group, Oriskany sandstone, Onondaga limestone, corniferous limestone, Seneca limestone, Marcellus shales, Hamilton shales, Tully limestone, Genesee slate, and Ithaca shales. The last four mentioned are found upon the summits of the southern hills. The salt group occupies the very base of the hills; and the limestones crop out along their declivities in an e. and w. line extending through the center of the co. The celebrated Onondaga Salt Springs are in the deep valley in which Onondaga Lake is situated, and the salt water is found above or within the strata of red shale. The salt wells are 200 to 400 feet deep. The green shales, embracing the hopper-formed strata, the magnesian or vermicular lime, and large quantities of gypsum in isolated masses, lie immediately above the red shales, and form the first declivities of the ranges of hills. The gypsum is extensively quarried, and is one of the most important minerals in the State.¹ Next above these shales is the waterlime stone,—another important and valuable mineral. The Onondaga limestone furnishes a beautiful and valuable building stone; and nearly all of the limestone strata furnish quicklime of a superior quality.

In variety, strength, and fertility, and in all the elements of perpetual productiveness, the soil of this co. is not surpassed by that of any other co. in the State. It is extensively derived from the decomposition of the underlying rocks.¹ But the northern towns are nearly all covered with drift, and their soil is generally a light, sandy loam, alternating with heavy clay. The vast deposits of lime upon the hills go far toward enriching the soil of the valleys.² In the central and s. portions the marshes are covered many feet thick with peat and muck formation, formed by the decaying vegetation of centuries, and furnishing the elements of almost boundless future fertility.³ More than one-half the entire tobacco crop of the State is raised in this co.

The streams of the co. nearly all flow in a northerly direction and discharge their waters through Oswego River into Lake Ontario. In their course from the highlands they often flow over perpendicular ledges and through narrow ravines, forming a great number of beautiful cascades, the principal of which will be more particularly noticed in the description of the different towns. Oswego River, which forms a part of the e. boundary of Lysander, is formed by the junction of Seneca and Oneida Rivers. Seneca River⁴ enters the s. part of the co. from the w. and pursues a winding course until it unites with Oneida River. It is a broad, deep stream, and has upon it one series of rapids, which has been converted into a valuable water-power. In the lower part of its course it contains a broad sweep or bend from a s. e. to a s. w. direction; and at its extreme s. point it receives the Onondaga Outlet from the s. Oneida River, the outlet of Oneida Lake, is a deep, sluggish, crooked stream, 18 mi. in length, and forms a link in the chain of internal navigable waters of the State. Limestone and Bitternut Creeks, after flowing through narrow and deep parallel valleys among the hills, unite in the s. part of the town of Manlius, and flow into Chittenango Creek a few mi. above its entrance into Oneida Lake. Onondaga and Nine Mile Creeks—the latter being the outlet of Otisco Lake—both flow into Onondaga Lake. Otisco Inlet, a small stream entering the co. from the s., may be considered the head branch of Nine Mile Creek. Skaneateles Outlet discharges its waters into Seneca River just beyond the w. border of the co. Several small streams take their rise in the s. part of the co., and, flowing s., form the head branches of Tioughnioga River. The principal lakes in the co. are Oneida, Onondaga, and Cross Lakes, upon the level land of the s., and Skaneateles and Otisco Lakes, in deep valleys among the hills of the s. Oneida Lake, extending along the s. e. border of the co., is about 30 mi. in length; and it forms a portion of the chain of the internal navigable waters of the State.⁵ Onondaga Lake, celebrated for the salt springs which are found in its immediate vicinity, is about 5 mi. long.⁶ Cross Lake, upon the s. w. border of the co., is a shallow body of water, about 5 mi. long, and may be considered as simply an enlargement of Seneca River. Skaneateles Lake, 16 mi. long, occupies a deep and narrow valley among the hills, and is considered one of the finest sheets of water in the State. The banks along its s. part rise precipitously to a height of several hundred ft., and the scenery is singularly wild and rugged. Toward the s. the summits decline in height, and the land gradually and smoothly slopes down to the very edge of the water, forming a rich and exceedingly beautiful landscape. Otisco Lake is about 1 mi. long, and is nearly surrounded by steep hills, 400 to 800 ft. above its surface. In the region occupied by the waterlime and Onondaga limestone formations are many deep rents and fissures, from 50 to 200 ft. below the surface, some of which contain little sheets of water. These remarkable depressions are evidently the result of hard soil to work,—being mixed with stones,—but of a most fruitful character. On still farther s. a grazing district takes the place of a wheat growing one. This change, however, may not be due entirely to changes in the composition of the formations. The country has become decidedly lilly. We now find steep slopes, incline d surfaces, deep ravines, rounded hills,—in fine, all the characteristics of good fields and walks for sheep and cows, for sweet grass and pure streams of water."—Travellers.

¹ "Of these systems of rocks constitute the basis of our soils; their particles, separated by the action of the elements, have been decomposed and in process of time rendered fruitful. Besides these rocks, we have beds of gravel and rounded stones, that have been brought to us from the far North by water; and we often see large boulders of granite rocks that were brought in on islands of ice that once drifted about in the sea that, in a period far back in the world's history, submerged all this part of the continent. The springs that flow from the lime rocks deposit lime,—in many instances in sufficient quantities to make farm fences and to burn lime. So highly are many of these springs charged with carbonate of lime that as soon as the water meets the air it parts with a part of the lime and incrusts leaves and trees and whatsoever may be encountered. These substances, perhaps, then decay, leaving perfect fountains upon the solid rock." Ag. Address of Hon. George Tenckers.

³ "As we go south, the rugged front of the limestone gives up a

subsidence, as the faces of the cliffs are nearly perpendicular, and the surface of the rocks above is much cracked and broken.¹

The co. seat is located at the city of Syracuse. The courthouse, a beautiful structure, built of Onondaga limestone and elaborately finished, is situated on W. Genesee St., near the center of the city.² It is one of the finest buildings of the kind in the State.³ The Onondaga Penitentiary, a city and co. prison and workhouse, is a commodious brick edifice, situated upon an eminence a mile, n. e. of the courthouse. It contains apartments for a jail, and is also used for the imprisonment of criminals sentenced for short terms. Prisoners are received from Oswego and Madison cos. The clerk's office is a fireproof brick building, situated at the corner of Church and North Salina Sts. It contains rooms for the Surrogate and Supervisors. The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 34 acres on Onondaga Hill, 1 mi. s. w. of Syracuse. The average number of inmates is 200, supported at a weekly cost of $1.26 each. The building is commodious, but poorly ventilated. Little attention is paid to the improvement of the inmates; and in accumulations, cleanliness, and attention to the sick and insane, the institution is not above the average of similar institutions in the State.

The Erie Canal extends e. and w. through near the center of the co. The Oswego Canal extends from the Erie at Syracuse, s. through Salina and Clay, to Lake Ontario at Oswego. The N. Y. Central R. R. extends through Manlius, De Witt, Syracuse, Gottes, Camillus, Van Buren, and Elbridge. From Syracuse two divisions of this r. r. extend westward to Rochester, one via Clyde and Lyons, called the New Road, and the other via Auburn and Geneva, called the Old Road. The Oswego & Syracuse R. R. extends from Syracuse s. through Gottes, Van Buren, and Lysander; and the Syracuse, Binghamton & New York R. R. extends from Syracuse s. through Onondaga, De Witt, La Fayette, Fabius, and Tully, uniting with the N. Y. & Erie R. R. at Binghamton. The Union R. R. is a short road extending from the s. terminus of the Binghamton road to the Erie Canal, in Gottes.

Fifteen newspapers are published in the co.; 3 daily, 10 weekly, 1 semi-monthly, and 1 monthly.⁴

¹These lakes are sometimes called "green lakes," from their peculiar form, and sometimes "green lakes," from the color of their waters.

²The first courts were held in farms and private residences at Onondaga, Leuca, on the shores of Cayuga Lake, Cayuga co., and on a hill in Madison co. The first courthouse was erected at Onondaga Hill, in 1816-17. The commissioners appointed to select the site for the courthouse were Asa Danforth, George Ballard, and Boswell Tinsley. In 1820 an act was passed to remove the co. seat to the village of Syracuse, and John Smith, Oren Hutchinson, and Samuel Bowman were commissioners to select the site. The courthouse was finally built on a lot about midway between the two rival villages of Syracuse and Sardinia. It was destroyed by fire in 1850, and the present structure was erected soon after. The first c. o. officers were 5th Phelps, First Judge; Benj. Ledyard, Clark; John Harris, Sheriff; and Moses De Witt, Surrogate.

³The library of the Court of Appeals is kept in the courthouse.

The Herald of the Times was started at Manlius in 1808 by Leonard Kellogg. In 1833 its name was changed to

The Morning Times, and it was successively issued by James Penick, S. S. Hays, and Daniel Clark. October 28, 1818, Mr. Clark changed its name to

The Onondaga Herald; soon after it was changed to

The Times, and continued about 3 years. June 27, 1821, Thurlow Wood became editor, and the name was changed to

The Onondaga County Republican. October 27, 1824, it passed into the hands of Laurin Dewey, who changed it to

The Onondaga Republican. Soon after, Linn A. Miller became proprietor, and the name was changed to

The Morning Republican. It afterward passed into the hands of L. S. Hays, and was continued about 5 years.

The Onondaga Echo was published at Manlius a short time in 1831 by ———— Londa.

The Lyra was started at Onondaga Hollow in 1811 by Thomas C. Fay, and was continued about 2 years. Thurlow Wood commenced his apprenticeship in this office.

The Onondaga Reporter was established at Onondaga Hollow in 1814 by Lewis H. Rollin, and was continued until 1820, when it was removed to Syracuse and united with the Gazette, under the name of

The Onondaga Reporter and Syracuse Gazette. In 1842 it passed into the hands of Sherman A. Clark, who changed it to

The Syracuse News, and continued it about 2 years.

The Onondaga Gazette was established at Onondaga Hill in 1816 by Alexander Morse, Wm. Ray, author of "The Horrors of Slavery," was edited at one time. In 1824 it passed into the hands of Cyprian S. McConnell, and was changed to

The Onondaga Journal. In 1827 Vivian W. Smith became proprietor, and in 1829 he removed it to Syracuse, and united it with the Syracuse Advertiser, after which the paper changed the name of

The Onondaga Standard, Sept. 10, 1823, published by William A. Smith, S. E. T. A., and A. L. Smith, W. L. Grandin, and Marcus Eaton, were subsequently incorporated in its publication at different times till 1828, when it passed into the hands of Van Alstyne. In 1830 Agass sold his interest to Wm. Sumner, and the paper is now published by Sumner & Brother.

The Syracuse Daily Standard was started in June, 1845, by Smith & Agass, and was continued until it was revived January 1, 1850, and is now published by Sumner & Brother.

The Onondaga Gazette was established at Syracuse in April, 1823, by John Purinton, and was the first paper printed at Syracuse. In about a year it was changed to

The Syracuse Gazette and General Advertiser, and continued until 1829, when it was united with the Onondaga Register.

The Syracuse Advertiser was started in 1825 by John F. Wynn and Thos. B. Larnum. Norman Rowley was afterwards connected with it, but John F. Wynn was assumed the entire control, and continued it till 1827, when it was united with the Journal, and its name changed to the Standard.

The Sardinia Standard was started in October, 1822, (now it is now the First Ward) at Syracuse, by Benjamin S. J. Lincoln. In 1827 it was changed to

The Sardinia Herald, and it was re-named a short time by Joseph Bump.

The Courier was published at Deane in a short time in 1814 by Eud. Prince. In 1822 it was taken to Onondaga and changed to

The Sardinia Courier and Enterprise, but was discontinued after a few numbers.

The Onondaga Republican was started at Syracuse in 1818, by W. S. Campbell. In 1824 it passed into the hands of J. B. Clark & Co., and its name was changed to

The Onondaga Republican. In 1824, A. M. B. became proprietor, and continued it till

The Onondaga Echo. In 1827 it was sold to J. M. Peters, and published by

The Syracuse News. In 1837, K. B. B. became proprietor, and continued it till 1842, when it was sold to J. M. Peters, and was published by

The Syracuse News. It was discontinued in 1837 by John M. Peters, who was succeeded by J. M. Peters.

The American Patriot was started at Deane in Village new

This co. was the chief seat of the Onondaga Nation of Indians, the central of the Five Nations. Their name is said to signify "sons of the hills," or "men of the mountains." To this nation was intrusted the care of the sacred council fire; and upon their territory were held the great councils of the Iroquois, to decide upon peace, war, and matters of general policy. The Onondagas were regarded as particularly a sacred nation; and their chiefs were more influential than those of any other nation. The most authentic accounts of these Indians seem to indicate that they were originally a subordinate tribe, living upon the St. Lawrence near Montreal, and were held in subjection by the Adirondacks, then the most powerful nation of the North. Several hundred years before the discovery of America, they rose upon their oppressors, but were defeated. They then fled, and embarking in canoes, went up the St. Lawrence to Lake Ontario, coasted along the lake to the mouth of Oswego River, and went up that river and settled upon the Seneca, near Three River Point. The nation finally divided into five tribes, and the central or Onondaga tribe went up the valley and settled near Onondaga Lake. Upon first entering the co. they found it inhabited by the Alleghans, or "Mound Builders," a tribe supposed to be akin to the Aztec tribes of Mexico, and one considerably acquainted with agriculture. The Iroquois gradually drove them off and took possession of their lands. The celebrated League of the Five Nations is said to have been made about 100 years before the first Dutch colony was planted at Manhattan,—though there are many reasons for believing it was of a much older date. The principal villages of the Onondagas were along the shore of Onondaga Lake and Creek. The first visit ever made by a white person to the Onondaga country of which any record has been preserved was that of Samuel Champlain in 1615.¹ In the summer of that year Champlain, with 10 Frenchmen, accompanied a party of Hurons in an attack upon the Iroquois. A battle was fought before the principal fort of the Onondagas; but the invaders were repulsed with loss and were obliged to retreat.² The French at an early period saw the necessity of obtaining the friendship of the Five Nations, the most powerful of all the Indian tribes. To this end, Jesuit missions were established at an early period, and one of the principal stations was at the seat of the Onondagas. The first missionary that ever visited the Onondaga country was Father Isaac Jogues, in 1612. He was afterward murdered by the Mohawks at Caughnawaga, Montgomery co. In the course of the next hundred years more than 60 missionaries were sent to this region, and at different times many of them were murdered.³ In 1655 a colony of 50 Frenchmen under the guidance of the priests, and with the consent of the Onondagas, made a settlement on the s. shore of Onondaga Lake, near the principal Indian village. For some time the colony flourished, and large numbers of the Indians were converted and baptized; but at length the Indians became jealous of their neighbors, and in March, 1658, they determined to exterminate them. A friendly Indian having exposed the plan, the whites managed to escape.⁴

² It is supposed that Champlain and his party entered by way of Oswego, and across the country to where Brant's now stands. In 1553 it was changed to

At this place they captured a party of Onondos engaged in fishing. They then proceeded to the Onondaga fort, supposed to have been situated on Green Point about Oneida, and of the principal salt springs. The fort was assaulted, but it was so bravely defended that the Hurons departed in haste, and retreated. They were pursued by the Onondagas until they embarked in their canoes upon Lake Ontario.

³ The principal of these missionaries who have left records concerning the Onondaga country are Fathers Le Moyne, Le Febvre, Chabone, Le Moyne, Quen, Le Jeune, Breton, and Lallemand. Father Lallemand is the first one who mentions the salt springs, in his journal bearing date of 1636, etc. At times these missionaries seemed to meet with considerable success; but the intrigues of the rival French and English missionaries, who were striving to secure the friendship of the Indians, continually thwarted their work, and ended their lives at all times necessary.

It is reported, upon the authority of the missionaries, that the principal chief of the Onondagas invited the French to establish another colony among them, for the purpose of instructing the Indians in the arts of civilization. Accordingly, in 1665, a number of French families, under the guidance of the missionaries, came into the country and located near the Indian fort and village which stood in the vicinity of the present village of Jamesville. After living in peace for about 3 years, they were visited by a party of Spaniards who came in from the s., and the Indians became jealous of both and murdered them all.¹ It is supposed that several other attempts were made by the French to colonize the country, as numerous remains of French works are found in several places.² In the wars that ensued between the English and French the Onondagas bore their part, and were generally allies of the English. In 1695, Count Frontenac, the French Governor of Canada, invaded the Onondaga country; but he retired after burning a few villages and murdering one old man. During the Revolution the Onondagas espoused the English cause, and many of their warriors, under the leadership of Brant, were engaged in the various attacks upon the frontier settlements. On the 19th of April, 1779, Col. Van Schaek, at the head of 150 men, invaded the Onondaga country by the way of Oneida Lake. A skirmish was fought near the s. w. limits of the present city of Syracuse, in which the Indians were defeated.³ In the fall of the same year, Col. Gansevoort, at the head of 100 men, was detached from Gen. Sullivan's army, at Geneva, and sent through the country of the Cayugas and Onondagas to complete the work of destruction which had been commenced. The villages of the Onondagas were burned, their corn was destroyed, and their sacred council fire was put out. In revenge, small bands of the Indians attacked the defenseless frontier settlements upon the Mohawk and committed the most horrible atrocities.

In 1788 a treaty was made with the Onondagas, in which they ceded to the State all their lands except the Onondaga Reservation.⁴ The land thus obtained, and another tract lying w. of it, were set apart for bounty lands to Revolutionary soldiers, and became known as the Military Tract.⁵ It included all the lands lying within the original limits of Onondaga co., and now constituting Onondaga, Cayuga, Cortland, and Seneca, and parts of Tompkins, Oswego, and Wayne cos.

³ The official report makes the Indian loss 12 killed and 34 pris. or 48.

⁴ The original Onondaga Reservation was a tract of land bounded on the E. by the military townships of Manlius and Pompey, s. by the townships of Pompey and Marcellus, w. by the townships of Marcellus and Camillus, s. by the townships of Camillus and Manlius and the public Reservation bordering upon Onondaga Lake. The s. e. corner was originally at the Corner S. e. corner of Syracuse. The Reservation was about 112 mi. long s. and s. by 2 1/2 mi. wide e. and w. and included parts of the present towns of La Fayette, Camillus, Goldsboro, Witt, and the city of Syracuse, and all of Onondaga. In 1794 it was purchased of the Indians, reserving a tract in the s. e. corner 4 1/2 mi. s. and s. by nearly 4 1/2 and w., and subdivided into 224 lots, mostly of 200 acres each, exclusive of the s. w. corner, originally granted to Webster by the Indians in 1788. The lots 8 to 19, 25 to 33, 39 to 47, and 53 to 67, inclusive, were made no account of, having been converted into a public salt Reservation. The remainder were sold in 1796. The second purchase was that of Feb. 25, 1817, being a strip 1 mi. wide from the s. e. end of the tract reserved in the first purchase, and was subdivided into 27 square lots of 100 acres each. The third purchase was that of Feb. 11, 1822, being a strip 1 mi. wide from the s. end of that remaining after the purchase of 1817. It was subdivided into 7 lots. The present reservation is E. of s. and s. by a little less than 2 1/2, and w., containing—exclusive of 300 acres in the s. w. portion, granted by the Indians to Ephraim Webster in 1823—about 6,100 acres. It is situated one-half in Onondaga and one-half in La Fayette. The number of Indians remaining of the once powerful Onondaga Nation, as reported by the last census, is 340. An Indian school is taught, but it has had little success. The condition of the tribe has visibly improved within the last few years, and they appear to be slowly learning the arts of civilization. The Onondaga salt

Spring Reservation was subdivided in 1821-24, by John Randall, jr.

⁵ The Military Tract was laid out into 25 townships, each intended to contain, as nearly as possible, 60,000 acres; and each township was subdivided into 100 lots. Three more townships were afterward added, making 28 in all. The following is a complete list of them:—

The first white person that took up his residence within the limits of the co. after the Revolution was Ephraim Webster, an Indian trader, who located his trading house on the banks of Onondaga Creek, near its mouth, in 1786. The next year he was accompanied by another trader named Neukerek, who died in the spring of 1787 and was buried near the trading house. In 1788, Asa Danforth and his son Asa, and Comfort Tyler, from Mass., came in, and located on the present site of Onondaga Valley. The salt springs soon became generally known and attracted many immigrants to this region. The State reserved for salt purposes the territory surrounding the lake and known as the Onondaga Salt Springs Reservation, embracing the greater part of the old town of Salina, now the towns of Salina and Geddes, and the city of Syracuse, all of which, except the land needed for the manufacturing establishments alone, has since been sold. In the treaty with the Indians, the salt springs were to be jointly used by the whites and Indians forever. The salt business immediately became important, and has since kept pace with the growth of the country. It is now one of the most important branches of business carried on in the State, and is constantly increasing.¹

Junius was added to compensate those who drew lots afterward and to belong to the "Boston Ten Towns," and to supply those who belonged to the Hospital Department, and who at first were not provided for; and Sterling, to satisfy all the remaining claims. The U. S. granted him a lot to each of the soldiers in Ohio, and it was left up to him to surrender this claim and receive the whole 500 acres in this State, or to retain the claim and secure but 500 acres. The 500 acres reserved was taken from the S. E. corner of each lot, and became known as the Soldier's Hundred. A charge of 48 shillings was made upon each for the survey; and in full of payment a reserve of 50 acres, known as the Servant's Pledge, was made.

The first mention in history of the Salt Springs of Onondaga is found in the journal of Father Tallant, who visited this region in 1645-46. He speaks of a salt spring, and of a fine spring of fresh water, coming out of the same bank, within 80 or 100 paces of each other, on the margin of the lake. Father Le Moine, who visited the country in 1674, speaks of a spring which the Indians told him was boiled by an evil spirit. He made a personal examination of it, and made some salt from the water, which he carried to Quebec. Other missionaries of an early period make frequent mention of the salt springs; and before the English occupied the country the Indians had learned how to manufacture salt.

At the time of the first settlement the salt spring was located upon the marsh, namely, close in the rear of the site of the present Salina pump-house, and the salt water came up from the bottom. The Indians had excavated a hole, which was constantly filled with water to the surface of the ground. In 1789, Asa Danforth and Comfort Tyler came down from Onondaga, and brought with them a kettle, which they suspended from a pole supported by 2 crooked sticks, and in this they made the first salt ever manufactured by the present race of settlers. In about 12 hours they made 15 bushels of salt; and securing their kettle in the bushes, they went home with the product of their day's labor, - feeling richer than they would had they discovered a mine of gold. For several years it was customary for the settlers from all the surrounding region to bring kettles with them and manufacture sufficient salt for their own use. The first settlers of Salina came in 1790, and procured salt from the summit of the bank above the salt springs. Most of them came with the intention of obtaining the mineral for the purpose of salt. At first kettles suspended from poles were used exclusively, but in a short time it was found more convenient to set the kettles upon a pile of stones. The "works" were at first covered to protect the manufacture from the weather, and the first addition kettle, set in an iron, was used by John Vanhook in 1793, and in a short time additions were made as they were used. Two kettles were afterwards used, and additional kettles were made from time to time, until 20 to 30 kettles are now put in a single block. The first salt made and in a permanent building was manufactured by Elisha Alvord, as a part of one of the Company, organized in 1798, and consisting of Asa Danforth, Josiah Sang, James Reid, Thomas Hart, Ebenezer Taylor, and Hezekiah Mead. A new well, about 300 feet deep, containing a little S. W. of the original one, and a building was erected large enough to contain 32 kettles, set in an angle of 45 degrees each. From this time the works increased rapidly in size and number. The manufacture of salt was commenced at Onondaga in 1793, by James Mead, and in Liverpool about the same year, by John Danforth. The first wells of the old well of Seneca were opened in 1820. By continuous pumping the water in the wells becomes less and less salt; - the shallow wells failing first. This renders the constant opening of new wells a matter of necessity. The first such well was constructed in 1824, by a company formed for that purpose. The introduction of the solar vats produced so much opposition, that the Legislature was obliged to pass special laws for their protection.

The salt water was at first dipped up by pails and carried to the places for boiling. In 1799 this method was superseded by a pump placed upon a platform above the spring, and supplied from his leading to each block. At first each man had his own pump, though he has since used but in a few cases. The earlier men were employed to pump for all. As the works increased and were developed, a large quantity of the springs were of pump-houses were built from the springs to the various blocks, and a pump was used for each block or group of blocks. A horse-power for elevating salt water was used by Asa Danforth, Jr., in 1807, and water power was added from a windmill in the vicinity by him soon after. In 1817, 08 a water power was obtained by connecting Yellow Brook from the West with the present county clerk's office, and from Salina to the mill of John Richardson. All the works in which machinery is used elevate the water by means of wheels, to which the kettles were attached. An experiment was made in 1804, to find a way to raise salt water by means of steam. An iron boiler placed over the spring and connected with it by tubes, was filled with steam, which was suddenly condensed by the admission of cold water, a vacuum was produced, and the water would rise up with great violence, and fill the tube. This experiment was found to be costly for general application. In 1814, 24 the Onondaga Salt Company erected a fine pump, worked by a water wheel, and driven by the waste water from the canal; but the pump was found to supply the needs of the water. The absence of machinery to supply other than the pump was. Up to this time the greater part of the water had to be raised by hand pumps. In 1826 the State bought from the pump-works of the Onondaga Salt Company and ordered them sufficiently to supply all the manufacturing works here.

The Salina pump-house is a fine structure built and supplied in 1841, at a cost of about $50,000. The Salina pump-house is also a stone structure, built in 1848, at a cost of about $100,000. A large ground reservoir has lately been constructed for the Salina pump-house, of sufficient capacity to contain water enough to manufacture 60,000 bushels of salt. The State has also ordered double its capacity, and built it.

The first great improvement made in the manufacture of salt was the introduction of a pump, which has been used within a few years in the various parts of the basin. A great number of experiments have since been made, but the process of manufacture remains essentially the same as at first. Many experiments have been made to completely separate the impurities from the water before boiling,—but so far without complete success. The addition of alum to the water is found to hinder the salt and to render the process of crystallization more perfect. The immense consumption of fuel at the boiling works has almost stripped the surrounding country of wood, rendering that article scarce and high. Experiments in the use of coal have been completely successful; and by the construction of the Binchanton R. R. an avenue is opened directly to the Pennsylvania coal mines.

CAMILLUS—was formed from Marcellus, March 8, 1799. A part of Onondaga was annexed in 1834. It is an interior town, lying a little s. w. of the center of the co. The surface is generally rolling, the ridges extending in a n. and s. direction. Nine Mile Creek flows n. e. through near the center, and along the s. line it is bordered by steep banks 100 to 200 feet high. In the n. w. corner is a swamp covering an area of several hundred acres. The soil is a rich, clayey and

In 1797 the Surveyor-General laid out a tract of 15,000 acres, surrounding the lake, known as the Onondaga Salt Springs Reservation, which was set apart for the location of salt works. It was supposed that this tract was more extensive than would ever be needed; and pursuant to acts of the Legislature, all, except about 550 acres, was sold in 1822 and 1827. Since that time, however, the State has re-purchased several tracts, and large numbers of solar works have been erected upon private property. The amount of land at present owned by the State is about 700 acres.

The salt wells are all located in the low lands that surround the lake. Their existence is doubtless owing to the nature and position of the rocks forming the basin of the lake. The Niagara limestone—a solid and almost seamless rock, about 100 ft. thick—crops out 8 miles N. of the springs. In common with all the rocks in the vicinity, it has a dip to the s. of about 26 ft. to the mile. This would make it extend under the lake, forming a shelf or to the whole valley completely impervious to water. Above this formation are the red shales of the Onondaga salt group, nearly 500 feet in thickness. Observation and experiment have shown that these shales have been removed, by some great force of nature, from the whole valley which extends from the N. extremity of the lake several miles up the valley of Onondaga Creek; and the excavation has been filled with drift deposits, consisting chiefly of alternate strata of sand, clay, and gravel. The salt water is found permeated through this drift in all parts of the valley, the strongest being found where the old valley is the deepest. The salt water is probably derived from the dissolving of particles of salt distributed through the whole mass of the green shales and plaster beds, which lie next above the red shales and which extend perhaps many miles under the hills. In evidence of the truth of this theory, it is shown that the green shales which have been exposed are full of small hopper-shaped cavities,—the precise shape assumed by crystals of salt when left to form by themselves, and one which no other crystal ever assumes. The water collects in this great basin, and is prevented from overflowing by the impervious floor of Niagara limestone. The waters of the lake are probably prevented from mingling with the salt water by strata of impervious clay and marl. About 50 different wells have been sunk for obtaining salt water, and a great number of experiments have been tried. The depth of the borings has been from 50 to 600 ft.; and in every case where the tubing has been sunk into the strata below the drift no brine has been obtained. Up to 1825 the water was obtained from square holes sunk in the marsh to the depth of about 30 ft. The first wells that were bored were 50 to 80 ft. deep. Subsequent experiment showed that by boring farther out on the marsh the wells could be deeper and a better quality of water could be obtained. A tube sunk to the depth of 414 ft. penetrated a clay bed or the Niagara limestone, and destroyed the well, although at a depth of 592 to 597 ft. a beautiful supply of excellent water was obtained. A boring up on the hills, to the depth of 600 ft., probably penetrated through the limestone and entered the Clinton group below. This last boring was made with the hope of finding rock salt; but not a single salt crystal has ever yet been found here in a natural state.

Wells have been sunk at 4 points, giving to the salt manufacture 4 distinct centers. These are situated respectively at Salina, (now First Ward of Syracuse), Liverpool, and Geddes. The number of wells now in use upon the Salt Springs Reservation is 15, of which 6—from 150 to 310 ft. deep—are at Salina, 4—from 255 to 340 ft. deep—are at Syracuse, and 5—from 80 to 100 ft. deep—are at Liverpool. The Geddes wells have been abandoned, as the water was not sufficiently strong to make the manufacture profitable. The Geddes works are now supplied from the wells at Syracuse.

The strength of the water is tested by an instrument called a salometer, graduated so as to mark pure water 0° and water saturated with salt 106°. The water from the wells as now drawn ranges from 60° to 76°, averaging about 70°. An analysis of the various springs was made in 1837, by Dr. Beck, with the following result:—

An analysis from a well yielding stronger water was afterwards made, with the following result:—

Common salt.....	173.50

The water at the present time does not essentially differ from that last given, a hundred pounds of lime yielding about 17 lbs. of pure salt. A bushel of salt, weighing 50 lbs., is made from 55 gallons of water. The temperature of the water as it rises from the ground ranges from 50° to 52° Fahrenheit. An analysis of the manufactured salt shows that 96 to 97 per cent is pure salt, and the remainder is principally sulphate of lime and water. About four-fifths of the salt is made by boiling, and the remainder by solar evaporation. The water in the wells rises to the surface of the ground; thence it is raised by a column of iron and force pumps into high reservoirs, from which it is distributed by pump legs to the various works. The machinery for pumping is propelled by water from the canals. The boiling works consist of two parallel arches, generally set with 25 to 30 kettles each. They are covered with a roof, partially open to allow the egress of steam; and under the same covers are arranged iron frames for storing and packing the salt. Each of these works is technically called a "block." A "cross-tie" is connected with each block, and from it a line of logs conducts the water along the top of the arch, between the rows of kettles, with a spout to each kettle. The greater part of the impurities are precipitated and fall to the bottom of the kettle before the water begins to boil. A shallow pan, called a bottom pan, is placed in each kettle when first filled, to receive these impurities as they settle. The pan is removed before the water boils, and the salt is left nearly pure. The kettles usually have a capacity of about 100 gallons, and average in weight about 90 lbs. each. The fuel is applied at one end of the arch, the chimney being situated at the other. Within the past few years several chimneys, ranging from 75 to 150 ft. in height, have been erected, for the purpose of using coal. The blocks are all situated along the canals, or side cuts from them, for convenience in obtaining fuel and in shipping the salt. The number of blocks upon the Reservation reported in 1850 was 312, distributed as follows:—

	No. of Blocks.	No. of Kettles.

The solar works consist of shallow vats, constructed of wood, and placed upon posts 2 to 3½ ft. above the ground. Each vat is 16 ft. square, or 16 by 18, and 9 inches deep. Movable roofs are so constructed that the vats can easily be covered in wet weather and exposed in dry. An acre of ground contains about 60 vats and covers, and an evaporating surface of more gravely loam. Limestone and gypsum are both found in abundance.¹ A large sulphur spring is found in the s. w. corner. Camillus, (p. v.) on Nine Mile Creek, near the center of the town, was incorp. in 1852; it contains 3 churches, 2 flouring mills, and 552 inhabitants. Amboy, in the s. e. part, contains a church and 170 inhabitants. Belle Isle, (p. v.) on the canal, 1 mi. e. of Amboy, contains 1 church and 140 inhabitants. Fairmount is a p. o. near the n. border. The first settler was Capt. Isaac Lindsay, who located upon Lot 80 in 1790.² The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1817. There are 6 churches in town.³

CICERO—was formed from Lysander, Feb. 20, 1807. Clay was taken off in 1827. It lies upon Oneida Lake, in the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is level or very slightly undulating. An extensive swamp in the s. e. part occupies one-third of the entire surface,⁴ and another considerable swamp extends along the lake shore w. of South Bay. The soil is a clayey and sandy loam. Cicero Corners, (Cicero p. o.) near the center of the w. line, contains 2 churches and 242 inhabitants. Brewerton, (p. v.) on the outlet of Oneida Lake, contains 2 churches and 621 inhabitants, of whom 421 are in this town. South Bay and Frenchman's Island are places of resort for pleasure seekers.⁵ Fort Brewerton,⁶ one of the line of English fortifications between Oswego and the Mohawk Valley, was situated in Oswego co., on the shore of Oneida Outlet, opposite the present village of Brewerton. The first settlement was made by — Dexter, a blacksmith, who located on the river, opposite the fort, in 1790.⁷ The first church (Presb.) was formed at Cicero Corners, in 1819; Rev. James Shepard was the first preacher. The census reports 6 churches in town.⁸

CLAY—was formed from Cicero, April 16, 1827. It is the central town upon the s. e. border of the co. Its surface is very flat, and but little elevated above the level of Oneida Lake. Seneca River forms the w. and Oneida River the s. boundary. These streams are sluggish; and along the latter is an extensive swampy region. The soil is in part clayey, and in part a light sandy loam. Fruit and onions are largely produced. Belgium, (Clay p. o.) upon Seneca River, contains a church and 190 inhabitants; Euclid (p. v.) 2 churches and 140 inhabitants; Centerville,⁹ (Plank Road p. o.) on the line of Cicero, 2 churches and 111 inhabitants. Three River Point (p. v.) lies at the junction of Oneida and Seneca Rivers, in the s. w. corner.¹⁰ P. p. 90. The first settler was Patrick McGee, who located at Three River Point, in 1793.¹¹ The first church (Evang. Luth.) was located in the s. e. part of the town. The census reports 4 churches.¹²

DEWITT¹³—was formed from Manlius, April 12, 1835. A portion of Syracuse was annexed in 1858. It is an interior town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. The s. half is level, and the s. broken and hilly. The declivities of the hills are usually steep, and their summits are 500 to 700 ft. above the valleys. Battenut Creek, flowing s., divides the highlands into two nearly equal ridges. Upon this stream are several fine mill sites. In the s. w. corner, about 1 mi. s. w. of the 1500 ft. The vats are usually arranged in three different grades, the water being drawn down it different times, and the salt being allowed to crystallize only in the lowest one. In this process the impurities nearly all crystallize before the brine is drawn into the last series of vats, leaving pure salt. It is found that, on an average, the covers can be taken off only 70 days in a year. More than 500 acres are now covered by a solid salt; and the aggregate number of vats is 39,786, and the amount of evaporating surface 8,403,840 sq. ft. The solar salt is much cheaper than that produced by fire. Large quantities of both kinds are ground for dairy and table purposes. The aggregate amount of bushels of salt manufactured in 1858 was as follows:—

	Solar.	Boiled.	Total.
Syracuse	373,295	94,067	467,362
De Witt	469,483	2,764,884	3,234,367

The State pays a duty of one cent per bushel on all salt manufactured, and from the revenue so derived the State works are kept up. The salt is now freely purchased by such contractors as desire to buy bushels. There are also salt brine distilleries and a 1000-gallon water works containing 14, 20, or 25 lbs. and small boxes. The brines are pure poly mineral, and in the Towns lying s. of the city.

¹ It is said that the first gypsum in the U. S. was found in this way in 1792, by Wm. Lindsay. De Witt Cummings and Young, and other distinguished individuals visited the locality in 1809; and about the same time quarrying was commenced by a joint stock company, and successful as a business was carried on for many years.

² James, Wm. and Elijah Lindsay, brothers of the first settler, were on the site. Among the other early settlers were N. J. De Lumbard, Moses Chapman, George West, Stephen Deuel, H. Frisbie, Wm. Reed, S. H. B. Lewis, and J. H. Lewis. The latter of the latter Vail taught the first school, in 1808. (See p. 10.) The first mill on the site, built in 1793, John T. Jones was the owner. (See p. 10.) David Murray, Wm. Wheeler, and Samuel P. Lewis built the first saw and grist mills, in 1806.

¹³ Named from Moses De Witt, an early settler and prominent citizen.

Jamesville, is a small lake, occupying a deep chasm in the rocks. It is nearly circular in form, about 80 rods in diameter, and is almost surrounded by perpendicular banks 150 to 200 ft. high.¹ Another lake, of a similar character, lies 2 mi. s. e. of Jamesville.² Messina Spring, a strong sulphur spring, s. w. of the center of the town, has considerable local notoriety for medicinal qualities. Gypsum and waterlime are both extensively quarried along the banks of Butternut Creek. The soil is a sand and clay loam in the s., and a sandy and gravelly loam in the s. Jamesville,³ in the s. part of the town, contains 3 churches and several manufactories.⁴ Pop. 270. Orville (De Witt p. o.) contains 2 churches and 158 inhabitants. Collamer,⁵ (p. o.) in the s. part, is a hamlet. Messina Springs is near the w. line. The first settler was Benj. Morehouse, from Dutchess co., who came in April 26, 1789.⁶ The census reports 7 churches in town.⁷

ELBRIDGE⁸—was formed from Camillus, March 26, 1829. It is the central town upon the w. border of the co. Its surface is level in the s. and rolling in the s. Seneca River and Cross Lake form a portion of the s. boundary. Skaneateles Outlet flows s. w. through the w. part. Upon the banks of the Outlet, near the center, are found the peculiar tunnel-shaped cavities in the earth, characteristic of regions abounding in gypsum. Several weak brine springs are found along Seneca River.⁹ The soil is a rich, sandy and gravelly loam. Elbridge, (p. v.) on Skaneateles Outlet, in the s. w. part of the town, was incorp. April 1, 1848; it contains the Munro Collegiate Institute,¹⁰ 3 churches, a pail factory, and several mills. About 1 mi. down the stream is a mill for the manufacture of pearl barley. Pop. 630. Jordan, (p. v.) upon the Outlet, 2 mi. below Elbridge, was incorp. May 2, 1835. It contains the Jordan Academy, 5 churches, 2 flouring mills, and a wheelbarrow factory. It is a station upon the direct branch of the N. Y. Central R. R., and an important canal village. A feeder from the Outlet connects with the canal at this place. Pop. 1,331. Peru (Jacks Reefs p. o.) is a hamlet, on the canal, near the s. e. corner. Junction (Hart Lot p. o.) is a r. r. station on the Auburn Branch of the N. Y. C. R. R. Half Way is a station on the same r. r. California is a hamlet, on the canal, 2 mi. e. of Jordan. The first settler was Josiah Buck,¹¹ who located on Lot 82, in 1793. The first church (Bap.) was formed Dec. 30, 1816; Elder Craw was the first preacher.¹²

FABIUS¹³—was formed from Pompey, March 9, 1798. Tully was taken off in 1803, and a part of Truxton (Cortland co.) in 1808. It is the s. e. corner town in the co. It has a general elevation of 1,000 to 1,200 ft. above the Erie Canal at Syracuse. The surface of the s. half is broken by a series of ridges extending in a s. and s. direction and separated by narrow valleys. Their declivities are generally steep, and the summits are 300 to 500 ft. above the valleys. South Hill, in the s. w. corner, is the principal elevation. The central and northern parts are level or moderately hilly. The streams from the center flow s. into the Toughnioga, and those upon the

² In the vicinity of this latter lake two caves have been discovered and explored for several rods under ground. The caves and sinks in which the lakes are situated are evidently formed by the dissolving of the underlying rocks by the action of water.

⁵ Locally known as "Britton Settlement."

⁶ Among other early settlers were Daniel Keeler, Dr. Holbrook, Jeremiah Jackson, Stephen Angel, Stephen Hungerford, John Young, Jeremiah and James Gould, William Bonds, Roger Merrill, Caleb Northrup, and Benjamin Sanford, all of whom located in the town between 1799 and 1809. The first child born was Sarah Morehouse, Feb. 16, 1799; and the first death was that of Egbert De Witt, May 20, 1793. Polly Hubbard taught the first school, in 1795; Benjamin Morehouse kept the first inn, in 1799; and Asa Danforth built the first sawmill, in 1792, and the first gristmill, in 1793.

⁷ 3 M. E., 2 Presb., Prot. E., and Cong.

⁸ In the w. part of the town, at the time of the first settlement, were found the remains of three distinct fortifications: one was square, one quadrangular, and one circular. When first discovered, the embankments were 3 feet high, and upon one of them stood an oak tree 4 ft. in diameter. These works were each situated near a living spring of water. The remains of various articles found here seem to indicate that these fortifications were known to the French.

¹¹ The old elm tree under which Mr. Buck and family took shelter before their house was built is still standing, a little w. of the house of Col. John Munro. Among the other early settlers were Robert Filton, James Strong, Col. Chandler, Dr. Peckard, — Potter, Jas. Wessner, Wm. Stevens, Dr. John Frisbie, Zeas and Aaron Wright, Martin Ticknor, Reynolds Corey, Isaac Smith, Jonathan Rowley, Jonathan Balcock, Moses Carpenter, Squire Munro, Ezra and John Brackett, and Joseph and Aaron Colman. John Hoody taught the first school, in 1801; Josiah Buck kept the first inn, in 1793; Wm. Stevens kept the first store and built the first sawmill, in 1795; and Isaac Strong the first gristmill, in 1798.

¹² The census reports 8 churches in town; 3 M. E., 2 Bap., Cong., Presb., and Prot. E.

e. and w. borders flow s. into Limestone and Butternut Creeks. A small lake, known as "Labrador Pond," lies at the w. foot of South Hill. The soil is generally a fine quality of gravelly loam, intermixed in places with clay and sand. Along the stream w. of Fabius Village is considerable swamp land. From its elevation, and the broken character of its surface, this town is best adapted to pasturage. Dairying is the principal occupation of the people; and in the amount of dairy products it is the first town in the co. and among the first in the State.¹ Fabius (p. v.) is situated on a small stream, s. e. of the center of the town. Pop. 472. Apulia (p. v.) is a station of the S. B. & N. Y. R. R., in the w. part of the town. Pop. 149. Gooseville is a hamlet, in the s. e. corner. The first settlers were Josiah Moore and Timothy Jerome, from Stockbridge, Mass., who came in 1794.² The first church (Presb.) was formed at Apulia, in 1804; and the first pastor was Rev. Mr. Osborne. The first church edifice erected was a Bap., at Fabius Village, in 1806.³

GEDDES⁴—was formed from Salina, March 18, 1848. It lies upon the w. bank of Onondaga Lake, a little s. of the center of the co. Its surface is level in the s. and rolling in the s. In the s. e. part are several isolated, rounded drift hills, or knolls. Seneca River forms the s. boundary, and Onondaga Creek a part of the e. Nine Mile Creek flows e. through near the center. The soil is a clayey and sandy loam. Near the s. w. extremity of the lake are several salt wells.⁵ The New York State Asylum for Idiots is in the e. part, near the line of Syracuse; and the S. B. & N. Y. R. R. coal depot is on the canal. In the s. e. part are extensive stone quarries. Geddes, (p. v.), in the s. e. part, was incorp. April 29, 1832. It contains 2 churches, a brewery and distillery, and a large number of salt works. Pop. 959. The first settlement was commenced by James Geddes, in 1794.⁶ The census reports 2 churches; Prot. E. and M. E.

LA FAYETTE—was formed from Pompey and Onondaga, April 15, 1825. It is an interior town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is hilly and broken. Butternut Creek flows s. through the e. part, and Onondaga Creek through the w. The high ridge between the valleys of these streams has steep declivities, and its summit is 300 to 600 ft. high. Conklings Brook, in the s. e. part, flows from the e., and within the space of 1 mile it descends 500 ft. The soil is generally a sandy and gravelly loam; and a portion is thickly covered with large, water-worn pebbles. About one-half of the Onondaga Indian Reservation lies in the s. w. corner of this town. La Fayette, (p. v.), on the ridge near the center of the town, contains 1 church and 35 houses; and Cardiff, (p. v.), on Onondaga Creek, a church and 25 houses. Linn is a p. o., in the s. e. part. The first settler was John Wilcox, who located upon Lot 11 in 1791.⁷ The first church (Cong.) was formed in Oct. 1809; Rev. Benj. Bell was the first preacher. There are 2 churches in town; Cong. and M. E.

LYSANDER—was formed March 5, 1794. Hannibal (Oswego co.) was taken off in 1806, and Cicero in 1807. It is the s. w. corner town in the co. Its surface is level and somewhat swampy in the e., and gently rolling in the w. Seneca River forms its s. and n. boundaries. This stream takes the name of Oswego River, below the mouth of the outlet of Oneida Lake. In the s. w. part is a slight fall in the river, known as Jacks Rifts. At Baldwinville is a fall of 7 ft., affording a valuable water-power. Mud Lake, a large pond s. w. of the center, covers an area of about 300 acres. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, with occasional patches of clay, formed by the disintegration of the red shales. Baldwinville, (p. v.), on Seneca River, was incorp. in 1818. It contains a union school, a scythe factory, ax factory, tannery, several extensive

³ Among the other early settlers were Capt. Ebenezer Belden, Col. Elijah St. John, Thomas Miles, Jonathan Standley, Abel Webster, James Harris, John Wallace, Thos. and Simon Keeney, Jacob Penoyer, and Abel Pixley. The first child born was Charles Moore, in 1798; the first marriages, those of Abel Webster and Lydia Keeney, and of Luther St. John and Polly Joy, in 1804; and the first death, that of Josiah Moore, in 1802. A colored man belonging to Simon Keeney died about the same time from drinking too much maple syrup. The first school was taught by Miss Jerome, (afterward wife of Judge James Geddes), in the e. part of the town; Emilee Fowler taught the first school near Apulia, in 1802-03. The first mms were kept by Josiah Tibbles near Tully, in 1797, and by Capt. St. John, at Apulia, in 1802; David Caldwell kept the first store, in 1804; Thos. Miles built the first sawmill, in 1800; and John Mesker the first grist mill, in 1808.

⁴ There are 6 churches in town; M. E. and Cong. at Apulia, and Bap., M. E., F. W. Bap., and Univ. at Fabius.

⁵ Named from H. M. James Geddes, first settler.

⁷ Among the other early settlers were Freeman Hughes and James Lamb. Nancy Good taught the first school, in 1806; James Lamb kept the first inn, in 1803; and Noah Smith built the first sawmill, in 1825.

⁸ Comfort Rounds and Wm. Heskens located on town in 1792; Solomon Owen and James Sherman in 1793; John H. Wright, Amaziah Branch, James P. O'Connell, Samuel Hyatt, Amos Wright, and Rowen Bryan, in 1794; and Isaac and Obed Conkling, Zenas and Ozias Northway, and T. C. DuLacson after. The first child born was Amy Wilcox, in 1791. The first marriage, that of Solomon Owen and L. S. Rounds, in 1794; and the first death, that of Moses De Witt, in 1794. Rev. Amariah Broome was the first teacher. — Cheney kept the first inn; Stephen Morse the first store; and James S. Sherman built the first sawmill, in 1795.

flouring and saw mills, a newspaper office, furnace, machine shop, and a large distillery. Pop. 1,675,—of which 1,115 are in this town and 560 in Van Buren. Belts Corners (Lysander p. o.) contains 3 churches and 35 houses; Little Utica, 1 church and 30 houses; Plainville (p. v.) a church and 218 inhabitants; and Jacksonville (Polkville p. o.) a church and 25 houses. Lamsons (p. o) is a R. R. station. The first settler within the present limits of the town was Jonathan Palmer, a Revolutionary soldier, who drew Lot 36, and located upon it in 1793.¹ The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1813.²

MANLIUS—was formed March 5, 1794. A part of Onondaga was taken off in 1798, a part of Salina in 1809, and De Witt in 1835. It lies on the E. border of the co., N. of the center. The surface of the N. half is level, and that of the S. half rolling and hilly. Limestone Creek flows N. through near the center of the town, and at the northern extremity it receives Butternut Creek from the W., and the two united streams flow into Chittenango Creek, which latter stream forms the N. E. boundary of the town. A few rods S. of the canal, near the center, are two small lakes, similar in character to those already described in De Witt, but somewhat larger. They are known as the "Green Lakes." In the S. W. corner of the town is another small pond of the same kind.³ The E. branch of Limestone Creek, near the S. border of the town, falls down a limestone precipice 100 ft., forming a beautiful cascade. Several sulphur and other mineral springs are found in town, but none of any considerable note.⁴ In the W. part are extensive quarries, from which are obtained immense quantities of waterlime, quicklime and gypsum. The soil is a deep, fertile alluvium in the N., and a sandy and clayey loam in the S. Manlius, (p. v.) on Limestone Creek, near the S. line of the town, was incorp. March 12, 1833. It contains the Manlius Academy, a union school, 4 churches, 2 carriage factories, 2 flouring mills, an ax factory, 2 foundries, and a paper mill. Pop. 334. Fayetteville, (p. v.), on Limestone Creek, 2 mi. N. W. from Manlius, and 1 mi. from the Erie Canal, with which it is connected by a navigable feeder, was incorp. May 6, 1844. It is finely situated on a gentle elevation, and has a number of valuable water-privileges.⁵ It contains 4 churches, a union school, a bank, 2 large flouring mills, 3 sawmills, 1 pearl barley mill, 1 paper mill, 1 sash blind and door factory, 3 lime and plaster mills, 1 tannery, 1 foundery and machine shop, 1 wheelbarrow factory and 1 cradle factory, 5 carriage factories, and several large establishments for the manufacture of lime, plaster, and waterlime.⁶ Pop. in 1859, 1,376. Manlius Center (p. v.) is a canal village, containing 40 houses. Manlius Station (p. v.) and Kirkville (p. v.) are small villages and stations upon the Central R. R. High Bridge, in the S. W. part, contains a church, 2 plaster and lime mills, a sawmill, gristmill, and 20 houses.⁷ Matthews Mills, (North Manlius p. o.), Eagle Village, and Hartsville are hamlets. The first settlers were David Tripp, who located 1 mi. N. W. of the present site of Manlius Village, and James Foster, who located on the present site of Eagle Village, in 1790.⁸ The first church (Prot. E.) was formed in 1798: Rev. Mr. Nash was the first preacher.⁹

MARCELLUS—was formed March 5, 1794. A part of Onondaga was taken off in 1798; Camillus in 1799; a part of Otisco in 1806; and Skaneateles in 1830. A part of Sempronius

¹ Among the other settlers were Benj. De Puy, Benben Smith, Adam Emerick, Elph and Solomon Toll, Thomas Farrington, Eljah Mann, John McHarris, Wm. Landsay, Ebenezer Wells, James Cowan, Abner and Manly Vickory, Job Lewis, and Dr. James C. Baldwin. Dr. Baldwin was the early proprietor and founder of Baldwinsville. He built the first saw and grist mills, in 1807; and opened the first store, during the same year. By his energy, the place soon became an important manufacturing village. Daniel Ayers kept the first inn. The first hotel born was John Toll.

² The census reports 9 churches in town; 1 M. E., 2 Presb., Bap., 1 Prot. E., and Christian.

⁴ Deep Spring, called by the Indians Te-ung-lout-a-ough, is a spring 10 ft. in diameter, on the E. line of the town, near the old Seneca Turnpike.

barrels of waterlime, and 50,410 bushels of quicklime were sold in the village of Fayetteville.

⁸ Among the other early settlers were Joshua Knowlton and Origen Eaton on the site of Fayetteville, in 1791; Canrad Laur, Cyrus Kinne, and John A. Shaeffer, in 1792; and Caleb Pratt, Capt. Joseph Williams, Wm. Ward, Col. Eljah Phillips, Charles Witholland, Charles Moseley, Dr. Sartrevant, Alvan Marsh and Dr. Ward, all of whom came previous to 1800. The first child born was Baron Steuben Shaeffer, in 1794. It is related that on the night of his birth Baron Steuben and a party of friends put upon Mr. Shaeffer, who then kept an inn on the present site of Manlius. The babe was much disturbed during the night, and in the morning severely reprimanded Mr. S. for allowing his guests to be so annoyed that they could not sleep. Upon seeing the infant, he apologized for his condition of temper, bestowed his own name upon the child, and gave him a deed of 250 acres of land. The first marriage was that of Nicholas Phillips and Katy Garbeck, Jan. 14, 1793; and the first death, that of the father of David Tripp, in 1792; Samuel L. J. wards taught the first school, in James Foster's barn; James Foster kept the first inn, in 1790; Charles Moseley the first store, in 1793; Elph Phillips and three others built the first sawmill, in 1792-93; and Wm. Ward the first gristmill, in 1794.

⁹ The census reports 13 churches in town; 3 M. E., 2 Bap., 2 Prot. E., 2 Presb., Meth. Prot., Wes. Meth., R. C., and Union.

(Cayuga co.) was annexed in 1801, and a part of Spafford in 1840. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the deep valley of Nine Mile Creek, which extends n. and s. through the center. The declivities which border upon the creek are steep, and 200 to 500 ft. high. Upon the creek are several falls, furnishing a large amount of water-power. Lime and plaster both abound. The soil is generally a deep, black loam, formed by the decomposition of the Marcellus shales, intermixed to some extent with clay. Manufacturing is carried on to a limited extent along Nine Mile Creek. Marcellus, (p. v.) on the creek, near the center of the town, was incorp. April 29, 1853; it contains 1 churches, a woolen factory, and grist mill. Pop. 380. Marcellus Falls (p. v.) contains a gristmill, sawmill, and 2 paper mills. Pop. 200. Marietta, (p. v.) upon Nine Mile Creek, in the s. part, contains 30 houses. Clintonville is a hamlet. Thorn Hill (p. o.) is a hamlet in the s. w. part. The first settler was Wm. Cobb, who located on the e. hill in 1794.¹ The first church edifice (Union) was built in 1803; Rev. — Atwater was the first preacher.²

ONONDAGA—was formed from Marcellus, Pompey, and Manlius, March 9, 1798. A part of Salina was taken off in 1809, and a part of Camillus in 1834. The surface is mostly a rolling and hilly upland, separated into two ridges by the valley of Onondaga Creek. The e. ridge is rocky and broken, and the w. is generally smooth and rolling. A fine, wide intervalle extends along the creek, and is bordered by steep hillsides, the summits of which are 200 to 400 ft. high. A valley, forming a natural pass between Onondaga and Nine Mile Creeks, extends s. w. through the town. Along the n. line the highlands w. of the valley descend abruptly to the s., presenting in some places the face of a nearly perpendicular precipice 100 to 150 ft. high. This declivity is known as Split Rock. Upon these cliffs is an outcrop of Onondaga limestone, which is extensively quarried for building purposes.³ The Split Rock stone quarry is near the n. w. corner. The soil in the valley is a sandy and gravelly loam, and on the uplands a gravelly and clayey loam. Lime and waterlime are both largely manufactured. About one-half of the Onondaga Indian Reservation lies in the s. e. part of this town. Onondaga Hill,⁴ (Onondaga p. o.) on the hill w. of the creek, contains a church and 53 dwellings. Onondaga Valley (p. v.) contains 2 churches and the Onondaga Academy. Pop. 385. South Onondaga (p. v.) contains 2 churches, several mills, and a population of 290. Navarino, (p. v.) in the s. w. corner, near the line of Marcellus, contains a church and 115 inhabitants. Onondaga Castle is a p. o. near the Indian Reservation. Howlet Hill is a p. o. in the n. w. corner; and West Onondaga a p. o. near the w. line. The first white man who lived in this town and vicinity was Ephraim Webster,⁵ an Indian trader. The first permanent settlers were Asa Danforth,⁶ his son Asa, from Mass., and Comfort Tyler, a young man who accompanied him,—all of whom located upon a lot a little s. of Onondaga Hollow. This was the first settlement made in the co.⁷ Rev. Samuel Kirkland, a

⁴ For many years after the organization of Onondaga co. the census was located at this village. It was a place of considerable business, and the most important village upon the Seneca Triangle w. of Whitesboro'. For a long time its only business rivals were Salina, or "Salt Pond," and Onondaga Hollow; but, on account of the healthfulness of its situation, the Hill maintained its superiority until the completion of the Erie Canal, in 1825. It is now a mere hamlet.

⁵ Mr. Webster was a native of N. H., and served 3 years in the army during the Revolution. After the war he became an Indian trader; and, in consequence of his thorough knowledge of the Indian language, he was employed as an interpreter in several of the councils between the whites and Indians. In 1786 he erected a trading house on the Banks of Onondaga Creek, near its mouth, and continued his traffic there for several years. He married an Indian woman; and, becoming a great favorite, the tribe made him a present of a square mile of land upon Onondaga Creek, a little s. of the present village of Onondaga Valley. The Indians also granted him 300 acres near the s. w. corner of the present reservation. He afterwards married a white woman, by whom he had a large family of children. He was employed by the Government as a spy, interpreter, and counselor during the Indian wars that followed the Revolution; and he was in active service during the last war with Great Britain. For many years he was Indian Agent, and probably had more influence with the Onondaga tribe than any other white man. He died in 1825. One of his Indian children, Harry Webster—is now chief of the Onondaga Nation.

⁶ Mr. Danforth was the pioneer, and one of the most energetic and prominent of the early settlers of the co. He erected the first sawmill and gristmill in the co., on Battant's Cr. near a Jamesville; and during the many years of privation which followed the first settlement, his cabin was always the welcome home of the distressed and suffering settlers. He held at different times the offices of Judge of Common Pleas, Superintendent of the Salt Springs, an Lt. Major General in the State Militia. He died in 1818.

⁷ Among the other settlers who came soon after Mr. Danforth were Abijah Earl, Levi Hissock, and Redrick Adams, in 1788 or '89; Nicholas Minkles, John C. Brown, Arthur Parsons, &c. by Tyler, Peter Tombrack, — Lewis, Cornelius Longstreet, Peter Young, Joseph Fournier, John Adams, G. W. Kibler, Wm. and Gordon Needham, Wm. H. Stone, Jasper Hepper, Aaron Bellows, George Hill, Joseph Swan, Theodorus M. West, John C. Baldwin, and Daniel and Solomon H. Earl. The first marriage was that of Ephraim Webster and an Indian woman, in 1799. The wife soon after died, and Mr. Webster took another Indian wife, agreeing to live with her as long as she kept sober. He lived with her nearly 20 years. As the settlement began to advance, he was desirous of obtaining a white wife, and to this end endeavored to make his wife drunk. For a long time she resisted every attempt; but at last, with the aid of milk punch, he succeeded. The next morning she left without speaking a missionary from Mass., was the first preacher. The first church (Presbyterian) was formed at an early day, at the Hill.¹

OTISEO—was formed from Pompey, Marcellus, and Tully, March 21, 1806. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is principally occupied by the high ridge between the valleys of Onondaga Creek and Otiseo Lake. The declivities of the hills are generally steep and the summits rolling, and elevated 800 to 1,000 ft. above the valleys and 1,600 to 1,700 above tide. Otiseo Lake is 772 ft. above tide. It lies upon the w. border of the town, in a valley 1,000 ft. below the summits of the hills. Bear Mountain,² in the s. w. part, overhanging the valley of Onondaga Creek, is one of the principal elevations. The soil is generally a sandy or gravelly loam, mixed with clay, and well adapted to grazing. Otiseo, (p. v.), situated upon the high ridge near the center of the town, contains 30 houses; and Amber, (p. v.), at the foot of Otiseo Lake, 25. Maple Grove is a p. o. in the s. e. corner. The first settler was Chauncey Rust, from Northampton, Mass., who moved his family from La Fayette in April, 1801. During this year and the following, a large number of settlers arrived, principally from Mass. and Conn. and the whole town filled up rapidly.³ The first religious service was a prayer meeting, held in Sept. 1803, at the house of — Rust. The first church (Cong.) was formed May 9, 1803, by Rev. Hugh Wallace. There are now two churches in town; Cong. and M. E. This town is noted for being the birthplace and residence of several persons of distinguished literary reputation.⁴

POMPEY⁵—was formed in Jan. 1789. Fabius and a part of Onondaga were taken off in 1798; and La Fayette in 1825. It lies upon the e. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is principally occupied by the high, rolling ridge which lies between the e. branch of Limestone Creek and Butternut Creek. The highest summit is 906 ft. above the surface of Butternut Creek, near the La Fayette r. r. station, 1,343 ft. above the canal at Syracuse and 1,743 ft. above tide. The general ridge is subdivided into 3 ridges by the valleys of the 2 w. branches of Limestone Creek. These valleys are 200 to 300 ft. below the summits and are bordered by steep hillsides. The streams that drain the s. part of the town flow in a southerly direction. Pratts Falls, upon the w. branch of Limestone Creek, are 137 ft. high; and within a few rods of them are several other fine cascades. Near the s. line, upon the same creek, is a cascade of 70 ft. Just e. of the co. line, near Delphi, on the e. branch of the same stream, are 2 other fine cascades. Carpenters Pond, in the s. e. part, covers an area of about 30 acres. The soil is a strong, clayey loam. Pompey Hill, (Pompey p. o.) on the summit of the ridge,⁶ contains 5 churches and the Pompey Academy. Pop. 270. Delphi, (p. v.) upon Limestone Creek, in the s. e. corner, contains 3 churches and 219 inhabitants. Watervale, (p. v.) upon Limestone Creek, s. of the center, contains a grist and saw mill and 20 houses. Oran, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, contains a church and 82 inhabitants. Pompey Center⁷ (p. o.) is a hamlet. In the s. e. corner, above Delphi, are an edge tool factory, and a woolen mill not in operation. The first settler was Ebenezer Butler, who located on Lot 65 in 1792.⁸ The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1794; the first preacher word, and in a short time died of grief. The first child born was Annah Danforth, daughter of Asa Danforth, jr., Oct. 14, 1789. Dr. Gordon Needham taught the first school, in 1795; Comfort Taylor kept the first inn; George Kibbe the first store; Gen. Danforth built the first gristmill, in 1794; and Turner Fenner the first sawmill, in 1793.

Lucy Cowles (afterward wife of Rev. Geo. Colton) taught the first school, in 1802. The first child born was Hannah East, March 22, 1802; and the first death, that of Nathaniel Baly, jr., killed by the fall of a tree, July 19, 1802. Daniel Bennett kept the first inn, in 1802; and Michael Johnson the first store, in 1808. Charles Merriman built the first gristmill, in 1806.

was Rev. Mr. Robbins, a missionary from Conn.¹ Several eminent personages, distinguished in the fields of politics, literature, and art, were natives of this town, prominent among whom are Sara J. Clarke, (now Mrs. Sara J. Lippincott, better known as "Grace Greenwood.") Ex-Gov. Hiram Seymour, Charles Mason, late Commissioner of Patents, and Erastus D. Palmer, the sculptor.

SALINA—was formed from Manlius and Onondaga, March 27, 1809. Syracuse and Geddes were taken off March 18, 1848. It lies upon the e. bank of Onondaga Lake, s. of the center of the co. Its surface is level or gently undulating. Mud Creek, in the s. e. part, and its tributary, Bear Trap Creek, are the only streams. Along their course is a considerable amount of swamp land. The soil is principally a sandy loam, with occasional intervals of tough clay. The people are largely engaged in the manufacture of salt. Tobacco is cultivated to some extent. Liverpool, (p. v.) upon the e. bank of Onondaga Lake, on the w. line of the town, was incorp. April 20, 1830. It contains 4 churches, a union school, a steam saw and stave mill, and a large number of salt works. Pop. 1,305. The first settlement was made at Liverpool, in 1795, by John Danforth and 3 sons, from Worcester co., Mass.² There are 4 churches in town.³

SKANEATELES⁴—was formed from Marcellus, Feb. 26, 1830. A part of Spafford was annexed in 1840. It is the s. town on the w. line of the co. The surface is rolling or moderately hilly. Skaneateles Lake divides the s. half of the town into two nearly equal parts. From the lake the land slopes beautifully upward to a height of 200 to 500 ft. The highlands upon both borders overlooking the lake furnish a great number of sites for country residences, which, in beauty of situation, have no superiors in the State. Many of these are occupied by fine cottages and villas. Skaneateles Outlet, flowing s., is the principal stream. Upon it are numerous falls, furnishing an abundance of water-power.⁵ The soil is principally a clay loam. Skaneateles,⁶ (p. v.) beautifully located at the foot of the lake, was incorp. April 19, 1833. It contains 6 churches, a union school, and 3 carriage manufactories. Pop. 1,200. Mottville, (p. v.), on Skaneateles Outlet, contains 1 church, 2 machine shops, a foundery, chair factory, fork factory, and gristmill. Pop. 250. Mandana, (p. v.), on the w. bank of the lake, in the s. part of the town, contains 15 dwellings. Kelloggs Mills, a hamlet $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. s. of Skaneateles, contains a woolen factory which employs 125 hands. The first settler was John Thompson, a Scotchman, who located upon Lot 18 in 1793.⁷ The first church edifice (Cong.) was erected in 1807: Rev. Aaron Bascom was the first pastor.⁸

SPAFFORD⁹—was formed from Tully, April 8, 1811. Parts of Marcellus and Skaneateles were taken off in 1840. It lies upon the e. bank of Skaneateles Lake, and is the w. town on the s. line of the co. Its surface consists principally of a high ridge between Skaneateles and Otisco Lakes, abruptly descending to the valleys on each side and gradually declining toward the s. The highest summit, Ripley Hill, is 1,122 ft. above Skaneateles Lake and 1,982 ft. above tide. Otisco lulet is a small stream flowing through the valley which extends s. from Otisco Lake. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Borodino, (p. v.) in the s. part of the town, contains a population of 202. Spafford, (p. v.) near the center, contains 2 churches and 30 houses. Spafford Hol- low is a p. o. The first settlers were Gilbert Palmer and his son John, who located on Lot 76 in 1794.¹⁰ The first church (M. E.) was formed at an early day; Elder Harmon was the first preacher.¹¹

Pratt & Smith built the first sawmill, in 1795, and the first gristmill, in 1798; Dr. Hezekiah Clarke was the first settled physician. He served 2 years as a surgeon in the Revolutionary Army, and was at the massacre of Fort Griswold.

³ 2 M. E., Evn., Luth., and Presb.

⁶ The beautiful location of this village upon one of the finest lakes in the State renders it a favorite summer resort of people from the cities and from the south.

⁷ Among the other early settlers were—Robinson, James Watson, Lovel Gibbs, Jonathan Hall and Wm. A. Day, who came in 1793; Warren Devox, James and Samuel Porter, Br.

Munger, Elnathan Andrews, John Legg, Moses Boss, John Briggs, Nathan Kelsey, Wm. J. Vandenburgh, Isaac Shawcock, Dr. Benedict, and families by the names of Kellogg and Fair, who came in soon after. Elsha Cole, now living, 1876, came in with his father in 1793. Capt. Wm. Thomas came in 1796; Hezekiah Eastl and Samuel Greenman in 1797. The first child born was Richard P. Watson, June 1, 1796; and the first girl, that of Nehemiah Eastl, in 1808. James Porter kept the first inn, and Winston Day the first store, in 1777, and Judge Jehudi Sanger built the first saw and grist mill, in 1796.

⁸ The census reports 8 churches; 2 M. E., 2 Friends, Bap., Presb., Prot. E., and Univ.

¹⁰ Among the other early settlers were Jonathan B. Fry, Arthur Todd, Burr, Warren Kinsland, M. Harvey, Isaac Hall, Hester Adams, John Babcock, Peter Knapp, Samuel Smith, Otis and Moses Legg, Jethro Bailey, Elias Davis, Abel Amoson, Job Lewis, Daniel Trunkton, John Willford, Levi Foster, Benj. Herrer, James and Cornelius Williamson, Benjamin Stanton, John Woodward, James, George, and Asbel Bonds. The first child born was Myra Palmer, the first marriage, that of Elsha Freeman and Phoebe Smith, and the first death, that of Benj. Chubb, in Aug. 1801. Sully Parker taught the first school in 1803; Jared Babcock kept the first store, in 1804. Archibald Fair kept the first inn, and built the first gristmill, in 1808, and Joseph Willard built the first sawmill, in 1810.

¹¹ The census reports 5 churches, 3 M. E., Presb., and Union.

SYRACUSE¹—was incorp. as a village in the town of Salina, April 13, 1825, and as a city, Dec. 14, 1847. A portion was annexed to De Witt in 1858. It lies in a basin extending s. of the head of Onondaga Lake, and upon the ridges immediately e. A low portion, partly marshy, containing more than a square mi., lies upon the lake,² and is bordered by an abrupt declivity 10 to 30 ft. high. From the summit of this declivity the surface spreads out into an almost perfect flat, on which is built the greater part of the more thickly settled portions of the city. A ridge 100 to 200 ft. high extends through the e. part.³ Upon the highlands that surround the city are some of the most beautiful sites for country residences to be found in the State. The city is located in the midst of a rich agricultural region, and near the center of the State.⁴ The several canals and railroads that terminate at or pass through this city give to it important commercial advantages. Its local trade is very large. It is also largely engaged in manufactures, the principal of which are salt,⁵ machinery, beer, and barrels.⁶ A large trade is carried on with the surrounding country to supply the salt works with wood and barrels, and with Penn. to furnish them with coal. The city is supplied with water by the Syracuse Water Company, from springs and brooks which have their sources in the hills s. w. of the city.

The City Hall is a commodious edifice, on the s. side of the canal, fronting Washington St., and containing rooms for the officers of the city government.

The Public Schools, 13 in number, are under the charge of a Board of Education, consisting of 8 members, of whom 4 are elected annually. In 1858, 61 teachers were employed,—7 males and 54 females. The whole number of children, between the ages of 4 and 21, was 9,418, of whom 5,258, or 55 per cent., attended school during some portion of the year. The total expenses were $34,057.69. The number of volumes in the district libraries was 5,131.⁷ The schools are graded, and have a classical department or High School. Few places have bestowed more attention upon common school education; and the schools now rank among the best in the State and country.

The Onondaga County Orphan Asylum, a city and county institution for the care of orphan and destitute children, is situated upon Fayette St., in the e. part of the city. It was incorp. April 10, 1845, and is supported by public appropriations and private donations. The children are well treated, and are amply provided with all the necessaries of life. A school is taught throughout the year. At a proper age the children are bound out in respectable families.

The Syracuse Home Association, incorp. in 1853, is an association of ladies for the purpose of systematically visiting the poor, and of furnishing a home for indigent and friendless females. It occupies a fine building upon E. Fayette St., and is in a flourishing condition.

The New York State Asylum for Idiots is located upon a beautiful site in Geddes, s. w. of the city, just outside of the city corporation. Its grounds contain 18 acres, lying upon an eminence overlooking the whole city. The building is a beautiful brick structure, in the Italian style of architecture, and is one of the best arranged and most convenient buildings of the kind ever constructed. It is under the superintendance of Dr. Hervey B. Wilbur. The average number of inmates is more than 400.⁸

⁴ From its central location, the city is a favorite place for holding conventions, political, religious, civil, and miscellaneous. From this, it is often called "The City of Conventions," and sometimes "The City of Isms." It is also called "The Central City," and "The City of Salt."

⁶ Several founderies and machine shops give employment to about 200 hands. Greenway's Brewery manufactures annually 50,000 bbls. of beer, worth $250,000. There are 8 other breweries in the city, producing 600 to 5,000 bbls. each. Barrels for the salt trade are also manufactured in the city, giving employment to a large number of hands. The Central R. R. repair shops employ 150 hands, and about 150 more are engaged as engineers, brakemen, and track hands, belonging to this station. The city also contains large manufactories of a rural implements, boots and shoes, furniture, saddlery hardware, silver ware, cigars, and a variety of other articles.

⁸ The building for this institution was erected in 1853-54, at a cost of about $70,000. The site and grounds were donated by inhabitants of Syracuse. The enterprise has been highly successful, and has fully demonstrated the utility and necessity of schools of this description. The institution has attained a wide reputation, and it now undoubtedly ranks among the first of the kind in the world. The school was first established at Albany, in 1818, by its present supt., as a private institution. It was adopted by the State, and was continued several years at Albany, but was removed to this place on completion of the buildings, in 1854.

The Franklin Institute, a literary association, was incorp. under the general law, Dec. 1849. It has a fine library and reading room in Wieting Block, S. Salina St., and it supports an annual course of lectures during the winter. The number of volumes in the library is about 4,000.

Syracuse Post Office is situated near the center of the old village of Syracuse, s. of the Erie Canal. Salina Post Office is situated in the old village of Salina, near the Oswego Canal.

The Library of the Court of Appeals was formed by act of Legislature, April 9, 1849. It occupies rooms in the courthouse, and contains 4,500 volumes.

The Office of the Superintendent of the Salt Springs, on N. Salina St., is a fine building of cut stone.

The State Armory is a fine building, in Regimental Park, near Onondaga Creek. It was built in 1858, from a design by H. N. White.

The city also contains a Commercial College, 2 private seminaries, a classical school, a boarding school for boys, a large number of Masonic, Odd Fellows, and Sons of Malta lodges, a City Tract Society, a Bible Society, a Fugitive Aid Society, a Musical Institute, a German Turnverein, 11 banks of issue, 2 savings banks, 28 churches,¹ and a large number of beautiful and costly private residences. Its hotels and public halls rank among the best in the State.

The first settlement in the city and co. was made by Ephraim Webster, an Indian trader, who located near the mouth of Onondaga Creek in 1787. In 1788 or 1789 John Danforth, who came into the co. soon after his brother Asa, located at "Salt Point" and commenced the manufacture of salt.² The settlement at this place increased with great rapidity, in consequence of the prospective value of the salt springs. It took the name of "Salina," and speedily became the most important place in the co.,—a superiority which it maintained for many years. The first settlers within the limits of the old village of Syracuse, after Webster, the Indian trader, were — Hopkins, in 1797, and — Butler, in 1799. Calvin Jackson settled in 1800, and several others before 1805.³ The ground being low and marshy, the settlement did not progress rapidly for many years. The first great impulse to its growth was given by the location of the canal in 1817 and its completion in 1825. In 1829, when the courthouse was removed from Onondaga Hill, Salina and Syracuse were nearly equal in population, and the courthouse was placed about midway between the two villages. Since that time, however, the growth of Syracuse has been rapid and nearly uniform. In 1847 it completely absorbed its old rival, Salina, the two villages and lodi at that time being incorp. and forming the city of Syracuse. The business prosperity of the place has been based principally upon the salt interests and its commercial advantages. The most notable incidents of the later history of the city are the great gunpowder explosion of Aug. 29, 1844;⁴ and the rescue of the slave Jerry from the custody of the U. S. Marshal, Oct. 1, 1851.⁵

TULLY—was formed from Fabius, April 4, 1803. A part of Otisco was taken off in 1806, and Spafford in 1811. It is the center town upon the s. line of the co. Its surface is an upland, level in the center, but hilly on the e. and w. borders. In the s. part of the central valley are several small lakes, known as the Tully Lakes. Two of these lakes lie but a few rods apart. The smaller, just 800 ft. above the canal at Syracuse, gives rise to Onondaga Creek, flowing s.; and the larger, 4 ft. lower, gives rise to Tioughnioga River, flowing s. In the immediate vicinity of these lakes is considerable swamp land. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. Tully, p.v., in the s. e. part of the town, contains 2 churches and 216 inhabitants; and Vesper, p.v., on the line of Otisco, 2 churches and 25 houses. Tully Valley is a p.o. The first settler was David

² In Aug. 1799, Col. Jeremiah Gould and family, consisting of a wife, three sons, and a daughter, came to "Salt Point," and found there Deason and Nathaniel Loonis, Hzekiah Olcott, John Danforth, Asa Danforth, jr., and Thomas Geston. In 1797 two families, named Woodworth and Sturges, came in, and March 2, 1792, Isaac Van Vleck and family. Among the other early settlers were Thomas Osmon, Simon Phares, Patrick Riley, Wm. Gilchrist, James Post, Aaron Bellows, Hlish Alvord, Richard Sawyer, and Cornelius Alvord. The first child born was Abraham Van Vleck, in 1792; the first marriage was that of Thomas Osmon and Katharine Van Derwiche, in 1795; and the first death, that of an infant child of — Thompson, in 1794. Dr. Burnett, the first physician, died the same year. The provisions for the first settlers were brought from Tioga, by way of Cayuga Lake, and from Herkimer, by way of Oneida Lake. In 1794, 30 of the 33 inhabitants of the village were sick,—the 3 well ones with the help of the Indians, taking care of the sick for 2 months. In 1794, out of a population of 63 persons 23 died. The first regular innkeeper was Wm. Gilchrist, about 1795; though Isaac Van Vleck had for several years previous entertained travelers. John Alvord kept the first store, in 1795. In 1746 Mr. Van Vleck loaned to from Albany a large coffee mill, which was used for grinding corn.

³ Among the other early settlers were Wm. Lee, Amos C. Lee, Amos Stanton, Henry Bogardus, and Jonathan Fay. The first child born was Allison Jackson, Dec. 28, 1800. A tract of 2.0 acres, lying near the center of the city, and including a mill privilege upon Onondaga Creek, was sold by the State to Abraham Walton and became known as the "Walton tract." It afterward passed into the hands of the "Syracuse Company." Mr. Bogardus created a log house for one of the sons of the present Voorhes, Block, in 1824. (1) Mr. Walton created his "Old End Mill" the same year. The first steamboat was used upon the canal was built in 1807, and in 1811 launched at "Endville," in Pompey, in 1823, by Wm. Avery.

Owen, who came into town in 1795.¹ The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1818;² Rev. Mr. Hurd was the first preacher.

VAN BUREN—was formed from Camillus, March 26, 1829. It is an interior town, lying n. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is level or gently undulating. Seneca River forms its n. boundary; along its course is considerable swamp land. The soil is a clayey, sandy, and gravelly loam. Canon, (Canal p. o.,) on the Erie Canal, in the s. w. corner of the town, contains a church and 188 inhabitants; Van Buren Center, (p. v.; Warners Station on the N. Y. C. R. R.,) near the s. line, a church and 16 dwellings. Van Buren (p. o.) and Ionias are hamlets. Baldwinsville, (p. v.,) on Seneca River, is on the line of Lysander. The first settler was Joseph Wilson, who located in town in 1792.³ The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1803; Rev. S. B. Barnes was the first preacher.⁴

ONTARIO COUNTY.

This county was formed from Montgomery, Jan. 27, 1789. It was named from Lake Ontario, which originally formed its s. boundary. Steuben co. was taken off in 1796, Genesee in 1802, parts of Monroe and Livingston in 1821, and Yates and a part of Wayne in 1823. A strip was annexed from Montgomery co., w. of Seneca Lake, Feb. 16, 1791, and a small tract in the fork of Crooked Lake, from Steuben, Feb. 25, 1814. It is centrally distant 189. mi. from Albany, and contains an area of 610. sq. mi. It lies upon the extreme s. declivities of the central Alleghany Mt. Range, and has a northerly inclination, the summits of the s. hills being elevated about 1000 feet above the general level of the s. portions of the co. The s. portion, lying w. of Canandaigua Lake, is a hilly and broken region, divided into ridges with steep declivities and summits 1,500 to 1,700 feet above tide. The ridges all have a general s. and s. direction, declining toward the s., and terminating in a beautifully rolling region, which embraces all of the co. e. of Canandaigua Lake, and that portion lying w. of the lake and s. of the s. line of Bristol. The ridges in this section gradually rise to a height of 20 to 250 feet above the valleys, and give to the land sufficient inclination for thorough drainage. A terrace with declivities 100 to 250 feet high, descending toward the s., extends through the s. portions of East and West Bloomfield and the s. part of Victor, at right angles to the general range of the ridges. The extreme s. parts of the co. are occupied by drift ridges similar to those in Wayne and Seneca cos.

The geological formation of this co. is nearly the same as that of the cos. lying e. of it in the same latitude. The lowest rocks, occupying the s. parts of Phelps, Manchester, Farmington, and Victor, belong to the Onondaga salt group. The gypsum of this group crops out along the banks of the streams, and is extensively quarried along the Canandaigua Outlet, in Phelps and Manchester, and upon Mud Creek, in Victor. The water limestone, next above, crops out in Phelps, Manchester, and Victor, and is quarried for waterlime and building stone. The Onondaga and corniferous limestones next appear, and are quarried for building stone in Phelps. The Marcellus and Hamilton shales occupy all the central portions of the co. s. of the foot of Canandaigua Lake; and next above them successively appear the Tully limestone, Genesee slate, and the Portage group, the last occupying South Bristol, Canadice, and Naples. This last group furnishes a sandstone used for flagging and building. Except in the extreme s. parts of the co. the underlying rocks have little influence upon the soil, as nearly the whole surface is covered deeply with drift deposits, consisting of sand, clay, and gravel, intermixed with the disintegrated limestone and gypsum evidently deposited by some great torrent that once swept across the co. in a s. direction. The rocks are seen at some points along the banks of the lakes and the courses of the streams. In Bristol are several springs of carburetted hydrogen gas emanating from the strata of Genesee slate.¹

The co. is drained by the Honeoye Outlet, a tributary of the Genesee River, and by the Canandaigua Outlet and Mud Creek, tributaries of the Clyde River. Honeoye Outlet receives as tributaries Egypt Brook and the outlets of Hemlock and Canadice Lakes;² Mud Creek receives Beaver, Fish, and Hog Hollow Creeks; and Canandaigua Outlet receives Fall and Flint Creeks. Besides these, Irondequoit Creek flows through the s. w. corner of the co. Keshong Creek and Barralls and Castle Brooks flow into Seneca Lake. Several of the beautiful lakes which form the most peculiar and interesting feature of the landscape for which Central New York is celebrated lie partly or wholly in this co. Seneca, forming a portion of the e. boundary, is described under Seneca co.³ Canandaigua Lake lies almost wholly within the limits of the co. The shores are beautifully sloping down to the very edge of the water, except near the head of the lake, where they rise in steep bluffs to a height of 300 to 800 feet. Its surface is 668 feet above tide.

Honeoye,¹ Canadice,² and Hemlock Lakes are smaller bodies of water, and are each surrounded by bluffs and hills rising to a height of 500 to 700 feet above them.

The soil for the most part consists of clayey, sandy, and gravelly loam, formed from the drift deposits. In the valleys and the rolling region which extends through the central and n. parts of the co. the loam is very deep and rich, forming one of the finest agricultural regions in the State. Upon the hills in the s. part of the co. the soil is made up principally of disintegrated shale and slate, forming a fine, fertile grazing region. Upon the drift hills in the w. are some small sections covered with a deep, light sand, moderately productive.

The geographical and geological features of this co. render it eminently adapted to the various branches of agriculture; and few eos. in the State excel this in the progress of scientific improvement as applied to agricultural operations. Wheat was for many years the staple crop; but of late more attention has been given to the production of the coarser grains, to stock growing, and the cultivation of fruits. Wool growing has also received considerable attention, and the fine Merino sheep were introduced at an early period. The manufactures are mainly of a domestic character, such as pertain to agricultural districts.

The county seat is located at Canandaigua, at the foot of Canandaigua Lake. A courthouse, jail, and co. clerk's office were erected here in 1793, soon after the organization of the co.³ In 1825 a new courthouse was built; and in 1858 a splendid edifice was erected at the joint expense of the co. and of the U. S. Government, containing a U. S. and co. courtroom, jury and supervisors' rooms, U. S. district clerk's and co. clerk's offices, surrogate's office, and p. office. The building is of brick, with iron and tile floors, and is entirely fireproof. The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 212 acres in Hopewell, 4 mi. E. of Canandaigua. It is built of brick, and contains ample accommodations. The average number of inmates is 136, supported at a weekly cost of 57 cts. each. The farm yields a revenue of $4,000. A school is taught during the whole year.⁴ The general management and sanitary arrangements of this establishment are creditable to the co.

The principal works of internal improvement in the co. are the Erie Canal, which enters the extreme n. e. corner of Manchester, the N. Y. C. R. R., extending through the n. and central portions of the co., the Canandaigua & Niagara Bridge R. R., a branch of the Central, extending w. from Canandaigua to Tonawanda, and the Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R., extending s. e. and connecting with the N. Y. & E. R. R. at Elmira. Besides these, there are several lines of plank road in the co.; but most of them have been abandoned.

Seven newspapers were published in the co. in 1855.⁵

² Indian name Ska'ne-a-dice, long lake.

³ The first Circuit Court was held at the inn of Mr. Patterson, in Geneva, in June, 1793; and the first court of Common Pleas, at the house of Nathaniel Sanborn, in Canandaigua, in Nov. 1794. The first co. officers were Oliver Phelps, First Judge; Nathl. Gorham, Co. Clerk; John Cooper, Surrogate; and Judah Coyt, Sheriff. The first justices of peace appointed in Western N. Y. were Asa Ransom and Wm. Emusey, for Ontario co., in Dec. 1801. By an act passed April 3, 1798, deeds were required to be recorded in the clerk's office. This was many years before the general act for recording in clerks' offices.

The Impartial American, or Seneca Museum, was published at Geneva in 1800, by Ebenezer Eaton.

The Expositor was started at Geneva, Nov. 19, 1806, by James Bogert, who in 1809 changed it to

The Geneva Gazette, and continued it until Dec. 1, 1833. In 1827 it bore the title of The Gazette and General Advertiser. It was published by John Greves and J. C. Merrill until 1837; by J. Taylor Bradt until 1839; and by Stone & Frazer a short time longer, when it was discontinued. It was revived in Jan. 1845 by Ten and S. H. Parker. Geo. M. Horton was at one time interested in its publication, and it is now published by S. H. Parker.

The Geneva Palladium was commenced in 1816 by Young & Crosby, and was published successively by S. P. Hull, John T. Wilson, and ——— Connelly, until 1828, when it was discontinued.

The Geneva Chronicle was started in 1828 by ——— Jackson, and continued 2 years.

The Independent American was published by T. C. Strong in 1831.

The Geneva American was published by Franklin Cowdery in 1830.

The Geneva Courier was established by John C. Merrill in 1830, and continued until 1833. Its publication was continued by Snow & Williams, Ira Merrill, Howlett & Van Valkenburgh, Cleveland & Hook, and Winthrop Atwell, successively, until, Oct. 1854, when it passed into the hands of William Johnson, its present publisher. A daily paper was issued from this office about 6 months in 1845-46.

The Herald of Truth (Univ.) was started in 1834, at Geneva, by Prescott & Chase, and continued until 1837, when it was removed to Rochester.

The Geneva Democrat was published during the campaign of 1840, by Stone & Frazer.

The District School Journal, mo., was started at Geneva in 1840 by Francis Dwight, and removed to Albany in 1841.

The Geneva Advertiser and Mechanics' Advocate was started in 1841 by S. Merrill & Co., semi-w., and continued 1 year.

The Geneva Budget was commenced in 1852, by Sproul & Tanner, and continued 2 years.

The New York State Intelligencer was published in 1848.

The Ontario Whip, semi-w., was started at Geneva by Wm. C. Busted in 1850, and continued until 1852.

The Geneva Independent and Freeman's Gazette was established in 1851, by W. K. Fowle, and continued by him until 1855, and by H. G. Moore until June, 1857. Since then it has been published by W. K. Fowle as

The Geneva Ledger.

The Geneva Daily Union has been published since May 10, 1858, by W. K. Fowle.

The Ontario Gazette and Genesee Advertiser was brought from Geneva to Canandaigua in 1799, and published by Lucius Carey until 1802. John Keop-Gould, who then became the publisher, changed its name to

The Western Repository and Genesee Advertiser; and in 1803 it was again changed to

The Western Repository. James D. Bemis became interested in its publication in 1801, and in 1808 he issued it as

The Ontario Repository, and continued it until 1828. It was published by Morse & Ward, Morse & Wilson, and Morse & Harvey, until 1835, and until 1840 by Channery Morse. The last named was succeeded by Geo. L. Whitney, who in Jan. 1856, sold it to H. G. Moore. The fol-

The territory lying within the limits of this co. was the chief seat of the Senecas, the most numerous and powerful tribe of the "Six Nations." Their chief village was at Kanadesaga, upon and just w. of the present site of Geneva, at the foot of Seneca Lake. In all the wars of the Iroquois League the Senecas bore a conspicuous part; and especially did they incur the bitter enmity of the French occupants of Canada. In 1687, De Nonville, Governor of "New France," at the head of 1,600 French soldiers and 400 Indian allies, invaded the Seneca country by way of the St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario. At a defile near the site of the present village of Victor an engagement ensued, resulting in the defeat of the Indians, though with great loss to the French. De Nonville marched forward, burned the village of Ganagago and several others, and returned.¹ In the succeeding year the Senecas and their allies in turn invaded the French settlements in Canada and took bloody revenge.²

In the progress of the wars that ensued, the Six Nations were sometimes neutral and sometimes allies of the English; but the country of the Senecas was never afterward invaded by the French. During the Revolution the Senecas espoused the English cause; and in 1779 Gen. Sullivan invaded their country from the s., burned their villages, destroyed their corn and orchards, and left the most beautiful region in the Indian domains a desolate waste. At the conclusion of peace, the force and spirit of the Indians were annihilated, and they quietly yielded to the gradual encroachments of the whites, until the last acre of their hunting grounds within the limits of this co., and the very graves of their fathers, passed out of their possession.³

Following month the office was burned and the paper suspended. In May following it was revived as

The National New Yorker and Ontario Repository, by H. G. Moore and J. B. F. Tall, and in May, 1857, it passed into the hands of Geo. L. Whitney & Son, by whom it is now published.

The Ontario Freeman was established at Canandaigua by Isaac Johnson in 1807. In 1809 it passed into the hands of John A. Stevens, who changed its name to

The Ontario Messenger. It was successively published by Ray & Morse, L. L. Morse, B. W. Jones, and T. B. Holm. The latter was succeeded in Nov. 1845, by Jacob J. Mattison, the present publisher.

The Republican was started at Canandaigua by A. N. Phelps in 1824, and was afterward published a short time by T. W. Farquhar.

The Ontario Review was issued at Canandaigua in 1827 by W. W. Phelps. R. Boyce became its publisher soon after, and changed its name to

The Freeman. In 1836 it was united with The Repository. The Clay Club, a campaign paper, was published at Canandaigua in 1844.

The Semitristian, a literary mo., was published at Canandaigua in 1851.

The Ontario Co. Times was established Jan. 1, 1852, by N. J. Milliken, and in 1855 sold to Wilson Miller, who changed it to

The Ontario Times. In Feb. 1856, the establishment was burned and the paper suspended. It was re-established in May following by Mr. Milliken, and is still published by him as

The Ontario Republican Times.

The Venona Republican was started at "Venona" (now Phelps) in Jan. 1831 by C. H. Lowe and A. Kilmer. In 1832 it was published by J. O. Balch and in 1834 changed to

The Phelps Journal, F. N. Phelps, publisher, and soon after to The Phelps Journal and Venona Advertiser; in 1838 to

The Phelps Democrat; and again in 1845 to The Western Atlas. From 1845 until 1856 it was published by Washington Shaw, Dillon & Phelps, and W. W. Redfield, and since then it has been continued as

The Ontario Free Press.

The Naples Free Press was established at Naples in 1822 by Waterman & Coleman, and continued 2 years.

The Napoleon was started in 1840 by David Lanchfield. In 1845 it was sold to — Phelps, who changed its title to

The Naples Liberator. It was discontinued soon after. The Valley Record was published at Naples in 1842. The Naples Journal was published in 1841 by R. Denton.

The Phelps New Democratic Star was started Sept. 5, 1858, by E. N. Phelps.

² In this expedition 1000 French were killed and 26 prisoners taken, who were afterward burned at the stake.

³ Numerous traces of ancient occupation — perhaps by a people that preceded the late Indian race — are found in this co. French enclosures have been noticed in Canandaigua, Seneca, and other towns. — Squire's Aboriginal Monuments of N. Y., 4to ed., pp. 29, 61, 62, 63.

Seaver, in his Life of Mary Jemison, gives the following —

"The tradition of the Seneca Indians in regard to their origin is that they broke out of the earth in a large mountain at the head of Canandaigua Lake; and that mountain they still venerate as the place of their birth. Hence they derive their name, 'Gish-mo-oh-wah,' or 'Great Hill' and are called 'The Great Hill People,' which is the true derivation of the word Seneca. The great hill at the head of Canandaigua Lake is a long narrow ridge, which they spring is called Gish-mo-oh-wah, and has for a long time past been the place where the Indians of that nation have met in council, to hold great talks, and to offer up prayers to the Great Spirit, on account of its having been the birthplace; and also in consequence of the destruction of a serpent at that place, in ancient times, in a most miraculous manner, which threatened the destruction of the whole of the Senecas, and barely spared enough to continue repopulating the earth. The Indians say that the tort on the big hill at Canandaigua, near the head of Canandaigua Lake, was surrounded by a most straits serpent, whose head and tail came together at the gate. A long time it lay there, confounding the people with its breath. At length they attempted to make their escape, some with their hominy blocks, and others with different implements of household furniture; — and in marching out of the fort walked down the throat of the serpent. Two orphan children, who had escaped this general destruction by being left on this side of the fort, were informed by an oracle of the means by which they could get rid of their formidable enemy; — which was to take a small bow, and a poisoned arrow made of a kind of willow, and with that shoot the serpent under its scales. This they did, and the arrow proved effectual; for, on its penetrating, it killed the serpent because sick, and extending itself, rolled down the hill, destroying all the timber that was in its way, denigrating itself and breaking wind greatly as it went. At every notch a large man head was discharged and rolled down the hill into the lake, where they lie at this day in a petrified state. Ever since the hardness and appearance of stones, and the present belief of the Senecas believe that all the little snakes were made of the blood of the great serpent after it rolled into the lake. That a day the Indians visit that sacred place to mourn the loss of their friends and to celebrate sacrifices that are paid to themselves. To the knowledge of white people there has been no timber on the great hill since it was first destroyed by them, though it lay apparently in a state of nature for a great number of years, without cultivation. Stones in the shape of human heads may be seen lying in the lake in great plenty, which are said to be the same that were deposited there at the death of the serpent. The Senecas have credited to that place a retreat for some time after their escape, at Canandaigua, and in the country, especially about the lake, was the residence of a great number of civil, enterprising, and industrious people, who were finally destroyed by the great serpent that attacked and consumed the great hill tort, with the assistance of others of the same kind; and that they the Senecas went afterward, several of their settlements that were left. In those days the Indians did inhabit the whole country — as the Senecas say, — but they were not; but, having become considerably numerous, they were a civilized great serpent, by an and was a horrible monster, and their language, so that they could not understand each other, which was the cause of their destruction, and, as the Mohawks, Onondagas, &c. At that time, however, the Senecas retained the original language, and continue to preserve their mother hill, on which they fasten themselves, against their enemies and lived peacefully, until the Senecas killed the serpent, they were cut off, as I have before remarked."

By the terms of the charter of the colony of Mass., the region between its n. and s. boundaries, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, was embraced; and the title to this territory was claimed by Mass. after the Revolution. The subsequent charter of the State of New York intervened and conflicted with this claim,—from which difficulties arose, which were finally settled by commissioners at Hartford, Conn., on the 16th of December, 1786. It was there agreed that Mass. should cede to N. Y. the sovereignty of all the territory claimed by the former lying within the limits of the latter, and that N. Y. should cede to Mass. the property of the soil, or the right of the pre-emption of the soil from the Indians. This agreement covered all that part of the State lying w. of a line running n. from the "82d milestone," on the line between N. Y. and Penn., through Seneca Lake to Solus Bay. This line is known as the "Old Pre-emption Line."¹ In 1787 Mass. sold the whole of this tract, containing 6,000,000 of acres, to Oliver Phelps and Nathaniel Gorham, for one million dollars. In the following spring Mr. Phelps left his home in Granville, Mass., with men and means to explore the country thus acquired. He collected the sachems, chiefs, and warriors of the Six Nations at Kanadesaga, and in July, 1788, concluded with them a treaty of purchase of a tract containing 2,250,000 acres, bounded e. by the pre-emption line, w. by a line 12 mi. w. of, and running parallel with, the Genesee River, s. by the Penn. line, and n. by Lake Ontario.²

The portion of the tract to which the Indian title had not been extinguished, constituting about two-thirds of the original purchase, was abandoned by Messrs. Phelps and Gorham and reverted to Mass. It was resold by that State to Robert Morris, in 1796, and subsequently formed what is known as the Holland Land Purchase. In 1789, Mr. Phelps, at Canandaigua, opened the first regular land office for the sale of land to settlers ever established in America. The system he adopted for the survey of his lands by townships and ranges, with slight modifications, was adopted by the Government for the survey of all the new lands in the U. S. When organized in 1789, Ontario was the first co. set off from Montgomery, and embraced all that part of the State lying w. of the e. line of Phelps and Gorham's Purchase, including what was called "The Genesee Country."

The first settlement was made on the site of the Indian village of Kanadesaga, (now Geneva,) in 1787. Soon after the land office at Canandaigua was opened, and several settlements were commenced in different parts of the co. From this period the progress of settlement was rapid, immigrants being attracted by the beautifully rolling character of the surface and the unsurpassed fertility of the soil. Few incidents of general interest have occurred to interrupt the steady and continued progress of peaceful industry. The most notable of its later historical events is its being the scene of the birth of Mormonism. Joe Smith resided for many years in Manchester; and his pretended discovery of the golden plates of the Book of Mormon was made on the 22d of September, ¹The history of this Pre-emption Line is interesting. Of course, it was mere conjecture where the line would fall as far S. as Seneca Lake, and parties were interested to have the line fall W. of Geneva, leaving that place and a considerable tract of land between the Military Tract and the Mass. lands. Seth Reed and Peter Ryckman, both of whom had been Indian traders, applied to the State of New York for a remuneration for services rendered in some previous negotiations with the eastern portion of the Six Nations, and proposed to take a patent for a tract the boundaries of which should begin at a tree on the bank of the Seneca Lake and run along the bank of the lake to the S. until they should have 16,000 acres between the lake and the e. bounds of the land ceded to Massachusetts. Their request was assented to and a patent issued. This situated, they proposed to Messrs. Phelps and Gorham to join them in running the Pre-emption Line, each party furnishing a surveyor. The line was run which is known as the "Old Pre-emption Line." Messrs. Phelps and Gorham were much disappointed in the result,—suspected error or fraud, but made no movement for a re-survey before they had sold to the English Association. Their suspicions had at first been excited by an offer from a prominent member of the Lessee Company for "all the lands they owned east of the line that had been run." They were so well assured of the fact that in their deed to Mr. Morris they specified a tract in a zone between the line then run and the w. bounds of the counties of Montgomery and Tioga, those counties then embracing all of the Military Tract. Being fully convinced of the inaccuracy of the first survey, Morris, in his sale to the English Company, agreed to run it anew. The new survey was performed under the superintendency of Maj. Hoops, who employed Andrew Elliott and Augustus Porter to perform the labor. A corps of 40 men were employed, and a vista 20 feet wide opened before the transit instrument until the line had reached the head of Seneca Lake, when night signals were employed to run down and over the lake. So much pains were taken to insure correctness that the survey was never disputed; and thus the "New Pre-emption Line" was established as the true division line between the lands of the State of New York and those that had been ceded to Massachusetts. In examining the old survey,

Major Hoops had discovered the precise points of deviation to the westward. It had commenced soon after leaving the Pennsylvania line, gradually bearing off until it crossed the outlet of the Crooked Lake, where an abrupt offset was made, and then an inclination for a few miles almost in an S. W. course; then, as if fearful that it was running W. farther than was necessary to secure a given object, the line was made to incline to the E. until it passed the foot of Seneca Lake, when it was run nearly N. and S. to Lake Ontario. All this will be observed upon any of the old maps. It will at once be perceived that the site of Geneva—the 16,000 acres of Reed and Ryckman—had caused more than a usual variation of the surveyor's compass. Judge Porter's explanation is as follows:—"Geneva was then a small settlement, beautifully situated on the Seneca Lake, rendered quite attractive by its lying beside an old Indian settlement in which there was an orchard."

The Old Pre-emption Line terminated on Lake Ontario, 3 mi. W. of Solus Bay, and the new line very nearly the center of the head of the bay. With the exception of the abrupt variations that have been noticed, the old line, parting from the true meridian about 5 mi. S. of the Chemung River, bears off gradually until it reaches the shore of Lake Ontario. The strip of land between the two lines was called "The Gore." In addition to the patent granted to Reed and Ryckman, the State had presumed the original survey to be correct, and made other grants, and allowed the location of military land warrants upon what had been made-disputed territory. As an equivalent to the purchasers of this tract, compensation lands were granted by the State in the present towns of Wolcott and Galen, Wayne co.

²The w. boundary of this tract was a line "beginning in the northern line of Penn., due south of the corner or point of land made by the confluence of the Genesee River and the Canaseraga Creek; thence north on said meridian line to the corner or point, at the confluence aforesaid; thence northwardly along the waters of the Genesee River to a point two miles north of Canawagus Village; thence running due west twelve miles; thence running northwardly, so as to be twelve miles distant from the western bounds of said river, to the shore of Lake Ontario."—Turner's Phelps and Gorham Purchase.

1827. Brigham Young was also a long time a resident of Canandaigua; and the first Mormon society was formed at Fayette, in the adjoining co. of Seneca, in 1830.

BRISTOL¹—was formed in Jan. 1789. South Bristol was taken off in 1838, and a part was annexed to Richmond, March 23, 1848, and restored Feb. 25, 1852. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of a series of ridges, gradually declining to the s. The highest points are about 500 feet above the valleys. These ridges are divided by the deep valleys of Mud Creek and Egypt Brook. The declivities that border upon these streams in the s. part are usually very steep. The soil is a rich alluvial upon the intervalles, and disintegrated slate and shale among the hills. Bristol Center (p. v.) contains 30 houses; Baptist Hill (Bristol p. o.) 25; and Muttonville² 15. Egypt is a hamlet in the s. e. part. Gamaliel Wilder and Joseph Gilbert settled in 1788, at what was called the "Old Indian Orchard."³ The first religious services were performed by Rev. Zadock Hann, in 1793. There are now 4 churches in town.⁵

CANADICE⁶—was formed from Richmond, April 15, 1829, and a part was annexed to Richmond in 1836. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface consists of a high, broken upland separated into two ridges by Canadice Lake. The w. ridge, known as Bald Hill, is bordered by steep declivities, and the e. by more gradual slopes. The highest summits are about 700 feet above Honeye Lake. The principal streams are the Canadice Inlet and Outlet and the Honeye Lake. The soil in the valleys is a clayey loam; upon the declivities of the hills it is mostly disintegrated shale and slate, and upon the summits in the s. part it consists of gravelly loam and black muck. Canadice Corners (p. o.) is a hamlet, forming the business center of the town. The first settlement was made by — Kimball, in 1807.⁷ There are now 3 churches in town.⁸

CANANDAIGUA⁹—was formed Jan. 27, 1789, and a part annexed to Gorham, March 16, 1824. It is the central town of the co., lying upon the w. and s. shores of Canandaigua Lake. The surface is hilly in the s., but level or gently rolling in the n. The highest summits are about 600 feet above the lake. Canandaigua Outlet, Beaver Creek, and Stevens Brook are the principal streams. The soil is a clayey loam in the n. and a deep, gravelly loam in the s., and in fertility this town ranks among the first in the State. Canandaigua, (p. v.) situated at the outlet of Canandaigua Lake, is an important station on the N. Y. C. R. R., and a terminus of the N. E. & C. Branch and of the E. J. & C. R. R. A daily steamer connects it with Naples, at the head of the lake. It contains the co. buildings,¹⁰ a State Arsenal,¹¹ 5 churches, an academy,¹² a female seminary,¹³ a private lunatic asylum,¹⁴ 3 newspaper offices, and a bank. It was incorp. April 18, 1815, and has a pop. of 4,154.¹⁵ Cheshire, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 20 dwellings. Centerfield (p. o.) is a hamlet, and Academy, near the s. line, is a p. o. Wm. Morgan, of masonic notoriety, was imprisoned at Canandaigua previous to his disappearance.¹⁶ Servitude was commenced in 1788, by Phelps and Gorham and their associates, and considerable possessions were made in 1789 and '90.¹⁷ The first religious service at Canandaigua, was held in 1789, by

² So named because a Baptist church was erected there at an early date.

³ It derives its name from the establishment of a tallow chandlery there some years since. 30,000 sheep have been slaughtered there in a year.

⁴ William Gooding and George Gooding settled in 1789, James, Elzathan, and George Gooding in 1793, and Alden Sears and John, George, Farmer, Burt, and William Gooding in 1792. The first store and tavern were opened by Stephen Sisson, in 1793; Gamal Wilder built the first gristmill, in 1790; Thomas Hann taught the first school, in 1790; Cornelius McGrim was the first child born.

⁵ Bap. Cong., M. E., and Univ.

⁶ This name is a corruption of the Indian name of Canadice Lake.

⁷ Soon after, John Wilson settled at the head of Canadice Lake, and John Richardson, John Wheeler, Samuel Spencer, and Abel Wood near Canadice Corners. The first tavern was kept by Abner Davis; and Sylvania A. Ford opened the first store. The first sawmill was built at the head of Canadice Lake, by John Venz.

¹⁶ Among the sufferers in 1790 were Joseph Smith, David Chapin, Nathaniel Van Dyke, and Thomas Sears, all of them in Gorham, Daniel Gates, Paul, Peter and Nathan Perry, and James D. Fish. The first case was that of Oliver Phelps, in 1790; and the first death, that of Abner Wadsworth, in 1790. Samuel Gardner opened the first school, and the first school was taught

Rev. John Smith. The first church (St. Matthew's, Epis., now St. John's) was organized Feb. 4, 1799; the Cong. church was formed Feb. 25, 1799. The census reports 10 churches in town.¹

EAST BLOOMFIELD—was formed Jan. 27, 1789, as "Bloomfield." Mendon and Victor were taken off in 1812; its name was changed and West Bloomfield was taken off in 1833. It is an interior town, lying n. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling, with a gentle inclination toward the n. The ridges are 50 to 600 feet above the valleys. The principal streams are the Mud, Fish, and Hog Hollow Creeks. The soil is a deep, fertile, gravelly loam, in places mixed with clay. Grimths Mills in the e. and Brag Village in the s. e. part are hamlets. East Bloomfield, (p. v.), $\frac{1}{2}$ of a mi. from East Bloomfield Station, on the N. Y. Central R. R., contains 3 churches, an academy,² manufactories of agricultural implements and carriages. Pop. 590. This township having been purchased of Phelps and Gorham by a company from Berkshire co., Mass., its settlement was commenced in the spring of 1789.³ There are 4 churches in town;⁴ the first (Cong.) was formed Sept. 8, and organized Nov. 15, 1795, by Rev. Zadock Hunt. The first church edifice in all Western N. Y. was erected in this town in 1801.

FARMINGTON⁵—was formed Jan. 27, 1789. It lies on the n. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is nearly level in the s., but in the n. it is broken by the drift ridges peculiar to this section of country, rising to a height of 50 to 100 feet above the general surface. The declivities of these ridges toward the s., e., and w. are generally steep, but toward the s. they become gradual slopes. The streams are Mud and Beaver Creeks and Black Brook. A strip of land across the s. part, embracing about 3 tiers of lots, has a clay soil. North of this is a marshy region; and farther n. the soil is a gravelly loam and very productive, with good proportions of arable, meadow, and grazing lands throughout the town. New Salem, (Farmington p. o.) a village in the n. part, contains 206 inhabitants. Brownville (Nortons Mills p. o.) is a hamlet. East Farmington and West Farmington are p. offices. The settlement was commenced in 1789, by Friends from Berkshire, Mass., among whom were Nathan Comstock, his sons Otis and Darius, and Robert Hathaway.⁶ The first house of worship was erected by the Friends, in 1801. There are now 2 churches in town; Friends and Wes. Meth.

GORHAM⁷—was formed Jan. 27, 1789, as "Easton." Its name was changed to "Lincoln," April 17, 1806, and to Gorham, April 6, 1807. Hopewell was taken off in 1822. A part of Canandaigua was annexed in 1824. It lies upon the e. shore of Canandaigua Lake, s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling, the ridges rising in gradual slopes to a height of 25 to 200 feet above the valleys. Flint Creek is the principal stream. The soil in the e. part is principally a gravelly loam, and in the w. it consists of clay, and is generally fertile and productive. Gorham,⁸ (p. v.) 3 mi. from the Gorham Station, on the C. & E. R. R., contains 3 churches and 310 inhabitants. Reeds Corners (p. v.) contains 3 churches and about 20 houses. The first settlement was made at Reeds Corners, in 1789, by James Wood.⁹ There are now 6 churches in town.¹⁰

HOPEWELL—was formed from Gorham, March 29, 1822. It is an interior town, lying e. of the center of the co. The surface is level or gently undulating, with a northerly inclination. Canandaigua Outlet, Fall Creek, and Fall Brook are its principal streams. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam in the w., and the same mixed with clay in the center and e. It is very fertile and highly cultivated. Chapinville, (p. v.), a station on the N. Y. C. R. R., contains a church and about 30 dwellings; Hopewell Center (p. v.) contains 1 church and 16 dwellings.

by Major Wallis, in 1792. There were in that year 30 families in town. The Legislature granted, March 21, 1804, to Levi Stephens and Jason Parker the sole right of running stages from Utica to this place for a term of 7 years. The trip was to be performed twice a week, from June to October, within 48 hours, and at the rate of 4 cts. a mi. if with 6 or more passengers. A similar monopoly was granted, April 6, 1807, for 7 years, to John Merrill, between this place and Buffalo.

³ Deacon John Adams and his sons, John, William, Abner, Jonathan, and Joseph, his sons-in-law, Ephraim Roe and Loren Hill, and Eldah Bee, Moses Gunn, Lot Roe, John Barnes, Ebenezer Sprague, and Asa Hickox moved in with their families in 1788. The first death was that of Lot Roe, in 1793; the first marriage and the first upon the Phelps and Gorham Purchase—was that of Ben. Goss and a daughter of George Gidding. The first sawmill was erected on Mud Creek, in 1790, by Gen. F. Bows; and the first store was opened in 1806, by Norton A. Beach. Laura Adams taught the first school, in 1784.

⁵ Named from Farmington, Conn. It was formed by the Court of General Sessions.

⁷ Named in honor of Nathaniel Gorham.

⁸ Formerly called "Bethel."

⁹ Parley Gates, from Mass., settled on Lot 19 in 1796; and soon after, Oliver Howard and Henry Greene, from Onondaga co., N. Y., and Samuel and Silas Reed, Elijah Hurd, and others, came in. The first tavern was kept by William Sherwood, at Reeds Corners, in 1800; the first gristmill was built by Levi Benton; and the first sawmill, by Buckley & Craft, in 1807. Timothy Moore taught the first school, in 1802.

MANCHESTER—was formed from Farmington, March 31, 1821, as "Burt," and its name was changed April 16, 1822. It lies upon the s. border of the co., e. of the center. Its surface is nearly level in the s., but is occupied by irregular sand and gravel ridges of the drift formation in the n. Canandaigua Outlet, Fall Creek, and Black Brook are the principal streams. The soil is a gravelly loam and is very productive. Hydraulic limestone is quarried on "the Outlet." There are 3 flouring mills in town. Clifton Springs, (p. v.) incorporated in 1859, a station on the N. Y. C. R. R., is situated in the e. part of the town. Pop. 340. At this place are the celebrated Clifton Mineral Springs and an extensive water cure establishment.³ Manchester (p. v.) contains 374 inhabitants; Shortsville (p. v.) contains 55 dwellings and a large distillery; and Fort Gibson, (p. v.) on the Erie Canal, 50 dwellings; Manchester Center (p. v.) contains 18 dwellings. Plainsville (Gypsum p. o.) contains 12 houses. Coonsville contains a flouring mill, plaster mill, and 12 houses. The first settlement was made in 1793, by Stephen Jared, Joel Phelps, and Joab Gillett.⁴ Rev. David Irish preached in Man-chester in Jan. 1797, and in Feb. following a Bap. society was organized. There are now 8 churches in town.⁵ Joe Smith, the Mormon prophet, resided in this town with his father; and Mormon Hill, the place where the gold Bible was found, is situated a little s. w. of the center of the town.⁶

NAPLES⁷—was formed Jan. 27, 1789, as "Middletown." The name was changed April 6, 1808. Italy was taken off in 1815, and a part of Springwater in 1816. It is the extreme s. town of the co. The surface consists of a hilly and elevated upland, broken by the narrow and deep valleys of Canandaigua and Honeye Inlets and Grindstone Creek. The summits of the hills are 600 to 1000 feet above the surface of the lake and 1300 to 1700 feet above tide. Their declivities bordering on the streams are generally very steep. High Point and Hatch Hill are the highest summits. The soil upon the hills consists of clay and gravel mixed with disintegrated slate and shale; and in the valleys it is a rich, gravelly loam mixed with alluvium. Fruit growing is receiving much attention. Peaches are produced in great abundance; and an experiment is being made in the cultivation of grapes, which promises to be successful. Over 30 acres are now devoted to this object, and very satisfactory results have been realized. Naples, (p. v.) on the Canandaigua Inlet, 4 mi. from the lake, contains 5 churches and 3 flouring mills. Pop. 700. The first settlement was commenced in 1790, by a company from Berkshire co., Mass., by whom the town was purchased from Phelps and Gorham.⁸ The first sermon was preached by Rev. Zadock Humn, in June, 1792.⁹

PHELPS¹⁰—was formed in 1796, under the act of Jan. 27, 1789. A part was annexed to Lyons, (Wayne co.) April 11, 1823. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is rolling, the ridges rising in gentle slopes 20 to 100 feet above the valleys. The highest point is 300 feet above Canandaigua Lake. The soil in the e. is a sandy loam with a clay subsoil, in the s. a mixed sandy and clayey loam, and in the w. a sandy and coarse gravelly loam, all highly productive. Canandaigua Outlet, the principal stream, flows e. and s. through the center. Along its course are extensive quarries of gypsum and water limestone. In the town are quarries of Onon-

Hydro-sulphuric and carbonic acids are also found in small quantities.

⁷ Originally called "Withinstown," from Wm. Watkins, of Berkshire, Mass., one of the purchasers under Phelps and Gorham, and called by the Indians Nun'sla wee, great hill.

⁹ There are 5 churches in town; Bap., M. E., Presb., Wes. Meth., and Christian.

daga and corniferous limestone. Phelps,¹ (p. v.), on Flint Creek, near its junction with the Canandaigua Outlet, was incorp. Jan. 2, 1855. It contains a union school, newspaper office, and 6 churches. Pop. 1,278. Orleans (p. v.) is situated on Flint Creek. Pop. 218. Oaks Corners (p. o.) contains 15 houses.² J. D. Robinson, from Claverack, Columbia co., settled at Phelps in 1789.³ Rev. S. Goodale was the first resident preacher; he held services in schoolhouses and dwellings before any church edifice was erected. The first church (Presb.) was built in 1804.⁴

RICHMOND—was formed in 1796, under the act of Jan. 27, 1789, as "Pittstown." Its name was changed to "Honeoye" April 6, 1808, and to Richmond April 11, 1815. A part of Canadice was annexed April 30, 1836, and parts of Bristol and South Bristol in 1848; but the latter were restored in 1852. It lies upon the w. border of the co., s. of the center. It consists of a nearly square portion of land lying near the foot of Honeoye Lake, and a narrow strip extending along the E. shore of that lake and its inlet to the s. border of the co.⁵ A wide valley occupies the center, opening toward the n., and surrounded by hills from 50 to 200 feet high on the 3 remaining sides. The southern strip is very hilly, the summits rising 500 feet above the surface of the lake. Honeoye and Hemlock Outlets and Egypt Brook are the principal streams. The soil upon the lowlands is clay, upon the hills a sandy loam mixed with clay. Much attention is given to improving the breeds of cattle and sheep; and it is the largest wool growing town in the co., and second in the State. Honeoye, (p. v.), at the foot of Honeoye Lake, is the business center of the town. Pop. 244. Richmond Mills (p. o.) and Allens Hill⁶ (p. o.) are hamlets. This town was purchased of Phelps and Gorham by a company; and the first settlement was made by Capt. Peter Pitts and his sons William and Gideon, in 1789.⁷ There are 5 churches in town.⁸

SENECA—was formed in 1793, under the act of Jan. 27, 1789. It is the s. e. corner town of the co., lying upon the w. shore of Seneca Lake. The surface is beautifully rolling, the ridges rising 20 to 200 feet above the valleys. The shores of the lake are bluffs about 100 feet above the surface of the water. The streams are Flint and Keshong Creeks and Burralls and Castle Brooks. The soil is a deep, rich loam, consisting of sand, gravel, and clay mixed together, the gravel predominating upon the ridges. The soil is admirably adapted to the production of fruit trees, and the business of the nursery has become one of the leading pursuits in the town. Two large nursery establishments are located within the limits of the village of Geneva. Commerce and manufactures receive considerable attention. Geneva,⁹ (p. v.) incorp. April 3, 1806, is beautifully situated at the foot of Seneca Lake. It contains a flourishing union school,¹⁰ a large private boarding school,¹¹ 3 newspaper offices, and 9 churches. It is also the seat of Hobart Free College,¹² The Geneva Water Cure and Hygienic Institute is finely situated near the center of the village. A daily line of steamers connects this place with the upper ports upon Seneca Lake. Pop. 5,057. Castleton, (Seneca Castle p. o.), on Flint Creek, in the n. w. part, contains 2 churches and 35 dwellings. Flint Creek, (p. o.), Halls Corners, (p. o.), and Stanleys

³ N. Sanborn, — Gould, — Pierce, Philetus Swift, and John Grainger, from Conn., settled in town in 1789; Thaddeus Oaks, Seth Dean, Oliver and Charles Humphrey, John Salisbury, Nicholas Pullen, Walter Chase, and Elias Dickinson in 1791; John Patten and David Boyd in 1792; Jonathan Melvin in 1793; and John Sherman, Joseph and Ledowick Vandemark, and John and Patrick Burnett in 1794. Henry H. Robinson was the first child born in town; and the first marriage was that of Philetus Swift and Sally Dean, in 1793. Thaddeus Oaks opened the first tavern, in 1793; and the first saw and grist mills were built by Seth Dean.

⁴ There are 10 churches in town: 4 Bap., 3 Presb., 2 M. E., and a Prot. Epis.

⁷ In 1795, Lemuel and Cyrus Chipman, Philip Reed, Levi Blackmer, Nathaniel Harmon, Pierce Chamberlain, Asa Denison, and Isaac Adams, from Vermont, settled in town. Capt. Pitts opened the first tavern; and the first saw and grist mills were built by Thomas Morris, in 1795. Upon the division of the lands, Capt. Pitts secured 3,000 acres at the foot of Honeoye Lake, embracing the flats and a cleared field which had been the site of an Indian village destroyed by Sullivan's army. Louis Philippe, during his travels in this country, spent a night in the log house of Capt. Pitts; and subsequently the Duke de Liancourt and suite went from Canandaigua to make him a visit.

¹¹ The Walnut Hill Seminary, for boys, is a flourishing institution of its kind.

Corners¹ (p. o.) are hamlets. The first settlement was commenced in 1787, upon the site of the Indian village of Kanadesaga, by immigrants from New England.² This village was situated at the foot of Seneca Lake, where Geneva now is; and for several years after Geneva had become a place of considerable importance it was called "Kanadesaga." An ancient fortification, known as Fort Hill, is located on lot 58. It was covered with large forest trees upon the first settlement of the town. Another beautiful ground, called the "Old Castle," is about 1½ mi. s. w. of Geneva. It is covered by an Indian orchard, and the ground has never been plowed, because of a stipulation to that effect made with the Indians in the treaty of purchase.³ It contains an Indian burial ground; and in one corner may be traced a trench of an ancient stockaded fortification. Here was the largest Indian settlement in Western New York, and it is still a place of much interest to the few remaining descendants of the once powerful Five Nations. Many relics—as stone hatchets, arrow heads, pipes, &c.—are found in the vicinity of "Old Castle." As early as 1765, the Rev. Samuel Kirkland came on a mission to the Indians at Kanadesaga.⁴ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1798; and the first settled minister was Rev. Jedediah Chapman.⁵

SOUTH BRISTOL—was formed from Bristol, March 8, 1838. It lies upon the w. shore of Canandaigua Lake, s. w. of the center of the co. The surface consists of an elevated upland, divided into 4 ranges by the valleys of Grindstone and Mud Creeks and Egypt Brook. The summits of the ridges are about 1000 feet above the lake, and the declivities are very steep. The bluffs upon the lake shore are 300 to 400 feet high. The soil is a mixture of clay and disintegrated slate. Although the soil is rich and productive, the hilly character of the town has tended to retard its settlement. Cold Spring (South Bristol p. o.) is a hamlet about a mi. from Canandaigua Lake. Frost Hill is a hamlet in the w. part. Gamaliel Wilder, from Mass., purchased this township from Phelps and Gorham, and settled at Willars Point, on Canandaigua Lake, in 1789.⁶ An Indian orchard on the lake shore at this point induced him to settle here. Rev. Mr. Rolph was the first settled minister. There is now but 1 church (Presb.) in town.

VICTOR—was formed from Bloomfield, May 26, 1812. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. The s. part is occupied by the drift ridges, which rise 50 to 150 feet above the general surface. A ridge of 100 to 280 feet in height extends across the s. part in a general e. and w. direction. The principal streams are Irondequoit, Mud, Hog Hollow, and Fish Creeks, and Trout Brook. The soil in the center and s. is a light, sandy and gravelly loam, but in the s. e. it is principally clay. It is particularly adapted to the cultivation of potatoes and root crops. Victor,⁷ (p. v.) near the center, contains about 75 dwellings. The Indian village of Ganagaro, which was destroyed by the Marquis de Nonville, was situated near this place.⁸ Fishers (p. o.) is a station on the N. Y. C. R. R., in the w. part; and East Victor is a hamlet, on Mud Creek. The first settlement was commenced in 1789, by immigrants from Stockbridge, Mass. Among the first were Enos and Jared Boughton, and Jacob Lobdell.⁹ Rev. Reuben Parmelee, from Goshen, the first settled minister, came to the town in 1798.¹⁰

WEST BLOOMFIELD—was formed from Bloomfield, Feb. 11, 1833. It lies upon the w. border of the co., s. of the center. A ridge 200 to 300 feet high, forming the declivity of a southern terrace, extends across the s. part. The surface is gently undulating. The soil is a deep, rich, gravelly loam mixed with clay. In the s. part there is a spring of inflammable or carburetted hydrogen gas. Tile and earthenware are manufactured to some extent in town. West Bloomfield (p. v.) is a village of 350 inhabitants,¹¹ situated 1½ mi. s. of the W. Bloomfield Station, on

² Among the first settlers were Horatio Jones, Asa Ransom, Lark Jennings, Dr. Benton, Peter Ryckman, Peter Bortie, Col. Seth Reed, and Dominick DeBartzeck, an Indian trader. Jonathan Whitney, Jonathan Oaks, Benjamin Tuttle, Phineas Stone, and John Reed settled in 1788 and '89; Solomon and William Gates, Thomas Densmore, S. Johnson, Weaver, and Oliver Whitmore in 1791, and Adam, Christian, Christ-pher, and George Fisher in 1791. Lark Jennings kept the first tavern, in 1788; the first gristmill was erected by Cornelius Roberts; and the first sawmill, by P. B. Wisner, in 1798. The first marriage was that of Dr. Joel Prescott and Miss Phida Reed; and the first school was taught by Samuel Wheaton, in 1792.

⁵ There are 12 churches in town; 2 Prot. E., 3 Presb., 2 Asso. Ref. Presb., 2 M. E., Bapt., Ref. Prot. D., Unit., and E. C.

⁶ Among the other early settlers who came in soon after Mr. Wilder, between 1789 and 1796, were Theophilus and Matthew Allen, Joseph Gilbert, Jared Tuttle, Peter Gannard, Ezra Austin, Nathaniel Hatch, and their families. Mr. Wilder built the first sawmill, the first gristmill, and distillery, at Willars Point, in 1785. He also erected the first public house, in 1788, which he conducted for 9 years. In 1790, by himself and George Wilder opened the first store, in 1788. The first school was taught by Joanna Forbes. Eliza Allen was the first child born, in 1792.

⁹ Levi Boughton and Rufus Dyer settled at Boughton Hill, in 1790. The first birth was that of Frederick Boughton, in June, 1791; and the first marriage, that of Zebulon Norton and Miss Boughton. The first tavern was opened at Boughton Hill, by Ezekiah Boughton, in 1792; and the first sawmill was built the same year, by Enos and Jared Boughton.

¹⁰ There are 3 churches in town; Cong., M. E., and Unit.

¹¹ Called by the Indians Ganandakak, village on a hilltop.

the N. Y. C. R. R. North Bloomfield, (p. v.), on the Honeye Outlet, and Millers Corners. (Taylorsville p. o.), in the E. part, are R. R. stations. The territory forming this town was purchased by Amos Hall,¹ Robert Taft, Nathan Marvin, and Ebenezer Curtis; and the first settlement was made by them in 1789.² The first religious services were held in 1793.³

² John P. Sears, Peregrine Gardner, Clark Peck, Jasper Marvin, Samuel Miller, John Algar, and S. Thayer settled in the town in 1789-90. Benjamin Gardner, with his sons John and Peregrine, are supposed to have been the first settlers. The first birth was that of Lucinda Gardner, in Sept. 1791. Jasper P. Sears kept the first inn, and Royal Hendee the first store. The first sawmill was built by Ebenezer Curtis; and the first gristmill, by Reuben Thayer.
³ There are now 3 churches in town; Cong., M. E., and Chris.

ORANGE COUNTY.

This county was formed Nov. 1, 1683. Rockland was taken off in 1798, and a portion was annexed from Ulster the same year. It lies upon the w. bank of the Hudson, s. e. of the center of the State. It is centrally distant 90 miles from Albany, and contains 858 sq. mi. The surface is mountainous upon the s. e. and s. w. borders, and a rolling upland through the center. The Matteawan or South Mts. extend in several parallel ranges from the N. J. line s. e. to the Hudson, ending in the rocky and precipitous bluffs known as "The Highlands." The highest summits attain an elevation of 1,900 to 1,500 ft. above tide. The ranges and peaks of these mountains are known by several distinct names.¹ The whole region included between these ranges consists of steep and precipitous rocky peaks and narrow winding ravines, a small portion only being susceptible of cultivation. The Shawangunk Mt. Range extends from Delaware River s. e. through the s. w. corner of the co. It is a high, unbroken range, precipitous upon the w., but with more gradual slopes upon the e. The highest summits are 1,500 to 1,900 ft. above tide. The extreme s. w. corner of the co. is occupied by the series of highlands extending from the Delaware into Sullivan co. The central portion of the co., lying between the two mountain systems, is a rolling upland, broken in many places by abrupt and isolated hills and the deep valleys of streams. This whole region, comprising more than one-half of the entire surface of the co., is susceptible of cultivation, and forms a fine agricultural district.

Along the s. w. border, extending through several towns and into N. J., is a low, flat region, lying upon the streams, and known as the "Drowned Lands." This tract, consisting of about 17,000 acres, was originally covered with water and a dense growth of cedars; but a large portion of it has been drained and reclaimed; and it now forms one of the finest agricultural portions of the co.

Neversink River flows s. along the w. foot of the Shawangunk Mts. and forms a tributary of the Delaware. Shawangunk River flows n. along the e. foot of the same mountains and forms a tributary of the Hudson. Wall Kil flows n. through near the center of the co. and unites with the Shawangunk in Ulster co. Murderers Kil,² and its principal tributary, Otter Creek, flow e. through near the center of the co. and discharge their waters into the Hudson. Wawayanda Creek flows s. into N. J. and, re-entering the State as Potuck Creek, unites with the Wall Kil. Ramapo River rises in the s. part of the co. and flows s. into Rockland. In the s. are several small lakes, the principal of which are Greenwood Lake and Thompsons and Mandasha Ponds. The rocks of the southern highlands are principally granite, gneiss, and sienite, with occasional injected veins of trap. The rocks which compose the Shawangunk Mts. are the shales and sandstones of the Chemung group. The central portions of the co. are occupied by parallel strata of the Hamilton shales, Helderbergh limestones and grit, Medina sandstone, and the gray sandstones, all extending s. e. and s. w., respectively, from the e. foot of the Shawangunk Mts. An abundance of iron, consisting of magnetic ores and red and brown hematite, is found among the southern mountains; and several veins have been extensively worked.³ The soil is as various as the surface. Among the primitive mountains it is light, sandy, and unproductive. In the s. w. part it is a tough clay, generally underlaid by hardpan. Through the center it is a clay, sandy, and gravelly loam upon the hills, and a fine quality of gravelly loam and alluvium in the valleys.—all very productive. The Drowned Lands are covered with alluvium and vegetable mold, and are among the most fertile lands in the State. The various branches of agriculture form the leading pursuit of the people. The most important interest is the sending of milk to the N. Y. market. Butter, spring grains, and fruits are also largely produced. Market gardening is a large and increasing source of public wealth. The manufacturing interests of the co. are considerable, though they are mostly confined to a few places. The manufacture of iron has formed an extensive business from an early period until within a few years; but at the present time only two furnaces are in operation in the co. The proximity to New York renders the lands of the co. exceedingly valuable; and, with proper care, almost any crop adapted to the climate can be successfully and profitably cultivated. Considerable commerce is carried on by means of the Hudson, the principal export being lumber brought from the West upon the R. R. and trans-shipped at Newburgh.

² Named from the murder of a family of whites who lived upon its banks, by the Indians, in early times.

The county is a half-shire, the courts being held respectively at Goshen and Newburgh.¹ The courthouse at Goshen is a brick building, situated upon a fine lot in the E. part of the village. The jail is a stone building, in rear of the courthouse. The co. clerk's office is a fireproof brick building, upon the street opposite the courthouse. The courthouse at Newburgh is located upon the high land in the W. part of the village. It is a fine brick building, fronting S. upon Second St. The jail at Newburgh is connected with the police establishment of the village. The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 267 acres in Goshen, 3½ mi. S. W. of the village. The average number of inmates is 200, supported at a weekly cost of $1.04 each. The building is of stone, and has accommodations for 300. A school is taught during the entire year. The accommodations are reported by the Senate Committee of 1857 as good, and the general management of the institution as much above the average. The income from the farm is about $2,000. The N. Y. & Erie R. R. extends through Monroe, Blooming Grove, Chester, Goshen, Wawayanda, Walkill, Mount Hope, and Deerpark. The Newburgh branch of this road extends S. W. from Newburgh, through New Windsor and Blooming Grove, to Chester.² The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends from the Delaware River N. along the valley of the Neversink, through Deerpark.³ In the central part of the co. a wide ditch has been dug, for the purpose of draining the Drowned Lands, which has been of immense value to the county.

Thirteen newspapers—1 daily, 9 weekly, 2 semi-monthly, and 1 monthly—are published in this co.⁴

The Orange County Patriot. In 1801 or '02 it passed into the hands of Wm. A. Carpenter, who changed it to

The Friend of Truth. In 1804 Ward M. Gazeley became proprietor, and changed its name to

The Orange Eagle; and soon after the office was burned and the paper discontinued.

The Newburgh Patriot was started at Newburgh in 1795 by Lucius Carey, and was continued a few years.

The Mirror was commenced at Newburgh Sept. 22, 1796, by Philip Van H. ruc. In 1802 it was merged in

The Repository of the Times, published by Dennis Colver. In 1806 Ward M. Gazeley became proprietor, and the name was changed to

The Political Ledger. In 1829 Charles M. Cushman became publisher, and the name was changed to

The Orange Telegraph. Within a few years it was changed again to

The Newburgh Telegraph, and has since been issued respectively by H. H. Van Dyck, Elias Pitts, and E. M. Rutenber, until 1857, when it passed into the hands of Joseph Lawson, by whom it is now published.

The New Windsor Gazette was commenced at New Windsor in 1797 by Jacob Schultz. In 1799 it was removed to Newburgh, and its name was changed to

The Orange County Gazette. John W. Barber and David Denton afterward became interested in its publication. About 1833 it was changed to

The Citizen, and soon after it was merged in

The Rights of Man, which was commenced at Newburgh in 1799 by Elias Winfield, and was continued until 1809 or '10.

The Orange County Gazette was commenced at Goshen in 1805 by John G. Hurton and Gabriel Denton. It was successively issued by Gabriel Denton, Elliott Hopkins, F. T. & A. O. Houghton, until 1813, when Luther Pratt became the proprietor, and changed it to the Independent Republican, and removed it to Montgomery, where it was published some years. It afterward passed into the hands of James A. Cheever, who removed it back to Goshen. In 1831 H. H. Van Dyck became proprietor. It was subsequently issued by V. M. Drake, Moses Sweeney, Clark and Montanye, James McNally and Montoye & Green. It is now published by J. V. Montanye & Co.

The Orange County Republican was published at Wards Bridge in 1806.

The Orange County Patriot and Spectator of '76 was commenced at Goshen in 1808 by Gabriel Denton. In 1818 it was changed to

The Orange County Patriot, and was issued by Timothy B. Crowell. R. C. S. Herdries afterward became proprietor, and continued it until 1832, when it came into the hands of F. T. Parsons, who changed it to

The Goshen Democrat. It was soon after published by Mead & Webb; and in 1845 it was united with the True Whig, as

The Goshen Democrat and Whig. In a few years the name Whig, was dropped, and the paper again appeared as

The Goshen Democrat, under which title it is now published by Charles Wood.

The Newburgh Gazette was commenced in 1822 by J. D. Spaulding. It was successively issued by Spaulding & Parmenter, Spaulding & Riswolds, Riswolds & Leslie, Wallace & Street, S. T. Callahan, and Wm. L. Allison, until 1856, when it passed into the hands of E. W. Gray, its present publisher.

The Evangelical Witness, mo., was published a short time at Newburgh in 1824 by Rev. Jas. R. Wilson.

The Orange County Farmer was commenced in 1826 at Goshen by Samuel Williams. It afterward passed into the hands of Luther Pratt, who removed it to Montgomery, where it was continued but a short time.

The Beacon was published a short time at Newburgh in 1828 by — Beebe.

Journal of the American Association, mo., was published at West Point in 1820. It was the organ of an association of enthusiasts for the promotion of science, literature, and the arts.

The Orange Herald was published at Slate Hill, in Wawayanda, by John G. Wallace in 1831.

The Republican Banner was commenced at Walden, in Montgomery, in June, 1831, and was continued several years

The first settlements in the co. are supposed to have been made by the Dutch, soon after the first occupation of Manhattan Island. Traces of an early occupation were found upon the first part of the progenitors of the present race, among which was a road known as the "Old Mine Road," extending from the s. line of the co. along the valley of the Shawangunk to Esopus, on the Hudson. These settlements were broken up; and no record is left of them. The next race of settlers came in about the commencement of the 18th century and located in various parts of the co. They were Dutch, French Huguenots, and English, nearly all seeking liberty in the wilderness. The first patent issued was the Minisink Patent, in 1697, embracing the greater part of the co. lying upon the Shawangunk Mts., and a considerable portion of Sullivan co. The remaining portions of the co. were embraced in Chesecock's Patent,¹ issued in 1702, embracing the s. e. part; the Wawayanda Patent,² issued in 1703, embracing the w. and n. parts; and the John Evans Patent,³ the precise date of which is not known. The boundaries of these various patents were so vague that it was found impossible to locate them without conflicting with others; and serious difficulties arose between the different claimants.⁴

The policy of granting large patents was soon abandoned, and the remaining parts of the co. were patented in small tracts to actual settlers, from about 1718 to 1750. The settlements progressed but slowly, in consequence of the fear of Indian hostilities. During the French War of 1755 the frontier settlements were often attacked by small parties of hostile Indians and the defenseless inhabitants were murdered and carried into captivity. The principal weight of these attacks fell upon the settlements in the Neversink Valley. During the Revolution the frontiers were again constantly in a state of alarm. In July, 1778, Brant, at the head of a large Indian force, laid waste the whole Minisink settlement; and on his retreat the disastrous battle of Minisink was fought, in which nearly the whole force of the Americans was destroyed.⁵

The eastern part of the co. was also the scene of stirring military events. The importance of the passes through the Highlands was early appreciated by Washington, and strong fortifications were thrown up at various points to protect them. Fort Montgomery was erected on the river, at the s. line of the co., and Fort Clinton on the opposite side of a small creek in Rockland co. Several

The Signs of the Times, semi-monthly, was commenced at New Vernon, in Mount Hope, in 1822, by Gilbert Leber. In 1847 it was removed to Middletown, where it is now published by G. J. B. Ober.

The Tablet of Rural Economy was published at Newburgh in 1822 by J. W. Knevels.

The Sentinel was published at Minisink, now Wawayanda, in 1822, by Peter K. Allen.

The New York Journal, was commenced in 1822, by J. D. Franklin, &c. Its name was afterward changed to

The Highland Courier. It was issued in 1825 by Wm. R. L. Doby, and in 1838 passed into the hands of Edward Mixen, the present publisher.

The Reflectionary, was commenced at Newburgh in 1826, by Roy Moses Romey. In a short time it was removed to Pittsburg, Penn.

The Evening Visitor was published a short time at Newburgh in 1828, by D. L. Froudit.

The Middlesex Observer was started in April, 1849, by A. A. Bond. In 1846 it was removed to Kingston and changed to the Ulster Democrat.

The True Witness was started at Goshen Aug. 5, 1842, by R. C. S. Hendrix. In 1845 it was merged in the Goshen Democrat.

The Democrat's Standard was commenced at Goshen in the fall of 1843, by Van & Donox. In 1841 it was changed to

The Goshen Chronicle, and it was continued until 1849.

The Christian Instructor was started at Newburgh in 1845 by D. L. Froudit, and in a short time it was removed to Philadelphia.

The Orange County News was started at Goshen in July, 1846, by John L. Brown, and was discontinued in 1849.

The Banner of Liberty was commenced at Middletown in Aug. 1848, by Gilbert A. Bodey, as a monthly. In 1847 it was issued semi-monthly; and it is now published as a weekly.

Freedmen's Globe was published at Middletown in Aug. 1849, by W. L. Bond.

The New York Express was started in 1849, by Thomas George. In 1851 it was purchased by L. M. Butt, and merged in the Newburgh Telegraph.

Tri States Union was commenced at Port Jervis, Nov. 7, 1851, by John J. Mumbard. In 1854 E. F. Barnes became proprietor, and in 1853 it passed into the hands of James H. Norton, by whom it is still published.

The Mirror of Temperance was started at Port Jervis in 1851, by J. L. Barlow. In 1852 J. M. Dow assumed the publication, and continued it until 1853.

The Whig Press was commenced at Middletown, Nov. 26, 1851, by John W. Hasbrouck, by whom it is still published.

The Spirit of the American, a quarterly publication printed for the colored people of the separate African Methodist Church, was commenced at Middletown in 1824, by Rev. David James, editor. It was discontinued in 1826.

The Scythe was commenced at Port Jervis, in Jan. 1827, by John Williams. In June of the same year it was removed to Susquehanna, Penn.

The Literary Scrap Book, now, was published at Newburgh in 1827, by R. Dutton.

The Hardware Man's Newspaper, now, was commenced Aug. 1827, at Middletown, by John W. Bond, by whom it is still published. It is issued in the office of the Whig Press.

The Newburgh American was commenced at Newburgh in 1825, by R. P. L. Shuter & Co., and was continued until 1827.

The Newburgh Times was commenced at Newburgh in 1826, by R. H. Bloomer. It is now passed into the hands of R. H. Bloomer, its present publisher.

The Daily News was commenced at Newburgh in 1827, by E. W. Gray. It was subsequently discontinued, and its publication resumed in 1827, by E. M. Bond, & Co., & E. W. Gray. It is now published by E. W. Gray, at Newburgh.

The Catholic Literary Magazine was published at Newburgh in 1826.

The Sybil, semi-monthly, was commenced at Middletown in July, 1826, by Mrs. Dr. Taylor & Co., of Hudson, N. Y. It is issued from the office of the Whig Press.

² Wawayanda. An original plat of April, 1702, is given to Dr. John Bridgman, &c., of the same nature as the lands of Wawayanda, and their boundaries are given by Capt. J. Evans, &c., of the Highlands, and part of the Hudson, & by John J. Mumbard, &c., of Havana and Hudson, N. Y. See March 17, 1702.

³ This patent was afterwards abandoned, but was described in so vague and indefinite a manner, that it was impossible to locate it. There is, therefore, but little doubt of it.

The controversy was finally decided about 1767.

other forts were built both above and below these, and chains were stretched across the river and various impediments were sunk in the channel, to prevent the passage of vessels. Gen. Putnam was left in command of these positions in 1777, when Gen. Howe marched to attack Philadelphia, but with an entirely inadequate force. About the 1st of October, Sir Henry Clinton, in command at New York, sent a force up the river to aid Gen. Burgoyne, who was then hard pressed by the American army. This force first landed at Verplancks Point on the 5th, but in the night following re-embarked, landed on the opposite shore, and on the 6th surprised and captured both Forts Montgomery and Clinton.

The official reports make the loss of the British and Americans about equal; but, as the former were fully exposed to a galling fire while approaching the works, and the latter mostly escaped, it is supposed that the British loss was much greater. The other American works were abandoned, and Gen. Putnam retreated to Fishkill. The British spent some time in removing the various obstructions from the river, and advanced slowly northward, plundering and destroying on their way. They reached Esopus on the 15th, and at the same time Gen. Putnam, whose force had been augmented to 6,000 men by Conn., N. Y. and N. J. militia, sent a detachment of 2,000 to take possession of Peekskill. The British, afraid to go farther n. with such a force in their rear, remained at Esopus until they received news of the surrender of Burgoyne; and then they returned to New York.

The result of this expedition demonstrated the necessity of stronger fortifications among the Highlands, and during the following winter the site of West Point was fixed upon, as the strongest and most eligible on the river. Earthworks were thrown up early in the spring, and from time to time more formidable works were added, until, at the close of the war, it was the most strongly fortified of any place in the country.¹

It was afterward the center of the American operations in the North. In the spring of 1780, Gen. Arnold, who had not entirely recovered from the effects of a wound received at Saratoga, solicited and received the command of this post. The instruction which gave him this command was dated Aug. 3, 1780. Arnold had been in correspondence with the British for more than a year; and he soon negotiated with Sir Henry Clinton to deliver up West Point, for the sum of £10,000 in gold and a commission of Maj. Gen. in the British army. The final consummation of the compact on the part of the British was intrusted to Maj. Andre, who crossed the American lines in disguise and held an interview with Arnold on the 22d of Sept. Upon his attempting to return to New York, he was arrested as a spy, and the whole scheme was discovered. Arnold escaped to New York, and Andre was subsequently executed.²

The headquarters of the American army of the North was for a long time at Newburgh; and it was at this place that Washington finally took leave of his army,³ Aug. 18, 1783.

BLOOMING GROVE—was formed from Cornwall, March 23, 1799. A part of Hamptonburgh was taken off in 1830, and a part of Chester in 1845. It lies a little e. of the center of the co. Its surface is mountainous in the s. and e., and rolling and moderately hilly in the s. and w. Schunemunk Mts., upon the line of Monroe, are 1,300 to 1,500 ft. above tide. The other principal elevations are Lazy Hill, on the line of Chester, Toms Rocks, Peddlers, Rainer, Round, Musquito, and Woodcock Hills, and Red Ridge. These hills are generally too steep and rocky to be ever susceptible of cultivation. The hills in the n. have more gradual slopes, and are arable to their summits. Otter Kil flows e. through the n. part, and receives as tributaries Cromlin,⁴ Slatterleys, and several smaller creeks. The extensive bog meadows along Cromlin Creek, in the s. part, have been drained, and are now the most valuable agricultural lands in the town. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. Washingtonville, (Blooming Grove p. o.) upon Otter Kil, in the n. part, contains 3 churches and 360 inhabitants; Salisbury Mills, (p. v.) upon the line of Monroe, a church, paper mill, gristmill, and 241 inhabitants; and Craigsville, (p. v.) in the w. part, a church, cotton factory, and 20 dwellings.⁵ These places are all stations upon the Newburgh Branch of the N. Y. & E. R. R. Blooming Grove, near the center, contains 1

¹ The erection of these works was intrusted to Kosciuszko, the Polish patriot, then serving as a volunteer in the American army in the capacity of a military engineer. The works consisted of a formidable battery upon the bluff immediately upon the shore, named Fort Clinton, a strong fort upon Mt. Independence in the rear, named Fort Putnam, and several redoubts and outposts.

² Andre was executed at Tappan town, Rockland co., Oct. 2, 1780.

⁴ This creek is called Gray Court Creek in Chester.

⁵ During the Revolution a forge and powder mill were in operation at Craigsville. In 1799 James Craig erected a paper mill,—the first in the co.

church and 18 dwellings; Oxford Depot (p. o.) is a hamlet and station upon the E. R. R. The first settlements are supposed to have been made about 1735.¹ The first church was erected at Blooming Grove, in 1759; Rev. Enos Ayres was the first pastor.²

CHESTER—was formed from Goshen, Warwick, Blooming Grove, and Monroe, March 22, 1845. It is an interior town, lying a little s. w. of the center of the co. The surface is rolling in the s. w., hilly in the center, and mountainous in the s. e. The principal elevations are Goose Pond Mt., Lazy Hill, Snake Hill, and Sugar Loaf Mt.,—all steep, rocky peaks, unfit for cultivation. The highest summits are 500 to 600 ft. above the valleys. The principal streams are Gray Court, Black Meadow, and Ditch Creeks. Along Gray Court Creek, near the s. boundary, are extensive peat meadows, thoroughly drained, and forming the most productive tract in town. The soil is a light, yellow loam, underlaid by clay. Limestone and slate are both found in town. East Chester, (Chester p. o.), Chester, and West Chester are three villages, situated at the three angles of an equilateral triangle, 1 mi. apart. They contain the Chester Academy, a bank, 2 churches, and about 1,500 inhabitants. Sugar Loaf, (p. v.) in the s. w. part, contains a church and 36 dwellings. The first settlement was made in 1716, at Gray Court, in the s. e. corner of the town, by Daniel Cromline, from Long Island.³ There are 3 churches in town; 2 M. E. and Presb.

CORNWALL—was formed March 7, 1788, as "New Cornwall." Its name was changed March 3, 1797. "Chesecocks," now Monroe, was taken off in 1799. It lies upon the Hudson, in the e. part of the co. The surface is principally occupied by rocky peaks and ridges of "The Highlands." Their declivities are usually very steep, and their summits are masses of rocks, in some cases covered with a scanty growth of dwarfed forest trees. The highest peaks are Butter Hill, Crows Nest, and Bear Mountain,—respectively 1,529, 1,418, and 1,350 ft. above the river.⁴ The valleys among the mountains are deep, narrow, and rocky. A small portion of the s. w. part of the town is rolling or moderately hilly. The principal streams are Murderers Creek and its principal tributary, Otter Kill, flowing through broad, beautiful valleys in the n. part, and Bog Meadow Creek, emptying into the Hudson below West Point. Upon the latter, near its mouth, is a series of cascades, known as Buttermilk Falls. Cranberry, Long, Sutherlands, and Bog Meadow Ponds are small bodies of water among the mountains. The soil in the valleys is a sandy, clayey, and gravelly loam. The hills are too steep and rocky for cultivation. Canterbury, (Cornwall p. o.) in the s. n. part of the town, contains 4 churches, a woolen yarn factory, and tannery. Pop. 428. Cornwall Landing, on the Hudson, in the s. e. part, is the center of extensive brick manufactories. Pop. 615. West Point, (p. o.) on the Hudson, is the seat of the U. S. Military Academy. It contains extensive barracks for the cadets and soldiers, 20 officers' quarters, a philosophical building, containing the library, apparatus, and observatory, a laboratory for ordnance and ammunition, a chapel, hospital, riding hall, stable, equipment shed, Catholic church, and 150 dwellings for employees.⁵ Buttermilk Falls, (p. v.) 2 mi. below West Point, contains 3 churches and 307 inhabitants. Fort Montgomery, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, contains 1 church and 16 dwellings; Bethlehem, in the s. w., a church and 12 dwellings. Ketchamtown, in the w., and Townsville, in the n., are hamlets. The first settlements are supposed to have been made about 1720.⁶ The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1730, at Bethlehem; Rev. Mr. Chalker was the first pastor, and Rev. Enos Ayres the second.⁷ Fort Putnam, of the Revolution, was situated immediately in the rear of West Point, and Fort Montgomery on the s. n. border of the town.⁸ Idlewild, the residence of N. P. Willis, is near the Hudson, in the s. n. part of the town.

² There are 8 churches in town; 4 M. E., 2 Cong., Presb., and Friends.

⁴ The other principal elevations are Black Rock and Deer Hills, near the center; Ant Hill, Lawyers Hill, and Mount Basal, in the s. w.; and Peat, Pine, Cold, and Round Hills, in the n. part.

⁵ In the yard at West Point is a large number of cannon taken during the several wars of the U. S., and of which there are 89 brass pieces captured in the several wars of the Mexican War, each marked when, where, and by whom captured.

⁷ There are 11 churches in town, 2 Presb., 2 P. E., 2 Friends, 2 M. E., Bapt., R. C., and Unit.

CRAWFORD—was formed from Montgomery, March 4, 1823. It lies in the extreme s. angle of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by several high ridges extending s. e. and s. w. Collaberg and Comfort Hills, along the e. border, are 300 to 400 ft. above the valleys. The principal streams are the Shawangunk, forming the s. w. boundary, Dwaars Kil, Paugheaugnanghsink and Little Paugheaugnanghsink Creeks. These streams all flow in a general s. e. direction. Upon the Shawangunk is a large amount of water-power. The soil is a slaty and clayey loam upon the hills and a sandy and gravelly loam in the valleys. Pine Bush,¹ (p. v.) on the Shawangunk, in the s. part, contains a sawmill, gristmill, and 120 inhabitants; Scarsville, (p. v.) on Dwaars Kil, near the center, a gristmill, 2 sawmills, and 16 dwellings; and Bullville, (p. v.) in the s. part, 12 dwellings. Hopewell is a hamlet, in the s. w. Collaburgh is a p. o., 2 mi. e. of Bullville. The first church (Presb.) was formed at Hopewell, in 1779. The census reports 2 churches; Presb. and Asso. Ref. Presb.²

DEERPARK³—was formed from Mannakating, (Sullivan co.) March 16, 1798. A part of Mount Hope was taken off in 1825. It lies in the extreme w. angle of the co. Its surface is a mountainous highland, broken by the valley of Neversink River and numerous deep, rocky ravines of small streams. The Shawangunk Mts. extend along the e. border, and form a high, rocky ridge 1,800 ft. above the valleys, with steep declivities on the w. The Neversink⁴ River flows in a deep valley at the w. foot of the mountains. The central and w. parts are covered with a rocky and mountainous upland, ending in abrupt declivities on Delaware River in the s. The other principal streams are Mongaup River, forming the w. boundary, Bashers⁵ Kil, Old Dam Fall Creek,⁶ Shingle, and Grassy Swamp⁷ Brooks. Big and Little Ponds are two small lakes in the interior. Port Jervis,⁸ (p. v.) upon the Delaware, near the mouth of the Neversink, was incorp. May 11, 1853. It is an important station upon the Erie R. R. and Delaware & Hudson Canal. It contains 5 churches, a saw factory, foundry, machine shop, planing mill, newspaper office, and bank. Pop. 3,023. Honesville, (Sparrow Bush p. o.) upon the Delaware, 2 mi. w. of Port Jervis, contains a large tannery and 26 dwellings; Huguenot, (p. v.) upon the canal, 4 mi. s. e. of Port Jervis, 25 dwellings; and Cuddebackville, (p. v.) upon the canal, in the s. e. part, 1 church and 12 dwellings. Carpenters Point is a hamlet, at the mouth of the Neversink. The first settlements were made about 1690.⁹ There are 7 churches in town.¹⁰ De Witt Clinton was born at Fort De Witt, in this town, March 2, 1769, while his parents were on a visit at the residence of his mother's brother. Lead ore has recently been found in this town.

GOSHEN—was formed March 7, 1788. A part of Hamptonburgh was taken off in 1830, and a part of Chester in 1845. It is an interior town, lying a little s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly. The hills are bordered by long and gradual slopes, and are arable to their summits. The s. w. corner is occupied by a portion of the "Drowned Lands," most of which have been reclaimed.¹¹ The principal streams are Wall Kil, forming the w., and Quaker Creek, the s. boundary, and Otter Kil, in the e. part. The soil is a sandy loam, underlaid by clay, slate, and limestone. Goshen, (p. v.), s. e. of the center, was incorp. March 28, 1809. Besides the co. buildings, it contains 4 churches, a female seminary,¹² several classical schools, 2 newspaper offices, 2 banks, and about 1,800 inhabitants. It is the w. terminus of the Newburgh Branch of the N. Y. & E. R. R., and is an important freight and milk station upon the Erie R. R. The first settlements were made from 1703 to 1711. The first deeds of village lots in Goshen bear the date of 1711. The original Wawayanda Patent,¹³ covering the greater part of this town, was granted by Queen

² Nothing definite could be obtained in regard to the early history of this town.

³ A town named McDonnell, in early time, inclosed a large tract by a brush fence, and the inclosure became known as McDonnell's "Deer Park." This name was afterward given to the town.

⁴ Called by the Indians Ma-hack-so-mek.

⁵ Named from Bashers, an Indian woman who lived upon its banks.

⁶ This stream falls 100 ft. in 1 mi., and hence its name.

⁷ Named from a series of low natural meadows through which the stream flows.

⁸ Named from J. B. Jervis, the engineer who built the Delaware & Hudson Canal.

¹² The Goshen female seminary is a flourishing institution. Several small family classical schools are located in the village.

¹³ Christopher Benn, one of the proprietors of the Wawayanda Patent, located S. E. of Goshen Village in 1712. After visiting the place and deeming upon a location, he returned to his residence on Staten Island and sent a company of carpenters, his household goods, and his adopted daughter, Mary Wells, then 16 years of age, to his new home under the guidance of 3 friendly Indians. The carpenters erected a cabin, and Benn and his wife came on the next day after the cabin was built. Mr. Bull, a young Englishman just arrived in an emigrant ship, came in soon after. Among the other early settlers who came previous to 1712 were John Everett, John Carpenter, John Gale, William Ludlum, James Jackson, Isaac Finch, Michael Dunning, Solomon Carpenter, William Jackson, Samuel Sedy, Samuel Webb, John Yelkerton, Samuel Clowes, John Bradner, and John GREENVILLE—was formed from Minisink, Dec. 2, 1871. It lies in the w. part of the co. w. of the center. Its surface is a hilly and broken upland. The Shawangunk Mts. along the w. border, are 400 to 600 ft. above the valleys and 1,400 ft. at their summits. The slopes of the mountains are generally gradual, and the hills are generally grassy summits. The principal stream is Shawangunk River, which takes its rise near the center of hills S. E. B. Water Pond is a small body of water in the S. part. The soil is a sandy loam and gravelly loam.

Greenville, Minisink p. v., in the w. part, contains 2 churches and 25 dwellings. Smiths Corners, S. of Greenville, contains 15 houses. Center Point, 1 mi. S. E. of Greenville is a p. v. Woodsville is a hamlet in the E. part. The first settlements were probably made from 1720 to 1730. There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

HAMPTONBURGH—was formed from Goshen, Blaming Green, Monticello, New Winds, and Waukill, April 5, 1829. It is an interior town, lying a little S. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling and moderately hilly. The principal streams are Wall Kill, in the S. W. boundary, and Otter Kill, flowing S. E. through near the center. The soil is a gravelly and slaty loam. Otterville, p. v., on Otter Kill, near the E. border, is a hamlet. Otterkill, S. of Otterville, contains 12 dwellings. Campbell Hill, near the center, and Hamptonburgh, 1 mi. S., are hamlets. The first settlement was made by Wm. Bull, in 1719. In 1722, he erected a stone house, which is still standing. There are 2 churches in town, Presb. and Ass. Reformed.

MINISINK—was formed March 7, 1788. A part of "Orange" town of Monticello was taken off in 1825, Wauyanan in 1840, and Greenville in 1871. It lies upon the N. side of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling and hilly. The slopes are generally gentle and the hills are arable to their summits. The principal streams are Wall Kill and Ringers Creek, each of which forms some portion of the S. and E. boundary. The Dutch L. is occupy a small portion of the E. angle. The soil is principally a gravelly loam. Unionville, (p. v.) in the S. part, contains 2 churches and 25 dwellings; and West Town, (p. v.) N. of Unionville, 2 churches and 15 dwellings. Waterloo Mills, p. v., is a station on the Erie R. R. and 1 church and 6 dwellings. No remains of the early settlement have been preserved. There are 5 churches in town.²

MONROE—was formed from Cornwall, March 27, 1796, as "Orange Hill." Its name was changed to "Southfield" April 3, 1841, and to Monroe, April 6, 1868. A part of Orange was taken off in 1845. It is the S. E. corner town in the co. It lies mostly among the Highlands, and its surface is a hilly and mountainous upland. The principal ranges are Shawangunk Mts. in the S., Black and Bear Mts. in the E. and the Southfield Mts. near the center—along the S. E. in I. S. W. Their declivities are steeped in many places precipitous, and their summits are rough, rocky, and broken. A large share of the whole town is unfit for cultivation. The S. W. part are several valleys, containing arable land. The principal streams are Ramapo River, flowing S. E. and Murderers Creek, flowing S. The Forest-of-Dean Creek drains the E. part. It discharges its waters into the Hudson. Among the mountains are a great number of fine small lakes. The soil in the valleys is a sandy and gravelly loam. The mountains are covered with a thin Monroe, (p. v.) in the S. W. part of the town, contains 2 churches and 25 dwellings. It is a station upon the Erie R. MONTGOMERY³—was formed March 7, 1788. Crawford was taken off in 1823, and a part of Hamptonburgh in 1830. It lies upon the N. border of the co., E. of the center. Its surface is generally a hilly upland. The Comfort Hills,⁴ 600 to 800 ft. above tide, extend along the W. border. Wall Kil flows N. E. through near the center; and its principal tributary, Tin Brook,⁵ flows through the E. part. Upon Wall Kil, in the N. part, is a fall of 40 ft., affording an excellent water-power. Along the same stream, in the S. part, is considerable swamp land. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam. Montgomery, (p. v.) upon Wall Kil, S. of the center, was incorp. Feb. 17, 1810. It contains 2 churches, the Montgomery Academy, 3 gristmills, and a sawmill. Pop. 760. Walden, (p. v.) on Wall Kil, $\frac{3}{4}$ mi. S. of Montgomery, was incorp. April 9, 1855. It contains 3 churches, a shawl factory, satinet factory, and a manufactory of cutlery. Pop. 641. St. Andrews, (p. o.) in the N. E. part, contains 10 dwellings. Coldenham,⁶ near the E. line, is a hamlet. The earliest patent comprising land in this town was granted in 1709, to Henry Hileman. It was located at the mouth of Tin Brook, below Walden. It was settled by the proprietor and divided into lots in 1712. Lieut. Gov. Cadwallader Colden, the owner of a patent in this town, located at Coldenham in 1728.⁷ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed at Montgomery Village in 1732.⁸

MOUNT HOPE—was formed from Wadkill, Minisink, and Deepark, as "Calhoun," Feb. 15, 1825. Its name was changed March 14, 1833. It lies upon the N. border of the co., S. W. of the center. Its surface is a hilly and broken upland. The Shawangunk Mts. extend through the W. part; the highest summits are 1,400 to 1,800 ft. above tide. Shawangunk River flows N. E. through the center, and the Little Shawangunk along the E. border. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Otisville, (p. v.) near the W. border, contains 2 churches and 300 inhabitants. It is a station upon the Erie R. R. Mount Hope, (p. v.) 2 mi. S. E. of Otisville, contains 2 churches and 120 inhabitants; New Vernon, in the N. part, a church and 20 dwellings. Finchville is a hamlet, in the S. W. part. The precise date of the settlement of this town is unknown. James Finch settled some time previous to the Revolution.⁹ There are 6 churches in town.¹⁰

NEWBURGH¹¹—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies upon the Hudson, and is the N. E. corner town in the co. Its surface is a hilly and broken upland, the highest summits being 600 to 900 ft.

¹ A family of Smiths settled very early in the town, and from them the town was called "Smiths Clove." Among the early settlers were families of Millers, Galloways, Carpenters, Bulls, Dibbans, Wygants, Wards, Coltons, Nobles, Cunninghams, Shaghters, and Lamoreaux,—mostly English families from the Eastern States. The first iron works was that of Ward & Colton, erected in 1751 for the manufacture of anchors. It was situated in Warwick, just over the line from Monroe. In 1752 Abel Noble, from Penn., erected a forge in this town, near the Ward & Colton furnace. Here the first anchor was made, in 1753. Steel was made in 1755; and during the Revolution one of the chains thrown across the Hudson was manufactured here. It weighed 18c tons. During the Revolution, Claudius Smith, a merchant here, resided in this town. He was hung at Goshen, Jan. 22, 1779.

² 2 M. E. Presby., and Friends.

³ Named in honor of Gen. Richard Montgomery. In 1767 the town was called the "Wallkill Precinct," and in 1772 it was known as the "Banner Precinct." In 1782 its name was changed to the Montgomery Precinct.

⁴ Named from a family of Comforts who were early settlers in that region.

⁵ Name derived from Tinn and Broe, meaning small river.

⁶ Named from the family of Cadwallader Colden, who was an early proprietor.

⁷ J. James Miller settled on Wall Kil, 2 mi. S. of Montgomery, in 1725. Among the other early settlers were John Neely, Charles Booth, Wm. Eager, Fred. Sinsbaugh, and J. James Youngblood,—all of whom settled between 1730 and 1741. The E. part of the town was originally settled by Irish, and the valley of Wall Kil by Hollanders. The first store was kept by Alexander Colden, in 1742, and the first gristmill was built at Walden, by James Kuhl. In the fall of 1775 the people of Boston, by reason of the great scarcity of supplies and provisions, applied to this State for aid; and accordingly a public meeting was called, which convened in the town of "Haver," (now Montgomery.) In the mean time the friends of the mother country, always on the alert, had procured the services of a talented orator for the purpose of defeating the objects of the meeting. As no one could be found among the adherents of the cause of liberty who was able to speak in public, recourse was had to the Rev. Mr. Annan, of Newtown, who at first declined, but at length consented. A multitude were assembled on the occasion to hear a discussion upon a subject which was then the absorbing topic of the day. The discussion was continued for some time with firmness and ability on either side, until at length, to check a strife of angry words and to test the disposition of the assembly, Mr. Annan suddenly said, "As many as are in favor of assisting the people of Boston and the cause of liberty, follow me." The effect was electric. Immediately upon his leaving the house he beheld, to his utter astonishment, the whole multitude at his heels.—Eger's Hist. Orange Co., p. 636.

⁸ There are 7 churches in town; 2 Ref. Prot. D., 2 M. E., Prot. E., Presby., and Covenanters. The Ref. Prot. D. church, near Montgomery, has connected with it a farm of 75 acres, valued at $7,000, and a parsonage.

above the river. A series of bluffs 100 to 300 ft. in height extends along the river. The greater part of the hilly region is arable. The principal stream is Quassaie Creek,¹ forming a part of the boundary of New Windsor. It receives from the s. E. Fostertown and Glencys Creeks and Orange-Lake Outlet. Orange Lake,² in the w. part, covers an area of about 100 acres. Along its inlet is considerable marshy land. The soil is principally a clay and sandy loam. Newburgh, (p.v.) on the Hudson, near the s. e. corner of the town, was incorp. March 25, 1800. It lies upon a steep slope which rises from the river to the height of about 150 ft., and thence spreads out into a rolling region. Besides the co. buildings, it contains 14 churches,³ 5 banks, and several private schools and academies.⁴ It is largely engaged in the manufacture of printed cotton cloths, castings, beer, and a variety of other articles.⁵ The commercial interests of the place are also large and important.⁶ The village is supplied with water brought from Little Pond, 3 mi. s. w., by the Newburgh Waterworks Co. These works were erected in 1853, at a cost of $96,000. In the lower part of the village the water has a head of 250 ft. A steam ferry connects this place with Fishkill Landing. Pop. 9,256. Overlooking the Hudson, in the s. part of the village, stands an old stone mansion known as "Washington's Head Quarters."⁷ It is surrounded by a fine lawn of several acres; and the whole premises are owned and kept in order by the State.⁸ Savil is a p. o. about 5 mi. s. w. of Newburgh. Middle Hope, (p.v.) in the s. e. part of the town, contains 1 church and 12 houses; Fostertown, 4 mi. s. w. of Newburgh, a church and 10 houses; and Gardnertown, e. of Orange Lake, a church and 14 houses. Coldentam is a p. o. in the w. part. Balmville, 2 mi. n. of Newburgh, is a hamlet. The first settlement was made on the present site of the village of Newburgh, by Palatinates, in 1708.⁹ The first church (St. George's, P. E.) was formed about 1728; and the first minister was Rev. Mr. Charlton, sent out by the "London Society for the Propagation of the Gospel."¹⁰ An almshouse, for the support of the town poor, is situated upon a farm of 75 acres on the s. w. line of the village corporation of Newburgh. The buildings are of brick; and the cost of the whole establishment was about $30,000.¹¹

NEW WINDSOR¹²—was formed March 7, 1788. A part of Hamptonburgh was taken off in 1830. It lies upon the Hudson, n. of the center of the co. Its surface is a rolling and hilly upland. The slopes and the summits of the hills are usually smooth and arable. Snake Hill is a rough, rocky eminence in the n. e. part, 500 to 600 ft. above tide. The principal stream is Murderers Creek, flowing through the s. e. corner. Tin Brook flows s. along the w. border. Little Pond, in the n. e. part, supplies the Newburgh Waterworks. It is 250 ft. above tide. The soil is a gravelly and slaty loam. New Windsor, upon the Hudson, 2 mi. s. of Newburgh, contains 2 churches and about 75 dwellings. It is a steamboat landing, and the center of a large brick

² Formerly called "Moose Pond." It was afterward called "Machens Pond," from Capt. Machin, who erected upon its outlet a manufactory of copper coin.

⁵ Among the manufaturing establishments are 3 foundries, giving employment to 117 men, and turning out work to the amount of $145,000 annually; the Newburgh St. Ann Printing Cloth Manufactory, employing 325 hands, and producing $2,000,000 worth of goods per annum; a brewery, employing 50 men, and producing 35,000 bbls. of beer, and an agricultural implement factory, a car factory, a ear wheel factory, a piano forte factory, a soap factory, a machine shop, boiler works, and a barrel manufactory. In the aggregate giving employment to 209 hands, and producing annually goods to the amount of $2,400,000.

⁷ The main body of this house was erected by Jonathan Hasbrouck in 1750, and from this circumstance it was formerly known as "The Old Hasbrouck House." The kitchen on the s. was added in 1760, making it a long, narrow building. In 1770 an addition was made upon the whole length of the w. side, and a new roof was thrown over the whole. There are 8 rooms on the first floor, and from the principal room 8 doors opening to every part of the house, including the chambers and cellar. This building was used by Washington for his headquarters while the American army occupied this position upon the Hudson. It was purchased by the State in 1850, and is kept as nearly as possible in its original condition. The rooms and the grounds are filled with relics of the Revolution and monuments of the War of 1812 and the Mexican War. The walls of the bedroom occupied by Washington are covered with the letters of Washington, T. M. L. F. Vevins, and other dignitaries of the War of the Revolution, framed and gilded. Among the curiosities are the tables used by Washington and Lafayette in the campaign, which were stretched across the Hall, and the great variety of warlike implements. Near the w. end of the house is the grave of Joel Knapp, the last of Washington's Hessian guards; he died in Jan. 1806.

⁸ The "Newburgh Patent" was granted to the State by Michael Wagard, Heintz, John May, Charles May, John C. Corlett, Benjamin Mayhew, Jacob Wehr, John Wehr, John and Andrew Vail, John Palatin, and the Palatin Heintz, who a settlement, designated a site for a village, and named it Newburgh. How long they remained is not known, but it is supposed to have been a short time, as the settlement was removed by Gov. Clinton to Alexander's College, near Cortlandt. Edmund Conklin, Jr., William Ward, Philip Ward, John Truman, Jacob Ward, J. Johannes Ward, John Ward, John James Denton, Charles F. York, Michael D. D. W. Ward, Henry Smith, Burton A. and John and William M. D. It is supposed that these last named were from England. Some of the early settlers were of Dutch descent, and had names which denote originally from France. Of these last named are Hasbroucks, De motts, Shirts, De vissers, Foxells, De gey, De geyers, Hadenburghs, Seylers, T. W. L. and J. G. De geyers. The Hasbrouck name is certainly of Dutch origin. The first house was erected in 1742. Jonathan Hasbrouck, the first settler, died in 1757. A tract of 300 acres, called the "Old Dutch" on the s. line of Newburgh Village, was originally granted to the support of the gospel and a school.

⁹ Outside of Newburgh Village, there are 3 Dutch settlements; all M. E.

manufacture. Moodna (p. o.) contains a cotton factory, paper mill, and 10 dwellings. Mortonville, (p. o.,) in the s. e. part contains 1 church, a gristmill, and 6 dwellings. Little Britain, near the center, is a p. o. The first settlements were made in 1731, by several emigrants from Ireland, prominent among whom was Col. Charles Clinton, grandfather of De Witt Clinton.² The first church (Asso. Ref.) was formed at Little Britain, in 1760; Rev. Robert Annan was the first pastor.³

WALKILL—was formed March 7, 1788. A part of "Cathoon," now Mount Hope, was taken off in 1825, and a part of Hamptonburgh in 1830. It lies upon the s. w. border of the co., s. e. of the center. Its surface is a hilly and broken upland. The principal streams are Shawangunk River, forming the s. w. boundary, and Wall Kil, forming a part of the s. e. boundary. Monhagan Creek and several other streams are tributaries of these two. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Middletown, (p. v.,) in the s. part, was incorp. Feb. 10, 1848. Next to Newburgh, it is the largest village in the co. It contains 7 churches, the Walkill Academy, several private seminaries, 2 banks, 2 newspaper offices, and several manufacturing establishments.⁴ It is an important freight and milk station upon the Erie R. R.⁵ Pop. 1,873. Circleville, (p. v.,) 5 mi. s. of Middletown, contains 2 churches and 16 dwellings. Scotch Town, (p. v.,) 4 mi. s. e. of Middletown, contains 1 church and 20 dwellings. Howells Depot, (p. v.,) a station upon the r. r., 4 mi. s. w. of Middletown, contains a church and 15 dwellings. Mechanic Town, 2 mi. e. of Middletown, contains a woolen factory and 20 dwellings. Phillipsburgh and Rockville are hamlets. The first settlement was made by Wm. and Thomas Bull, sons of Wm. Bull, of Goshen, who located upon Wall Kil in 1767.⁶ There are 12 churches in town.⁷

WARWICK—was formed March 7, 1788. A part of Chester was taken off in 1845. It lies upon the line of N. J., in the extreme s. angle of the co. Its surface is mountainous in the s. and e. and broken and hilly in the s. and w. The principal mountain ranges are the Sterling, Rough, and Warwick Mts. in the s. e., and the Bellvale Mts. in the e.⁸ They are high, steep, and rocky, and have all the characteristics peculiar to a wild, mountain region. In the extreme w. part is a nearly level region, occupied by the Drowned Lands.⁹ Several eminences in the midst of these lands are denominational islands.¹⁰ The principal streams are Wall Kil, forming the w. boundary, Quaker Creek, forming the s. w. boundary, and the Wawayanda, or Warwick, and Pochuck Creeks. Greenwood Lake, upon the s. line, extends about 4 mi. into this town. The other principal bodies of water are Sterling, Wicklams, and Thompsons Ponds, near the e. border. The soil is light and unproductive upon the hills, and a gravelly and sandy loam in the valleys. Warwick, (p. v.,) on Wawayanda Creek, near the center of the town, contains 3 churches, the Warwick Institute, and 358 inhabitants. Florida, (p. v.,) in the s. part, contains 3 churches, the S. S. Seward Seminary,¹¹ and 45 dwellings; Amity, (p. v.,) in the w. part, 1 church and 30 dwellings; Edenville, (p. v.,) 2 mi. n. e. of Amity, a church and 24 dwellings; New Milford, (p. v.,) in the s. part, a church and 26 dwellings; Bellvale, (p. v.,) in the e., a church and 192 inhabitants; and Dutch Hollow, 2 mi. s. e. of Bellvale, a church and 15 dwellings. Sterling Works, in the extreme s. part, is a hamlet.¹² The precise date of the first settlement is unknown. Daniel Burt, from Conn., came into town in 1746.¹³ The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1764, and the second (Bap.) in 1766.¹⁴ Hon. Wm. H. Seward was born at the village of Florida.

² In 1732 or '33, families named Alsop, Ellison, Chambers, and Lawrence settled upon the present site of New Windsor Village. The headquarters of the American army were at this place at one time during the Revolution.

³ There are 6 churches in town; 3 M. E. Presb., Prot. E., and Asso. Ref.

⁴ The principal establishments are a carpet loom factory, file factory, grain cradle factory, hat factory, 2 sash and blind factories, and a foundry and machine shop. In the aggregate these factories employ about 300 hands, and in manufacture goods to the amount of $400,000 annually.

⁵ 2,500 gall. of milk are sent daily to N. Y. from the r. r. stations in this town.

⁷ 4 Presb., 3 Bap., 2 Cong., 2 M. E., and R. C.

⁸ The principal elevations in town are Hogback, Decker, One Pine, and Bulls Hills, in the e.; Bill and Coxecomb Hills, in the center; Long, Cedar, Pond, and Bill Whites Hills, in the s. e.;

Round, Rocky, and Chucks Hills, in the s.; Ponchuck Mt. and Green and Adneys Hills, in the w.; and Mts. Adam and Eve, and Round Hill, in the s. w.

⁹ These lands have mostly been drained and converted into the most valuable meadows.

¹⁰ Among these eminences are Pine, Merritt, Gardner, Black Walnut, Cranberry, and Fox Islands.

¹¹ This seminary was founded about 1845, by Judge S. S. Seward, father of Wm. H. Seward, who endowed it with a fund of $20,000.

¹³ Among the other early settlers were Thos. Willing, Daniel Whitney, Benj. Burt, John Vance, and David McCauley. The first mill was built by David Burt at Bellvale, in 1760. Many of the early settlers were Dutch, and others English, from Mass. and Conn.

¹⁴ There are 11 churches in town; 6 M. E., 3 Presb., Bap., and Ref. Prot. D.

WAWAYANDA¹—was formed from Minisink, Nov. 15, 1849. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling and hilly. The highest summit is Joe Gro Hill,² in the s. w. part. The Drowned Lands occupy a portion of the s. e. corner. The principal streams are Wall Kil, forming the s. e. boundary, Rutgers Creek, forming the s. w. boundary, Wawayanda Creek, in the w. part, and Monhagan Creek, in the s. e. corner. The soil is chiefly a clay and sandy loam, and is best adapted to pasturage.³ New Hampton, (p. v.) on Wall Kil, in the s. e. corner, contains a gristmill, sawmill, and 25 dwellings; Denton, 1 mi. s. w. of New Hampton, 1 church and 25 dwellings; Ridgebury, (p. v.) near the center, 2 churches and 30 dwellings; Slate Hill, (p. v.) 1 mi. w. of Ridgebury, 1 church and 25 dwellings; Centerville, in the w. part, 1 church and 15 dwellings; Millsburgh, (Wells Corner p. o.) 1 mi. s. of Centerville, on the line of Minisink, a grist and saw mill and 15 dwellings; and Gardnersville, in the s. part, on the line of Minisink, a gristmill, sawmill, and 15 dwellings. The first settlements are supposed to have been made previous to 1700.⁴ There are 5 churches in town; 3 Presb., M. E., and Bap.

¹ The name is said by some to be an Indian corruption of the English phrase "away over yonder."—Exp'r's Hist. Orange Co., pp. 432, 433.
² Named from the last Indian who had his cabin on the hill.
³ 1,500 gallons of milk are sent daily from Hart's to the N. A. market.
⁴ Among the early settlers were John Denton, Richard Carpenter, Isaac Dabson, and David and Peter Dabson. Isaac Dabson built a blockhouse as a protection against the Indians in 1759.

ORLEANS COUNTY.

This county was formed from Genesee, Nov. 11, 1824; Shelby was annexed from Genesee April 5, 1825. It lies on Lake Ontario, between Monroe and Niagara cos., centrally distant 232 mi. from Albany, and contains 405 sq. mi. Its surface is level or undulating, and, except in the extreme s. part, it has a gradual inclination toward the lake. It is divided into three distinct plateaus by the lake and mountain ridges,¹ which extend e. and w. through the co. nearly parallel to the lake shore. The lower plateau slopes slightly and uniformly upward from the lake shore to the lake ridge, a distance of 6 to 8 mi., where it attains an elevation of about 165 feet. This ridge is composed of sand and gravel, and its seaward side is covered with coarse gravel and water-worn pebbles, resembling the present lake beach.² It is elevated 20 to 30 feet above the lower plateau, to which it descends with a gentle inclination uniform in its whole extent. There is generally a similar slope upon its inland side; but in many places the level of the country is nearly and sometimes quite as high as that of the ridge. The ridge is 100 to 300 feet wide at the top, and nearly level. From the earliest settlement of the co. its summit has been used for a road. The second plateau is gently undulating, and 4 to 6 mi. wide, attaining an altitude of about 300 feet at the base of the mountain ridge. This ridge, entering from Niagara co., runs nearly e. through the towns of Shelby and Barre, and s. and e. through Clarendon. It preserves the character of a steep declivity in Clarendon and Shelby, but in Barre its ascent is gradual. The upper plateau is undulating, and from the mountain ridge southerly it gently rises for about 2 mi. to the culminating ridge, which is the highest land in the co. and nearly 450 feet above the lake. For about 2 mi. further the surface is quite level; and thence it gradually descends to the Tonawanda Swamp, on the s. border of the co. The principal streams are Oak Orchard,³ Johnsons,⁴ and Sandy Creeks, which take their rise in or near the Tonawanda Swamp and flow s. and e. to the lake. Their channels are deeply excavated; and upon them are numerous waterfalls and rapids.

The underlying rock of the s. part is the Medina sandstone; while the upper plateau rests upon a base of Niagara limestone. Along the ridge in Clarendon and on the banks of Oak Orchard Creek in Shelby are outcrops of this limestone. Hydraulic limestone has been obtained from both these localities, and quicklime is burned at various places along the ridge. The upper layers of the Medina sandstone afford an excellent material for building and flagging purposes, and several quarries have been opened at Medina and other places on the line of the canal. Elsewhere in the co. this rock is friable, and readily disintegrates upon exposure to the atmosphere. It separates at first into small, angular fragments, and then decomposes into a dark red, loamy clay. Numerous salt springs originate in this formation, from which salt was manufactured until, by the completion of the Erie Canal, they were brought into competition with the salines of Onondaga.⁵ The soil in the s. part of the co. is generally sandy; but it is everywhere modified by the underlying formation; and near the lake are several tracts in which clay predominates. In the s. it is a mixture of clay, sand, and lime, and the whole is well adapted to grain raising. The various branches of agriculture form the leading pursuits. Barley, oats, corn, beans, and potatoes are the principal crops,⁶ and considerable quantities of apples and other fruits are raised. A limited amount of manufactures is carried on within the co.

The county seat is located at Albion,⁷ on the Erie Canal, in the central part of the co. The

² The primitive character of this slope has become somewhat obliterated by cultivation.

³ So named from a fine grove of oaks formerly at its mouth.

⁴ Named after Sir Wm. Johnson, who, with his forces, encamped at its mouth one night when on his way to Fort Niagara in 1759.

⁶ Wheat was formerly the principal crop of this co.; but of late the ravages of the midge have been so extensive that its cultivation has been nearly abandoned.

⁷ Previous to the erection of the co. buildings at Albion, the courts were held at the house of Seth Bronson, in the village of Gaines. The commissioners appointed by the Legislature to locate the county seat were Philetus Swift, of Phelps, Ontario co., Vetry Bixbey, of Onondaga co., and J. Hathaway, of Cortland co. The site of the co. buildings was deeded to the supervisors by Nehemiah Ingersoll; and the courthouse was built in 1827. Gilbert Howell, of Edgeway, Elnu Mather, of Gaines, and Calvin Smith, of Barre, were the commissioners church, use is a fine building, situated in the midst of a park, near the center of the village. It is built of brick, and is surmounted by a tall metal spire to the ground. It contains three pulpits, superintended by three pastors, &c. The hall, situated just in front of the church, use is a common house, built of Medina sandstone. The county clerk's office is a small, one-story brick building, adjoining the church use. The parish use is located on a farm of 107 acres in the town of Barre, 3 miles from Albion. Its average number of inmates is 70, supported at a weekly cost of $1,000, each. The farm produces a revenue of about $700.

The works of internal improvement in the county are the Erie Canal, extending through the north near the center of the Town of the Swamp, Feeder, carrying the waters of the Spring, the Oak Orchard Creek and the canal, and the Railroad from Niagara Falls to the branch of the N. Y. Central.

Three weekly newspapers are now published in the county.

Long before the advent of the white settlers, was the hunting ground and probable residence of the Indians, and their centers of an extensive and long anterior to them, and by an entirely distinct race. The eastern part of the county, called the Chippewa tract and the Paleney Estate, and the remaining part of the county to the Hudson Purchase. There is a tradition that a Canadian, with his family, settled at the mouth of Oak Orchard Creek as early as 1712. His stay was of short duration, and his name has now been regarded as legendary. The first emigrant settlers were James and Wm. Walker, and others, who came from Canada by the way of the lake, and who located respectively at the mouths of Oak Orchard and James creeks, in the present town of Chippewa. A few others came in each year until 1812, when the government then utilized the ridge road was opened, in forming a road from the ridge road, and the grants continued to pour in rapidly and settle near the ridge road, until settlement was begun by the War of 1812. Upon the capture of Fort Niagara by the British in 1812, many of the settlers fled from their homes, but soon returned. After the return of peace, the settlers returned to their settlements, and continued to do so steadily and undisturbedly for several years. The settlers generally chose their sites in the immediate vicinity of the ridge road, and continued to do so until the completion of the Erie Canal, when the region farther east began rapidly to build up. Since that time steady progress has been made in every element of material prosperity, still the county has taken front rank among the best agricultural regions of the State.

BARRE—was formed from Galves, Mar. 10, 1818. It is the nucleus, wholly of the northern tier of towns, and is the largest town in the county. Its surface is unbroken, and lies on a high, underlaid by the Niagara limestone. The Town and the Swamp, carries the square Albion.

(p. v.) the county seat, was incorp. April 21, 1828. It is situated on the Erie Canal, in the n. part of the town, and is the principal station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. between Rochester and Lockport. It contains 5 churches, the Phipps Union Female Seminary,¹ the Albion Academy, a bank, 2 newspaper offices, and several manufactories.² Pop. 3,776. Barre Center, (p. o.) 4 mi. s. of Albion, contains 30 dwellings. Eagle Harbor lies partly in this town. South Barre (p. o.) and Jacksons Corners (West Barre p. o.) are hamlets. Rich's Corners is in the n. e. part. Settlement was commenced by Wm. McAllister, in 1811.³ The first church (Cong.) was organized Nov. 5, 1816, by Revs. Eleazar Fairbanks and Comfort Williams.⁴

CARLTON—was formed from Gaines and Ridgeway, April 13, 1822, as "Oak Orchard." Its name was changed in 1825. It lies on the lake shore, between Kendall and Yates, and is crossed in a s. e. direction by Oak Orchard and Johnsons Creeks. The surface is level, and the soil generally sandy. Salt water has been discovered near West Carlton.⁵ Carlton,⁶ (p. o.) East Carlton, (p. o.) West Carlton, (p. o.), Waterport, (p. o.) Keenyonville, Carlton Center, and Manilla are hamlets. Settlement was commenced in 1803, by two brothers, James and William Walsworth,—the former at the mouth of Oak Orchard Creek, the latter on Johnsons Creek. Matthew Dunham and his sons Matthew, James, and Charles, from N. Y. City, settled near Johnsons Creek in the fall of 1803.⁷ The first church (M. E.) was organized at West Carlton, about 1816.⁸

CLARENDON—was formed from Sweden, Monroe co., Feb. 23, 1821. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. The e. branch of Sandy Creek rises in the Tonawanda Swamp and flows s. Upon this stream are two waterfalls,—one at the village of Clarendon and the other in the n. part of the town. Along the line of the mountain ridge the surface is broken, and elsewhere it is gently rolling or level. The soil is a sandy loam; in the n. stony. Limestone for building purposes and hydraulic limestone have been obtained at Clarendon. Clarendon⁹ (p. v.) contains 2 churches, a limited number of manufactories,¹⁰ and about 30 dwellings. The first settlement was made in 1811, at the village of Clarendon, by Eldridge Farwell.¹¹ There are now 3 churches in town.¹²

GAINES¹³—was formed from Ridgeway, Feb. 14, 1816. Barre was taken off in 1818, and a part of Carlton in 1822. It is the central town in the co. It is crossed by Otter and Marsh Creeks, branches of the Oak Orchard, and by the w. branch of Sandy Creek. The lake ridge extends e. and w. through the center. The surface is level and the soil sandy. Eagle Harbor, (p. v.) on the Erie Canal, contains 2 churches, 2 flouring mills, and a large stove factory and cooperage. Pop. 639.—509 in Gaines and 130 in Barre. Gaines¹⁴ (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 342 inhabitants. East Gaines and West Gaines are p. offices; and Fairhaven and Gaines Basin, on the canal, are hamlets. The first settlement was made prior to 1809, by — Gilbert, Noah Burgess, Samuel Crippen, — Elliott, and Elijah Downer came in 1809.¹⁵ The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1816.¹⁶

² Flouring mills, furnaces, a woolen factory, a tannery, a cabinet ware manufactory, and a planing mill.

⁴ There are 7 churches in town; Presb., Bap., Prot. E., M. E., and B. C. at Albion, Cong. at Barre Center, and M. E. at Jacksons Corners.

⁵ Lyman Fuller, in digging a well, bored through a stratum of rock, and obtained salt water of such strength that 2 galls. yielded a pint of salt. The hole through the rock was plugged up, and fresh water came in from above.

⁶ Locally known as "Two Bridges."

⁷ In 1804, Elijah Hunt, Henry Lovell, Moses Root, Elijah Brown, and Job Shapman settled in this town. The first death in town, unless it was that of a member of the Canadian family mentioned on page —, was that of a deserter from Fort Niagara, who was drowned in attempting to cross Johnsons Creek, about 1807. The first death of an actual settler was that of Elijah Brown, May 7, 1805. The first births were those of a pair of twins, children of James Walsworth, in 1806; and the first marriage, that of Wm. Carter and Amy Hunt, in 1804. The first gristmill was built on Johnsons Creek, by Matthew Dunham, in 1806; and the first store was opened in 1816, at West Carlton, by Geo. Kueck. The first school was taught by Peleg Helms, in the winter of 1810-11.

⁸ There are now 5 churches in town; Bap. and Presb. at Carlton, M. E. at West Carlton, Bap. at East Carlton, and M. E. at Keenyonville. The first religious services in town were conducted by "Old Mr. Steele," a M. E. preacher from Canada, some time prior to 1810. ⁹ Formerly known as "Farwells Mills."

¹⁰ 2 sawmills, a gristmill, and a birch.

¹¹ Beng. Thomas, Benajah Wordon, Elisha Huntly, John Cook, John Stephens, David Church, and Chauncey Robinson were among the earliest settlers. Eldridge Farwell built the first sawmill, on Sandy Creek, in 1811, and the first gristmill, in 1813. The first store was kept by Hiram Frisbee, in 1821; and the first school was taught by Mrs. Amanda Bille.

¹² M. E. and Unit. at Clarendon, and a Christian church about 13 mi. w. of Clarendon.

¹³ Named in honor of Gen. E. P. Gaines, through the instrumentality of Wm. J. Babbitt.

¹⁴ Incorp. by the Legislature in 1832, but never organized under the act.

¹⁵ Among the early settlers were Reuben Rowley, Harry Wilcox, Joseph and Aaron Adams, Robert and Cotton Leach, Newbury Chafey, Davy Sprague, Samuel Rosier, Wm. Burlingame, Walter Fairfield, Eversing Bailey, John Proctor, and James Mather. The first death was that of — Gilbert, who died in or before 1809. His wife and niece, Amy Scott, remained, and wintered a yoke of oxen and several cows upon browse cut by themselves. The first birth was that of Samuel Crippen, jr., in 1810; and the first marriage, that of Cyrus Daniels and Elizabeth Freeman, July 1, 1812. The first inn was kept by Wm. Sibley, in 1811; and the first store, by Wm. Perry, in 1815. Orio Gleason taught the first school, in the winter of 1813-14. H. M. Drake built the first sawmill, in 1813; and the first gristmill was built by Jonathan Gates, in 1822.

¹⁶ There are 6 churches in town; M. E. and Wes. Meth. at

KENDALL¹—was taken from Murray, April 7, 1837. It lies on the lake shore, in the e. part of the co., and is crossed by Bald Eagle Creek near the center, and Sandy Creek in the s. part. Its surface is level; and the soil, with the exception of a belt of clay across the s. part, is a sandy loam. There are several small salt springs in the town. Kendall (p.v.) contains 4 churches and about 25 dwellings. West Kendall (p.o.) and Kendall Mills (p.o.) are hamlets. The first settlement was made in 1812, by Samuel Bates, from Chittenden co., Vt.² The first religious service, conducted by Elder Stephen Randall, was held in the spring of 1816.³

MURRAY—was formed from "Northampton," (now Gates, Monroe co.,) April 8, 1808. Sweden was taken off in 1813, Clarkson in 1819, and Kendall in 1837. It lies on the e. border of the co., between Clarendon and Kendall, and is crossed by Sandy Creek, the two branches of which unite at Murray, in the n. part of the town. This stream has worn a deep channel; at Holley it is about 75 feet below the level of the land. The embankment over which the N. Y. C. R. R. crosses the gulf is one of the largest on the line of that road. The surface is generally level, except in the s. w. part, where it is rolling. The soil is mostly a sandy loam; in some parts, however, it is clayey. Near Holley are two sulphur and several salt springs, at the latter of which salt was manufactured previous to the opening of the canal. The Medina sandstone approaches near the surface; and quarries have been opened in the neighborhood of Hulberton.⁴ Holley,⁵ (p.v.) incorp. Sept. 3, 1850, a station on the N. Y. C. R. R., is situated in the s. part of the town, on the Erie Canal. It contains 2 churches, the Holley Academy, and several manufacturing establishments.⁷ Pop. 614. Hulberton (p.v.) contains 278 inhabitants; and Hindsburgh (p.v.) 197. Murray⁸ (p.o.) and Brockville are hamlets. Murray Depot is a r. r. station. The first settlement was made by Epaphras Mattison, prior to 1809.⁹ The first church (Cong.) was formed Jan. 5, 1819, by Rev. John F. Bliss.¹⁰

RIDGEWAY¹¹—was formed from Batavia, (Genesee co.,) June 8, 1812. Gaines was taken off in 1816, Shelby in 1818, and Yates and a part of Carlton in 1822. It lies on the w. border of the co., between Shelby and Yates, and is crossed by Johnsons and Oak Orchard Creeks. Upon the latter, at Medina, is a waterfall about 30 feet high; and at Jeddo and Oak Orchard, where the streams cross the lake ridge, are low waterfalls. The surface is generally level, and the soil a sandy loam. Some of the most important of the salt springs of this co. are in this town.¹² Within and near the village of Medina are extensive quarries; and large quantities of building, flagging, and paving stone are sent to Rochester, Buffalo, and other places on the canal.¹³ Medina, (p.v.) incorp. March 30, 1832, lies on the Erie Canal, mostly within this town. It is an important station on the N. Y. C. R. R., and is connected with Ridgeway on the n. and Shelby Center on the s. by the Medina & Alabama Plank Road. It contains 5 churches, an academy,¹⁴ a newspaper office, and several manufactories.¹⁵ Pop. in 1855, 2,104,—in Ridgeway 1,915, in Shelby 189. Knowlesville,¹⁶ (p.v.), a station on the N. Y. C. R. R., situated in the n. part of the town, on the Erie Canal, contains 3 churches and several manufactories.¹⁷ Pop. 490. Oak Orchard¹⁸ (p.v.) has a pop. of 136; Jeddo (p.v.) of 124; and Ridgeway (p.v.) of 61. North Ridgeway is a p.o. The first settlement was made by Ezra D. Barnes, from De Ruyter, Eagle Harbor, Cong. and Presb. at Gaines, Univ. at Fairhaven, and Free Will Bapt. at East Gaines.

² Near the mouth of Bald Eagle Creek, the Lake makes rapid encroachments upon the land, and whole fields have been swept away.

⁴ There are 5 churches in town; Emv., Ep., Presb., and M. E. at Kendall, and M. E. at West Kendall.

⁶ Named in honor of Myron Holley, one of the first canal commissioners.

⁷ A grist-mill, a tannery, a furnace and plow factory, and a cabinet ware manufactory.

⁸ Locally known as "Sandy Creek."

1814; and the first grist-mill was built by Perry & Leno, in 1816. Fanny Ferguson taught the first school, in the summer of 1814.

¹⁰ There are 4 churches in town; Ep. and Presb. at Holley, M. E. at Hulberton, and Bap. in w. part of town.

¹¹ So named from the ridge way or road formed by the Lake ridge running e. and w. through the town.

¹⁶ Named after Gen. A. Knowles, one of the earliest settlers.

¹⁷ A steam sawmill, steam grist-mill, tannery, and plaster mill.

¹⁸ At Oak Orchard is a distillery.

...formed from Ridgeway, March 6, 1816. It is the s. w. corner co. Johnsons Creek and a branch of the Oak Orchard take their rise in this town, an Orchard crosses it through the center. Upon the latter stream, at Shelby Center, is a valuable water-power. The surface is undulating; and the soil a mixture of sand, clay. The Tonawanda Swamp occupies the s. part. Shelby⁴ (Shelby Center p. o.) contains several manufactories;⁵ Millville (p. v.) contains 3 churches, the Millville Academy about 45 dwellings. East Shelby (p. o.) and Shelby Basin (p. o.) are hamlets; Shelby is a p. office. Medina is partly in this town. The remains of Indian fort have been discovered in this town. The first settlement was made by Alex. Coon, from co., in 1810.⁶ The first church (Bap.) was formed July 25, 1818.⁷

YATES⁸—was formed from Ridgeway, April 17, 1822, as “Northton;” its name was the following year. It is the most westerly town upon the lake shore. It is crossed by Creek and two smaller streams. Marsh Creek and Four Mile Creek have their whole course in this town. The surface is level, except along Johnsons Creek, where it is undulating; the s. is a sandy loam, and along the lake clayey. Lyndonville (p. v.) contains 3 churches and several manufactories. Pop. 242. Yates Center (Yates p. o.) contains 1 church and an Academy. Pop. 191. County Line (p. o.) is on the w. line of the town. George from Adams, Jefferson co., settled in this town in 1809, and John Eaton, from Pennsylvania, in 1810. There are now 6 churches in town.¹⁰

¹ Eli More, Israel Douglas, Dyer Sprague, Otis Turner, Dr. Wm. White, David Hooker, and S. B. Murdock were among the first settlers. The first sawmill was built by the Holland Land Co., as early as 1805, to encourage settlement. The first gristmill was built by Otis Turner and Dr. White, in 1812; and the first tavern was opened in 1810, by Eli More. Lucy Judson taught the first school.

² There are now 9 churches in town; Presb. E. Bap., M. E., Presb., and R. C. at Medina, Presb., M. E., and Bap. at Knowlesville, and Univ. at Ridgeway. ³ Named in honor of Gov. Shelby.

⁵ 2 Flouring and grist mills, 1 paper mill, 1 tannery, 1 carding mill, and 2 sawmills.

⁶ Eleazar Frary, Henry and Robert Garter, David Demaria, Joseph Elliott, and Wm. Bennett were among the earliest settlers. The first birth was that of Asa Coon, Feb. 14, 1811; and the first death, that of Wm. Bennett, Oct. 4, 1811. A sawmill was built by Joseph Elliott, on Oak Creek, in 1812, and the first gristmill, in 1813. The first school was taught by David Timmerman, in 1816; and the first store by Groff, in 1818. Cornelius Ashton taught the first winter of 1815-16.

⁷ There are 9 churches in town; 4 M. E., 1 P. Christian, 1 Bap., and 1 F. W. Bap.

⁸ Named in honor of Gov. Yates.

⁹ The first marriage in town was that of Geo. and Sally Covert, in 1817; and the first death, that of Heuseman, sc., in Dec. 1813. The first iron was tapped, at Yates Center, in 1825; and the first school at High, in 1824. The first school was taught by Wm. Bennett, in 1819.

OSWEGO COUNTY.

This county was formed from Oneida and Ontario, Mar. 1, 1816.¹ It is situated upon the s. e. extremity of Lake Ontario, centrally distant 135 mi. from Albany, and contains an area of 1,938 sq. mi. Its surface is generally level or gently undulating. A series of bluffs 20 to 40 feet high border immediately upon the lake; and from their tops the land stretches out in long and gradual slopes, occasionally broken by the valleys of the river courses. The general inclination is northerly, as indicated by the drainage, though the summits of the ridges within half a mi. of the lake have about the same altitude as those upon the s. border of the co. A low ridge extending in an easterly and westerly direction from 3 to 5 mi. s. of Oneida Lake, forms the watershed between Lakes

Ontario and Oneida. In the e. part of the co. this ridge turns northward and unites with the system of highlands which separates Lake Ontario and the valley of Black River. The highest point of this range, in the town of Redfield, is 1,200 to 1,500 feet above tide.

The rocks of this co. consist of the Lorraine shales, in the extreme s. part, on the lake; the gray sandstone,² extending from the s. e. corner to near the center, its southern limits being marked by a line drawn due e. from Oswego River about 1 mi. from its mouth; the Medina or red sandstone, bordering on the last, and comprising more than one-third of the area of the co.; and the Clinton group of shales, slate, and sandstone, occupying the extreme s. border. These rocks are exposed only in the s. e. part and along the river courses, being generally covered with a thick mass of drift and alluvial deposits, consisting of sand, gravel, and clay. The gray sandstone is hard and compact, and is little affected by the action of the elements; hence the disintegration is slight, and the soil upon it is thin and poor. The Lorraine shales are easily disintegrated, and form the basis of the strongest and richest soils in the co. The red sandstone crops out on the banks of all the streams which flow through the region which it occupies. It is extensively quarried for building stone, though it is more easily acted upon by the elements than the gray sandstone. Weak brine springs are found associated with this red sandstone throughout the co. The Clinton group, occupying the entire s. border, consists of parallel layers or beds of shale and red and gray sandstone. This is the same geological formation in which is found the principal iron ore beds of Penn. and Oneida co.; and throughout the formation in this co. iron ore is found.

The drainage of the w. and s. parts of the co. is principally through Oswego River, and of the s. and e. portions through Salmon River and a great number of smaller streams that flow directly into the lake. Oswego River is formed by the junction of Seneca and Oneida Rivers at Three River Point. It is 23 mi. in length, and falls 128 feet in its course, in several distinct falls, one of which furnishes an excellent water-power. Oneida River, forming the outlet of Oneida Lake, is 18 mi. in length, and falls about 12½ feet in its course. Salmon River and other streams flowing into the e. extremity of the lake all have successions of rapids and cascades, which furnish to that part of the co. an abundance of water-power. The principal bodies of water are Lakes Ontario and Oneida. The former, constituting the s. w. boundary, presents an almost unbroken coast line for a distance of 40 mi. within the limits of the co. Little Sandy Pond, in the town of Sandy Creek, is the only considerable indentation. The mouth of Oswego River furnishes a valuable harbor, the only one of importance in the co. Oneida Lake, constituting a portion of the s. boundary, is 14½ feet above Lake Ontario.³ It is one link in the chain of the internal water communication of the State. A considerable portion of the land in its immediate vicinity is marshy. Iron ore beds and a fine quartz sand, used in the manufacture of glass, are found upon its s. shores. The s. l. sand in the shale and sandstone region has already been noticed. The drift and alluvial deposits which cover the greater portion of the co. furnish a great variety of soil. The sandy portions are light and weak, while the clayey portions are hard, tough, and unyielding in many places. Where these are mixed, a rich, deep soil is the result. Along the e. border of the co. are great quantities of limestone and lime, which essentially modify the soil of that region. The marshes are generally composed of beds of black muck and other vegetable matter, and form the richest kind of natural meadow when drained and cultivated.

² This gray sandstone is also known as St. Lawrence sandstone.

³ This height is the same as that of the St. Lawrence Lake, which is 14½ feet above Lake Ontario.

Agriculture, manufactures, and commerce about equally engage the attention of the people. Stock raising and dairying are the principal branches of agriculture; spring grains and wool are also extensively produced.¹ The commerce is mostly concentrated at Oswego City, and is carried on by means of the lake, the Oswego Canal, and the R. R. The manufactures consist of flour, lumber, barrels,² starch, and a variety of other articles. The amount of flour annually manufactured is greater than in any other co. in the State. The principal mills are at Oswego City, Fulton, and vicinity.

The Oswego Canal, connecting Lake Ontario with the Erie Canal at Syracuse, is 38 mi. long, and for most of the distance is formed by the slackwater navigation of Oswego River. Oneida Lake and River also form a part of the internal navigable waters of the State, connecting with the Oswego Canal at Three River Point and with the Erie Canal at Higginsville. The Oswego & Syracuse R. R. connects with the New York Central R. R. at Syracuse. The Watertown & Rome R. R. enters the co. in the N. E. corner, and passes through Williamstown, Albion, Richland, and Sandy Creek.

This co. is divided into two jury districts,³ the courts being held respectively at Pulaski Village and Oswego City.⁴ At the former place a brick building, including a courthouse and jail, was erected in 1820, and at the latter a wood courthouse about the same time.⁵ A stone jail was erected in the city in 1850, and a fireproof co. clerk's office in 1851.⁶ The co. poorhouse is located upon a farm of 60 acres in the town of Mexico. It is an old building, and is poorly adapted to its purpose. The average number of inmates is about 50. An asylum for insane paupers is in process of erection adjacent to the poorhouse. The Oswego Orphan Asylum, located at Oswego City, is in part a co. institution. All the children of the inmates of the poorhouse between the ages of 4 and 6 years are supported at the Orphan Asylum at the co. expense.⁷

Two daily and 6 weekly papers are published in the co.⁸

² Barrels to the amount of 1,500,000 are annually manufactured for the Oswego flour mills and the Syracuse salt works.

⁵ The city soon outgrew the first courthouse, and the courts for many years were held in the city hall. They are now held in Mead's Hall, on E. Bridge St. The old courthouse for several years was used as a schoolhouse; but recently it has been removed, and converted into a Sunday school chapel for the Church of the Evangelists, where 500 children receive religious instruction. At their last annual meeting the Board of Supervisors authorized the raising and appropriation $20,000 for the erection of a new courthouse in the city, on the E. public square; and the building is now being constructed of Onondaga limestone.

⁸ The American Farmer, the first newspaper of the co., was issued at Oswego some time before 1807.

The Oswego Gazette was started at Oswego in 1817 by A. Beckham, and continued 2 years.

The Oswego Palladium was commenced by John H. Lord and Theophilus Abbey in 1819. It subsequently passed into the hands of Mr. Lord, and was continued by him until 1830. John Carpenter then became the proprietor, and changed its name to

The Oswego Palladium and Republican Chronicle, and continued it until 1845, when it was sold to B. Brockway, who again changed it to

The Oswego Palladium. In 1851 he transferred it to a company, by whom it was sold in 1853 to Dudley Furling, the present editor, who sold his interest, in July, 1854 to T. P. Ottaway, the present publisher.

The Oswego Daily Palladium has been issued in connection with the weekly since 1850.

The Oswego Republican was established March 22, 1825, by Wm. W. Abney. In 1827 it passed into the hands of Samuel Osgood, and was issued a short time as

The Oswego Gazette and Advertiser. In 1828 it was sold to Wm. C. Slope, who published it as

The Oswego Advertiser until 1829. It then passed into the hands of the late Dr. Burdell, of Cunningham, notoriety, who changed its name to

The Freeman's Herald, and continued it 1 year. It was then suspended for 2 years, and revived in 1832 by John Q. Adams, by whom it was published as

The National Republican 1 year, and was then discontinued. The Oswego Democratic Growth was published a short time in 1830 by James Cochran.

The Oswego Free Press was published by Richard Oliphant from 1830 until 1834, and by Geo. G. Foster as

The Oswego Democrat until 1835, when it was discontinued.

The Oswego Observer was started in Feb. 1835, by Bailey & Hawks, and continued until the latter part of 1836.

The Commercial Herald was published at Oswego by Hull & Henry from 1837 to 1843.

The Oswego Patriot was published at Oswego during the Patriot War of 1838-39 by John Fanner and John Cochran, member of the 25th and 30th Congress from the 6th district, (City of New York).

The Oswego County Whig was founded in 1838 by Richard Oliphant, and sold to Daniel Ayer in 1844. In 1847 C. D. Brigham became proprietor, and changed its name to

The Oswego Commercial Times. In Nov. 1848, James N. Brown became the publisher; and in Feb. 1854, he was succeeded by Winchester & Ferguson, by whom the Oswego Journal was purchased and united with it, and the combined paper was issued as

The Weekly Times and Journal. In 1857 it was changed to The Oswego Times, under which name it is still published by J. Tarbell.

The Oswego Daily Advertiser, the first daily in the co., was issued in 1845 in connection with The Whig, and was continued until 1847, when its name was changed to

The Oswego Daily Commercial Times. It was published in connection with The Commercial Times until 1854, when it was changed to

The Oswego Times and Journal. In 1857 it was changed again to

The Oswego Daily Times, and is still issued by J. Tarbell.

The People's Journal was started at Oswego in March, 1849, by O'Leary & Dean, and the next year it was sold to L. A. Winchester. In 1851 it passed into the hands of Sumner & Poncher, who started

The Oswego Daily News in connection with it. The following year L. A. Winchester again became proprietor, and changed the name of the daily to

The Oswego Daily Journal. In 1854 the two papers were united with the Daily and Weekly Times.

The Pulaski Banner was commenced in April, 1850, at Pulaski, and published by Nathan Randall until 1832; by A. A. Mathewson and G. G. Foster until 1837; and by James Godd until 1831, when it was suspended. In 1836 it again appeared, as

The portion of the co. of Oswego lying near the mouth of the river was discovered by the French Jesuits, who established missions here for the conversion of the Iroquois.¹ The French had previously explored the St. Lawrence; and in 1615 Champlain, in an expedition against the Onondagas, passed through the e. part of the co. In 1700 the English explored the country occupied by the Five Nations as far w. as Oswego; and in 1722 a trading house was built here under the direction of the N. Y. colonial government. From that period considerable trade was carried on by the English between Oswego and Albany through Oswego River, Oneida River and Lake Wood Creek, and the Mohawk.² In 1727 the English built a fort on the w. bank of the river, near its mouth.³ The French, claiming this whole territory, remonstrated against the action of the English, and several times planned expeditions to destroy the fortifications, but did not carry them into effect. Upon the commencement of the "Old French War" of 1756, Fort Ontario was posted on the e. bank of the river; and another fort was built upon the summit of the w. ridge in 1755. In the summer of 1756, 5,000 French under Montcalm, with a heavy train of artillery, consisting of 30 guns of large caliber, crossed the lake from Fort Frontenac, now Kingston, and appeared before this place. The forts were invested Aug. 11, and, after 3 days' hard fighting, they were surrendered on the 14th.⁴ The victors demolished the forts, burned the English vessels, and retired. In 1758, Col. Bradstreet, with 3,350 men, crossed the lake from this place and reduced Fort Frontenac. After destroying the fortifications and securing the military stores and vessels, he returned to Oswego and rebuilt the forts there. Fort Ontario was greatly enlarged, and built in the most substantial manner. In the summer of 1760, the powerful army of Lord Amherst embarked here on an expedition down the St. Lawrence. From this time Oswego became the most important military station upon the western frontier. During the Revolution it was strongly garrisoned, and formed the headquarters of many of the marauding parties that desolated the frontier settlements. It remained in possession of the British until 1796, when it was surrendered under the provisions of Jay's treaty.

In 1790, George Seriba, a merchant of N. Y. City, and a German by birth, purchased 500,000 acres of land lying between Lakes Oneida and Ontario, for the sum of $80,000.⁵ This purchase, known as "Seriba's Patent," was bounded on the e. by Fish Creek and on the w. by Oswego River, and embraced 14 towns in Oswego co. and 4 in Oneida. In 1794, Mr. Seriba caused a settlement to be made and a sawmill built on the shore of Oneida Lake, to which he gave the name of "Rosenthal,"—now Constantia. In 1795 he built a gristmill—the first in the co.—and several other buildings at the same place. During the same year his patent was surveyed and divided into townships and subdivided into lots.⁶ About the same time he commenced a settlement at the mouth of Little Salmon Creek, on the shore of Lake Ontario, 12 mi. S. E. of Oswego, which he called

The Patriot's Advocate, and was published by Daniel Ayer until 1838. It was then sold to ——— DeKunson and united with the Port Ontario Aurora, the united papers taking the name of

The Advocate and Aurora. The name, Aurora, was dropped in 1840, when the Advocate again passed into the hands of Daniel Ayer, and was discontinued in 1842.

The Patriot's Observer was started in 1843 by W. W. Adams. In 1847 it passed into the hands of A. A. Matthews, and was changed to

The Biblical Observer. In 1850 it was sold to Joseph Hatch, who changed its title to

The Pulaski Democrat. In 1856 it passed into the hands of ——— Miller, its present publisher.

The Falls Observer was started in Nov. 1857, by Thomas Johnson. In 1849 it was sold to Isaac S. Clark and John Thompson, who gave it the name of the Den Feller. It was discontinued the following year, and succeeded by

The Weekly Dispatch, published by R. C. Horton about 1 year.

The Falls Sentinel was started in 1841, by N. B. Northrop. In 1842 it was united with the Mirror.

The Falls Mirror was established Aug. 29, 1842, by Daniel Ayer. It was soon afterwards united with the Sun and ceased to exist.

The Falls Sun and Mirror. In Sept. 1844, it was sold to Samuel Munroe, and soon afterwards discontinued. It was succeeded by

The Fulton Patriot. M. C. Hough, John A. Place, and T. S. Brigham were successively interested in its publication. The latter was succeeded by R. K. Suddard, its present publisher.

The Oswego County Gazette, commenced at Fulton in 1843 by G. E. Williams, was merged in The Fulton Patriot in 1858.

The Port Ontario Aurora was published by ——— Van Cleave and subsequently by ——— DeKunson from 1847 to 1850, when it was united with The Pulaski Advocate.

The Oswego County Democrat was started at Mexico in 1828 by Thomas Messenger. It was afterwards styled

The Messenger, and was discontinued in 1839.

The Phoenix Gazette, started at Phoenix in 1855, was published by Jerome Duke, and afterwards by G. E. Williams until 1872, when it was merged with The Falls Observer.

The Phoenix Reporter was established in 1824, and in 1841 it was sold to James H. Fish, and the next year he gave it the name of

The Phoenix Banner. In 1852 it was published last by ———. The Aurora in Oswego and Oneida Counties was suspended in 1855, and in 1857 was revived by Mary Frances Tucker, and called

The American Banner and Reporter. In 1861 it changed its name, and it was sold to Levi Merrill, by whom it was published as

The American Banner until 1867. After being suspended by Merrill, it was revived in 1868, and published by

The Phank Reporter, by John W. Jones, by whom it is still published.

1 There is a tradition that the first vessel of any kind to pass here at a very early period, was a canoe, the pilots of that period being ignorant of the nature of the falls.

2 There were several parties of Indians, and in the fall of the streams, and across them, were the Mohawks.

3 Not a single trace of this fort remains at present.

4 This fort stood at the junction of West and Van Buren Streets.

5 The French built 5000 acres of land near the falls, and during the late summer and early fall of 1756, they garrisoned the place with 2000 soldiers, 2000 men of the English army.

6 This grant was 4000 acres, and the 23 lots of 100 acres each, in this grant, the State made no claim, and the territory at the mouth of the river, within the limits of the State, and also at the falls in the State of Pennsylvania.

7 This territory was 1000 acres, and in 1827, at an earlier date, one British trader, Sir James Patton, on the w. River, was jointly purchased by George Alexander Hamilton, John Laurin, and John Ballou. Sixty-four grants were also made along the river, and the 1000 acres for the 100 grants were purchased by 83 proprietors, British and others.

8 This survey and subdivision was made by Benjamin Wright, whom 17000 acres of the 100000 in Berne Co. of Ontario, on which the town of Seneca's Fall, is now built, and

"Vera Cruz,"¹ (now Texas.) He here built a saw and grist mill, store, and other buildings, and commenced an active trade on the lake; and for some years the place bid fair to become a formidable rival of Oswego, and the most important commercial station upon the lake. A few other settlements were made at other points in the co., principally under the auspices of Mr. Scriba, previous to 1800; but immigration did not begin to flow in rapidly until a few years later. The lands of Mr. Scriba were divided and sold to a great number of different parties; and while his exertions and expenditures were of great service to the first settlers, they proved extremely unprofitable to himself.² In common with all the frontier settlements, the growth of this region was seriously retarded by the War of 1812. Oswego Village became the theater of stirring military events; and on the 5th of May, 1814, it was taken by the British.³ At the return of peace, immigration again flowed in, and the subsequent history has been one of steady and continuous progress. The opening of the Erie and Oswego Canals, in this State, and of the Welland Canal, in Canada, greatly increased the commercial importance of the city and stimulated the manufacturing interests throughout the co.

ALBION—was taken from Richland, March 24, 1825. It is an interior town, lying e. of the center of the co. Its surface is level or gently undulating. The summits of the ridges are 50 to 100 feet above the valleys, and the highest point in town is 392 feet above Lake Ontario. The lowlands are wet and in some places marshy. Salmon River flows through the s. part.⁴ In the s. e. part are 2 or 3 small ponds. The soil consists of deposits of sand and gravel, and is of medium quality. Drift deposits cover the whole surface, except along the river courses, where the underlying rocks crop out. Much of the s. part of the town is yet unsettled. Considerable manufacturing is carried on.⁵ Sand Bank, (p. v.) on Salmon River, is a station on the Watertown & Rome R. R., midway between the two places. It contains 1 church, a hotel, 4 stores, 2 tanneries, 5 sawmills, and a flouring mill. Pop. 313. Pineville, (Salmon River p. o.,) a station on the W. & R. R. R., situated on Salmon River, contains 1 church, an inn, a store, a sawmill, and a large tannery. Pop. 144. New Centerville, (p. o.,) a station on the W. & R. R. R. Dug Way, (p. o.,) and South Albion (p. o.) are hamlets. Settlement was commenced in 1812, by Cary Burdick, of Williamstown, on Lot 29, and Peter Henderson, at Sand Bank.⁶ There are 4 churches in town.⁷

AMBOY—was formed from Williamstown, March 25, 1830. It lies upon the e. border of the co., s. of the center. The surface is rolling and has a general southerly inclination. Its highest point is about 450 feet above Lake Ontario. It is drained principally by Fish Creek and other small tributaries of Oneida Lake. In the s. and w. parts are numerous small lakes and ponds, the principal of which are Painter Lake, North and South Ponds. The s. half of the town is in the region of the gray sandstone, and the s. half in that of the red or Medina sandstone. The soil is principally a sandy or gravelly loam. Amboy Center (p. v.) contains 13 houses; West ships of Scriba's Patent, like those of Macomb's Purchase, received names from the proprietors that are known only in deeds; viz.—

1. Fulla Ava, Lee, and Annsville.
2. Munden Lee and Rome.

17. Fredericksburgh Scriba and Oswego City.
18. Oswego Scriba and Oswego.
19. Vera Cruz New Haven.
20. Mexico Mexico.
21. Richland Richland.
22. Mikmer Albion.
23. Strasburgh Parish.
24. Erlang Schreppel.

The townships of the Boylston Tract in this co. are,—

1. Campania Boylston.
2. Arcadia Redfield, (once Greenleaf.)
3. Ireland Sandy Creek and Richland.
4. Longfarms Orwell.
5. Redfield Redfield.

Richland appears to be uncertain, or this name has been applied to two surveys.

¹ Vera Cruz was laid out into city lots by Mr. Wright, who was an agent of Scriba, and considerable improvements were made. A 4 rod highway was cut from Rotterdam to Vera Cruz, a distance of 20 mi., from lake to lake. In 1798 a schooner was built there by Mr. Scriba's agent, which was engaged in the trade between Vera Cruz and the Canadian port of Kingston. It is said that in 1804 more merchandise was sold there than at Oswego or Utica; and in the imagination of many persons Vera Cruz was destined to command the trade of Canada and the West. But, by a series of disasters on the lake, a large portion of the male residents were lost to the infant settlement; and the restrictive policy of Mr. Jefferson's administration, followed by the War of 1812, extinguished the flattering prospects of Vera Cruz. The events and the action of half a century have nearly obliterated all traces of the once promising city.

² At the time of the purchase Mr. Scriba's fortune was estimated at $1,500,000; but the whole of it became swallowed up in his efforts to promote the interests of the infant settlements; and he died Aug. 14, 1830, at the age of 84, a poor man.

⁴ Before the dams were built upon this river, great numbers of salmon were annually taken.

Amboy (p.v.) 20; and Carterville (p.v.) 12. Joseph Perkins, from Conn., was the first settler, in 1805.¹ There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Bap., both located at Amboy Center.

BOYLSTON²—was formed from Orwell, Feb. 7, 1828. It lies upon the s. border of the co., e. of the center. Its surface is rolling in the center and e., and moderately hilly in the w. It has a westerly inclination, and its highest points are 700 to 800 feet above tide. The soil in the s. and w. parts is a productive, gravelly loam, the underlying rock being the Lorraine shale. The s. e. corner of the town extends into the gray limestone region, and the soil is light and thin. Boylston (p.o.) is in the s. w. part. The first settlement was made in 1810, on Lots 2 and 3, by John Wort and Michael Sweetman, both from Canajoharie.³ Meetings for religious worship are held in the town by the Episcopal Methodists and the Wesleyan Methodists.

CONSTANTIA⁴—was formed from Mexico, April 8, 1808. Hastings was taken off in 1825, and West Monroe in 1839. It lies upon the s. shore of Oneida Lake, in the s. e. corner of the co. The surface is nearly level, and is slightly inclined toward the s. The principal streams are Scriba and Black Creeks, flowing into Oneida Lake. Iron ore is found in the Clinton group of rocks, which extend through the s. part. The soil consists of clay, gravel, sand, and vegetable mold, and in general is fertile. Most of the interior is yet unsettled. Frenchmans Island, in Oneida Lake, about 4 mi. from Constantia, belongs to this town; it contains about 28 acres.⁵ Lumber, leather, glass, and iron are extensively manufactured.⁶ Cleveland,⁷ (p.v.) incorp. April 15, 1857, is located on Oneida Lake, in the e. part of the town. It contains 2 churches, 2 glass factories, and several other manufactories. Pop. 1,005. Constantia, (p.v.) in the w. part, on Oneida Lake, contains 2 churches and has a pop. of 600. Bernhards Bay, (p.v.) on the lake, contains 2 churches, a glass factory, and 360 inhabitants. Constantia Center is a p.o. Soon after the purchase of Scriba's Patent, in 1790, Mr. Scriba commenced the first settlement of his lands at Constantia, and established agents and laborers there in 1793.⁸ There are 7 churches in town.⁹

GRANBY—was formed from Hamblin, April 20, 1818. A part of Oswego was taken off in 1836. It lies on the w. bank of Oswego River, in the s. w. part of the co. The surface is gently rolling, with a slight inclination to the s. e. Oswego River flows through a valley from 30 to 60 feet below the general level of the town; within this town it has a fall of 40 feet. Lake Nea-tah-wan-ta, near the center of the e. part, is about 1 mi. in diameter. It lies about 25 feet above the river at the head of the falls. The streams are Ox Creek, Six Mile Creek, and the outlet of Nea-tah-wan-ta Lake. The soil is generally a sandy or gravelly loam. Bradstreets¹⁰ or Battle Island is in Oswego River, about 4 mi. below the Oswego Falls. Starch, leather, lumber, and the products of wool are extensively manufactured.¹¹ Oswego Falls, (p.v.) incorp. Oct. 12, 1853, a station on the S. & O. R. R., is situated on Oswego River, opposite the village of Fulton. Pop. 703. Granby Center and South Granby are p. offices. The first settlement was made at the falls in 1792, by Laurence Van Valkin, from Rensselaer co., N. Y.¹² There are now 2 churches in town.¹³

¹ Among the early settlers were David Smith, in 1815; Wm and Isaac Claxton and John Drought, in 1818; and Sage Park, in 1821. The first inn was kept by Joseph Perkins, in 1806; the first sawmill was built by Joseph Murphy, in 1822, and the first gristmill by Sage Park, in 1828. The first school was taught by Cynthia Stoddard, in the summer of 1823.

² Named from Thos. Boylston, who held for a few hours, the title of a tract since known as the Boylston Purchase. He never owned the tract; the conveyance was simply a trust, and quickly passed into other hands.

⁴ Named by the proprietor, Geo. Scriba.

⁵ During the French Revolution of 1793, when the French nobility were compelled to seek safety in flight, and the trains of exiles to this country were crowded with dukes and princes of the blood, the Count St. Hilary, a young Frenchman, and his beautiful and accomplished wife, a daughter of the noble house of Clemont, landed upon our shores. Following the trail of emigration westward, they reached Oneida Lake, then on the great then-oughter of travel; and attracted by the beautiful island and its primitive forests, they landed upon it, and concluded to make it their future home. Here, in the deep solitude of nature, they enjoyed for many months perfect peace and quietude. Their place of residence was at length discovered by Chamblin Livingston, who had formerly enjoyed the elegant hospitality of the lady's family at Paris. He visited them in their rural home, and after spending some time with them, he prevailed upon them to return with him to his mansion upon the Hudson. There they continued to reside until Bonaparte had put an end to the reign of terror and restored much of the confiscated property to the exiles of the Revolution, when they returned to France. Several years after, as Livingston stood upon the bank of the Seine, amidst a crowd of distinguished Parisians, to witness the first experiment of Robert Fulton in steam navigation, he was recognized by the Count, who at once took him to his residence, and treated him during his stay at Paris as a generous benefactor and an honored guest. Livingston's mansion upon the Hudson and the first sawmill at Fulton and Livingston were both named in honor of the lady's family, "Clemont."

⁷ Named from James Cleveland, who settled here in 1828.

⁸ Solomon Waring, Joshua Larch, and Dr. Van der Camp settled in town in 1793; and John Richardson in 1795. The first birth was that of George Waring, April 14, 1797. The first store was opened in 1793, by Mr. Scriba, and the first inn the same year, by Major Solomon Waring. In 1794-95, Mr. Scriba erected in this town the first sawmill and gristmill built in the co. The first school was opened in 1797, at Constantia.

¹¹ There are 15 sawmills, 1 gristmill, 2 tanneries, and a starch factory in town.

HANNIBAL—was formed from Lysander, as a part of Onondaga co., Feb. 28, 1806, and embraced all that part of Oswego co. lying w. of the river. Oswego and Granby were taken off in 1818. It is the n. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is gently undulating, the ridges being 30 to 50 feet above the valleys. In the e. part are several swamps, one of which covers 500 acres. The soil is a rich, sandy and gravelly loam. A salt spring, from which salt has been manufactured, is found in the s. w. corner. Springs of brine, characteristic of the Medina sandstone strata, have been discovered in several other localities, but none of sufficient strength to render their working profitable. The principal manufacturing establishments are those of leather, lumber, and the products of wool.¹ Hannibal, (p. v.) on Nine Mile Creek, a little w. of the center of the town, contains 3 churches and about 60 houses; Hannibal Center (p. v.) contains 20 houses; and Hulls Corners (South Hannibal p. o.) 18. Wheeler's Corners is a hamlet in the s. part, and Kinneys Four Corners is a p. o. Settlement was commenced in 1802, by Thomas Sprague and his sons, from Milton, Saratoga co.² The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1815.³

HASTINGS—was formed from Constantia, April 20, 1825. It lies upon the s. shore of Oneida River, in the s. part of the co. Its surface is level or gently undulating, its northern boundary being about 75 feet above Oneida Lake. The soil is clay, sand, and gravelly loam. In some parts of the town it is difficult to find fresh water by digging. Brine springs are found in several parts in the red Medina sandstone formation. In the n. e. part is a tamarack swamp, of about 5 acres, in the center of which is an immense spring 40 feet in diameter. This spring is on a level with the surrounding summit; and it is surrounded by a deep, loose muck which extends downward to an unknown depth. There are 18 sawmills, several gristmills, and 2 tanneries in town. Central Square (p. v.) contains about 50 houses; Hastings, (p. v.) in the n. part, 30; Caughdenoy, (Coe-e-noy,) (p. v.) on Oneida River, in the s. w. part, 30; and Hastings Center (p. v.) 15. Smiths Mills and Fort Brewerton are villages of about 20 houses each. The latter is situated at the foot of Oneida Lake, on the site of old Fort Brewerton.⁴ The first settlement was made at Fort Brewerton, by Oliver Stevens, in 1789.⁵ There are 4 churches in town.

MEXICO—was formed from Whitestown, April 10, 1792, as part of Herkimer co. Parts of Richland and New Haven were annexed May 9, 1836. It included the northerly towns of Oneida co., nearly all of Lewis and Jefferson cos. w. of Black River, and all of Oswego co. e. of Oswego River. Camden was taken off in 1799, Champion, Redfield, Turin, Watertown, and Lowville in 1800, Adams in 1802, Lorraine and Williamstown in 1804, Volney in 1806, Constantia in 1808, New Haven in 1813, and Parish in 1828. Its surface is gently rolling. It is well watered by numerous small streams, the principal of which are Little Salmon and Sage Creeks. There is scarcely a foot of waste or broken land in the town. The underlying rock is gray sandstone, covered deep with alluvial deposits. The soil consists of clay, sand, and gravelly loam, and is very productive. Considerable attention is given to stock raising and dairying; the manufacture of lumber, barrels, and leather is carried on to some extent.⁶ Mexico, (p. v.) near the center, was incorp. Jan. 15, 1851, and contains 3 churches, an academy,⁷ 12 stores, 2 banks, 3 hotels, 3 flouring and grist mills, a sawmill, a furnace and machine shop, 3 coach factories, 4 carriage shops, and 3 cabinet shops. Pop. 948. Colosse, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, contains 1 church, 2 inns, a store, 2 sawmills, and 2 gristmills; Pop. 119. Texas,⁸ (p. v.) located near the mouth of Little Salmon Creek, contains 30 houses; Union Square, (p. o.) in the e., is a hamlet. The names of the earliest settlers within the present limits of this town are lost. There were about 25 who had already located in 1798: Jonathan Parkhurst and Nathaniel Rodd, from Oneida co., came that year.⁹ By the upsetting of a boat upon the lake, in 1799, Capt. Geerman and 6 others were lost, and in 1801, by a similar disaster, 9 others, ¹ There are 18 sawmills, a stove factory, 2 gristmills, and 2 tanneries in town.

² Watson Park, Samuel Baron, Joseph Wood, Sterling Moore, David Wilson, and Israel Messenger settled at Hannibal Center in 1805. The first birth was that of Carr Sprague, in 1805; the first marriage, that of Daniel Thomas and Prudence Sprague, in 1807; and the first death, that of a daughter of Thomas Sprague, in 1806. The first gristmill was built by Earl & Colton, in 1805; and the first sawmill, by Siles Crandell, in 1811. The first inn was kept by Henry Jennings, in 1808; the first store, by Benj Phelps, in 1815; and the first school was taught in 1810.

³ The census reports 4 churches; 2 Bap. Cong. and M. E.

⁴ A little e. of the fort ground is a sandbank, in which bones are found belonging to men over 7 feet high. A mound at the e. extremity of the bank is full of human bones, indicating the place's population for thousands.—Harle's Annals, vol. 2, p. 182.

⁵ Among the early settlers were Timothy Vickery, Chester Lewis, Solomon Allen, and Jacob Rice. The first birth was that of John L. Stevens, in 1802; the first marriage, that of Siles

Bellows and Betsey Vickery, in 1808; and the first death, that of Horatio Stevens, in 1792. Chester Lewis kept the first inn, in 1815; and Hastings Curtis, the first store, in 1820. The first school was taught by Patrick Vickery, at Caughdenoy.

⁶ There are 19 sawmills, 5 gristmills, a fulling and cloth dressing mill, a woolen factory, and 3 tanneries.

⁷ The Mexico Academy was organized in 1826, as the "Russell's Oswego Academy." Its name was changed May 19, 1845.

⁸ Formerly called "Texas Creek." See p. 520.

⁹ Phineas Davis and Calvin Tiffany, from Conn., settled in 1799; John Morton and Asa Davis in 1801; Peleg Brown, Daniel Eaton, and Leonard Ames in 1804; and Solomon Peck in 1805. The first birth was that of Truman Rodd, Aug. 10, 1799; and the first marriage, that of Richard Galland and Mrs. Rodd, widow of N. Rodd. The first grist and saw mill were built by Mr. Scriba's agent; and the first store was kept by Benj. Wright. The first school was taught by Sanford Douglas, at Colosse, in 1806.

NEW HAVEN—was formed from Mexico, April 2, 1813. A part was annexed to Mexico May 9, 1836. It lies upon the shore of Lake Ontario, w. of the center of the co. The surface is rolling and generally smooth. It is watered by Spring Brook, Catfish and Butterfly Creeks, 3 small streams flowing into Lake Ontario. There is quite an extensive marsh near the mouth of Butterfly Creek, in the s. e. part of the town, and another in the s. w. part. The underlying rock is gray sandstone, and the soil is principally a sandy and gravelly loam. Stock raising receives more attention in this than in the other towns of the co., and a limited amount of manufacturing is done.³

New Haven, (p. v.), situated near the center of the town, on Catfish Creek, contains 2 churches, 2 inns, a store, a sawmill, a gristmill, and about 50 houses. Butterfly is a p. o. near the e. line of the town. The first settlement was made by — Rood and — Doolittle, at New Haven, in 1798.⁴ The first church (Cong.) was organized at New Haven Village, in 1817; and Rev. William Williams was the first minister. There are now 2 churches in town; Cong. and M. E.

ORWELL—was formed from Richland, Feb. 28, 1817, and Boylston was taken off in 1828. A part of Richland was annexed March 27, 1844. It is an interior town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. The surface has a s. w. inclination, its e. border being elevated 300 to 500 feet above its w. and 700 to 1,000 feet above Lake Ontario. It is moderately hilly, and is considerably broken in places by the deep ravines of the streams. Upon Salmon River is a fall worthy of note. The stream flows over a rocky bed in a series of rapids for 2 mi., and then falls over a precipice 110 feet perpendicular. The banks of the stream below the fall are 200 feet high. The soil is generally a gravelly loam. The e. half of the town is yet uncultivated. Lumber and other products of wood form the leading articles manufactured; and considerable attention is given to stock raising and dairying.⁵ Orwell Corners, (Orwell p. o.) in the w. part, contains 1 church, 3 stores, an inn, a sawmill, a gristmill, a tannery, a steam cabinet factory, and about 40 houses. Maline is a hamlet in the s. part. The first settlers were Nathaniel Bennett and his son Nathaniel, from Rensselaer co., N. Y., on Lots 82 and 83, and Capt. Noyes, on Lot 29, in 1806.⁶ There are 3 religious societies in town.⁷

OSWEGO CITY—formed from Oswego and Serbia, was incorp. as a village March 14, 1828, and was enlarged and organized as a city March 24, 1818.⁸ It is situated on Lake Ontario, at the mouth of Oswego River,⁹ that stream dividing the city into two nearly equal parts. The river is bordered upon each side by a ridge, which rises in gradual slopes to a height of about 100 feet, and ends in bluffs on the lake shore 10 to 60 feet high. The summits of these ridges are about 1 mi. apart, and descend from the river in the same gradual slopes as toward it. One mi. w. is a valley opening through the ridge into the river above the falls, through which the Oswego must have once flowed into the lake. The s. border of the city is skirted by a bluff or escarpment about 160 feet above the lake, indicating an ancient lake or sea beach. Here commences the deep ravine excavated by the river through strata of red sandstone of the Medina group and underlying shale. From this the geological induction is made that, at the last great physical change which elevated the country from the bed of an ancient ocean and brought the river into existence, it fell directly into Lake Ontario, at the escarpment, by a fall of moderate

³ There are 2 sawmills, 2 gristmills, and other manufacturing establishments in town.

⁴ Mr. Wright settled in the town in 1798; Solomon Smith in 1800; C. Drake and Capt. Gardner in 1801; David Fines, Joseph Balch, and James Deport in 1805; and Warner Drake in 1808. The first birth was that of John D. Smith, in Feb. 1805. The first school was erected by Ira Frost, in 1805, and the first gristmill by Walden Brown, in 1809. Harriet Eason taught the first school, in the summer of 1809.

⁵ There are 16 sawmills, 16 shingle mills, a gristmill, and a tannery in town.

⁶ Among the early settlers were Benj. Reynolds, Joshua Hollis, Alden Gilbert, and Timothy Balch. The first marriage was that of Robert Wooley and a daughter of Nathaniel Bennett, son, in 1807; and the first death, that of the mother of Timothy Balch, in 1810. The first school was taught by Jesse A. Cook, in 1810. Joseph Watson built the first sawmill, in 1810, and Jonah Tompson the first gristmill, in 1810.

⁷ M. E., Presb., and Bapt. A Union church at Orwell Corners is occupied by the Presb. and Bapt. societies.

⁸ At the first village meeting, held May 12, 1828, H. M. Alvon Bronson was elected President, and Donald Hume, Jr., Treasurer. The presb. S. Morgan, Joseph Turner, and Orel. St. J. Truesdell, the presb. city collectors, elected in April, 1848, were Asa Dows, Mayor, James Platt, Alderman, Hunter Tenney, Gilbert Melton, Stephen H. Lathrop, Robert Olcott, G. S. Alford, John B. Reed, Samuel S. Taylor, and William S. Maline. The council appointed J. M. Lacey Mayor.

height, the upward movement being gradual and intermittent. The pauses by which it was interrupted are marked by ancient beach lines, ridges, and terraces found at different heights above the lakes. The Oswego Falls are now 11 feet high; and, as they have receded s. 12 mi., to the village of Fulton, with an ascending average grade of about 9 feet per mi. in the excavated bed of the river, they must have diminished in height and grandeur from age to age during the whole period of recession. This hypothesis is sustained by geographical and geological analogy with the Falls of the Genesee and the Niagara. The aggregate fall of the river within the 12 mi. is 110 feet, of which 34 feet are within the limits of the city; and the whole fall is so distributed by 6 successive dams, built by the State for canal and slackwater navigation, that the water of the river may be used by raceways nearly the whole distance, affording one of the finest water-powers in the world. The river forms the outlet to the 11 lakes which cluster in the basin of Central New York, and drains a wide extent of territory. These lakes form natural reservoirs which prevent floods or undue exhaustion, the extreme elevation and depression of the river not exceeding 3 feet, so that destructive freshets, so common to great water-power rivers, never occur. The mouth of the river admits vessels of the largest class navigating the lakes; and the erection of piers and a lighthouse by the U. S. Government renders it one of the safest and most accessible harbors on the lakes, susceptible of indefinite enlargement, and combining canal and R. R. transportation with the advantages of position as the nearest lake port to tidewater. A hydraulic canal extending along both sides of the river is studded with mills, elevating warehouses, and other manufacturing establishments.

The city is handsomely laid out, with streets 100 feet wide, intersecting each other at right angles. The e. and w. banks of the river are connected by two bridges, built by the city,—the lower one, an iron bridge with a draw for the passage of vessels, on Bridge St., the upper on Utica St., at the terminus of the Oswego & Syracuse R. R. The principal public buildings are an edifice recently erected by the U. S. Government, containing a custom house, post-office, and U. S. courtroom,¹ a city hall,² jail, orphan asylum, city hospital, city library, and 12 churches.³

The Orphan Asylum is situated upon the elevated ground in the southern part of the city, commanding a fine view of the city, harbor, and lake. It was founded in 1853, mainly through the influence of the ladies of Oswego, and continues to be principally supported by them. Orphans and children of destitute parents, from earliest infancy to 8 years of age, are admitted and cared for and afterward placed out in respectable families. A primary and Sabbath school are connected with the institution. The number of inmates ranges from 50 to 100.

The City Library was founded by a donation of $25,000 from Hon. Gerrett Smith. The edifice is finely located upon the e. side of the river; and the library at present contains 9,000 volumes.⁴

The Public Schools are graded and free; they are under the care of a Board of Education and Superintendent. The system embraces the primary, junior, senior, and high school departments; and pupils can receive instruction from the primary branches to an extended academic course. In 1857 there were in the city 23 school districts, in which were employed 47 teachers,—8 males and 39 females. The number of children between 4 and 21 was 5,516, of which 4,175, or 75 per cent., attended school during some portion of the year. The total receipts and expenses during the year was $26,341 14; the number of volumes in the district libraries, about 3,000.

The commerce of Oswego is very extensive, and is increasing much more rapidly than the population.⁵ Being situated near the foot of lake navigation, and nearer to N. Y. than any other lake port, it has commercial facilities superior to those of most of the Western cities. A considerable share of the produce of the West flows through this port on its way to the seaboard markets; and it is the principal entrepôt of the agricultural products of Canada West. The salt of Onondaga is mostly distributed through the Great West from this place; and vast quantities of the manufactured goods of the East are sent through the same channel. The official report of the value of the lake and canal trade, derived from the Custom House and Canal Collector's Office, for 1845, was $7,951,409, and for 1856 was $50,612,603, showing an annual average increase of nearly 20 per cent. The amount of registered tonnage in 1846 was 15,513 tons, and in 1856 it was 46,467 tons.⁶

The manufacturing interests of the city have attained to considerable magnitude, although the vast water-power of Oswego River is occupied but to a limited extent. Flour made from the wheat with 2 stories above, having an aggregate height of wall of 36 feet above the basement.

⁵ Pop. in 1855, 13,816. Estimated in 1858, 18,000.

of Canada and the Western States forms the leading article manufactured. The Oswego mills, 18 in number, with an aggregate of 100 run of stone, are capable of grinding and packing 10,000 barrels of flour per day,—a greater amount than is manufactured at any other place on the continent.¹

Shipyards and 2 marine railways rank among the important manufacturing establishments of the city, and give large employment to labor. The Oswego Starch Factory, erected in 1848, up on the hydraulic canal, on the w. bank of the river, is one of the most prosperous and extensive establishments of the kind in the world.² Lumber is extensively dressed in the city for the Western markets, from Canadian sawed lumber entered free under the Reciprocity Treaty. The Oswego Cotton Mills is a well managed and productive establishment, operating 87,144, or 2,664 spindles, and giving employment to 65 operators. A little above, on the same canal, is an extensive tannery. The Ontario Foundry, Steam Engine and Machine Works, is one of the most extensive and prosperous establishments of the kind in the State. Many other branches of manufactures are carried on in the city.

The early history of Oswego has already been noticed in the general history of the co.³ Its distinctive and modern history dates from its surrender by the British in 1796. The withdrawal of the British garrison took away from the place all that had ever been established of civilized society, and left it as new as though man had never resided there. During the year following the evacuation, Neil McMullin, a merchant of Kingston, moved thither, bringing with him a house framed at Kingston.⁴ In 1802 but 2 or 3 vessels were owned on the American side of the lake, trade being principally carried on by vessels belonging to the Northwest Fur Company. During this year Benajah Boyington built a warehouse on the w. side of the river, and Arch. Fairfield became a forwarding merchant. Salt from the Onondaga Springs was at that time the most important item in the commerce of Oswego. In 1803, Matthew McNair engaged in the forwarding business and purchased a schooner. In 1804 he built another, and, in connection with other gentlemen, purchased a number of Canadian vessels.⁵ From this period shipbuilding was carried on briskly, and it formed a leading interest until the breaking out of the War of 1812.

The war put an end to commercial transactions; but the place became the scene of stirring military events. The fort was garrisoned and commanded by Col. Mitchell. On the 5th of May, 1814, the British fleet under Sir James Yeo appeared off the harbor and opened a heavy fire upon the place. The fire was returned by the 4 small guns which constituted the only armament of Fort Ontario, and by a small battery on the w. side of the river. The next morning the British took position still nearer the shore, and under the cover of a heavy fire 2 columns of the enemy effected a landing. After a gallant but vain defense, Col. Mitchell retreated, leaving the fort and town in possession of the enemy.⁶ The principal object of the attack was to secure the naval stores destined for the new vessels building at Sackets Harbor; but a large share of these were at Oswego Falls, 12 mi. above, and were not taken. Several cannon and other heavy articles lying upon the wharf were sunk in the river, at the command of Col. Mitchell; these were afterward recovered. On the morning of the 7th the British retired, and the fleet proceeded s. to blockade Sackets Harbor. Lieut. Woolsey, who had charge of the stores, immediately dropped down the river, and, with 40 boats laden with stores, set out on the lake under cover of night, and supported by a body of riflemen and Indians, under Maj. Appling, on shore. The boats were pursued, and took refuge in Sandy Creek, where an action took place, resulting in the capture of the entire attacking party.⁷

Oswego recovered slowly from the effects of the war, and its commercial transactions were comparatively unimportant until the opening of the Oswego and Welland Canals.⁸ In the mean time

Matthew McNair and Rachel Butt (now called McNair) in 1802; Henry Eagle in 1803; Alvin Bronson in 1806; and Wm. D. Conway in 1811. In 1810 the population numbered 1,000. John McMullin, son of Neil M. Mullin, born in 1765, was the first child born within the present limits of the city.

⁵ In 1804 all commercial transactions were carried on with unrestricted freedom. No ship papers, tonnage receipts, or other were required, the licenses on dutouch houses, &c., still being yet small out to the commerce of the lakes.

⁶ The British loss in the action was about 200 killed, American 60. The British carried off several of the private property of citizens, and kept them prisoners until they were duly ransomed. Among the prisoners were Alvin Bronson, Abraham Bronson, and Eli Stevens.

⁸ In 1818, 10 years before the Oswego Canal was completed, 36,000 barrels of Onondaga salt were received at Oswego, of which 25,000 barrels went to Western States by the portage around Niagara Falls. At that period the price of salt at Oswego was $2.50 per barrel, and the cost of transportation to Lima, by Oswego, to Black Rock $1.40 per barrel. In 1819, 60,000 were received at Oswego, 700,000 barrels of salt were received at upper lake ports through the Welland Canal, at a cost of shipbuilding became a leading pursuit of the people. In 1816, steam navigation was first introduced on Lake Ontario, and its great progress since has been of immense importance to Oswego. In 1820-30, Alvin Bronson and T. S. Morgan erected the first flouring mill. In 1828 the Oswego Canal was finished, and in 1830 the Welland Canal was opened, giving a new impulse to trade and opening to the place an almost boundless commerce in the future. With the advantages of natural position and the stimulus of the lines of internal improvement, both the commerce and manufactures of Oswego have increased in an almost unprecedented manner; and there is every reason to believe that this increase is to continue for many years to come.

OSWEGO (town)—was formed from Hannibal, April 20, 1818. A part of Granby was annexed May 20, 1836. It lies upon the shore of Lake Ontario, on the w. side of the river. Its surface is generally rolling, ending in a bluff shore upon the lake. The streams are the Eight Mile, Rice, Snake, and Minetto Creeks. A fall in Oswego River within the limits of this town affords an abundance of water-power. The underlying rock is principally red sandstone, and the soil a gravelly loam. Boulders and water-worn pebbles are scattered over the surface, making it very stony in places. Minetto,¹ (p. v.) situated on Oswego River, 4 mi. from the city, contains 150 inhabitants. South West Oswego is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1797, by Asa Rice, from Conn. Reuben Pixley came in 1800, and Daniel Burt in 1802.² There are now in the town 2 churches; M. E. and Bap.

PALERMO—was formed from Volney, April 4, 1832. It is an interior town, lying just s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is undulating. The large swamp in the e. part of the town is 57 feet above Oneida Lake, and the ridges are about 25 feet above the swamp. The streams are Secuts and Fish Creeks. The soil is generally a sandy loam. Lumber and the products of wood are the principal manufactured products of the town.³ Palermo, (p. v.) situated near the center of the town, and Vermillion (p. v.) each contains 1 church and about 15 dwellings. The first settlement was made in 1806, by David Jennings, Simeon Crandall, and Sylvanus Hopkins.⁴ The first settled preacher was Rev. Asaph Graves. There are now 4 churches in town.⁵

PARISH⁶—was formed from Mexico, March 20, 1828. It is an interior town, a little s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is undulating, but considerably broken by ravines, and in some parts rough and stony. The streams are Salmon Creek and its branches. The valley in the w. part is 246 feet above Lake Ontario, and the e. summits are 25 to 50 feet higher. The soil consists of clay, sand, and gravel, and is moderately fertile. Less than half of the town is under cultivation. There are 12 sawmills, 4 shingle factories, and other manufacturing establishments in town. Parishville, (Parish p. o.) on Salmon Creek, in the w. part, contains 1 church and 34 houses. The first settlement was made in 1804, by Thomas Nutting, Eliada Orton, Jonathan Bedell, Amos Williams, and Rev. Gamaliel Barnes.⁷ There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Bap.

REDFIELD—was taken from Mexico, as part of Oneida co., March 14, 1800.⁸ It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is hilly in the s., but in the n. it spreads out into a high, rolling plateau 800 to 1,000 feet above tide. A wide intervalle extends along the course of Salmon River, which stream drains nearly the whole town. The underlying rock is gray limestone, and the soil upon it is generally a thin and moderately fertile gravelly loam. The soil of the intervalle is a deep, sandy loam of good quality. The greater part of the town is still unsettled, and the uplands are frosty and forbidding regions. Center Square, (Redfield p. o.) situated on Salmon River, in the s. part of the town, contains 2 churches and about 30 houses. Greenborough is a p. o. in the s. w. part. The settlement of the town was commenced in 1798, by immigrants mostly from Conn.⁹ The first church (Cong.) was organized with 19 members in 1802, by Rev. Joshua Johnson. There are now 2 churches in the town; Cong. and M. E.

² A sawmill at this place is one of the largest in the State, and is kept about sawing 2,000 feet per 24 hours.

⁴ There are in the town 8 sawmills, 3 shingle and stove factories, 2 grist-mills, and 2 tanneries.

The first inn was opened in 1816, by Stephen Blake; and the first sawmill was built by Phineas Chapin, in 1812. The first school was taught by Harriet Eason, in the summer of 1812.

⁶ M. E. and 2 Bap.

⁷ Named from David Parish, who purchased the town before its settlement.

¹⁰ Among those who settled in the town in 1798 were Amos Keut, Josiah Tryon, Nathan Sage, Jonathan Harmon, James

(p. v.) near the center, 15. Settlement was commenced by Abram Paddock, in 1800.¹ The first church (M. E.) was organized in 1826. There are now 5 churches in town.²

SCRIBA³—was taken from "Fredericksburgh" (now Volney) as part of Oneida co., April 5, 1811. It lies upon the shore of Lake Ontario and the e. bank of Oswego River. Its surface is rolling, the ridges extending s. and s., and elevated 100 to 180 feet above the lake. It is drained by Black Creek, flowing s., and Nine Mile, Four Mile, and Wine Creeks, flowing n. Upon several of these streams are valuable mill privileges. The soil is a gravelly and sandy loam, stony in places, and only moderately fertile. Scriba Corners, (Scriba p. o.) near the center of the town, contains 1 church and about 40 houses. North Scriba is a p. o. The first settlement was made by Henry Everts, in 1798.⁴ There are 3 churches in town.⁵

VOLNEY⁶—was formed—by the name of "Fredericksburgh"—from Mexico as part of Oneida co., March 21, 1806. Its name was changed April 5, 1811. Scriba was taken off in 1811, and Schroepfel and Palermo in 1832. It lies upon the e. bank of Oswego River, s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is undulating, with high, steep banks bordering upon the river. The ridges are 50 to 100 feet above the valleys and 100 to 200 feet above Oswego River. The red sandstone crops out on the bank of the river and is extensively quarried for building stone. The falls upon the river furnish an immense water-power.⁷ The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Fulton,⁸ (p. v.) on Oswego River, at the Oswego Falls,⁹ was incorp. April 29, 1835. It contains 6 churches, the Falley Seminary,¹⁰ 2 newspaper offices, and a large number of manufacturing establishments. Pop. 3,192. Seneca Hill, (p. v.) on Oswego River, in the s. w. corner of the town, contains 50 dwellings and the largest flouring establishment in the State.¹¹ Volney Corners, (Volney p. o.) near the center, contains 18 houses. The present village of Fulton became the seat of a floating population in the early part of the eighteenth century; but permanent settlement was not commenced until 1793.¹² The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1814; and the Rev. Mr. Leavitt was the first settled minister. There are 9 churches in town.¹³

WEST MONROE—was formed from Constantia, March 21, 1839. It lies upon the s. shore of Oneida Lake, s. e. of the center of the co. The surface is level and marshy in the s., and rolling, broken, and stony in the n. A marsh on the bank of the lake covers an area of more than 1,000 acres, and a considerable portion of it produces cranberries. In the valleys between the ridges, in the n. part of the town, are several smaller marshes. Red sandstone, the underlying rock, crops out in this town and furnishes a plentiful supply of valuable building stone. Bog iron ore is found in the n. part; and it is said that traces of lead and silver have also been found. The soil is a medium quality of clay, sandy and gravelly loam. West Monroe and Union Settlement are p. offices. The first settlement was made in 1806, by Martin Owens, Abel and Joseph B. Ames, Ebenezer Loomis, and Sylvanus Allen.¹⁴ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1843.¹⁵

WILLIAMSTOWN—was formed from Mexico, as part of Oneida co., March 24, 1804. Richland was taken off in 1807, and Amboy in 1830. It lies near the center of the e. border of the co. The surface is undulating in the s., but broken and stony in the w., and moderately hilly in the e. It is drained by Fish Creek, flowing into Oneida Lake, and the head branches of Salmon

¹ Thomas Vickery and — La Hommedieu settled in 1807; and Wm. Miles in 1808. The first birth was that of Joseph Vickery, Sept. 11, 1807; and the first marriage, that of John Lemaner and Sally Winter. The first sawmill was erected by H. W. Schroepfel, in 1819; and the first gristmill, by A. & H. Gilbert, the same year. The first store was kept by Andrus Gilbert, in 1821; and the first inn, by Alex. Phoenix, in 1828. Horatio Sweet taught the first school, at Three River Point, in 1813.

² 2 M. E. Cong., Bap., and F. W. Bap.

³ Named in honor of George Scriba, the original proprietor of this and several of the adjoining towns.

⁴ Asabel Bush and Samuel Tibbany settled in town in 1801; Wm. Bart and He1 Stone in 1805; and Dr. Doobius Clark in 1807. The first birth was that of Henry Everts, in the first marriage, that of John Masters and Eliza Tallman, in 1806; and the first death, that of a child of Hiram Warner. The first inn was kept by He1 Stone, in 1806; and the first store, by Orrin Stone and Aaron Parkhurst, in 1819. Beng. Robinson, from Malibus, taught the first school, in 1801.

⁵ Bap., M. E., and a Bethel Free and Un.

⁶ Named in honor of Volney, the French author, who visited the town in 1808, while on a tour through the U. S.

⁷ There are 7 flouring mills in town, having an aggregate of 42 ran of stone; also a large number of sawmills and other manufacturing establishments.

⁸ Named in honor of Robert Fulton. It was originally called "George's Falls."

⁹ The portage at this place was the only interruption in the internal water communication between Schenectady and the ports upon Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River, after the construction of the canal connecting Wood Creek with the Mohawk River, by the Western Navigation Co., in 1796.

¹⁰ The Fulton Female Seminary was incorp. in 1836, and in 1842 it was changed to the Fulton Academy. In 1849 it received a donation of $3,000 from Mrs. M. E. Falley and assumed the name of the Falley Seminary. At the same time it came under the charge of the Black River Conference of the M. L. Church. It is now a private institution.

¹³ 2 M. E., Presb., Prot. E. Cong., Bap., Prot. Meth., Wes. Meth., and Union.

¹⁴ Deacon Smith, from Mass., settled in the town in 1808, and Hiram Nickerson in 1810. The first birth was that of Azariah Ames. The first inn was kept by Deacon Smith, in 1812; and the first school was taught by Car-line Barnes, in 1810.

¹⁵ The census reports 2 churches; Presb. and F. W. Bap.

OSWEGO HARBOR

River. The surface of Fish Creek at Williamstown Mills, in the s. e. part, is 354 feet above Lake Ontario, and the hills in the n. w. are 200 to 300 feet higher. The greater part of the town is yet unsettled. The soil is a moderately fertile sandy or gravelly loam. Lumber and leather are the principal manufactured products. Williamstown, (p. v.) on Fish Creek, in the s. part, is a station on the W. & R. R. R. Pop. 249. Kassong, (p. v.) a little w. of the center, is a station on the W. & R. R. R. and contains about 25 houses. The first settlement was made in 1801, by Gilbert Taylor, Solomon Goodwin, Ichabod Comstock, Dennis Orton, Henry Williams, and Henry Filkins.¹ The first church (Cong.) was founded in 1805, by Rev. Wm. Stone.²

¹The first marriage was that of Jed Rathbun and Miss P. (first name) in 1801. The first school was opened in 1802, by Prof. Allen, on S. p. 1802, and the first death, that of Mrs. Sarah Alden, on the spring of 1804. Isaac Alden opened the first inn in 1803. The first sawmill was built in 1803, and the first mill in 1805. The first church was built in 1805, and the first school in 1806. The first sawmill, the same year, and the first mill in 1807.

OTSEGO COUNTY.

This county was erected from Montgomery, Feb. 16, 1791, and embraced the 2 original towns of Otsego and Cherry Valley. A part of Schoharie was taken off in 1795, and a part of Delaware in 1797. It lies upon the highlands at the head of Susquehanna River, s. e. of the center of the State. It is centrally distant 66 miles from Albany, and contains 1,038 sq. mi. Its surface is a hilly upland, divided into several ridges separated by deep, broad valleys. The declivities are generally gradual; and the highest summits are 400 to 700 ft. above the valleys and 1,700 to 2,000 ft. above tide. The ridges have a general s. e. and s. w. direction. A high and rocky upland extends into the s. e. corner from Delaware, terminating upon Schenevas Creek in an abrupt and wall-like declivity 300 to 500 ft. high. The other ridges of the co. have a nearly uniform elevation, and generally terminate in steep declivities upon the valleys of the streams. The principal streams are Unadilla River, forming the w. boundary, Wharton and Butternut Creeks, Otego Creek, Susquehanna River, Cherry Valley and Schenevas Creeks. Charlotte River forms a small portion of the s. boundary. Besides these, there are a large number of smaller creeks and brooks, tributaries to the above. A few small streams rise in the n. e. corner and flow into the Mohawk. Otsego Lake, in the n. e. part, is a fine sheet of water 8 mi. long and about 1 mi. broad. It is 1,133 ft. above tide, and is surrounded by hills 400 to 500 ft. high. Its outlet forms the principal head branch of the Susquehanna. Schuyler Lake, n. w. of Otsego, is a similar sheet of water, $3\frac{1}{2}$ mi. long. The other bodies of water in the co. are small ponds. The rocks in the n. e. corner consist of the limestones of the Helderbergh division. The hills in the s. part are composed of the shales of the Hamilton group and the shales and sandstones of the Portage and Chemung groups. The summits in the extreme s. part and s. e. corner are crowned by the red sandstone and shales of the Catskill group. Almost all the valuable quarries of the co. are found in the limestone region of the n. e. The soil in the n. e. is a good quality of gravelly and calcareous loam; but further south it is a clay and shaly loam upon the hills, and a gravelly loam and alluvium in the valleys. The uplands are best adapted to grazing; and the river intervals are well adapted to the cultivation of grain. The people are principally engaged in stock raising and dairying. More hops are raised in this co. than in any other in the State. The manufacturing interests are limited, though the available water-power is very great.

The county seat is located at Cooperstown, in the town of Otsego, at the foot of Otsego Lake.¹ The courthouse is a brick edifice in the w. part of the village.² The jail, near by, is built of stone, but has few of the modern improvements or conveniences. The average number of inmates is 8, supported at a weekly cost of $3.00 each. The clerk's office is a fireproof brick building, contiguous to the courthouse. The co. poorhouse is situated upon a farm of 153 acres in Middlefield, 4 mi. s. of Cooperstown. Its average number of inmates is 90. The children attend the district school. The farm yields a revenue of $1,400. The general arrangement and management of this institution are far better than the average. The only work of internal improvement in the co. is the Albany & Susquehanna R. R., now in process of construction. It extends along Susquehanna River and Schenevas Creek, through Unadilla Otego, Oneonta, Milford, Maryland, and Worcester.

Three weekly newspapers are published in the co.³

² The first county officers were Wm. Cooper, First Judge; Jacob Morris, County Clerk; Richard B. Smith, Sheriff; and James Cannon, Surrogate.

³ The Otsego Herald and Western Advertiser, the first paper published in the co., and the second in the State s. of Albany, was commenced at Cooperstown, April 3, 1795, by Thos. Phinney, a native of Conn. Mr. Phinney continued its publication until 1803, when he died. It was then published by his sons, E. & H. Phinney, until 1821, when it was discontinued.

The Impartial Observer was established at Cooperstown in 1808 by William Andrews. It soon after passed to John H. Prentiss, who changed its name to

The Cooperstown Federalist, under which title it was published until 1825, when the name was again changed to

The Freeman's Journal. In 1830 it passed into the hands of Samuel M. Shaw, by whom it is now published.

The Otsego Republican was published at Cherry Valley in 1812 by Clark & Cramdal.

The Watchtower was established at Cherry Valley in 1813. In 1814 it was removed to Cooperstown, where it was published by Israel W. Clark until May, 1817, when Edward B. Cramdal became proprietor, and continued the publication until 1831.

The first settlement in this co. was made at Cherry Valley, in 1749, by John Lindsay, who, with 3 others, held a patent for a tract of 8,000 acres, lying in that town. Mr. Lindsay was a Scotch gentleman of some fortune and distinction, and, by his influence, induced a settlement on his lands of several families, comprising about 30 persons, originally from Scotland and Ireland. A few years later, small settlements were made in the present towns of Springfield, Middlefield, Laurens, Otego, and at other points in the valley of the Susquehanna. These settlements then formed the extreme outposts in the advance of civilization west. They increased very slowly, in consequence of the fear of Indian hostilities. In 1765, 25 years after the first settlement, but 40 families had located at Cherry Valley. At the commencement of the Revolution it was still a frontier settlement. On the 11th of Oct. 1778, it was attacked by the Tories and Indians, under the lead of Butler and Brant, and a horrible massacre ensued. The family of Robert Wells, father of the late John Wells of New York, consisting of 12 persons, were brutally murdered; and one of the Tories boasted that he killed Mr. Wells while at prayer. John Wells, the only member of the family who escaped, was at school in Schenectady at the time. The wife and daughter of Mr. Dunlop were murdered in cold blood, as were also the wife and 4 children of Mr. Mitchell. Thirty-two of the inhabitants, mostly women and children, and 16 Continental officers and soldiers, were killed; the residue of the inhabitants were taken prisoners and carried off, and all the buildings in the place were burned. All the frontier settlements were ravaged, and nearly every building, except those belonging to Tories, was burned. These horrible outrages aroused the whole country, and in 1779 Gen. Sullivan, at the head of a large body of troops, was sent against the Western tribes. In Feb. Gen. Clinton, with a force of 1,200 men, marched up the Mohawk, and thence opened a road to Otsego Lake, a distance of 20 mi. At the foot of the lake he halted and built a dam across the outlet, and prepared boats to descend the stream. When the lake was sufficiently high, the boats were launched, the dam was broken down, and the army descended the river on the flood thus produced. The Indians upon the banks, witnessing the extraordinary rise of the river at mid-summer without any apparent cause, were struck with superstitious dread, and in the very outset were disheartened at the apparent interposition of the Great Spirit in favor of their foes. Gen. Clinton's forces joined Sullivan on the Chemung. At the close of the war, settlements progressed with great rapidity; and much of the best land in the co. was taken up before the fertile lands in the western part of the State were opened to immigration. In late years the progress of the co. has not been so rapid as that of other sections of the State, from the fact that no great work of public improvement has yet been constructed within its limits, and hence it is comparatively isolated and difficult of access.

BURLINGTON—was formed from Otsego, April 19, 1792. Pittsfield was taken off in 1797, and Edmeston in 1808. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, divided into 3 general ridges, extending s. and s. e. These ridges are about 400 ft. above the valleys, and are arable to their summits. The streams are Butternut Creek, flowing s. through the center, and Wharton Creek, flowing s. w. through the w. part. The soil upon the hills is a slaty loam, in many places underlaid by hardpan, and in the valleys a gravelly loam.

The Tocsin was established at Cooperstown in June, 1829, by Dutton & Bows, and was published by them until 1831, when it took the name of

The Otsego Republican. It was issued by Dutton & Hopkins for about 1 year; by Hopkins alone, 1 year; Hopkins & Clark, 3 years; by A. W. Clark, about 1 year; and by Andrew W. Barber, 4 or 5 years. In 1845 it was issued by J. K. Williams & Co. Soon after it again came into the possession of A. W. Barber, and was continued by him until his death, in Aug. 1855. In Oct. 1855, the paper was united with The Otsego Democrat, and issued as

The Republican and Democrat, under which title it is now published by James J. Hendrix.

The Otsego Democrat was commenced at Cooperstown in 1846 by James J. Hendrix, and was published by him until it was merged with the Republican in 1855.

The Otsego Freeman was commenced at Cooperstown in 1851 by Robert Shankland, who soon after withdrew, and the publication was continued by B. W. Burditt until 1857.

The Cherry Valley Gazette was started in Oct. 1818, by Wm. McLean, who continued its publication until 1822. It then passed into the hands of Charles McLean, who continued it until Jan. 1, 1847, when A. S. Botsford became proprietor and continued it until 1851. It then reverted to Charles McLean; and in 1853 it was sold to John B. Kimz, who published it 1 year under the name of

The American Banner, when he sold it to A. S. Botsford, who changed the name back to

The Cherry Valley Gazette, under which title it is still published.

The Otsego Traveller was published at Cherry Valley in 1841.

The Otsego County Courier was commenced at the Village of Lonsville, in the town of Morris, by Wm. H. S. Wyoms in 1845. This paper was merged in

The Villian Advertiser, commenced at the same place in 1851. It was a quarterly publication, conducted, in 1853, by H. S. Avery.

The Ontario Herald was commenced Feb. 9, 1853, at Onondaga Village, and was published by E. P. Carpenter in 1853.

The Onondaga Advertiser was published at the village of Lonsville for a series of years; but its history is wanting.

During the first winter the snow fell to so great a depth that it was impossible for Mr. Lindsay to go to the nearest settlement, which was 7 or 8 miles distant. His provisions gave out, and his family were in danger of perishing by starvation. In this extremity they were visited by an Indian, who came on snow-shoes, and who, on learning their situation, undertook to supply them with food. He went to the Mohawk, and returned with a load of provisions, and continued his visits of mercy until the close of the winter. Mr. Lindsay afterward left the settlement, joined the army, and served 14 or 15 years.

Burlington Green, (Burlington p. o.) on Butternut Creek, near the center, contains 3 churches and 118 inhabitants; Burlington Flats, (p. v.) on Wharton Creek, n. w. of the center, 2 churches, a cotton factory, gristmill, sawmill, and about 30 dwellings; and West Burlington, (p. v.) on Wharton Creek, 2 churches and 143 inhabitants. The first settlement was commenced near West Burlington, in 1790, by Robert Garrat, and Eber and Benj. Harrington.¹ The first church (Bap.) was formed at Burlington Green, in 1793; Rev. James Southworth was the first minister.²

BUTTERNUTS—was formed from Unadilla, Feb. 5, 1796. Morris was taken off in 1849, and a part of Unadilla was annexed in 1857. It lies upon the w. border of the co., s. w. of the center. Its surface is a hilly upland, divided into several ridges extending n. and s. Unadilla River, forming its w. boundary, is bordered by a narrow intervalle, from which the highlands rise in a series of steep bluffs to a height of 500 to 600 ft. Butternut Creek flows s. w. in a deep valley through near the center of the town. A large number of smaller streams, tributaries to these, flow in deep valleys among the hills, dividing the ridges and giving to the region a peculiar broken character. The hills are arable to their summits, and the soil is a good quality of red shale and gravelly loam. Gilbertsville, (Butternuts p. o.) near the center, contains 4 churches, the Gilbertsville Academy and Collegiate Institute, an oil mill, tannery, and various other manufacturing establishments. Pop. 442. Settlements were commenced about 1790, at Gilbertsville, by Gordon and Wyatt Chamberlin and Abijah Gilbert.³ The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1795-96; Rev. John Stone was the first preacher.⁴

CHERRY VALLEY—was formed from Canajoharie, (Montgomery co.) Feb. 16, 1791. Middlefield, Springfield, and Worcester were taken off in 1797, and Roseboom in 1854. It is the n. e. corner town in the co. Its surface is a hilly and mountainous upland; and much of it is too rough and rocky for cultivation. Mount Independence, s. e. of the center, is a rocky eminence 1,000 ft. above the valleys and 2,000 ft. above tide. It is the highest summit in the co. A range of highlands extends along the n. w. boundary. The central and s. parts of the town are drained by the head branches of the Susquehanna, and the n. part by tributaries of the Mohawk. The soil upon the uplands is a slaty and gravelly loam, and in the valleys a fine quality of calcareous loam. Upon a small creek in the n. part is the Te-ka-ha-ra-nea Falls, 160 feet in height. In the vicinity are several sulphur springs and quarries of limestone. In the n. e. corner are several springs of weak brine, from which salt was formerly manufactured. Cherry Valley,⁵ (p. v.) at the head of the valley of Cherry Valley Creek, was incorp. June 8, 1812. It contains 3 churches, the Cherry Valley Academy,⁶ a bank, newspaper office, and gristmill. Pop. 933. Salt Springsville⁷ (p. o.) is a hamlet in the n. e. corner. The first settlement was made on the present site of the village in 1739, by John Lindsay, an emigrant from the Londonderry Colony of Scotch-Irish in N. H.⁸ The first religious services were held in 1743, by Rev. Samuel Dunlap, a native of Ireland.⁹

DECATUR¹⁰—was formed from Worcester, March 25, 1808. It lies upon the e. line of the co., s. of the center. The surface is hilly, and broken by the narrow valleys of several small

² The census reports 3 churches; 3 Bap., Presb., Cong., Prot. E., Friends, and F. W. Bap.

⁷ Named from the brine springs in the vicinity.

⁸ Mr. Lindsay was one of the original proprietors of Cherry Valley, under a patent granted in 1738, by George Clarke, Gen. Lieut. Governor of New York, to John Lindsay, Jacob Roseboom, and others. David Barclay and James Campbell, from Londonderry, N. H., and Wm. Gall and Wm. Dickson, from Ireland, settled on the patent, in 1742, and near the village, John Wells, from Ireland, settled at the village, in 1744. From the fear of Indian hostilities, the settlement of Cherry Valley proceeded slowly, there being in 1752, 12 years after the first settlement, but 8 families in the town; and at the breaking out of the Revolution, in 1775, the number of families did not exceed 60. James Rittell kept the first store and inn, anterior to the war; and James Campbell erected the first gristmill, in 1743-44. John Wells erected the second gristmill. Rev. Samuel Dunlap taught a classical school at his own house, in 1743-44—the first probably, of the kind w. of the Hudson. The whole settlement was destroyed by the Indians, and the greater part of the inhabitants were murdered and taken prisoners, on the evening of Nov. 11, 1778. See page 531.

streams. The hills generally have gradual slopes and rounded summits, and are elevated 250 to 300 ft. above the valleys. The town is drained s. by Oak and Parker Creeks, flowing into the Schenevas. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Decatur, (p. v.), near the s. w. corner, contains a church and 120 inhabitants. The first settlements were commenced in or about 1790, by Jacob Kinney, originally from New Milford, Conn., at or near the village of Decatur.¹ The first religious association (M. E.) was formed at an early period.²

EDMESTON—was formed from Burlington, April 1, 1808. It lies upon the w. border of the co., s. of the center. The surface is an elevated upland, broken by numerous irregular valleys. The highest elevations are 400 to 500 ft. above Unadilla River, which forms the w. boundary. Wharton Creek flows across the s. e. corner. Mill Creek and several other small streams take their rise in the town. Smiths Pond is a small sheet of water in the s. e. corner. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. Edmeston Center (Edmeston p. o.) contains 3 churches, a grist and saw mill, and tannery. Pop. 275. West Edmeston, (p. v.), on Unadilla River, and partly in Brookfield, (Madison co.) contains a church and 35 houses. South Edmeston (p. v.) contains a church and 30 houses. East Edmeston is a p. o. Of the first settlement in town, authentic data of the precise date are wanting. It was made, however, on Unadilla River, during the interval between the close of the French War, in 1763, and the commencement of that of the Revolution, in 1775, by Col. Edmeston, an officer of the French War, and Pereifer Carr, a faithful soldier who had served under him.³ The first church (Bap.) was formed at Taylor Hill, March 8, 1791; Rev. Stephen Taylor was the first preacher.⁴

EXETER—was formed from Richfield, March 25, 1799. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. The surface is hilly and broken, consisting mainly of elevated uplands. Angel Cliff and Town Cliff Hills, in the e. part of the town, are 400 to 500 ft. above the valleys. The town is drained e. by several small streams flowing into Schuyler Lake, and s. by Butternut and Wharton Creeks, both of which rise in this town. The soil is a clay and gravelly loam, well adapted to grazing. Exeter Center (Exeter p. o.) contains a church and 106 inhabitants. Schuylers Lake, (p. v.), at the outlet of Schuyler Lake, on the e. border of the town, contains 2 churches and 280 inhabitants. West Exeter (p. v.) contains 1 church and 100 inhabitants. The first settlements were made by John Tunnicliff, near Schuyler Lake, and William Angel, on Angel Hill, in 1789.⁵ The first religious association (Presb.) was formed at Exeter Center, in 1800; Rev. T. W. Duncan was the first regular preacher.⁶

HARTWICK⁷—was formed from Otsego, March 30, 1802. Its s. line was changed in 1803. It is the central town in the co. It is a hilly upland, the highest summits being 200 to 350 ft. above the valleys. Its e. part is drained by the Susquehanna, and its w. part by Otsego Creek. The soil is chiefly a sandy and gravelly loam, with an occasional mixture of clay. Hartwick, (p. v.) on Otsego Creek, in the w. part, contains 4 churches, 2 iron founderies, several mills, and other manufacturing establishments. Pop. about 400. Hartwick Seminary, (p. v.) in the valley of the Susquehanna, contains the "Hartwick Theological and Classical Seminary,"⁸ a church, and 20 dwellings. South Hartwick (p. v.) contains a church and 17 houses. Toddsville, (p. v.), upon the line of Otsego, in the s. e. corner of the town, contains the Union Cotton Factory⁹ and about a dozen dwellings. Clintonville, a hamlet in the s. e. corner, is the seat of the Clinton Cotton Factory.¹⁰ The Hartwick Patent, including the greater part of the area of this town, was granted April 22, 1761; and settlements were made in the town before the ¹ Jacob Brown, John and Calvin Sewald, and Oliver McIntyre settled soon after; and ——— Slem, from Columbia Co., settled near the village, in 1797. Mr. Slem opened the first tavern and the first store, S. of the village. John Champion erected the first gristmill, and James Stewart the first carding and fulling mill, about 1819. The first school was taught by Samuel Thayer, in 1798. The first death is supposed to have been that of Mr. King, about 1797.

² The census reports 2 churches; M. E. and Bap.

³ At the close of the war, Col. Edmeston, for his military services, received the grant of a tract of land covering a large portion of the town on which he made the first settlement. At his death the lands fell to boys and minor children residing in England from whom no title could be obtained for many years—which greatly retarded the settlement of the town. During the Revolution the hired men of Mr. Carr were killed while at work his land was burnt by his property destroyed and himself and family were taken prisoners by the British and Indians and detained to the close of the war. Abel De Forest and Gordon De Forest were among the early settlers on the Unadilla; Aden Deming and James Kenada at Edmeston; and Stephen Taylor, on Taylor Hill, where the first school was taught. Rufus Graves kept the first mill; and James Kenada erected the first gristmill, both at Edmeston Cent. Co.

⁴ The census reports 5 churches; 2 Bap., 7th da. Bap., M. E., and Unit.

⁵ About the same time or soon after, Asa Williams settled in the s. part of the town; Joshua and Caleb Ang. Levi Ang. of Hill, Seth Tutts and Bethel Martin at West Exeter, and M. C. Lehman on the Rockledge. The hotel Rockledge kept the first inn, at Schuyler Lake; and C. Jones, the first store, in 1810. John Hartshome erected the first gristmill, on Helkammer Creek.

⁶ The census reports 6 churches; 2 M. E., Cong., Bap. Presb., and Unit.

⁸ This institution, established in 1815, was originally endowed by John Christopher Hartwick with a fund of $200,000.

⁹ The Union Cotton Factory was erected in 1800, and burned down and rebuilt in 1848. It gives employment to about 60 hands.

¹⁰ The Clinton Factory, erected in 1847, gives employment to 35 hands, and turns out 625,000 yards of printed cottons per annum.

Revolution.¹ The first church (Bap.) was formed Aug. 19, 1795; Rev. John Bostwick was the first settled preacher.²

LAURENS—was formed from Otsego, April 2, 1810. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. With the exception of the broad valley of Otsego Creek, the surface is high and hilly. It is drained s. by Otsego Creek and several tributaries, among which are Harrisons and Camps Creeks. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, in some parts slaty, and generally productive. One and a half mi. w. of Laurens is a sulphur spring. Laurens, (p. v.), on Otsego Creek, in the e. part, was incorp. April 22, 1834. It contains 3 churches, 2 flouring mills, the Otsego Cotton Mills,³ an iron foundery, and a tannery. Pop. 726. Jacksonville, (Mount Vision p. o.) in the s. e. corner, contains 2 churches, a grist and saw mill, and about 30 houses. West Laurens (p. v.) contains about 15 houses. Settlements were made in this town prior to the Revolution, by Joseph Marshall and Richard Smith, a little s. of Laurens Village; by John Sleeper, at the village; and by Wm. Ferguson, a little s. of it.⁴ The first religious association was formed by the Friends, who erected a meetinghouse in 1800.⁵

MARYLAND—was formed from Worcester, March 25, 1808. It lies on the s. line of the co., e. of the center. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. Schenevas Creek flows s. w. through near the center and receives several tributaries from the s. South Hill, a steep, unbroken ridge 350 to 500 ft. above the valleys, extends along the s. bank of the creek through the town; and from its summit the surface spreads out into a rocky and broken upland, extending into the s. border. The soil is principally a sandy loam, and is best adapted to grazing. Maryland, (p. v.) near the center of the town, contains a church and 20 houses; Schenevas, (p. v.) near the e. border, a church, tannery, and 383 inhabitants. Chaseville is a p. o. The first settlement was made by Thomas Thompson and his son John, from Columbia co., in 1793.⁶ The first religious association (Presb.) was formed at an early period; Rev. Mr. Ralph was the first preacher.⁷

MIDDLEFIELD—was formed from Cherry Valley, March 3, 1797. It is an interior town, lying n. e. of the center of the co. OTSEGO—was formed from Franklin (Delaware co.) and Unadilla, April 12, 1822, as "Huntsville." A part of Milford was annexed and its name changed April 17, 1830. It lies on the s. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is a hilly upland, divided by the Susquehanna, which flows s. w. through the s. part. The n. part is separated into ridges 200 to 400 ft. high, all extending n. and s. The streams are Mill Creek, east and west branches of Otsdawa Creek, Flax Creek, and Center Brook. The soil is a clay and sandy loam. Otego, (p. v.), on the Susquehanna, contains 4 churches and 331 inhabitants; Otsdawa, (p. v.), on Otsdawa Creek, contains a church, tannery, mill, and 20 dwellings. Center Brook is a p. o. on the stream of the same name. Settlements were made in this town, along the Susquehanna, soon after the close of the Revolution; but the precise date of the first settlement is not known.¹ The first church (Presb.) was organized at Otego Village, Sept. 17, 1805; Rev. Abner Benedict was the first preacher.²

OTSEGO—was formed as a part of Montgomery co., March 7, 1788, and originally included the greater part of Otsego co. Burlington, Richfield, and Unadilla were taken off in 1792, Hartwick in 1802, and Laurens in 1810. It is an interior town, lying upon the w. bank of Otsego Lake, n. of the center of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, lying between Otsego and Schuyler Lakes and descending abruptly towards each. The summits are 300 to 500 ft. above the water, the uplands being divided into two ridges by Fly Creek, which flows s. through the center. Oak Creek, the outlet of Schuyler Lake, flows s. through the w. part. The soil is clay, gravel, and sandy loam. Cooperstown, (p. v.), at the foot of Otsego Lake, was incorp. April 3, 1807, by the name of "Otsego." Its name was changed to Cooperstown June 12, 1812. Besides the co. buildings, it contains 5 churches, a bank, 3 newspaper offices, an academy,³ the buildings of the Cooperstown Seminary and Female Collegiate Institute,⁴ a flouring mill, and various manufacturing establishments.⁵ The location of the village is pleasant and attractive from its many elegant private residences and historic associations. Pop. about 1,500.⁶ Fly Creek, (p. v.) upon the stream of the same name, contains 3 churches, several manufactories,⁷ and 30 houses. Oakville, (p. v.), s. of the center, contains a church, factory, and 15 houses. Otsego Lake is a p. o. Toddsville (p. v.) is on the line of Hartwick. Settlements were made at Cooperstown and Fly Creek, in 1784-85, by Judge Wm. Cooper, Wm. Jarvis, William Ellison, Israel Guild, John Howard, and Elisha Finney.⁸ The first religious association (Presb. and Cong.) was formed Dec. 29, 1798; Rev. Isaac Lewis was the first preacher.⁹

PITTSFIELD—was formed from Burlington, March 21, 1797. New Lisbon was taken off in 1806. It is centrally situated upon the w. line of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, terminating in abrupt declivities upon Unadilla River, which forms its w. boundary. Wharton Creek flows across the s. w. corner, and several small tributaries of Butternut Creek flow through the s. part. The soil is generally a slaty and gravelly loam. Pittsfield, (p. o.) on the Unadilla, contains 10 houses. The first settlements were made in the valley of the Unadilla, about 1793, by Jacob Lull, Aaron Nobles, Hubbard Goodrich, and Matthew Bennett.¹⁰ The first church (Bap.) was formed at an early period, in the s. e. part of the town. The only church (Union) now in town was organized in the e. part in 1849.

¹ Ransom Hunt, Abraham Blakesley, John Birdsall, Benjamin Cummings, Jacob Yates, Joseph Pierce, and Barnard Oveshayer, were among the first settlers at Otego Village and along the river. Thomas Cook settled on the e. branch of the Otsdawa in 1800, and built there the first cloth dressing mill, in 1801. Ransom Hunt kept the first inn, and erected the first gristmill in town. Thaddeus R. Austin opened the first store.

² The census reports 6 churches; Presb., Prot. E., Bap., F. W. Bap., Christian, and M. E.

³ The first academy was formed in 1795, and the building burned down March 31, 1809, and was subsequently rebuilt. It has been substituted, and has prospered for most of the time, for half a century.

⁵ The Hope Cotton Factory, erected in 1813, with an aggregate capital of about $100,000, has through a long series of years given employment to 80 persons. After undergoing various changes in construction, machinery, and proprietorship, the establishment is still continued, with reduced operations.

⁶ J. Fenimore Cooper, the novelist, resided here; and his mansion and grounds were among the finest in Central N. Y.

⁷ At this place is a tannery, with a capital of $7,000, employing 50 men, a pulp factory; a manufactory of agricultural implements and machinery, employing a capital of $25,000; and a tannery and machine shop, employing 25 men.

⁸ John Miller, Widow Johnson, Wm. Abbott, and ——— Averell settled in 1786. The first deaths in town were those of two deserting soldiers, who were shot by order of Gen. Clinton, in 1779, before the settlements were commenced. The first school was taught at Cooperstown, by Joshua Dewey, in 1788. Wm. Ellison opened the first inn, in 1786; and Judge Wm. Cooper the first store, in 1789-90. The first mill was erected by Samuel Tubbs, at Toddsville, in 1790. In 1779, General Clinton, on his way to join Sullivan's expedition, built a dam across the outlet of the lake to raise the waters sufficiently to float down the Susquehanna the best, containing his men and military stores. The remains of this dam are still visible. In 1784, Gen. Washington, on a journey of observation, visited the foot of Otsego Lake. In 1780, John Miller felled a large tree across the outlet to serve as a bridge. Judge Cooper removed his family from N. J. in 1780.

⁹ The census reports 10 churches; 3 M. E., 2 Presb., 2 Univ., Prot. E., Ep., and R. C.

¹⁰ Seth Harrington and Benj. Eddy settled in the e. part of the town soon after the settlements on the Unadilla. The first school was taught by Benjamin Pendleton, at Pittsford P. O. Matthew Bennett kept the first inn, in 1797, and Henry Randall the first store in 1810, at the P. O. Benj. Atwell built the first mill, and the Arkwright Manufacturing Company the first cotton factory, both on the Unadilla.

THE HOUSE OF THE FUTURE

PLAINFIELD—was formed from Richfield, March 25, 1799. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is a broken and hilly upland. Unadilla River, forming the w. boundary, is bordered by steep bluffs rising to the height of 400 to 600 ft. The soil is a clay and sandy loam. Unadilla Forks, (p. v. v.) at the junction of the e. and w. branches of Unadilla River, contains 2 churches, a hoe factory, flouring mill, sawmill, and machine shop. Pop. 253. Plainfield Center contains a church and 15 houses; Spooners Corners is a p. o.; Leonardsville, (p. v. v.) on the Unadilla, in the s. part, is mostly in Madison co. The first settlement was made at and near Plainfield Center, in 1793, by Ruggles Spooner, Elias Wright, and John Kilbourne.¹ The first church (Bap.) was formed and the church erected in 1800; Rev. John Wait the first preacher.²

RICHFIELD—was formed from Otsego, April 10, 1792. Exeter and Plainfield were taken off in 1799. It is the extreme northern town of the co. Its surface is rolling and moderately hilly, with a mean elevation of 150 to 200 ft. above Schuyler Lake,—Pray and Nine Hills, on either side of the head of the lake, rising about 200 ft. higher. Schuyler Lake, in the s. e. corner, occupies a deep valley; and into it flow several small streams from the e. and w. The soil is of diversified character, consisting of gravel, slate, clay, and sandy loam, well cultivated and productive. About 500,000 pounds of cheese are made in the town annually,—being more than double that made in any other town in the co. Richfield Springs, (p. v. v.) near the head of Schuyler Lake, in the s. e. corner of the town, contains 3 churches, a flouring mill, and 168 inhabitants.³ Monticello, (Richfield p. o.) near the center, contains a church and 139 inhabitants. Mayflower is a p. o.; Brighton contains about 15 houses. Settlements were made prior to the Revolution; but they were broken up during the war. The first settlers after the war were John Kimball, Richard and Wm. Pray, John Beardsey, Joseph Coats, and Seth Allen, in 1787.⁴ The first church (Prot. E.) was formed at Monticello, May 20, 1799; Rev. Daniel Nash was the first pastor.⁵

ROSEBOOM⁶—was formed from Cherry Valley, Nov. 23, 1854. It lies on the e. border of the co., s. of the center. The surface is a hilly upland, broken by the valleys of several streams. The hills are generally rounded, and their summits elevated 300 to 350 ft. above Schoharie Kil. The soil is a gravelly loam. Roseboom, (p. v. v.) in the s. w. part, on the line of Middlefield, contains a church and 111 inhabitants; and South Valley, (p. v. v.) in the s. e. part, 2 churches and 175 inhabitants. Pleasant Brook (p. o.) is a hamlet.⁷ The settlements in this town were commenced about 1800. There are 5 churches in town.⁸

SPRINGFIELD—was formed from Cherry Valley, March 3, 1797. It lies upon the s. line of the co., e. of the center. The surface is a rolling and moderately hilly upland, the hills generally rising about 200 ft. above the valleys. Mt. Wellington, e. of the head of Otsego Lake, in the s. part of the town, is 300 to 400 ft. high. Summit Lake, in the s. part, in high water discharges its waters both s. and s. The streams are small brooks. In the s. part is a deep sink, called "The Chyle," into which a considerable stream of water runs and flows through a subterranean passage to Braman's Factory, where it again appears on the surface. The sink is tunnel-shaped, 20 feet in circumference and 15 ft. deep. After heavy rains it is sometimes filled with water, which, while discharging through the orifice below, often moves round in rapid gyrations. The soil is a black and yellow loam, resting upon limestone and slate. More hops are grown in this town than in any other town in the co. Springfield Center (p. v. v.) contains 2 churches, a tannery, and 15

² The census reports 4 churches; 2 F. W. Bap.; Presb.; Bap.

³ Richfield Springs—from which the village derives its name— are celebrated for their medicinal properties in the cure of cutaneous disorders, and for the number of novelties annually at the Fair there. Professor Reid has given the following result of an analysis of a wine-gallon of the water of these springs:—

	Grains.
Bicarbonate of magnesia	20
Bicarbonate of lime	40
Chloride of sodium and magnesia	1.5
Sulphate of magnesia	39
Hydro-sulphate of magnesia and lime	2
Sulphate of lime	20
Solid matter	153.5

Sulphuretted hydrogen gas, 26.9 inches.

⁴ Wm. Tunnel of, David Hawks, John H. C. Hill, J. C. Latine, and Jos. Rockwell settled at Exeter, in 1782, and in 1789 Obadiah Rockwell and his son moved to the site of the present grand father of the late Levi Rockwell, and the present David Beardsey, of the settlement near Schoharie, in 1790. The first farm was that of J. B. Beardsey, of the present town, that of Ebenezer Russ Band Mrs. M. of the present town. Professor taught the first school at Richfield Springs, in 1790. He has kept the first inn, and Cyrus Rockwell the first store in the springs; William Tunnel owned the first mill in the same place.

⁵ The census reports 7 churches; 2 M. E.; 2 Prot. E.; Presb., and Conv.

⁷ Abram Rockboom erected the first saw-mill, flouring and fulling mill, in 1806, at Fair. David Appleton kept the first inn and the first store in the present town, in 1812. The first grist-mill was erected at Leonardsville, by George Lewis, in 1818.

⁸ The census reports 4 churches; 2 M. E.; Evan. Luth. Christian, and Bap.

houses; and East Springfield (p. v.) a church and 20 houses. Springfield is a p. o. near the center. The first settlements were made in 1762, by John Kelly, Richard Ferguson, and James Young, from Ireland, at East Springfield; and Gustavus Klumph and Jacob Tygart, at the head of Otsego Lake. Most of these settlers were driven off during the war.¹ The first church (Bap.) was formed at an early period; Rev. — Fairman was the first preacher.²

UNADILLA—was formed from Otsego, April 10, 1792. Butternuts, "Suffrage," (now Milford), and "Otego" (now Oneonta) were taken off in 1796, a part of "Huntsville" (now Otego) in 1822, and a part of Butternuts in 1837. It lies at the junction of Unadilla and Susquehanna Rivers, in the s. w. corner of the co. The surface is a rolling and hilly upland, the highest summits being 400 to 500 ft. above the valleys. Unadilla River, forming the w. boundary, Susquehanna River, the e., and Sandy Hill Creek, in the e. part, are the principal streams. The soil on the river bottoms is an alluvial loam, and on the uplands a slaty and gravelly loam. Unadilla, (p. v.) on the Susquehanna, was incorp. April 2, 1827. It contains 3 churches, the Unadilla Academy, a bank, newspaper office, cotton factory, furnace, 2 tanneries, a flouring mill, sawmill, paper mill, and various other manufactories. Pop. 795. Unadilla Center (p. v.) contains a church and 15 houses. Settlements were made at Unadilla, along the valley of the Susquehanna, prior to the Revolution; of the precise date, and by whom, no records or tradition inform us.³ A conference took place between Gen. Herkimer and Brant, the Indian warrior, at Unadilla, in July, 1777. The first church (Prot. E.) was formed Nov. 1, 1809; Rev. Russell Wheeler was the first pastor.⁴

WESTFORD—was formed from Worcester, March 25, 1808. It is an interior town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is hilly, the highest summits being 400 to 500 ft. above the valleys. It is drained s. by Elk Creek and w. by tributaries of Cherry Valley Creek. The soil is a sandy loam of good quality. Westford, (p. v.), a little e. of the center of the town, contains 2 churches and 12 houses. Westville, (p. v.) in the w., on the line of Middleford, contains 3 churches and 15 houses. The first settlements were made about 1790, in the s. e. part, by Thomas Sawyer, Benjamin Chase, Oliver Salisbury, Alpheus Earl and father, Artemas, Moses, and David Howe, and Ephraim Smith,—all from Vt.⁵ The first religious association (M. E.) was formed in 1791.⁶

WORCESTER—was formed from Cherry Valley, March 3, 1797. Decatur, Maryland, and Westford were taken off in 1808. It is the s. e. corner town in the co. The surface is a hilly and broken upland. The highlands which occupy the s. part of the town descend toward the s. by an abrupt declivity 350 to 400 ft. high. This declivity forms a continuous ridge extending s. e. and s. w. through near the center of the town. The principal streams are Charlotte River and its tributaries and Schenevas Creek. The soil is a sandy loam. Worcester, (p. v.) in the s. w. part, contains 2 churches, 2 gristmills, a tannery, and 40 dwellings; East Worcester (p. v.) 2 churches, a gristmill and sawmill, and 25 dwellings; and South Worcester, (p. v.) on Charlotte River, a church, a bank, and 20 dwellings. The first settlements were made on Schenevas Creek, from 1788 to '90. The first church (Presb.) was formed at an early period.⁷ Rev. — Bushnell was the first preacher.⁸

⁴ The census reports 7 churches; 3 M. E., 2 Bap., Prot. E., and Presb.

⁵ Among the other early settlers were Luther Seaver and Samuel Babcock, from Mass.; the latter in March, 1795. Wm.

Chase was the first child born in town. Nathaniel Griggs kept the first inn, at Westford Village, in 1795; and David Smith, the first store, about the same time. Capt. Artemas Howe built the first gristmill, in 1794, and also erected the first sawmill.

⁶ The census reports 5 churches; 2 M. E., Cong., Prot. E., and Prot. Mth.

⁷ Among the early settlers were Silas Crippen and Henry Stever, from Columbia co., Solomon Hartwell, Uriah Bigelow, and Nathaniel Todd, from Mass., and Charles Wilder and Joseph Tainter, from Vt. Philip Crippen, son of Silas Crippen, was the first child born in town. The first school was taught by Joseph Tainter, in 1798. Isaac Butler kept the first inn, in 1793; and Aaron Kinney, the first store, in 1798. Silas Crippen built the first gristmill, in 1799, and the first sawmill, about the same time. The first clothing and carding works were erected by Rufus Duaper.

⁸ The census reports 4 churches; 2 Bap., M. E., and Evan. Luth.

PUTNAM COUNTY.

This county¹ was formed from Dutchess, June 12, 1812. It lies upon the Hudson, between Dutchess and Westchester cos., and extends e. to the Conn. line. It is centrally distant 85 mi. from Albany, and contains 234 sq. mi. It embraces nearly all of The Highlands e. of the Hudson. The mountains consist of several steep, rocky ranges, extending in a s. e. and s. w. direction and separated by deep, narrow valleys, the principal of which are Peckskill Hollow, and Canopus and Pleasant Valleys. The co. is watered by the upper branches of Croton River and several smaller streams. Among the mountain valleys are numerous picturesque lakes, the largest of which are Lakes Mahopac,² Canopus,³ and Glencida.⁴ In the valleys the soil is a productive, sandy loam, but the mountains are bare and rocky, and only valuable for their mines⁵ and quarries.⁶ Iron ore abounds; and serpentine, magnesian limestone, and several other minerals are also found.⁷ The rocks belong chiefly to the primitive and lower sedimentary or metamorphic series, consisting of granite, gneiss, granular quartz, talcose slate, metamorphic limestone, serpentine, greenstone, and hornblende. Peat and marl are found in various localities.⁸ In the farming districts the people are principally engaged in dairying and furnishing milk for the New York market. Manufacturing is extensively carried on at Cold Spring. The principal works of internal improvement are the Hudson River R. R., extending through Philipstown, and the Harlem R. R., through Patterson and Southeast. The county seat is located at Carmel.⁹ The co. buildings consist of a courthouse,¹⁰ jail,¹¹ and co. clerk's office.¹² The poorhouse is located on a farm of 196 acres in Kent, about 2½ mi. from Carmel.¹³ Two newspapers are published in the co.¹⁴ A strip 580 rods wide along the e. border of the co. constitutes a part of the "Oblong" Tract, and was patented by Thomas Hawley and his associates, June 8, 1731.¹⁵ The remaining part of the co., and a small part of Dutchess, are included in the great Highland Patent of Adolph Philipse. At the time of the Revolution this patent was owned by Philip Philipse, and Mary and Susannah, wives of Col. Roger Morris and Beverly Robinson, of the British army. Morris and Robinson, together with their wives, were attainted, and their property was confiscated and sold by the Commissioners of Forfeiture. It was subsequently shown in court that one-third of the patent was vested in the children of Col. Morris and his wife, and was not reached by the bill of attainder. The State was therefore obliged to

¹ Named from Maj. Gen. Israel Putnam, who was stationed in the co. a part of the time during the Revolutionary War. In the act of Dec. 16, 1787, the co. was styled "South Freeman's," March 21, 1772 it was subdivided into "Southeast," "Fredericksburgh," and "Philips' Freeholds." The first of these products included the present towns of Southeast and Patterson, the second Carmel and Kent, and the third Putnam Valley and Philipsburgh.

⁶ Blunt's Quarry, on the s. side of Breakneck Point, near the line of Dutchess co., affords a bluish gray granite which has been extensively used for the Belaire Breakwater, Fort Calhoun, and Fortress Monroe. The Highland Granite Co.'s quarry, principally owned by Howard K. Holdam, is near the Hudson River, a short distance from Blunt's Quarry. It is elevated about 200 ft. above the river. Stony Point Quarry, on a rocky point sub-extending into the Hudson, Phelps Quarry, on an estate of the same name, and other quarries in the co., have been worked. Marble is found in the s. part of Patterson.

⁸ The principal localities where peat is found are near Patterson and on the e. side of Lake Mahopac.

⁹ The first courts were held at the Baptist Church. The first co. officers were Stephen Barnum, First Judge; John Jewett, Co. Clerk; Wm. H. Johnston, Sheriff; and Joel Frost, Surrogate.

¹⁰ The courthouse is a wooden building, erected in 1843, at a cost of $2,500. Joseph Crain, Stephen Barnum, Joel Frost, Jonathan Ferris, and John Jewett were appointed to superintend its erection.

¹¹ The jail is a stone building, erected in 1841. It adjoins the courthouse on the e.

¹² The clerk's office is a stone fireproof building, located a few rods s. of the courthouse.

¹³ The average number of inmates in the poorhouse is 52, support at a weekly cost of 43 cts. each. The income from the farm is $100 per annum. A school is taught throughout the year.

¹⁴ The Putnam Co. Courier was established at Carmel in 1844. It was successively issued as

The Putnam Republican, published by Thos. Smith; and The Putnam Democrat, published by W. H. Slot, and afterwards by Elijah Yerks, James D. Little, succeeded Yerks, and changed the paper to

The Dem. or the Courier; and again, in 1852, to protect the purchasers by settling the claims of these children.¹ During the Revolution the passes through the mountains in this co. were carefully guarded, and at different times large bodies of troops were stationed there. It was the principal scene of the consummation of Arnold's treason, and of many events of minor interest, though no battle took place within its limits. Gen. Putnam had command of the army stationed here most of the time.

The Putnam Co. Democrat. By this name it is now published. The Putnam Free Press was commenced at Carmel, June 12, 1858, by Wm. J. Blake, by whom it is still published.

CARMEI—was formed from "Frederickstown," March 17, 1795. It lies upon the s. border of the co., between Putnam Valley and Southeast. Its surface is rolling and hilly, with intervening valleys extending in a s. and s. direction. Peekskill Hollow Range and Big Hill are the highest summits.² The w. branch of Croton River and Michaels Brook flow through the e. part of the town, and Peekskill Hollow Creek through the s. w. In the town are several beautiful lakes and ponds, the principal of which are Lakes Mahopac,³ Glencida,⁴ and Gilead, and Kirk and Long Ponds. The soil is a light, sandy and gravelly loam intermixed in some places with clay. Carmel, (p. v.) the co. seat, is situated on Lake Glencida. It is the seat of the Raymond Collegiate Institute,⁵ and contains 3 churches, a bank, and 2 newspaper offices. Pop. 591. Mahopac (p. v.) contains 1 church, a bank, and about 40 houses; and Red Mills,⁶ (p. v.) contains 1 church and about 20 houses. Settlement was commenced about 1710.⁷ Enoch Crosby, the "Hercy Birch" of Cooper's Spy, lived in this town till after the Revolution, when he removed to Southeast. A church was organized, and an edifice erected near Gilead Lake, a short time before the commencement of the Revolution. There are now 7 churches in town.⁸

KENT⁹—was formed as "Frederickstown," March 7, 1788. Its name was changed to "Frederick" March 17, 1795, and to Kent April 15, 1817. Carmel was taken off in 1795. It is the central town on the s. border of the co. Its surface in the e. part is broken by numerous hills, and in the w. by steep and rocky mountain peaks separated by deep and narrow ravines. Smally Hill is the highest peak. The w. and middle branches of Croton River, and Horse Pond and Pine Pond Brooks, are the principal streams. In the town are several ponds and small lakes, the principal of which are White and Pine Ponds.¹⁰ Farmers Mills (p. v.) contains 1 church and several manufacturing establishments.¹¹ Coles Mills (Kent p. o.) and Endingtonville (p. o.) are hamlets. The first settlement was made about 1750, by Zachariah Merritt.¹² The census reports 3 churches in town,—2 Bap. and 1 Union.

PATTERSON¹³—was formed from "Frederickstown" and Southeast, as "Franklin," March 17, 1795, and its name was changed April 6, 1808. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface

¹ The Philippe Patent was granted June 17, 1697, to Adolph Philippe, a merchant of New York, who died in 1749, without issue, leaving his estate to his nephew, Frederick Philippe. The latter had 5 children,—Frederick, Philip, Susannah, Mary, and Margaret. By his will, dated June 6, 1751, Frederick was disinherited, and Margaret dying young, the property was equally divided among the remaining three. Philip left a widow, who married one Ogden; Susannah married Beverly Robeson, and Mary married Col. Roger Morris. On the 7th of Feb. 1774, the patent was divided into 9 lots; 3, each 4 mi. square, bordering upon the Hudson, and denominated "water lots"; 3, each 1 mi. wide by 12 long, extending s. and s. across the patent, and denominated "long lots"; and 3, each 4 mi. sq., upon the e. border, denominated "back lots." Philip, Susannah, and Mary Philippe each owned one of each kind of lots. On the 14th of Jan. 1778, previous to the marriage of Mary, a deed of marriage settlement was executed, by which her estate was vested in such children as might be born under the marriage, reserving only to herself and husband a life interest in the property. When Robeson and Morris and their wives were attainted, their property was sold, chiefly to the former tenants. In 1789 John Jacob Astor bought the interest of the heirs of Morris in this property for £20,000. The State, to protect those who held title from the Commissioners of Landtime, passed a law, April 16, 1827, directing 5 suits to be presented to judgment in the Circuit Court of the S. Dist. of N. Y., and presented by writs of error to the Supreme Court of the U. S. For review and final decision. Against the defendants, the State agreed to pay $4,000,000 in 5 per cent stock, redeemable at pleasure; and if the decision included the improvements that had been made by occupants, $250,000 more. Three suits were tried, each resulting in favor of Astor; upon which the compromise was, by act of April 2, 1832, directed to issue stock for the full amount, with costs. The amount issued was $6,150,000. Five suits had been tried in the State involving larger interests, to greater numbers, or which were argued with more ability, than this. In the suit against James Crover the counsel for the plaintiff were Messrs. Ogden, J. O. Hoffman, Emmet, Platt and Ogden, and for the defendant, Talbot, a Attorney Gen. Webster, Van Buren, Ogden, Hoffman, and Cowles. See

Report of Trial, by E. F. Spothawd; Law. Jo. 18 9, 1, 337; Sen. Doc. 1831, H. 24, 28; Assen. Doc. 1832, 149, 215. Eber's Reports U. S. Supreme Court, V. 1.

² Among the principal peaks in town are Round, Turkey, and Conus Mts., and Goose, Barrett, Burned, and Popper Hills, in the s. part; Pisgah, Watts, Pond, and Draw Hills, on the e. Hill, Watermelon, Indian, and Round Hills, in the s. Austin, Golden Roost, and Hemlock Hills, in the w., and Battle and Hercules Hills, and Adams Ridge, in the central part.

⁴ Lake Glencida covers an area of 170 acres, and is 100 feet deep.

⁵ The Raymond Collegiate Institute was founded in 1851, at a cost of about $400,000, by James Raymond, Jr. It is a p. v. institution, owned by the heirs of Mr. Raymond.

⁷ George Hughson settled in 1710, at Mahopac, and Wm. and Erich Hill at Red Mills. The first mill was erected at the latter place.

⁸ M. E., 2 Bap., and 2 Presb.

⁹ "Frederickstown" was formed March 7, 1788, and was named from Frederick Philippe. The town of Coles Mills presented name from the Reed family, who were the first settlers.

¹⁰ The other ponds and lakes are Barrett's, Burned, Long, and Draw Ponds, and Lake Sagamore.

¹¹ A falling mill, sawmill, gristmill, and tannery.

¹² Families named Boyd, Weyon, Crover, and Butler, after, Barrett, Endington, and others, from Massachusetts, were early settlers.

¹³ The town was first named in honor of Dr. Franklin. Its present name was derived from a family of early settlers.

is hilly; but, with a few exceptions, the hills are arable to their summits. The principal streams are the e. branch of Croton River and its tributaries, Quaker, Birch, and Muddy Brooks. Croton Lake is in the w. and Little Pond in the e. part. "The Great Swamp" extends along the e. branch of Croton River.¹ The soil is a sandy loam. Patterson, (p. v.) a station on the Harlem R. R., contains 2 churches and 37 houses. Towners Station (Towners p. o.) and Haviland Hollow (p. o.) are hamlets. The Prot. E. Church at Patterson was built in 1770. There are 4 churches in town.²

PHILIPSTOWN³—was formed March 7, 1788. A part of Fishkill (Dutchess co.) was taken off in 1806, and Putnam Valley in 1839. It is the most westerly town of the co., and extends about 10 mi. along the Hudson. Its surface is broken by numerous steep and rocky mountain ridges separated by deep and narrow valleys.⁴ These mountains constitute the most elevated portion of The Highlands.⁵ The ranges have a general n. and s. or n. e. and s. w. direction. Clove Creek flows through the n. part of the town, and Canopus Creek through the s. e. corner. Foundry, Breakneck, Andreas, Indian, and other brooks flow through narrow valleys and rocky ravines into the Hudson. The greater part of the surface is unfit for agricultural purposes. Constitution Island⁶ is a promontory opposite West Point, connected with the mainland by a marshy meadow. The "Sunk Lot" is a tract of 1300 acres of low and apparently sunken ground. Several mines of magnetic iron ore had been opened in town; but none are now wrought. Granite is extensively quarried, and brick are made at several points along the river. The soil is a gravelly, sandy, and clayey loam. Coldspring, (p. v.) situated on the Hudson, was incorp. April 22, 1846, and includes the suburban villages of Nelsonville and Marysville. It is a station on the Hudson River R. R., and contains 6 churches and an extensive foundry.⁷ Pop. 2,237. Breakneck and Griffin Corners contain each about a dozen houses. Davenport Corners contains 1 church and 10 houses. Continental Village⁸ has 1 church and about 12 houses. Garrisons, (p. o.) on the Hudson, is a station on the Hudson River R. R. The first settlement was made about 1715, by Thos. Davenport.⁹ This town was principally settled under Col. Beverly Robinson,¹⁰ who acquired title by marriage with Susannah, daughter of Frederick Philipse. Undercliff, the residence of Gen. Geo. P. Morris, is situated on a high bluff in the s. part of Cold Spring. The census reports 9 churches in town.¹¹

PUTNAM VALLEY—was formed from Philipstown, as "Quincy," March 14, 1839. Its

² Prot. E. Bap., Friends, and Presb.

³ Named from Adolph Philipse, patentee of the Philipse Manor. The Philipse Patent was formed March 24, 1772.

⁵ Among the peaks of The Highlands in this town are Anthony's Nose, Sugar Leaf, Breakneck Mt., and Bull, Hog Back, Vinegar, Cut, Pine, and Fort Hills. Anthony's Nose is 1228 feet above the Hudson, and Sugar Leaf 800 ft.

¹⁰ Col. Robinson's house, situated at the foot of Sugar Leaf Mt., was the headquarters of Gens. Putnam and Parsons in 1778-79, and of Gen. Arnold at the time of his treason. The building is still standing, and is owned by Richard D. Arden, by whom it is carefully preserved in its original character. Col. Robinson granted a glebe to St. Philip's Church in The Highlands, 1 mi. e. of Garrisons, which was confirmed by the act of March 27, 1794. The church was used as a barrack during the Revolution.—Blake's Hist. Putnam Co., pp. 180-209; Sabine's Loyalists, p. 562.

name was changed Feb. 13, 1840. It lies on the S. border of the Putnam, Putnam, and Carmel. Its surface is broken by steep and rocky mountain ridges, generally running in a S. direction, and separated by narrow valleys. These mountain ridges constitute a part of the Highlands. The principal streams are Canopus Creek, Canopus Lake Creek, and Peekskill Hollow Brook. Canopus Lake is a beautiful sheet of water near the center of the county. The valleys is a moderately fertile, sandy and gravelly loam. Iron ore is found in several localities, but in places so difficult of access that it is not mined to any considerable extent. Oregon, at the confluence of Peekskill Hollow Brook and Canopus Lake Creek, contains 17 houses, and Crofts Corners contains 2 churches and 10 houses. Tomkins Corners is a hamlet. Among the early settlers were families named Dusenbury and Adams. The 1790 census reports 4 churches in town: 3 M. E. and 1 Bap.

SOUTHEAST—was formed from Fredericks town and Northwestern March 7, 1788. A part of Patterson was taken off, as "Franklin," in 1795. It is the S. E. corner of the county. Its surface is rolling and hilly. The streams are the E. and middle branches of Great River and their tributaries. Several small lakes and ponds lie among the hills. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Iron ore abounds, but no mines are wrought at the present time. About 100 gals. of milk are sent daily from this town to the New York market. Brewsters Station, (p. v.) on the Harlem R. R., contains 1 church and a bank, and has a pop. of 179. Heddingville and Brush Hollow are hamlets. Southeast Center has 144 houses, 1 church, and Milltown (p. v.) 167. De Forest Corners, Doanesburgh, Foggingtown, and Dykemans Station (Dykemans p. v.) are hamlets. This was one of the first settled towns in the co.⁵ The first religious services were conducted by Rev. Elisha Kent, grandfather of the late Chancellor, about the year 1730.⁶

1 Canopus Lake is 2 mi long by 1 wide. Clear, Muddy, Peltons, S. pond, two islands, Cranberry, Kargis, and W. k. Pond are situated E. of it, and water in the E. end.
 2 On the farm of Harry Child are the ruins of the Hempstead Hoop, built in 178 by a detachment of the Mass. line, and one of the companies from Hempstead, L. I.
 3 S. S. Kent's name was first found as appearing Dec. 17, 1757, and confirmed March 24, 1772. The word "Kent" in the name was dropped March 17, 1795.
 4 Tomkins and Kent's children were the first to settle in the town.
 5 Among the early settlers were families named Dusenbury and Adams. The town was settled by the Rev. Elisha Kent, grandfather of the late Chancellor, from Massachusetts, in 1730. He was the first to settle in the town, and remained at 17 on the farm of the late Chancellor, and died in 1773.
 6 The census reports 4 churches in town: 3 M. E. and 1 Baptist Union.

QUEENS COUNTY.

This county was organized Nov. 1, 1683,¹ having previously been included in the North and West Ridings of York-shire.² Its original bounds have not been changed. It lies upon Long Island, near the w. extremity, is centrally distant 133 mi. from Albany, and contains 410 sq. mi. It extends across the island, bordering both upon Long Island Sound and the ocean. Its coasts are deeply indented by irregular inlets, bays, and harbors. The principal of these upon the sound are Oyster Bay, Cold Spring and Oyster Harbors, Mill Neck Creek, Hempstead Harbor, Manhasset Bay, Little Neck Bay, Little Bay, Powells Cove, Flushing Bay, and Bowery Bay. Upon the East River are Halletts Cove and the narrow passage of Hell Gate, and upon the s. shore, Jamaica, Hempstead, and South Oyster

Bays. Along these bays and the creeks that flow into them are wide salt meadows, the most extensive being upon the s. shore. Outside of the bays on the ocean side is a series of beaches and shifting sand-ridges, affording a complete protection from the storms of the ocean. These beaches are divided into distinct parts by several inlets opening into the bays.³

Inclosed in the bays within the beaches is a great number of low, marshy islands separated by narrow tidal streams and covered with sedges.⁴ A wide strip bordering immediately upon the bays is of the same marshy character. Along the deep bays upon the n. coast are small patches of salt meadow; but the greater part of the land upon the capes, necks, and promontories is of a most excellent character.⁵ A range of hills 100 to 300 feet high extends in a general e. and w. direction through the co., a little n. of the center, and irregular spurs extend northward to the sound. From the base of the ridge a wide, unbroken plain extends to the s. to the salt marshes which surround the bays.⁶

The streams of the co. are mostly small, and afford but a limited amount of water-power. At the mouth of several of the creeks on both the n. and s. shores the ebbing tide is used for hydraulic purposes. At the head of several of the streams are little, fresh water ponds,⁷ the principal of which is Success Pond,⁸ near the top of the high ridge in the s.e. corner of Flushing. The soil upon the n. side is a productive, sandy loam, in some places mixed with clay. The plains have a coarse, sandy soil, which is rendered productive only at considerable cost. Along the borders of the salt meadows is a strip of light, sandy soil, easily cultivated and of moderate fertility.⁹

The people are principally engaged in agriculture and market gardening. Fishing and the taking of oysters afford occupation to a large number of people. An extensive coasting trade is carried on, and the co. each year furnishes a large quota of sailors. Manufactures are extensive and various, and are confined principally to the n. shore.

The co. courthouse is situated upon the plains of North Hempstead, a little n.e. of Mineola station and p.o., and near the geographical center of the co.¹⁰

² By a convention held at Hempstead in 1665, Long Island, Staten Island, and a part of Westchester were divided into a shire called "Yorkshire," for the purpose of holding courts and administering justice. This was subdivided into "boroughs," known as "East River," (subdivided into "West River," Kings, Staten Island, and Newtown) and "New York," (subdivided into West and East River).—Thompson's Hist. L. I., p. 15.

³ The principal of the inlets are Bay Island, New and Gilgo Inlets, and the entrance into Jamaica Bay; and the principal beaches are Jones, Long, and Rockaway Beaches. The first named is a favorite resort for summer residences and bathing.

⁵ A considerable portion of this coast is high, affording beautiful sites for country residences.

The Hempstead Branch of the n.e. descends 40 feet in 2½ mi., and the Success Branch rises 60 feet in less than 4 mi. The highest point on the island is Harbor Hill, at the head of Hempstead Harbor, 310 feet above tide.

⁷ Several of these ponds have recently been purchased to supply the Brooklyn Waterworks.

⁸ Called by the Indians "Success," from which the present name is supposed to be derived. The water is clear and cold, with an average depth of 10 feet. The pond is about 500 rods in circumference, is surrounded by a high bank, and has an outlet, but does not usually overflow. It is said to be 100 to 150 feet above tide.—Prince's Hist. L. I., p. 27; Thompson's L. I., p. 66.

¹⁰ The first court was held at the "North Riding of York-shire" was held at Jamaica in 1683; and a building called the "County

The jail occupies a portion of the courthouse building. The county is served by a spacious brick building in the village of Jamaica and in the same building are the offices of the Supt. and Board of Supervisors. The co. has no post-office, but a large number of private accommodations for its own paupers.

The Brooklyn and Jamaica R.R., extending w. from Jamaica to the city, is here joined by the Long Island R.R., which extends e. from Jamaica through Hempstead, North Hempstead and Oyster Bay. The Flushing R.R. extends w. from Flushing Village through Newtown to the mouth of Newtown Creek. The Syosset Branch R.R. connects Hillside with the L. I. R.R., with the village of Syosset, 3½ mi. S.

There are 7 newspapers published in the co.: 2 at Jamaica, 2 at Hempstead, 2 at Flushing, and 1 at Glen Cove.

The co. was mostly settled by English immigrants, under the authority of the Dutch Government during the last 20 years of its existence. The N. extremity of Long Island was claimed by the English colonies of New England, and the boundary line was the subject of a long and angry dispute, which was never entirely settled until the final adjudication of New York by the British in 1664. The whole of this co. was under the Dutch except Oyster Bay, which was a separate territory. The first planters came on in considerable numbers, and were associated in the purchase of the lands from the Indians. They were mostly united by a common religion, and many of them were invested with certain civil rights, which were afterward confirmed by the English Government of New York, and some of which continue to the present time. The people soon became the seat of magistrates and municipal officers, from which the Dutch Government seldom seems to have been pleased.

The people employed their own minister, and enjoyed comparative religious freedom. The Dutch, however, did not faithfully carry out the agreement which they had entered into with the settlers, and, in 1653, delegates were sent to the city to remonstrate against certain abuses. This was not heeded, and when the people again met for a like purpose they were ordered to disperse. The inhabitants rejoiced when the Dutch rule was finally broken, and they came under the protection of the English. Gov. Nicoll, the first English Governor, convened deputies from the several towns upon Long Island, who met at Hempstead in the Spring of 1665. A code of laws and ordinances was adopted, a shire was erected, the names of towns were changed, boundaries were settled, and affairs were regulated to meet the views of the new government. From this time onward could be taken without purchase from the Indians and patent from the Governor.

During the Revolution considerable numbers of the people joined theoyalists, and the co. was mostly in quiet possession of the enemy. Robberies were common, especially along the shore. Presbyterian churches were everywhere used for military purposes. A petty warfare was carried on in whaleboats, and daring exploits were performed by partisans of both sides.

H. I. was established in 1784. From 1787 to 1797, the courts were held in the first church, when a new edifice was built, when a court-house was erected by subscription, when a new edifice was burned. By statute of March 1, 1797, the court-house was raised to a great height, and in the present appearance, built in 1807. The court-house is a white stone building, and the steeple is a fine specimen of the architecture of the time. The court-house is a fine specimen of the architecture of the time. The court-house is a fine specimen of the architecture of the time.

In the case of the settlement of the land, the people were divided into two parties, the one in favor of the Dutch, and the other in favor of the English. The Dutch were supported by the Indians, and the English by the settlers. The Dutch were supported by the Indians, and the English by the settlers.

The court-house and the jail were built at the expense of the people, and were completed in 1797. The court-house and the jail were built at the expense of the people, and were completed in 1797.

FLUSHING¹—was first granted by letters patent—issued by the Dutch Governor Keift, Oct. 10, 1645—to a company of English immigrants.² This grant was confirmed by Gov. Nicoll, Feb. 1666, and by Gov. Dongan, March 23, 1685.³ Under the provisions of these charters a considerable amount of land was held in common, to be under the charge of 5 trustees, elected annually.⁴ It was recognized as a town under the State Government, March 7, 1788.⁵ It lies upon the n. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is moderately uneven and has a gentle inclination to the n. A low range of hills extends along its s. border and separates it from Jamaica. Flushing Creek, the principal stream, forms a portion of the w. boundary. The principal indentations upon the coast are Flushing Bay, Powells Cove, Little Bay, and Little Neck Bay. An extensive salt marsh extends along Flushing Creek and the head of Flushing Bay.⁶ The soil is a fine quality of productive sandy loam. Gardening, fruit growing,⁷ and the nursery business⁸ constitute the leading pursuits of the people. The town supports its own poor, and has a house and farm for their accommodation. Flushing, (p.v.) at the head of Flushing Bay, was incorp. April 9, 1813. It contains 8 churches, 2 newspaper offices, several private seminaries,⁹ and has a limited amount of manufactures.¹⁰ It is connected with New York by the Flushing R.R. and by a steam ferry from Hunters Point. From its proximity to New York, it has become the residence of many wealthy persons doing business in the city. Pop. 3,488. College Point,¹¹ (p.v.) on the sound, e. of Flushing Bay, is a modern village, settled mostly by Germans. It contains 2 churches, and an immense manufactory of whalebone, India rubber, and ratan, giving employment to 500 to 700 hands. Pop. 1,150. Whitestone¹² (p.v.) is located on the sound, in the extreme n. part of the town. It contains 2 churches, and an extensive tin and sheet ironware manufactory.¹³ Pop. 630. Marathon, at the head of Little Neck Bay, is a small, straggling village with one church. Several of the neighborhoods in this town are known by distinct local names.¹⁴ Wilkins Point has recently been purchased by the U. S. Government for the site of a fort.¹⁵ There are now 13 churches in town.¹⁶ The first settlements were made by English, who probably had first settled in Holland. They arrived at "New Amsterdam" in 1645. They were Non-conformists in religion, and settled on the Dutch dominions under the promise of entire religious freedom.¹⁷ But the Dutch soon commenced a series of persecutions that continued until the time of the British conquest in 1664. Several French Protestant families found their way into this town after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes; but few of their descendants are now found. The fruits introduced by these people are said to have given the first direction to the nursery business for which this town is so celebrated. During the Revolution a British force was stationed here.

HEMPSTEAD—was granted by Gov. Keift to several English families, Nov. 14, 1644. This patent was confirmed by Gov. Nicoll, March 6, 1666, and by Gov. Dongan, April 17, 1685.¹⁸

² The first patentees were Thos. Farrington, John Lawrence, John Hicks, John Townsend, Thos. Stiles, Robert Field, Thos. Sand, John Marston, Thos. Applegate, Lawrence Dutch, Wm. Lawrence, Henry Sawtell, Wm. Thorne, Michael Willard, Robt. Firman, and Wm. Widgeon for themselves and associates.

³ The patentees named in the patent of Gov. Nicoll were John Lawrence, (alderman of New York City,) Richard Cornwall, Chas. Bridges, Wm. Lawrence, Robert Terry, Wm. Noble, John Forlush, Chas. Doughty, Robt. Field, Philip Udell, Thos. Stiles, Benj. Field, Wm. Pidgeon, John Adams, John Hinchman, Nicholas Pannell, Tobias Peckes and John Bowne; and those in the patent of Gov. Dongan were Chas. Doughty, Thos. Willett, John Bowne, Matthias Harvey, Thos. Hicks, Richard Cornwall, John Hinchman, Jonathan Wright, and Saml. Hoyt.—Patents, I. 64, V. 222, 325, S. C. Office.

⁵ By the General Act, establishing towns.

⁷ The principal fruit grown are cherries, of which large quantities are annually sent to the New York market.

⁹ The principal of these schools are the Flushing Institute, the Flushing Female College, and the Linman Hill Seminary.

¹⁰ The principal manufactures are the Excelsior Emery and Sand Paper Manufactory, a steam planing and saw mill, and a tide-grist-mill.

¹² Named from a large boulder near the landing. The place was first called "Cook's Hill" and afterward "Crotonville."

¹³ This establishment gives employment to 430 hands.

¹⁴ Bay Side—the seat of A. G. Mickel, Ex-Mayor of New York—and Springville are near Little Neck Bay. Fresh Meadows, Ireland, and Spring Hill are localities s.e. of Flushing Village. Rocky Hill and Union Place are farming neighborhoods. Spring Hill was the residence of Cadwallader Colden, who died here Sept. 20, 1776. His son espoused the cause of the Royalists, and his estate was confiscated.

¹⁶ Of these there are at Flushing, 2 Friends, Prot. E., M. E., Ref. Prot. D., R. C., Cong., and Bap.; at College Point, R. C. and Luth.; at Whitestone, Prot. E. and M. E.; and at Marathon, a Prot. E.

¹⁸ The grantees named in the first patent were Robert Ford-

Upon the erection of North Hempstead, in 1784, its name was changed to South Hempstead; and its present name was re-adopted Feb. 5, 1796. It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies upon the s. side of the island, extending 20 mi. along the ocean, and embracing about 100 sq. mi. The shore is bordered by a line of beaches and sand hills; and within them are Hempstead and South Oyster Bays, inclosing a large number of low, sedge islands. West of the bay a long, narrow sandbar, known as Rockaway Beach,¹ extends to the s. w., forming the e. boundary of Jamaica Bay. Wide salt meadows border upon the bays, and from them the land spreads out into an almost perfectly level plain.² The soil along the borders of the marshes is moderately fertile, and upon the plain it consists of sand and fine gravel, which is naturally barren, although it may be made productive by the proper application of manures. A considerable portion of the marshes and plain belongs to the town and is used as common property.³ The people are largely engaged in market gardening. There is no poorhouse; but the paupers are annually put up at auction and struck off to the lowest bidder. Hempstead, (p. v.) near the center of the town, was incorp. June 20, 1853. It contains 3 churches, the Hempstead Seminary,⁴ and 1,486 inhabitants. Along the s. shore are several villages, generally scattered and extended over a large territory. They are mostly surrounded by gardens and orchards. Jerusalem South, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, contains a gristmill and Friends' meetinghouse; next w. are respectively Bridge Haven, containing a gristmill and church, Merrick,⁵ (p. v.) and Greenwich Point, two farming neighborhoods; Freeport,⁶ (p. v.) a fishing village, containing 2 churches; Milburn, Baldwinville, and Christian Hook, hamlets; Rockville Center, (p. v.) containing 1 church; Near Rockaway, a hamlet, and Far Rockaway, (Rockaway p. o.) a noted sea-bathing place.⁷ Valley Stream and Fosters Meadows are two scattered settlements along the e. border. New Bridge, (formerly "Little Neck,") Washington Square, and Brookfield are farming neighborhoods. The first settlements were made in 1643, by a colony of English, who had previously settled at Weathersfield and Stamford, in Conn. They founded the first English settlement within the co.⁸ The town early acquired a prominent rank, and its records (preserved at North Hempstead) contain a large amount of valuable historical information. Horse races were established here by the Governor in 1690. The first church (Presb.) was started in 1648. There are 18 churches in town.⁹

JAMAICA¹⁰—was first granted for settlement by Gov. Stuyvesant, March 21, 1656; and a more ample patent was granted in 1660. The rights of the town were confirmed by Gov. Nicoll, Feb. 15, 1666, and by Gov. Dongan, March 17, 1686.¹¹ It was recognized as a town March 7, ham, John Strickland, John Ogden, John Karman, John Lawrence, and Jonas Wood; those in the second patent were John Hicks, J. P., Capt. John Seaman, Richard Gildersleeve, Robert Jackson, John Karman, John Smith, sr. and jr.; and those in the third were Capt. John Seaman, Simon Searing, John Jackson, James Pine, sr., Richard Gildersleeve, sr., and Nathl. Peasall. —Thompson's Hist. L. I., II, 14; Patents, IV, 55, V, 182; See. Office.

² This plain is 15 mi. long and 4 broad. When first known to the Europeans, it was destitute of timber and covered with grass. The annual burning of this grass was prohibited by statute in 1726. It is mostly uninclosed, and used as pasture.

³ About 16,000 acres of the plain and the salt meadows are common property. The time for cutting the hay is fixed at the annual town meetings, and the first one on the ground has the choice of location. This leads the farmers to the meadows at an early hour on the appointed day; and sometimes during the night previous, when they stand with the hay in hand, ready at the first glimpse of sunrise to strike into the grass before them and mow around as large a piece as they may be able. Several hundred men are often thus employed. Each inhabitant may hire as many laborers as he chooses, and may cut for sale. North Hempstead formerly enjoyed the right of cutting grass upon these meadows, but has been practically deprived of it for many years. See page 545.

⁵ On old documents variously spelled "M. co.," "Moroko," and "M. v. v. v." The name was derived from a tribe of Indians that lived in the vicinity.

⁶ First settled by Edward Raynor, and formerly known as "Raynorstown."

⁷ This place contains the Pavilion,—an immense hotel,—and several large summer boarding houses.

and Robert Fordham. In 1647 the first eight, with Robt. Ashman, Jeremy, Edmund, and Terry Wood, Fein, and John Coe, Sam'l Strickland, John Tapping, John Fordham, Wm. and John Lawrence, Henry Hudson, Thomas Ireland, Richard Valentine, Wm. Tickstone, Nicholas Tanton, Wm., John, sr. and jr., Jos., and Alvin Smith, Richard, jr., Sam'l, Dan'l, and Nathl. Denton, Thos. Armitage, Simon Searing, Thomas Willet, Henry Piers, m. Jos. and Wm. Scott, Henry Winston, Richard and John Lewis, Thos. Stevenson, John Stodge, John and Robert Williams, Wm. Rogers, Richard Ogden, John Loucks, Wm. Washburne, Thos. Sherman, Francis Yates, John Ellison, Wm. Shadling, Thomas and Chas. Foster, Roger Jones, Sam'l Clark, John Todd, Thos. Pope, Daniel Whitehead, Edward Raynor, John Smith, Sam'l Baucus, and John Strickland were freeholders, and shared in the division of the lands. A part of the above locations are now included in North Hempstead. The first child born of white parents in town was Gabel Karman, son of John Karman, Jan. 9, 1645. An order was made at their General Court, Sept. 16, 1660, requiring all persons to "prepare to the publick Meetings and Assemblies on the Lords days, and on publick days of fastings and thanksgivings, appointed by publick authority, both on the forenoons and afternoons," under a penalty of 5 guilders for the first, 10 for the second, and 20 for the third offense. The Rev. Richard Denton, a prominent founder, was then first pastor. He returned to England in 1676, and wrote a historical account of New York, which was published in London in 1679.

⁹ 10 M. E., 3 Presb., 12 Prot., 2 R. C., and one Friends'. Near the M. E. Church in South Hempstead is a monument erected to the memory of 129 English and Irish immigrants who perished on the ships Restol and Mexico, wrecked Nov. 21, 1820, and Jan. 2, 1857.

1788. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. A range of low sand hills forms its n. boundary; but the remainder of the town consists of an extensive sand plain, and a series of wide salt marshes along the shore. Jamaica Bay, forming its s. boundary, incloses a large number of low, marshy islands. Several small streams take their rise in springs and small ponds among the hills and flow s. to the bay.¹ The soil is light and sandy. A considerable tract immediately bordering upon the marshes is kept in a high state of fertility by artificial means, and is devoted to market gardening. This town has long been celebrated for its race courses.² The town poor are annually let to the lowest bidder.³ Jamaica, (p. v.) near the n. border of the town, was incorp. April 14, 1814. It contains 6 churches, the Union Hall Academy,⁴ several private seminaries, a union school, 2 newspaper offices, and several manufactories.⁵ Pop. 2,817. Woodhaven was organized in 1850 by a number of capitalists for the manufacture of shoes. Cypress Avenue is a r. r. station near the line of Kings co. The country in the immediate vicinity is laid out in a village plat, and named Unionville, from the Union Race Course; Clarenceville is a village plat on the r. r., e. of Jamaica; Centerville, a plat adjacent to the trotting course; Hopedale and Jamaica Heights, two prospective villages in the n. part; Willow Tree, a r. r. station, e. of Jamaica; Queens,⁶ (p. o.), a r. r. station near the e. line, and Springfield, a vicinage 3 mi. long, in the e. part, extending to the bay. The first settlement was made about 1656, by people from Hempstead, who in that year obtained leave of the Dutch Government to purchase lands and erect a town, "according unto their place limited, named Camarise, about midway from Hempstead." In 1702 the civil officers of government removed to this place, on account of prevailing sickness. An attempt was made soon after to appropriate the church to the use of the Episcopalians,—which was resisted, and a controversy commenced, which was not settled until 1728. In 1753 the General Assembly again convened at this place. During the Revolution the town was occupied by the British, and, especially in winter, large bodies of troops were stationed here. The Dutch Church was used as a storehouse. The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1663. The Ref. Prot. D. Church was formed in 1702; and the first Prot. E. services were held during the same year. The Chapel of the Sisters—a neat edifice, built of hewn granite—was erected in the Presb. Cemetery, by Nicholas Ludlum, of New York.⁷

NEWTOWN⁸—was first conveyed by patent, by Gov. Stuyvesant, in 1652. The grant was confirmed by Gov. Nicoll, March 6, 1666, and by Gov. Dongan, Nov. 25, 1683.⁹ It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies upon the East River and Long Island Sound, in the s. w. corner of the co., and includes North and South Brother, Rikers, and Berriens Islands.¹⁰ A range of hills extends along the s. border; but the remaining part of its surface is level or moderately uneven. Flushing Creek forms a portion of the e. boundary, and Newtown Creek, a portion of the w. boundary. Extensive salt meadows border upon these creeks and the bays. Hell Gate is a narrow, tortuous passage between Wards Island and Hallets Point, near the n. extremity of the town.¹¹ The soil is a fine quality of sandy loam. Market gardening and the cultivation of flowers are the most important business. The town poor are let out by contract. Astoria,¹² (p. v.) upon East River, near Hell Gate, was incorp. April 12, 1836. It contains 5 churches, a female seminary, union school, and several extensive manufactories.¹³ It is particularly distinguished for its floral gardens

² A course was laid out, in colonial times, around the border of Beaver Pond—a sheet of water adjacent to the village, since drained. Union Course was laid out soon after the passage of the act of 1821, and continued under that of 1834. It is now owned by the "Union Association," formed under general act, Aug. 2, 1858, with a capital of $100,000. It is a few feet over a mile in circuit. There is a trotting course, s. e. of the former.

³ The town elects trustees annually to manage its property. It has a fund—given by Henry Townsend nearly two centuries ago—"for the relief of poor widows and children, persons blind, lame, or aged, and such as should be unable to get a living, or any that should suffer by fire and whose necessities might call for relief."

⁴ This institution was incorp. Feb. 29, 1792.

⁶ Formerly called "Brusoville." The name was changed at a public meeting, Jan. 1, 1857.

⁷ There are now 7 churches in town; 2 M. E., Af. Meth., Ref. Prot. D., Presb., Prot. E., and R. C.

⁸ Named "Middleburg," under the Dutch.

⁹ The first deed of confirmation contained the names of Capt.

Richard Betts, J. P., Capt. Thos. Lawrence, Capt. John Coe, John Burroughs, Ralph Hunt, Dan'l Whitehead, and J. Burger Vost; and the second the names of 108 freeholders. The annual quit-rent was $32 4s.—Patents, II, 78; Sec. Office; Thompson's Hist. L. I., II, 142.

¹² This place was formerly known as "Hallets Cove," and was settled by Stephen A. and John C. Halsey. At the time of its incorporation it was proposed to call it "Sansowick," from the Indian name of a stream near by; but the name Astoria was adopted, in hope of securing a gratuity from John Jacob Astor. In this, however, the people were disappointed, as he gave only $100 to the seminary.

¹³ The principal manufactories are the chemical works for and greenhouses.¹ It is connected with New York by ferries, and is inhabited by many persons doing business in the city. Pop. about 3,200. Ravenswood, (p. v.), upon the East River, is a suburban village, and the houses consist mostly of costly residences. The poorhouse farms of New York City were located at this place previous to the purchase of the islands in the river for that purpose.² A rifle-cartridge factory exploded here about 1850, occasioning a great destruction of life. Hunters Point³ is a newly surveyed and thinly settled village, immediately S. of the mouth of Newtown Creek. It has several manufactories,⁴ and is rapidly increasing in business and population. Newtown, (p. v.), near the center, and Perry Bridge are stations upon the Flushing R. R.; and Winfield and West Flushing are village plats upon the same rails. Maspeth (p. v.) lies near the head of Newtown Creek; and Melvina, Columbusville, and Winantsville are village plats in the same vicinity. Lawrenceville, S. w. of Winfield, and Middletown, S. E. of Astoria, are village plats. Locust Grove, Linden Hills, New Astoria, Middle Village, and South Williamsburgh are localities and prospective village villages. Dutch Kills is a gardening neighborhood. St. Roman Well, a wooded island near the head of Flushing Bay, contains 7 acres, and is a favorite resort for picnic parties. Calvary Cemetery, on the Laurel Hills, S. of Newtown Creek, contains 75 acres, and is owned by the R. C. denomination. The Cemetery of the Evergreens, in the S. w. corner, is partly in Brooklyn and partly in New Lots, Kings co. It is beautifully situated upon the Cypress Hills, and contains 115 acres, with the privilege of extending its area to 500 acres. Cypress Hills Cemetery, E. of the latter, is also situated upon the highlands, and contains 400 acres.⁵ Mount Olivet Cemetery lies near Maspeth, and the Lutheran Cemetery near Middle Village. The National Race Course, incorp. May 31, 1854, is located near the Flushing R. R.⁶ The first settlements were made in 1651, by English immigrants, who had first located in New England. The first grant of privileges obtained from the Dutch in 1652 was followed by another more liberal in its character in 1665. The early records of the town were lost during the British occupation in the Revolution. A blockhouse was built at Hell Gate during the Revolution, and a water-battery, named Fort Stevens,⁷ during the War of 1812. The first church edifice (Presb.) of which there is any record was erected, in 1670, at Newtown Village; and the first preacher was Rev. John Moorehead, who was employed from the first settlement until his death, in 1661. The census reports 15 churches in town.⁸

NORFOLK HEMPSTEAD¹⁰—was formed from Hempstead, April 6, 1784. It lies upon Long Island Sound, between Hempstead Harbor and Little York Bay, and on the S. extends to near the center of Hempstead Plains. A range of hills extends E. and W. through near the center; and from them spurs extend to the Sound, giving to the N. part a moderately hilly character. Hempstead Harbor and Manhasset Bay are irregular bays extending far inland, dividing the coast into "necks" and points,—the principal of which are Cow and Great Necks, Motts, Prospect, Sands, making dry alkalies, the U. S. Vulcanized Gutta Percha Belting and Packing Works, and an extensive carpet factory.

² Captain Thornburn, the celebrated seaman and navigator, had a nursery here from 1842 to 1843. There are now extensive establishments for supplying the city market, besides many gentleman's greenhouses, grapevines, &c.

³ At, in 1844-5, the corporation of New York City erected extensive buildings, about 1½ m. S. from Astoria, for a pauper establishment, which were sold at public auction, April 16th & 17, upon the removal of these institutions to their new site on the river. "Three large buildings,—called the "R. V. Nursery," "School House," and "Infant Nursery," the property of Wm. W. Miles—were leased (May 25) to the Commissioners of Lunatic for a Ship-hoyer hospital, and other purposes. A public meeting was held immediately after at Astoria, to express indignation at the application of the property to these uses, and to demonstrate against it. The people failing to obtain their object, the premises were assailed and destroyed on the night of May 26-27, 1847, by a large mob in disguise. An attempt was made to fasten the expense of these losses upon the town; and, after repeated efforts, the owner recovered $3,000 from the State by act of March 17, 1855.—A Soc. Doc., 1848, Nos. 10, 161, 164, 186, 189, 200. Doc., 1846, No. 31, and 1859, Nos. 62 and 182.

⁵ The principal manufactories are a flint glass factory, chemical works, paint and varnish factory, brewery for the manufacture of non-pils, and an oil and lubricating grease factory. Considerable shipbuilding is also done here.

⁶ Sometimes written "Wapiti," "Wapiti," &c. It was settled by English, and often designated "English Kills," to distinguish it from Dutch Kills. De Witt Clinton, formerly established here a laundry for existing metallic burial cases was established here several years since.

⁸ The company that owns this course is incorp. with a capital of $250,000.

¹⁰ 2d Prot. E. G. Ref. Prot. Dec. 4, M. C. 2d Presb., 2 R. C. and 11 Bap. The Ref. Prot. Church at Newtown was first in 1674, and a Prot. E. church at the same place in 1740. A M. E. church was erected near Middle Village in 1857, chiefly through the liberality of Jos. Harper, tithing-master. Harper Brothers, publishers in New York.

¹¹ Under the act of organization a city town was formed by the right of vesting, claiming, and holding in the name of the town continued to cut grass upon the South Mead was in 1817. They each assumed the sole and entire responsibility of the town within their several limits. At the town meeting of Hempstead, April 17, 1784, a resolution was passed, viz. "That the people of that town 10 days previous to the meeting of the next year a suit was instituted, and was approved by the court of Sessions, which decided, in Dec. 1828, that North Hempstead had the power to interfere in the management of the property of the town of Hempstead. *J. Barker, and Hewletts Points, and Plum Beach.¹ The soil upon the plains is light and sandy, and in the s. part a sandy and clayey loam, very productive. The town poor are supported by the Jones Fund,² at an institution situated at Brookville, in the town of Oyster Bay; and 2 trustees are annually elected to the board having this fund in charge. Manhasset,³ (p. v.) near the center, a straggling village, contains 4 churches. The neck of land extending eastward of Manhasset Bay is called Manhasset.⁴ Roslyn, (p. v.) at the head of Hempstead Harbor and 2 mi. above the steamboat landing, contains 2 churches and several manufactories.⁵ Pop. 592. North Hempstead (p. o.) is at the co. courthouse; Mineola (p. v.) is a scattered village at the junction of the L. I. & Hempstead Branch R. Roads; Flower Hill is a farming neighborhood near the center of Manhasset Neck; Moutrose, a village plat near the country seat of Wm. C. Bryant. Westbury⁶ is a farming neighborhood, extending from near the courthouse to the e. line of the town. Carl Place, near Westbury, and Clowesville, near Mineola, are village plats. Hyde Park,⁷ near the r. r., Lakeville,⁸ near the line of Flushing, and Farmers Village, on the edge of the plains, are farming localities. Port Washington (p. o.) is a small village on the w. side of Manhasset Bay. The first settlement was made in the spring of 1640, by a small company of English immigrants from Lynn, Mass., under the lead of Capt. Daniel Howe, who took possession of the head of Cow Bay, under the authority of Farrett, agent of the Earl of Stirling. The Dutch sent a party of soldiers, who captured several of the intruders; but they were released upon promising to quit the place. These persons afterward made the first settlement at Southampton. The necks of land of this town were first used for pasturage in commons. During the Revolution marauding parties committed various depredations upon the people of this town, rendering both property and life insecure. The census reports 9 churches in town.⁹

OYSTER BAY¹⁰—was patented by Gov. Nicoll, Nov. 29, 1667, and confirmed by Gov. Andross, Sept. 29, 1677.¹¹ It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It occupies the e. extremity of the co., and extends across the island from the sound to the ocean. The s. shore is deeply indented by irregular bays, the principal of which are Oyster Bay, Cold Spring, and Oyster Bay Harbors, Mill Neck Creek, and Mosquito Cove. Cove Neck, Center Island,¹² and Mosquito Neck are long peninsulas formed by these bays;¹³ Lloyds Neck is a peninsula extending e. of Cold Spring Harbor. The great indentation of South Oyster Bay, separated from the ocean by Jones Beach, forms the s. boundary. This bay is bordered by salt meadows, and incloses several marshy islands belonging to the town. A range of hills extends through the s. part; and the remainder of the surface is level. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam, and with proper care is very productive. The town poor are supported by the Jones Fund.¹⁴ Oyster Bay, (p. v.), on Oyster Bay Harbor, contains 6 churches and 900 inhabitants;¹⁵ Glen Cove,¹⁶ (p. v.), near Hempstead Harbor, in the s. w. part, contains 3 churches, a printing office, fire insurance office, and a corn starch factory.¹⁷ South Oyster Bay (p. o.) is a scattered village on the s. shore. Farmingdale (p. o.) is a hamlet and r. r. station near the e. line; Hicksville¹⁸ (p. o.) is a r. r. station near the w. line. Syosset¹⁹ (p. o.) is the present terminus of a r. r. extending s. e. from

⁴ Formerly called "Cow Neck," and by the Indians "Sint Nank." It was originally inclosed from Hempstead Harbor to the creek by a fence separating it from Great Neck; and every person was entitled to put as many cattle upon it as he built standing gates or panels of fence. When afterward distributed, in 1674, these rights were called gate-rights. The number of contributors in 1678 was 60, and the number of parcels of fence 526.

⁹ The people in this vicinity are chiefly employed in furnishing milk for the New York market.

¹¹ Upon the open grounds s. of this place, anciently called "Schubert's Plains," a race course was established by Gov. Nicoll in 1665. It was called "New Market," and continued devoted to the sports of the turf more than one hundred years.

¹³ Friends, 2 M. E., Af Meth., Prot. E., Ref. Prot. D., and R. C.

¹¹ Henry Townsend, sr., Nicholas and Gideon Wright, Richard Harrison, Joseph Carpenter, and Josiah Lathing were named in both patents.—Patents, I, 104, 162; See Office.

¹³ The principal capes or points upon the s. shore are Olivers, Sopers, Moses, Plum, Center Island, Old Neck, Fox Island, Peacock, Martinicreek, and Red Spring Points.

¹⁴ In 1826, Saml Jones gave $30,000—known as the "Jones Fund"—for the support of the poor of this town and North Hempstead; and if the income of this fund was more than sufficient for this purpose, the surplus was to belong to Flushing. A farm was purchased at Brookville, upon which suitable buildings have been erected for the support of the poor. Walter B. Jones, the distinguished financier, also a citizen of this town, gave $5,000 more for the same purpose. The fund is managed by 3 trustees, chosen by this town, and 2 by North Hempstead. The institution is known as the "Jones Institute;" and it supports 60 to 70 indigent persons annually.

¹⁵ P. O. changed to "Syosset," Jan. 20, 1846, and old name restored one week after. Jas. Colwell, appointed P. M. by Jefferson, held the office till his death, in 1854, when his grandnephew was appointed.

¹⁶ Formerly called "Mosquito Cove."

¹⁷ This factory employs 40 hands, and manufactures 15 tons of starch per day.

¹⁸ Named from Elias Hicks, the Quaker reformer.

¹⁹ Formerly known as "East Woods."

Hicksville, projected to Cold Spring. Norwich (East Norwich p.o.) is a farming settlement 3 mi. s. e. of Oyster Bay.¹ Cedar Swamp, (p.o.) s. e. of Glen Cove, and Locust Valley,² s. e. of the same place, are farming settlements. Jericho (p.o.) is a settlement, s. of Hicksville;³ Woodbury (p.o.) is a small village, near the e. border; Lloyds Neck is a farming vicinage, in the extreme s. e. part;⁴ Bethphage is a farming locality, and Brookville is a hamlet.⁵ Tori Neck was named from two ancient Indian forts.⁶ Dosoris,⁷ Lattingtown, and Matinicoek⁸ are localities s. e. of Glen Cove. An attempt was made by a party of English to make a settlement in this town in 1640; but the settlers were driven off by the Dutch. In 1642 other English parties, who had purchased lands of the Indians, were also driven off. The question of jurisdiction was a matter of debate until 1650, when commissioners were appointed on both sides to settle it. The w. boundary of Oyster Bay was fixed upon as the line of separation of the two colonies; and in 1653 the first permanent English settlement was made, upon land previously purchased of the Indians.⁹ In 1662 the town formed a close alliance with Conn. De Lancey's corps of royalists built a small fort on the hill, in the village of Oyster Bay, in 1776; and it was occupied by Simcoe's Queen's Rangers in 1773 and 78. The census reports 16 churches in town.¹⁰

¹ The town records are usually kept at this place.
³ Elias Hicks formerly resided here. The first settlement was made by Robert Williams, in 1659; called by the Indians "Lusum."
⁵ This place was settled by the Dutch, to assert their claim to lands claimed by the English. The Jones Institute is located here.
⁶ In 1775, Daniel Jones, of this place, gave £300 sterling for a charity school at Oyster Bay.
⁷ Sometimes written "Josors." It is an abbreviation of dos uxor, or "dowry of a wife;"—the property having come to the first settler, Coles, by his wife.
⁸ A Friends' meeting-house was erected here in 1682.
⁹ Peter Wright, Wm. Leveridge, Samuel May, and John Washburne, Thos. Armatage, Anthony Wright, Robt. Williams, and Richard Holdbrook were joint purchasers. Henry Townsend obtained a grant for a mill Sept. 1661, and erected the first mill, in 1663. There were 53 freeholders in town.

RENSSELAER COUNTY.

This county was formed from Albany, Feb. 7, 1791, and named from the Rensselaer family.¹ It is centrally distant 12 mi. from Albany, and contains an area of 690 sq. mi. Its surface is very broken and hilly. Two distinct ranges of mountains extend through it s. and s., known as the Taghkanick and Petersburg Mts. The Taghkanick Range occupies the extreme e. borders of the co., and is divided from the Petersburg Mts. by the long, deep valley through which flow Kinderhook Creek and Little Hoosick and Hoosick Rivers. These mountains are wild, rugged, and rocky, rising to a height of 1000 to 2000 feet above tide, and affording wild and picturesque scenery. Their declivities are usually precipitous, and their summits are crowned with forests or masses of naked rocks. These mountains are composed of the slate, quartz, sandstone, and limestone which constitute the Taconic rocks of Prof. Emmons. The quartz exists in the form of injected veins, and in many places the slate has been decomposed and washed away, leaving the quartz veins in the form of sharp pointed rocks, or of isolated masses. Upon the summits and sides of the mountains the soil is thin and poor; but in the valleys it consists of gravelly loam, and is moderately fertile. The Petersburg Mts. occupy the whole central part of the co. They are wild, irregular, and broken mountain masses, with precipitous sides on the e., but with more gradual declivities on the w. In some places the summits spread out over a wide surface, constituting a high, sterile plateau broken by hills and rocks. They are composed of the graywacke slates and limestone belonging to the Hudson River group. An extensive tract among these mountains, comprising a portion of Stephentown, Berlin, Sand Lake, and Poestenkill, is still covered with forests. The soil is generally hard and sterile, consisting of a stiff clay and disintegrated slate, largely underlaid by a retentive hardpan.

Hudson River is on the w. boundary of the co.; and along its bank extends an intervalle varying from a few rods to a half mile in width, and bounded by a series of bluffs 100 to 200 feet in height. From the summits of the bluffs to the foot of Petersburg Mts. the country assumes the character of a broken, hilly upland. This region is composed of the drift deposits mixed with disintegrated slates, in some places the clay, and in others the sand, predominating.

The valley of Kinderhook Creek, Little Hoosick and Hoosick Rivers extends through the e. part of the co. The summit level in this valley at S. Berlin, between the waters flowing s. and those flowing n., is 600 feet above tide. The numerous streams that flow from the Petersburg Mts. westward to the Hudson have worn deep ravines through the clay bluffs, forming lateral valleys, which extend eastward from the valley of the Hudson. Among the wild and rocky regions of the Petersburg Mts. are numerous small lakes and ponds, forming a peculiar and beautiful feature of the landscape. Several interesting mineral springs are found within the county.

The narrow intervalles, and a large portion of the uplands, are adapted to grain, and produce liberal crops, chiefly of corn, oats, spring wheat, potatoes, and flax; but the soil is generally best adapted to grazing and dairying, especially along the e. towns, where these occupations form the leading pursuits. Manufactures are extensively carried on at Troy and in the Hoosick Valley, and commerce has received much attention at Troy, and, at an earlier day, at Lansingburgh.

The principal works of internal improvement in the co. are the Troy & Greenbush R. R., a continuation of the Hudson River R. R. to Troy; the Albany & West Stockbridge R. R., extending from Greenbush in a s. e. direction, through East Greenbush and Schodack, to the s. bounds of the co., 7 mi. from the river; the Troy & Boston R. R., extending from Troy s. e. through Lansingburgh, Schaghticoke, Pittstown, Hoosick, and a corner of Petersburg, to the Vt. line; the Troy & Bennington R. R., forming a branch (5 $\frac{2}{3}$ mi. long) of the Troy & Boston R. R., from Hoosick Fall Junction to the State Line toward Bennington, Vt.; and the Albany, Vt. & Canada R. R., extending through Schaghticoke across the s. w. corner of the co., terminating at Eagle Bridge, where it connects with the Vt. roads. Besides these lines, which are within the co., several others communicate with Troy from the w. side of the river. Among these are the A. V. &

C. R. R., which sends a branch to West Troy; a branch of the N. Y. Central R. R., extending to Schenectady;¹ and the Rensselaer & Saratoga R. R., extending from Troy to Saratoga. The Northern and Erie Canals also both connect with the Hudson at Troy, and there is an uninterrupted steamboat navigation to New York.²

The first newspaper in the county was established at Lansingburgh, in 1787.³

The county seat is the city of Troy, situated at the head of sloop navigation on the Hudson.⁴ The courthouse—built at the joint expense of city and co., and containing the courtroom and co. and city offices⁵—is situated on the corner of Congress and Second Sts.⁶ The jail is on Ferry, corner of Fifth St. A house of industry, for the support of paupers, located on a farm of 110 acres 2 mi. s. e. of the city, was founded in 1820, on the plan of Count Rumford. In 1857 the co. poor-house was reported as being located upon a farm of 152 acres. The co. poor were let, by contract, at $1 per week, the contractor having free use of the farm, and the services of the paupers as far as they were able to labor.⁷

The greater part of the co. was included in the patent of Killian Van Rensselaer, in 1650; and the first settlement was made by tenants under him the same year.⁸ The lands were held by the same tenure as those in Albany co., and similar difficulties have frequently occurred in endeavoring to enforce the collection of rents. Upon the death of the late Stephen Van Rensselaer the manor was divided, the portion e. of the river passing into the hands of his son William P.; and since that time a considerable portion of the leased land has been conveyed in fee.⁹ During

² These ample facilities for travel are in striking contrast to the condition of things 60 years ago. By an act of March 20, 1798, Alexander J. Turner and Adolphus Skinner, for a period of 5 years, obtained the exclusive right of running a stage wagon, drawn by at least two good horses, at intervals of one week, unless prevented by badness of roads, from Troy to Hampton, on the border of Vermont. They were allowed to charge 3 cts. per mt. for passengers, and a like sum for every 150 lbs. of baggage over 14 lbs.

³ The Northern Central and Lansingburgh Advertiser was started at Lansingburgh, May 15, 1787, by Chabon & Babcock; it was subsequently removed to Albany.

The Lansingburgh Gazette, started in 1798, was subsequently for many years published as

The Rensselaer County Gazette, but it is now published under its first title by Alexander Kirkpatrick.

The Farmers' Oracle was started in 1798 at Lansingburgh by Francis Almonart; it was removed to Troy a few years after, where it was published until 1832.

The Lansingburgh Democrat was commenced in Dec., 1838, by Wm. J. Lamb, by whom it is still published.

The Gold & Silver was established at Lansingburgh in 1841 by the Rev. R. W. Smith, and was published several years.

The Juvenile World, of the same place, was started Sept. 1, 1845, by Rev. J. A. Pitman.

The Farmers' Oracle, started at Troy by Luther Pratt in 1796, was of short duration.

The Northern Budget was started at Troy in 1798 by Robert Moffitt and Col. Wells, and has been continued to the present time, with slight changes of name. It is now issued as a daily and weekly by F. L. Hagadorn.

The Troy Gazette was founded in 1802 by Thomas Collier, and was discontinued before 1818.

The Troy Post was commenced Sept. 1, 1812, by Parker & Bliss, and was changed July 15, 1823, to

The Troy Sentinel, semi-weekly, and continued until Jan. 1, 1833. From May 1, 1830, to Aug. 1831, a daily edition was issued.

The Evangelical Restorationist, semi-monthly, was commenced in 1825 by Adolphus Skinner.

The Troy Review, or Religious and Musical Repository, began Jan. 4, 1826, and continued 2 years.

The Ecumenical Repository (Univ.) was published in 1828.

The Troy Republican (Anti-Masonic) was started in 1828 by Austin & Wellington, and was continued about a year.

The Northern Watchman (Anti-Masonic) was commenced in 1831 by E. Wellington. In 1832 it was styled

The Troy Watchman, and was continued one or two years.

The Gospel Anchor (Univ.) started in 1831, was published by John M. Austin, and afterward by H. J. Green; it was continued until 1854.

The Troy Press was started in 1832 by Wm. Yates and Seth Richards, and was continued until July 1, 1834. From 1833 a daily edition was issued.

The Troy Whig, (d., and w.) was founded in July, 1834, by James M. Stevenson, and is still continued. The weekly since Sept. 1835, has been published as

The Troy American, by George Abbott.

The Troy Statesman was commenced in 1831, by T. J. Sutherland.

The Botanic Advocate was published in 1834 by Russell Buckley.

The Trojan, (d.,) was started in 1835, and continued a few months.

The State Journal was issued in 1836 by Richards & Mastin, and continued 1 year.

The New York State Journal was published in 1837 by T. Hartman.

The Troy Daily Mail was started in 1837 by Wellington & Nafw, and was continued until 1841.

The Troy Daily Bulletin was started in Dec. 1841, by R. Thompson.

The Troy Daily Herald was published in 1843 by Isaac D. Ayres.

The Troy Temperance Mirror was issued in 1846 by Bardwell & Kinwood.

The Family Journal was started in 1844 by Fisk & Co. In Sept. 1848, it appeared as

The Troy Post was commenced by Alexander McCall, and in 1845 it was superseded by

The Troy Traveller, (d., and w.) Fisk & Avery were the publishers, and Wm. L. Avery editor.

The Trojan was started in 1846, and continued several years.

The Rensselaer County Temperance Advocate was begun in 1846 by S. Spooner.

The Daily Telegraph was published at Troy in 1846.

The Journal of Temperance was started in 1846 by Wm. Hager.

The National Watchman was commenced in 1847 by Allen & Garret, and is still published.

The Troy Daily Times was founded in 1851 by J. M. Francis, and is still published.

La Roche Chronique was established at Troy in 1851 by Doiman & Mathard.

The Nassau Gazette was started in Dec. 1850 by J. M. Geer, and continued a short time.

The Lutheran Herald, semi-monthly, was started at West Sand Lake by H. L. Dox, in 1844.

The Greenbush Guardian was commenced in Aug. 1850 by A. J. Goodrich, by whom it is still continued.

⁵ The first co. officers were Anthony Ten Eyck, J. C. M. Kent, Sarragote; Nicholas Schuyler, Clerk; and Albert Fawling, Sheriff.

⁹ The proportion of leased land in the several towns in 1858 is stated by the agents as follows:—In 1834 there was nearly all leased in Grafton, Nassau, Schoharie, E. Rensselaer, N. Rensselaer, and Brantwich, each about two-thirds leased; in 1840 and 1845, Rensselaer, each about one-third leased; in 1846 and 1847, Rensselaer, and Sand Lake, each about originally divided, and one-third of the manor now leased.

the French wars, the n. border of the co. was repeatedly ravaged by the enemy and the settlements were broken up. Upon the approach of Burgoyne's army, in 1777, the American families hastily fled with such property as could be easily removed, leaving the houses and farms to be plundered by the enemy. Scouting parties of the British penetrated as far s. as Lansingburgh. The battle of Bennington was fought within the limits of the co., Aug. 16, 1777,¹ and from that moment the American cause daily grew brighter.² The proprietor of the manor extended every possible assistance to the distressed families flying before the invaders, proving to them a sincere friend in their hour of need.

BERLIN—was formed from Petersburgh, Schodack, and Stephentown, March 21, 1806. A portion of Sand Lake was taken off in 1812. It lies near the center of the e. border of the co. Its surface consists of 2 ranges of mountains separated by a narrow valley extending n. and s. The hilly region is wild and broken, and the declivities are generally precipitous. The principal streams are Kinderhook Creek, flowing s., and Little Hoosick River, flowing n. The headwaters of these streams are but a few rods apart, near S. Berlin. The w. part of the town is covered with forest, in which are several fine lakes. The soil in the valley is a gravelly loam, but among the mountains it is a hard sterile clay intermixed or covered with fragments of rock. Berlin, (p. v.), containing 326 inhabitants, South Berlin (p. v.) and Center Berlin, (p. v.), are all situated in the valley of the Little Hoosick. West Berlin is a p. o. Godfrey Brimmer located near N. Berlin in 1765.³ The first church (Seventh Day Bap.) was formed at N. Berlin, in Dec. 1780; Wm. Coon was the first preacher.⁴

BRUNSWICK—was formed from Troy, March 20, 1807. A part of the town was reannexed to Troy, April 15, 1811. It lies a little n. w. of the center of the co., upon the hilly region w. of the summits of the Petersburgh Mts. The most elevated portions of the town, in the extreme e. and in the n. w. parts, are 800 to 1000 feet above tide. The principal streams are Poesten Kil, its tributary Quacken Kil, and Tomhammock Creek. The soil upon the summits of the hills is hard and sterile, but in the valleys and lowlands it consists of a fertile, gravelly loam intermixed with clay. The people are largely engaged in furnishing milk, vegetables, and hay to the Troy market. Brunswick Center, East Brunswick,⁵ Milville, (Eagle Mills p. o.) and Cropseyville⁶ (p. o.) are small villages. The first settlement was made about 1760, by a company of Germans.⁷ This town suffered greatly upon the approach of Burgoyne in 1777, and after the battle of Saratoga many families of royalists withdrew to Canada, and but few returned. There are 4 churches in town.⁸

EAST GREENBUSH—was formed from Greenbush, as "Clinton," Feb. 25, 1855, and its name was changed April 11, 1858. It lies on the bank of the Hudson, s. w. of the center of the co. The bluffs which border upon the river rise from the edge of the water to an elevation of 100 to 300 feet. The principal one of these, opposite Albany, is known as Pom-o-kose Hill.⁹ From the summits of these bluffs the surface spreads out into a rolling upland, rising toward the e. The chief streams are Tierken Kil,¹⁰ or Mill Creek, in the central, and Moordeners Creek in the s. w. part of the town. The soil consists of sand, gravel, and clay, and is very fertile. There are several sulphur springs in town, the principal of which is opposite Albany and is known as "Harrowgate." A large island called Papskane¹¹ lies in the river, and belongs to this town. East Greenbush (p. o.) is the only village. It contains the Greenbush and Schodack Academy¹² and about a dozen houses. Settlements are supposed to have commenced here as early as

² From this time the timid were emboldened, the secretly disaffected overawed, and great numbers before undecided now committed their fortunes to the cause of freedom.

³ Among the other early settlers were Reuben Bonested and a family named Richer, who came in soon after Mr. Brimmer. In 1769 Peter Sumners and John O. Cropsey lived at the Hollow, and in the same year David Hull and Joseph Green came into town. Col. Bentley settled near N. Berlin, and Thos. Sweet, a blacksmith, at S. Berlin. Jas. Green, a son of Joseph G., died in 1857, aged 100 years. David Hull kept the first tavern before the Revolution, and Hezekiah Hull opened an inn soon after the war. Caleb Bentley built the first grist mill, and Amos Sweet the first saw-mill, in 1780. Dr. John Forbes, the first physician, located at S. Berlin in 1775. Soon after the battle of Lexington, two companies were formed in this and the adjacent towns, a part of whom were stationed at D. Hull's for local protection, the others were engaged elsewhere in active service.

⁴ The census reports 2 churches: Bap. and Christian.

⁶ A wooden factory and tannery are located here.

⁷ Among the early settlers were David Gons, and families named Hardwick, Braunschweiger, Springer, Borek, Hayner, Outbunt, Van Arman, Hegg, Fisher, Bean, Watson, Fret, Quackenbush, Muller, Gosway, and Clum. A man named Felo kept the first inn, near the Lutheran Church, in 1760, and Henry Clum the first store at Cropseyville. The first factory was erected by a company at "Albica," now a part of Troy. The first mill was built by ——— Cross, in 1792, with no tods but an ax, saw, and auger.

⁸ 2 M. E., P. X. Luth., and Presb.

⁹ Name as given by an aged Stockbridge Indian.

¹⁰ Signifying "blustering or noisy creek."

¹¹ Sometimes written "Popsk-ne-kes" and "Papsknea."

¹² This academy is now nearly extinct.

1630.¹ During the war of 1812, extensive barracks were erected on the hills n. of Greenbush Village; and for several years the place was the center of active military preparation, and the rendezvous of large bodies of troops.² Edmund C. Genet, Minister of the French Republic to the U. S., was long a resident of this town, and died here July 14, 1834. There is but 1 church (Ref. Prot. D.) in town.

GRAFTON—was formed from Troy and Petersburg, March 20, 1807. It lies s. of the center of the co., upon the summits of the Petersburg Mts. Its surface is very rocky and broken, and a large part of it is yet covered with forests. The summits of the hills are 800 to 1200 feet above tide, and many of them are covered with huge and jagged masses of graywacke. Among the hills are 25 ponds, several of which cover an area of several hundred acres each.³ The Quacken Kil is the principal stream. The soil is chiefly clay, underlain by hardpan, and is wet, cold, and hard of cultivation. Mineral paint is made from the red argillite at Quackenkil. Considerable quantities of wood, tan bark, and charcoal are sent from this town to Troy. Grafton⁴ (p. v.) contains 14 houses, East Grafton (p. v.) 12, and Quackenkil (p. v.) 10. The first settlements were made by tenants under Van Rensselaer; they paid an average annual rent of 10 bushels of wheat per 100 acres.⁵ The census reports 2 churches: Bap. and M. E.

GREENBUSH⁶—was formed from "Rensselaerwyck," April 10, 1792. Another act of incorporation is dated March 17, 1795. A part of Sand Lake was set off in 1812, and "Clinton" (now E. Greenbush) and N. Greenbush in 1855, leaving but the corporate bounds of the village as defined by the act of April 9, 1852. Its surface consists of the flat intervale on the river and a portion of the adjacent hillsides. The soil is clay mixed with sand and alluvial deposits. Greenbush (p. v.) was incorp. April 11, 1815.⁷ Pop. about 3303. The upper part of the village, locally known as "East Albany," contains the depôts, freight houses, and machine shops of the several railroads which terminate opposite Albany, and is a place of considerable business.⁸ The first settlement was made previous to 1634.⁹ A ferry was established at the mouth of Beaver Creek in 1642, and was first kept by Hendrick Albertsen. The country around "Beverick" was thrown into alarm by the news of the Indian massacre at Esopus in June, 1663, and the settlers took refuge in Fort Cralo, on the patroon's farm, and a night watch was established.¹⁰ There are 4 churches in the village.¹¹

HOOSICK¹²—was formed as a district, March 21, 1772, and as a town, March 7, 1788. It lies in the S. E. corner of the co. Its surface consists of the narrow valley of Hoosick River, and the wild, rocky regions of the Taghkanick and Petersburg Mts., rising respectively on the e. and w. The two highest peaks are Foudas Hill in the s. e. and Potters Hill in the s. w., each about 900 feet above tide. The valleys are very narrow, and are bordered by steep hillsides. A belt of dark slate, which is quarried for roofing, extends along the n. bank of the river. East of the river, the rocks consist of a slaty shale and limestone, the latter furnishing lime. The principal streams are Hoosick and Wallbomsac¹³ Rivers, Punch Kil, White Creek, and Shaw Brook. The soil among the mountains is hard and sterile, but in the valleys it is principally clay, mixed with disintegrated slate. In the s. e. corner are 3 springs, from which issue nitrogen gas.¹⁴ Flax is very extensively cultivated.¹⁵ Considerable attention is also paid to manufactures. Hoosick

³ These ponds are noted for the wild beauty of their locality, and they are favorite resorts of sportsmen.

⁴ Often called "Grafton Center," and humorily "Patrons Mills."

⁵ Among the first settlers were families named Coon, Dummer, and Owens. Stephen McClesney kept the first store and inn, in 1690. A grist mill was built at an early day by the patroon at the Center.

¹¹ Presb. R. C., est. Johns, Ep. A., and M. E.

¹⁵ In 1834 the product of the flax crop was over 2,000,000 lbs. of lint and 800 bush of wash.

Falls (p. v.) was incorp. April 14, 1827. Pop. 1200. It contains Ball's Seminary, 2 foundries, 2 cotton factories, 2 reaping and mowing machine factories, and 1 establishment for the manufacture of machinery for cotton and woolen factories. North Hoosick¹ (p. v.) contains 175 inhabitants, and Buskirks Bridge (p. v.) 125; Hoosick Corners (Hoosick p. o.) contains 30 houses, Eagle Bridge (p. v.) 14, Walloomsac² 12, West Hoosick (p. o.) 10, and Potter Hill (p. o.) 7. This town was included in the Hoosick Patent,³ granted June 3, 1688, and the Walloomsac Patent,⁴ granted June 15, 1739. The first settlements were made upon the Hoosick Patent by several Dutch families.⁵ A Dutch church was founded, and known as the "Tyoshoke Church," at Sau Coick, near the s. border of the town. The settlement at Hoosick was entirely broken up by a party of French and Indians on the 28th of Aug. 1754. Two persons were killed, and the houses, barns, and crops were destroyed.⁶ The next day the settlement of Sau Coick, s. of Hoosick, was also destroyed. The battle of Bennington was fought in this town, Aug. 16, 1777.⁷ There are 6 churches in town.⁸

LANSINGBURGH⁹—was formed from Troy and Petersburg, March 20, 1807. A tract was annexed from Schaghticoke in 1819. A part of Troy was taken off in 1836, and a part of Brunswick in 1839. It is a narrow strip of land extending along the Hudson. In the s. part the river intervals are one-fourth of a mile in width; but in the n. the bluffs rise directly from the water. In the s. e. is a high, rocky hill, 400 to 600 feet above the river. The high bluff e. of the village is called Diamond Rock. The streams are Deepi Kil and Koola Kil. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. The people are largely engaged in the manufacture of brushes, oilcloths, flax cordage, and malt liquors. A lock at Troy admits the passage of sloops up to this place.¹⁰ Lansingburgh¹¹ (p. v.) contains extensive brush, oilcloth, and other manufactories, the Lansingburgh Academy,¹² a Female Seminary,¹³ 6 churches, 2 printing offices, and about 4000 inhabitants. A covered bridge

² This village contains a paper mill.

³ This patent was granted to Maria Van Rensselaer, Hendrick Van Ness, Jacobus Van Cortlandt, and Gerrit Finuse. The patent extended from the Schaghticoke Tract, a distance of 2 mi., each side of the river, up to a certain fall, called Quequick; and from said falls, up the creek, to a place called Nach-a-quick-quack.

⁵ Among these early settlers were Adam Vrooman, an Indian trader; Henry Van Ness, Abraham Fort, Lewis and Peter Vele, John Van Buskirk, Walter Van Vechten, Geo. B. Nichols, Jacob Od Kirk, Daniel Bradt, and Reykert Borne.

⁷ The battle of Bennington was one of the most important of the military events connected with the expedition of Burgoyne in 1777. About the first of Aug. the British army reached the Hudson and took possession of Fort Edward. For several weeks they had been engaged in repairing the bridges and in clearing the roads from the impediments left by the retreating Americans; and upon their arrival at the Hudson, Burgoyne congratulated himself that his troubles were at an end. His greatest source of embarrassment was in securing provisions for his army and in obtaining means of transportation. With 15 days' hard labor he was only enabled to bring 10 bateaux and 4 drags' provisions from Lake George. Learning that the Americans had collected a large quantity of military stores, cattle, and horses at Bennington, he was persuaded by Maj. Skene, against the advice of his most experienced officers, to send a party to capture them. The detachment consisted of 600 Hessians, Canadians, and troops, under the command of Col. Baum. They were instructed "to try the affections of the county, to mount Reid's dragoons, to complete Peter's corps, [of loyalists,] and obtain a large supply of cattle, horses, and carriages." Thus accomplished, he was to secure the county from Rockingham to Otter Creek, go down as far as Brattleboro, and join the main body by the great road to Albany. The detachment left the camp at Fort Edward, Aug. 12; and on the evening of the same day they surprised and captured 5 Americans at Cambridge. On the 14th they advanced as far as the mill upon Walloomsac River, in the s. e. part of Hoosick and within 12 mi. of Bennington. Gen. Stark, who commanded the American forces at Bennington, learning of the approach of the enemy, took immediate measures for defense. He sent an order to Col. Warner, at Manchester, to march immediately with his regiment of Green Mountain Boys; he rallied the neighboring militia, and on the 14th he sent out an advance guard of 200 men, under Lieut. Col. Gregg, to impede the progress of the enemy. On the morning of the 14th he marched with his whole force to the support of Gregg, and about 5 mi. from Bennington he met Gregg in full retreat, with the enemy within 1 mi. of him. Both armies chose strong positions and threw up temporary intrenchments. Baum, alarmed at the number of Americans, sent for a reinforcement. On the 15th a heavy rain set in; and the day was spent in skirmishing and in preparing for the battle. Col. Warner's regiment arrived at Bennington in the evening, and there stopped to dry themselves and recruit after their fatiguing march. Stark, fearing the enemy might receive reinforcements, resolved to attack them early on the morning of the 16th. Previous to the signal for attack he made the following heroic speech to his men: "See there, men! there are the red-coats. Before night they are ours, or Molly Stark will be a widow." The attack was at once made simultaneously at all points. The Indians fled at the beginning of the conflict, and the Tories were soon driven from their posts, leaving the Hessians to sustain the weight of the engagement. After 2½ hours of hard fighting the enemy gave way at all points, and commenced a disorderly retreat. While the Americans were busy in plundering the abandoned camp of the enemy, and in detached parties were engaged in pursuit, Col. Bryman, with a reinforcement of 500 men, arrived. He met the flying fugitives about 2 mi. from the scene of action, and immediately charged upon the broken ranks of the Americans. The tide of battle now turned, and Stark had the mortification of seeing his army driven helplessly from the field where they had so lately been victorious. At this moment Col. Warner's regiment arrived from Bennington and checked the advance of the British. Stark rallied his broken forces behind the fresh troops, and soon the battle again became general. At sunset the British fled toward the Hoosick and were pursued by the Americans until dark. The Americans lost about 50 killed and 40 wounded. The British loss, in killed, wounded, and prisoners, was 954. The result of this battle was disastrous in the extreme to Burgoyne, and contributed more than any other event to his final surrender at Saratoga.

⁹ The town was named from the village, and the latter was named from Abraham Jacob Lansing, its founder.

¹¹ Formerly known as "New City." It was once claimed by Vermont as within its jurisdiction. See page 18.

¹² The Lansingburgh Academy, chartered Feb. 8, 1796. By an act passed Feb. 20, 1816, the trustees of this academy were authorized to subscribe 1000 shares to the Bank of Lansingburgh. A. Reed, from New Windsor, Conn., commenced school here in 1793, in a gambled roofed building, used as the first meeting house. Rev. Dr. Lee taught the languages at the same time.

¹³ In Oct. 1857, Rev. Salmon Hatch opened a private female seminary and boarding school. It has about 100 pupils, and employs 9 teachers.

here crosses the Hudson to Waterford. The Troy & Boston R. R. passes through the town. The village was founded by Abraham Jacob Lansing, about 1770. It was first organized under the name of "Stone Arabia" in 1771.¹ In May, 1775, 50 of the citizens—at the head of whom was A. J. Lansing, the proprietor—signed articles of association pledging themselves to sustain the measures recommended by the Continental or Provincial Congress. The first act of incorporation under the State government was passed April 5, 1790, at which time the village was included in the town of "Rensselaerwyck."² In 1791 it was included in the town of Troy. The place rapidly increased in population, and early became an important trading and commercial village. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was organized in 1784; and reorganized in 1792 as a Presb. church.³ Speigletown is a village of 15 houses.⁴

NASSAU—was formed from Petersburgh, Stepentown, and Schodaek, March 31, 1806, by the name of "Phillipstown."⁵ Its name was changed April 6, 1808. It lies near the center of the s. border of the co. Its surface is very broken. Snake Hill, in the s. w., is about 800 feet above tide. The principal streams are Kinderhook and Tsatsawassa⁶ Creeks, and Valatie Kil. There are several fine lakes among the hills, the principal of which are the Tsatsawassa and the Pattawassa. The Psantioke Swamp, w. of the center, covers several hundred acres. The soil is clay and gravel underlaid by hardpan. Considerable manufacturing is carried on in town.⁷ Nassau, (p. v.) incorp. March 12, 1819, is the seat of Nassau Academy. Pop. 300. West Nassau⁸ has 57 houses, East Nassau (p. v.) 45, Hoags Corner (p. v.) 25, Alps (p. v.) 24, North Nassau (p. v.) 15, and Millers Corners 10. Brainards (p. v.) contains a female seminary and 20 houses.⁹ The first settler was Hugh Wilson, who located on the site of Nassau Village in 1760.¹⁰ At that time a few families of the Stockbridge Indians were living where Mr. Hoag's orchard now stands.¹¹ The Indians conveyed to Joseph Primmer a tract of land s. of Hoags Pond,¹² and another tract s. of it to Hugh Wilson, May 16, 1760.¹³ Within the last 20 years a considerable quantity of land has been allowed to produce a second crop of timber. There are 7 churches in town.¹⁴

NORTH GREENBUSH—was formed from Greenbush, Feb. 23, 1855. It lies upon the Hudson, directly w. of the center of the co. The clay bluffs, 100 to 200 feet high, rise from the edge of the water, leaving little or no intervals. From the summits of the bluffs the surface spreads out into a rolling upland, broken by the deep gulleys of the streams. The principal stream is Wynants Kil, in the s. e. Aries Lake, on the e. border, is a fine sheet of water. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam interspersed with patches of clay. The people are extensively engaged in supplying the markets of Albany and Troy with garden vegetables and milk. Bath,¹⁵ opposite the upper part of Albany, contains about 12 houses, Defriestville¹⁶ (p. v.) 12, and Wynants-Kill (p. v.) 15. The first settlement, made by tenants under Van Rensselaer, was among the first in the manor.¹⁷ There are 3 churches in town.¹⁸

PETERSBURGH¹⁹—was formed from Stepentown, March 18, 1791. Its boundary on the line of Berlin was changed, Jan. 4, 1793; parts of Berlin and Lansingburgh were taken off in 1806, and parts of Nassau and Grafton in 1807. It lies upon the e. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface consists of two precipitous mountain ridges separated by the narrow valley of Little Hoosick River. The highest peaks are 1000 to 2000 feet above tide. The mountain regions are barren and almost inaccessible. The Hoosick River breaks through the Taghikanick Mts. in the n. e. part. The soil in the valley is a gravelly loam. Petersburgh, (p. v.) formerly "Rens-

¹ At the first meeting in "Stone Arabia," held Jan. 1, 1771, it was voted that A. J. Lansing and his heirs forever should be a committee of the village, with a power equal to each of the four annually chosen by the people.

³ The census reports: 8 churches; 2 M. E., 2 Presb., Bap., African Meth., Prot. E., and R. C.

⁴ The first settlers of this village were Charles W. Douglass and John Foltz.

⁵ Named from Philip Van Rensselaer.

⁶ Sometimes written "Tackawassick."

⁸ Formerly "Twin Village P. O."

⁹ Formerly "Brainards Bridge P. O." Transylvania Institute was established here in 1827.

¹⁰ Among the early settlers were Thos. Hicks, Henry Post, John McCagg, Danl. Lutz, Trus. Hemsted, Abram Holmes, Jas. Marks, John M. Schermerhorn, Maj. A. Brush, Reuben Bateman, Nathl

Gillet, David Waterbury, — McNiel, and — Wiltzie. Wm. Primmer is said to have been the first child born. The first gristmill was built on the outlet of Tsatsawassa Pond by Mr. Schermerhorn, before the Revolution. The first inn was kept by — Hicks before, and the first store by Hoag & Van a little after, the Revolution.

¹¹ They called their village Ont-ti-ke-ho-maw-ek; and their chief was named Kesho-maw-ek.

¹² This pond was called by the early settlers the "Beaver Dam."

PITTS TOWN—was erected as a township by patent, July 23, 1761, and was formed as a town, March 7, 1788. Its boundary was changed Feb. 14, 1793. It lies in the center of the n. part of the co. Its surface is mountainous in the s. and e. and declines into a moderately hilly region in the n. The highest summits, in the s. e., are 800 to 1,000 feet above tide. The soil is principally a gravelly and slaty loam. Flax is extensively cultivated,³ and there are several manufactories in town.⁴ Johnsonville (p. v.) contains 35 houses, Tomhannock (p. v.) 40, Raymertown (p. v.) 27, Pittstown Corners (Pittstown p. o.) 22, Boynton 20, Pittstown Station (Valley Falls p. o.) 16, North Pittstown 20, and Cooksborough (Haynerville p. o.) 10. Shermans Mills is a hamlet. Settlement was commenced about 1650.⁵ The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1784; Elder Isaac Webb was the first preacher.⁶

POESTENKILL—named from its principal stream—was formed from Sand Lake, March 2, 1848. It lies near the center of the co., upon the western declivities of the Petersburg Mts. The central and e. portions are rugged, rocky, and mountainous, and the soil is cold, sterile, and unproductive. The w. part is hilly, with a gravelly loam well adapted to pasturage. Snake Hill, near the center, is one of the principal elevations. Upon the Poesten Kil is a fall of about 80 feet. One mi. w. of the falls is a medicinal spring, with a local celebrity for the cure of eruptions and cutaneous diseases.⁸ Poestenkill (p. v.) contains 300 inhabitants, East Poestenkill (p. o.) 10 houses, and Harberville 16. A union academy was formed in this town in 1854, but it is not under the regents. The census reports 4 churches.⁹

SAND LAKE—was formed from Greenbush and Berlin, June 19, 1812. A part of Greenbush was taken off in 1843, and Poestenkill in 1848. It lies a little s. of the center of the co. Its surface is mountainous in the e. and hilly in the w. Perigo Hill, in the n. e. corner, is 900 feet above tide, and Oak Hill, near the center, is but little less in height. The e. part of the town is mostly covered with forest.¹⁰ Wynants Kil, flowing n. w. through the center, and Tsatsawassa Creek, in the e., are the principal streams. Along the valleys of these streams are several fine lakes, the principal of which are Sand, Glass, and Crooked Lakes, and Big Bowmans Pond. The soil among the mountains is a hard, sterile clay, but in the w. it is a good quality of gravelly loam. Three-fourths of a mi. e. of W. Sand Lake is a chalybeate spring. Large quantities of cordwood, charcoal, and tan bark are carried to the Troy and Albany markets. Sand Lake (p. v.) contains the Sand Lake Academy, a boarding school,¹¹ foundery, cotton warp factory, knitting mill, and 300 inhabitants. West Sand Lake¹² (p. v.) contains 300 inhabitants, Sliters Corners 106, and Glass House 200.¹³ South Sand Lake is a p. o. Settlement commenced before the Revolution.¹⁴ The census reports 7 churches in town.¹⁵

SCHAGHTICOKE¹⁶—was formed as a district, March 21, 1772, and as a town, March 7, 1788. Pittstown was taken off, March 7, 1788, and a part of Lansingburgh in 1819. It lies on the Hudson, in the n. w. corner of the co. The surface is principally a rolling upland, about 200 feet above the river. The summits of the hills in the s. are 800 feet above tide. Hoosick River, ¹ Among the early settlers were Wm. Pendergast, John Brimmer, Jacob and Godfrey Brimmer, John Spencer, Hans and Peter Bachus, Johannes Ruyter, Henry Hatcher, Hans Lantman, Ement Hogg, Jacob Best, Petrus Vosburg, Bastian Doel, Frans, Bunn, Juriah Kreiger, Henry Young, Schoolmaster Watson, and Long Ambler. John Spencer built a log grist-mill before the Revolution, at S. Petersburg; and Barber & Murray built a sawing mill about 1800. Several of the settlers were killed or taken prisoners during the French War,—probably by the same party that destroyed the Hoosick settlements in 1754.

³ The census of 1835 reports that, in 1834, more than 250,000 lbs. of flax and 70,000 bush. of flaxseed were raised, and that there were 15 flax mills in town.

⁵ Wm. Pendergast, Stephen Hunt, and Edmund Aiken were among the first settlers near Johnsonville; Lindoxens Violet at Valley Falls, in 1772; and Christian Fisher and Michael Vandercook at Cooksborough. In 1770, Wm. Shepard (from New England) settled on 500 acres; in 1778-80, Berj. Aiken (from Dutchess co.) on 900 acres; and in 1785, Alex. Thompson, on 500 acres. Wm. Hainsford kept a school at N. Pittstown in 1785, and Rebecca Thompson at Shermans Mills in 1789.

⁶ The census reports 15 churches; 6 M. E., 3 Presb., 2 Christian, Bap., Ev. Luth., Friends, Union.

⁷ Pronounced "Poost-ten-kill." It is a Dutch word, signifying "puffing or foaming creek."

flowing through the s. part, is bordered on a portion of its course by steep banks 200 feet high. On this stream, at the mouth of Tomhannock Creek, is a beautiful circular valley, three-fourths of a mi. in circumference, and bounded on nearly every side by steep hills.¹ The soil is generally a fertile, sandy or gravelly loam. Considerable manufacturing is carried on in town.² Schaghticoke Point (Schaghticoke p. o.) contains a pop. of 1118. Schaghticoke Hill contains 25 houses. The Borough 8, Junction (p. v.) 17, and Old Schaghticoke 6. About 1670, Gov. Andros settled a remnant of the Pequots and other Eastern tribes, under the name of "Schaghticoeks," in this town, on land given them by the Mohawks, as a barrier against the Northern Indians.³ By the charter of 1686 the city of Albany was allowed to purchase of the natives 500 acres of land in this town; but, neglecting to do so, Hendrick Van Rensselaer obtained the same privilege in 1698. He sold his right to the city the next year, and in 1707 an Indian deed was obtained for a tract 6 mi. square, mostly within the limits of this town. In Oct. 1709, the city conveyed the land to actual settlers.⁴ The early settlements suffered greatly from Indian hostilities. A fort was built in 1746 at Old Schaghticoke and garrisoned by 2 companies of soldiers. The whole settlement was abandoned on the approach of Burgoyne; but, through the influence of the royalists, the place was not burned, though held for some time by the British and Hessian outposts.⁵ The Schaghticoke Seminary was incorp. May 4, 1836. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1714.⁶

SCHODACK⁷—was formed March 17, 1795, at the time of the division of "Rensselaerwyck;"⁸ parts of Berlin and Nassau were taken off in 1806. It lies upon the Hudson, in the s. w. corner of the co. From the river the surface rises in a series of bluffs 200 feet high, from the summits of which it spreads out into an undulating upland inclined toward the w. Bunker Hill, the highest point, is about 500 feet above tide. The surface is intersected by numerous deep gulleys of small streams. The principal streams are Vierdee Kil,⁹ Moordenaers Kil,¹⁰ Vloekie Kil, Muitzes (Miltch-es) Kil, and Valatie (Vola-she) Kil.¹¹ The soil in the e. is clay, and in the w. a fertile, sandy and gravelly loam. Castleton¹² (p. v.) is a fine village upon the Hudson. Pop. 431. Schodack Landing (p. v.) contains 250 inhabitants, Muitzes Kill 20 houses, Schodack Depot (p. v.) 18, East Schodack (p. v.) 15, and Bunker Hill 9. Schodack Center and South Schodack are p. offices. This vicinity seems to have been thickly inhabited by native tribes at the time of Hudson's visit in 1609.¹³ The first settlements were made by tenants under Van Rensselaer. Over 40 settlers are mentioned in Bleeker's survey of 1767.¹⁴ The census reports 7 churches.¹⁵

STEPHENTOWN¹⁶—was formed from "Rensselaerwyck," March 29, 1784. Petersburgh was taken off in 1791, and parts of Berlin and Nassau in 1806. It lies in the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface consists of 2 rocky mountain ranges separated by the valley of Kinderhook Creek. The highest summits are about 1800 feet above tide. The principal peaks are Round Mt., and Whitney and Butternut Hills, e. of the valley, and Brockway Hill and Webster Mt. w. A con-

³ A portion of these removed to Kent, Conn., in 1728, and the remainder, numbering 400, joined the French in Canada.

⁴ These were Johan de Waudelaer, Jr., John Heermans Vischer, Corst Aelder, Daniel Kitch-hoyen, Johan Knickerbocker, Louis Aale, and Derrick Van Veghten, who went there to reside, and were joined soon after by Martin de Lament, Wouter Quackenbush, Peter Yates, David Schuyler, Wouter Groesbeck, Philip Livingston, Ignace Kip, Cornelius Vandenberg, and many others, whose descendants still reside in the vicinity.

⁶ A new church was built in 1709, and Rev. Elias Bunschooten was its first pastor. This quaint edifice was 60 by 40 feet, with low side walls and a high pitched mansard roof and turret, surmounted by a weathercock over the southern gable. There was no burial ground attached, and the oldest is that of the Knickerbocker family, on the site of an Indian cemetery. The first European burial occurred in 1715. A few rods s. e. of this spot is the "Wattenegnotie," or "Council Tree," a remarkably vigorous and symmetrical oak, more than 15 feet in circumference. The census reports 8 churches; 2 Ev. Luth., 3 M. E., 1 Presb., 1 Ref. Prot. D., and 1 R. C.

⁷ Sometimes written "Shodack" or "Schodlacker."

The city charter was granted April 12, 1816. A portion of Lansingburgh was annexed May 4, 1836. It lies upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the co. Its surface comprises the alluvial flat, three-fourths of a mile wide, upon the river, and the high bluffs which border it on the e. The high land immediately e. of the city is known as Mt. Ida, and that on the s. e. as Mt. Olympus. Mt. Ida is principally clay, and has been the scene of several destructive landslides. Poesten Kil and Wynants Kil both break through these hills in narrow ravines and in a series of cascades, forming an excellent water power.

The first religious meetings were held in a store, and afterward in a schoolhouse, about 1785. The first framed house of worship was erected in 1791, now the First Presb. Church; Rev. Jonas Coe, of Lansingburgh, was the first pastor. There are now 33 churches in the city.⁴

The Public Schools are under the charge of 20 commissioners, elected for two years.⁵ In 1857 the city was divided into 25 school districts, and employed 76 teachers,—14 males and 62 females. The number of children, between 4 and 21, was 11,200, of which 7228, or 63 per cent., attended the public schools during some portion of the year.⁶

The Troy Academy, incorp. May 5, 1834, and received under the regents Feb. 5, 1839, is located near the center of the city.

The Troy Female Seminary,⁷ situated on Second Street, between Congress and Ferry Sts., was first established at Middlebury, Vt., in 1813, removed to Waterford in 1819, and to Troy in 1821. It was incorp. May 6, 1837, and received under the regents Jan. 30, 1838. It has gained a national reputation under the charge of Mrs. Emma Willard.

The Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute,⁸ endowed by Stephen Van Rensselaer, is situated near the head of State St. It was organized in 1824. It was formed for the purpose of teaching the application of mathematics to civil engineering and the natural sciences. It numbers 14 professors and has about 100 students. Next to West Point, this institute has the best reputation, in its special departments, of any school in America.

The Troy Lyceum of Natural History was incorp. March 7, 1820. Its cabinet and library are kept in the Troy University.

The *Troy University*⁹ is located upon Mt. Ida, a beautiful situation, overlooking the city and valley. It is under the charge of the M. E. denomination, and was opened in 1859.

*St. Peter's College*¹⁰ is under the charge of the R. C. denomination, and is not yet fully organized.

² The census reports 5 churches; 2 F. W. Bap., Bap., Christ. Cong., and Presb.

³ The first trustees named in the act of incorp. were Jacob D. Vanderheyden, Benj. Covalt, Anthony Goodspeed, John Pease, Ephraim Morgan, Chris. Hutton, and Saml. Gale.

⁴ Of these there are 7 M. E., 5 Presb., 4 Prot. E., 3 Bap., 3 R. C., 2 Wes. Meth., 2 Assn. Presb., Ger. Mission, Unit., Univ., Cong., Friends, Disciples, and Jews.

⁵ A Lancasterian school was established here at an early period, and continued until superseded by a special school system. The present school law was passed April 4, 1849.

⁶ The total receipts and expenditures for 1857 were $38,674 35.

⁷ More than 7000 pupils have been educated here, a large number of whom have become teachers.

⁸ Rev. Saml. Blatchford was its first President, and Ames Eaton its first senior prof., under whom the school obtained a high and merited reputation.

⁹ The grounds of this institution cover 36 acres. The main building is in the Byzantine style of architecture, and is 259 feet long on an average 38 feet broad, and 4 stories high.

¹⁰ The college building, in process of erection, was destroyed by a landslide, March 17, 1849, and is being rebuilt on Mt. St. Vincent.

St. Joseph's Asylum, under the charge of the R. C., was founded in 1842, as a refuge for the aged. In 1852 it was enlarged, and a building house was annexed.

The Trinity Hospital, a charitable institution, was incorporated, March 1, 1871. It was founded wholly through the exertions of Rev. P. Havermans, and is supported by the R. C., but maintains a large number belonging to the Sisters of Charity.

Marshall's Infirmary was incorporated in 1851. It was founded by Benjamin Marshall. The building and grounds cost $5,000, which sum was donated by its founder.

Trinity Orphan Asylum, incorporated April 10, 1846, is situated on Grand Division between Third and 8th Streets. The building is of brick, and has about 100 inmates. The Asylum is supported by donations and State appropriations, and $13,000 are received between the ages of 16 and 21, and dismissed at 19 if an opportunity offers. At this age they are indentured for 7 years, and at the age of 17. During the first 22 years over 500 had been dismissed, and most of them have secured respectable stations in life. A school is maintained regularly in the Asylum.

St. Mary's Orphan Asylum is an institution connected with St. Mary's Church, R. C. The male department is under the charge of the "The Brothers of the Christian Schools," and the female of "The Sisters of Charity."

The Warren Female Asylum, a school for indigent female children, was incorporated, March 10, 1871. It was founded and well supplied by the Warren family. A free church, Protestant, holds the Holy Cross, for the pupils and their parents, is connected with the Institute.

The Trinity Water Works were built by the city in 1846-47, and they have been subsequently extended. The water is drawn from Pleasant Creek, and the reservoir is sufficiently large to draw the water to the top of all the houses. The works are under the charge of water commissioners, and the rents are charged to property owners and levied with the taxes.

The city is 15 miles from New York, which with it is connected by a railroad in this season of navigation, by lines of steamers. Its commerce is extensive, and it has a large trade with the region around it. The Erie R. C. have opened a magnificent depot in the central part of the city for the accommodation of the various lines of roads that center here.

The manufactures of Troy are extensive and varied. Wynants Kil, on the eastern side, is 12 mill sites, with an aggregate of 2,000 horse power. Paxon Kil, on the S. W., has 10 sites, equal to 1,000 horse power, and the dam across the Hudson furnishes 400 horse power. Besides this, there is an immense amount of steam power in use.

In 1720, Derick Vanderheyden acquired from Van Rensselaer the title to 400 acres of land, now included in Troy, at an annual rent of 1 bushel of wheat and 4 fat hogs. The tract was occupied as a farm until about 1780, when a number of New Englanders had been invited to lay it out as a town. It was surveyed by 1780 and 1790, and was variously designated "Free Hill," "Fort Liberty," "Fort Frey," and finally "Freitag." In the spring of 1789 it contained 7 small stores and a number of dwellings. The name "Troy" was chosen at a meeting of the freeholders, Jan. 5, 1789. The first settlers came in soon after the war. The completion of the Erie Canal gave an impulse to this place that speedily resulted in a large family of its citizens being engaged in a large and important city. Several disastrous fires have occurred, occasioning great losses.

1. The first settlement was made by the Dutch in 1614, when they discovered the rich iron mines of the region. The first permanent settlement was made by the English in 1720, when they acquired the title to the land from the Dutch. The town was founded by a group of New Englanders who were invited to settle in the region. The first settlers came in soon after the war. The completion of the Erie Canal gave an impulse to this place that speedily resulted in a large family of its citizens being engaged in a large and important city. Several disastrous fires have occurred, occasioning great losses.

RICHMOND COUNTY.

This county¹ was organized Nov. 1, 1683. It includes Staten Island,² Shooters Island,³ and the islands of the narrows in Staten Island Sound. It is separated from Long Island by New York Bay, the Narrows,⁴ and New York Harbor; from Bergen, N. J., by the Kill Van Kull; and from N. J. on the w. by the Atlantic Ocean, Staten Island Sound.⁵ Staten Island is nearly oval-shaped, its longest diameter extending s. e. and s. w. It is 14 mi. long s. e. and, has an area of 58½ sq. mi., and is centrally distant 41 mi. from Albany. Princess Bay and Great Kils are small bays upon the n. shore. Fresh Kils is a tidal estuary extending about 1½ mi. out from Staten Island Sound, and during high tide it is nearly to nearly its whole extent. The surface of the co. is mostly gently undulating. A broad range of hills extends from the Narrows across the island, connecting between the branches of the Fresh Kils. Near Tompkinsville these hills attain an elevation of 319 ft. They are composed of granitic rock upon the s. slope and steatitic rock and serpentine upon the s. Hematitic iron ore⁶ and many other interesting minerals are found in the co. Along the Fresh Kils, and along Staten Island Sound, in Northfield, and also around the head of Great Kils and the mouth of New Creek, are extensive salt meadows. The waters of the sound and the bays adjacent to the island abound in oysters; and the oyster trade is the principal industrial pursuit of those inhabitants not engaged in business in New York, Brooklyn, or other City. The right of taking oysters belongs to the owners of the adjoining banks.⁷ At Fort Richmond, Factoryville, and other places along the s. shore, are extensive manufactories.⁸ Market gardening is followed to a limited extent, chiefly to supply the home demand. The erection of forts, hospitals, and other public establishments of the General and State Governments has given employment to great numbers of persons and caused the expenditure among the people of thousands of large sums of money. Since the establishment of regular steam ferries,⁹ many wealthy citizens engaged in business in New York City have erected residences upon the island. These country seats are mostly upon the s. shore and upon the heights that overlook the bay and sound. All the villages along the s. shore are lighted by gas furnished by the Richmond Gas Light Works, located near the Quarantine. A company was incorp. in 1846 to build a r. r. across the island to connect with the Camden & Amboy R. R.¹⁰

The co. seat is located at Richmond.¹¹ A courthouse and jail, in the same building, was erected pursuant to the act of March 23, 1837, at a cost of $10,000.¹² The co. clerk's office was erected in 1840.

² Staten Island was so named by Hudson. The Indian name is "Mittinck," "Monsie's noog," or "Apothought Minto's noog."
³ N. Y. Hist. Soc., 1: 175; N. Y. Common Council Manual, 1857, p. 545.
⁴ A small island at the entrance of Newark Bay.
⁵ The width of the Narrows opposite Fort Hudson, where they are the narrowest, is about 2600 yds., and opposite the Quarantine it is 3700 yds.
⁶ The average breadth of Staten Island Sound is about one-third of a mile. It is not usually closed by ice, although in severe winters it has been frozen many weeks together. It is the ordinary route of steamers of the Camden & Amboy R. R. Co.
⁷ This ore has a fibrous texture, and is found in botryoid forms, often with black polished surfaces, and in the granular condition it is known as "shot ore." It is said to be abundant. A heavy gray ore is also found. These ores have never been smelted on the island.
⁸ The minerals of the co., beside iron ore, are red and yellow ochre, azules, amethysts, marble, hyalite and carbonate of magnesium, sulphuret and chromate of iron, quartz, chert, olivine, feldspar, and lignite.
⁹ This right is often leased. The average annual rent is 75 cents per ft. measured along the shore. By an act passed May 9, 1845, the taking of oysters from the planted grounds of another is prohibited, under a penalty of $50 for each offense.
¹¹ The boats of the Staten Island N. Y. R. R. Co. cross daily hourly between What Kill Station, New York, and the wharf, founding at Fort Richmond, Lefferts's Neck, and the City, at this, Stapleton, and Ward's wharfs. Lines of ferries, organized in 1842, 1846, with a capital of $100,000, were established at 70¢ an hour constant use.
¹² This courthouse was recently ravaged by fire, and the furnishings of the hall stolen. Under the act of the 22d of March, 1840, the post-office at Amboy, about 8 miles west of Richmond, was closed. The night of the first and last of January, 1841, the post-office was closed. The first record of an order for the removal of the post-office dated March 4, 1719. It remains as it was until 1840, when Mr. Lambart (this is not Mr. Wm. Lambart) was the proprietor of the hotel-keeping. A Democratic lawyer, who had been a member of the bar, took two story high six feet by four feet square beams to plank and the upper story of the building, which had been stone. This building was completed in 1840, and cost about $100,000, and a large amount of it was expended in the building. The building is still standing, and was used as a court house in 1840. The first annual court of sessions of Staten Island was held at 1044, 1850. The first court after the key date was at 1044, 1850, 1878, and the first court of sessions of the State Government was held May 22, 1787, before a Mr. John Justice, president of the court. The first court of the State Government was held at 1044, 1850, 1878, before a Mr. John Justice, president of the court. 1848 and enlarged in 1857. It is a 2 story brick building, and contains the supervisor's room, office for the surrogate and district attorney, and accommodations for the sheriff. The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 105 acres in Northfield.¹ Several of the public schools of Castleton and Southfield have been organized as union schools under a special act, and are in charge of a board of education. The schools of the co. generally are in a flourishing condition.² Richmond co. is within the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners; but no men have hitherto been detailed for ordinary service within its limits.

Two newspapers are published in the co.³

Staten Island was visited by Henry Hudson in his celebrated voyage of discovery in 1609. It was purchased from the Indians, Aug. 10, 1630, by Michael Pauw, one of the 4 Patroons of New Netherlands, and formed a part of the tract known as "Pavonia" in the early Dutch records.⁴ It soon reverted, however, to the West India Co.; and in 1636 a part of the island was granted to D. P. De Vries, by whom a colony was planted upon it in Jan. 1639. The remaining part of the island was granted by the Directors of the West India Co. to Cornelius Melyn in July, 1640. The following year, Melyn with his family settled upon this grant, and in June, 1642, he obtained letters patent. In Sept. 1641, the settlement of De Vries was attacked by the Indians,⁵ and hostilities between them and the whites ensued. A peace was concluded in 1642; but in Feb. 1643, under a frivolous pretext, the Indians were attacked opposite Manhattan and at Corlaers Hook and great numbers of them slain. This barbarous measure invoked retaliation, and the white settlements within reach were laid waste. The island was again purchased of the natives, Dec. 6, 1651, by Augustine Herman, and finally quitclaimed to Gov. Lovelace, April 13, 1670.⁶ Possession was given on the 1st of May following, and at this time the island was finally abandoned by its primitive inhabitants.

A considerable number of French Huguenots, after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, found their way into the English colonies, and a part of them settled upon Staten Island. The family names of these immigrants are still common in this co.⁷ The earliest grants upon the island under the English were made to the officers of the ship Elias, immediately after the conquest.⁸ Two manors were subsequently granted,—one on the n. shore, styled "Castleton Manor," to Gov. Dongan,⁹ and the other in the s. part, known as "Billop Manor." This island was first occupied by British troops in the Revolution, July 4, 1776, and it was held by them until their final removal from the State late in 1783. On the 21st of Aug. 1777, the British posts upon the island were attacked by an American force under Gen. Sullivan. The expedition was well planned, but it failed to accomplish its main object.¹⁰ During the severe winter of 1779-80, while the Americans were encamped near Morristown, (N. J.,) a second expedition was sent out, under Gen. Lord Sterling, to surprise the enemy in the interior of the island. The party, consisting of 2500 men, crossed the sound on the ice from Deharts Point on the Jersey shore, on the morning of the 15th of Jan.; but the movement was observed in time to prepare for defense. Contrary to expectation, the passage to New York was found to be free from ice, and during the day the British were reinforced from the city. Two or three were killed on each side, and a few prisoners were taken by the Americans. While the party remained, some persons from the mainland passed over and plundered several of the inhabitants; but a strict search was made and the stolen property was recovered and restored to its owners.¹¹ On the 11th of

The Richmond Co. Free Press was started at Richmond in 1833 by Wm. Hazard, and continued 3 years.

The Staten Islander was established at Stapleton, as a weekly journal, in 1849, by F. L. Hazard, and is now published semi-weekly.

The Deutsche Staten Islander was commenced in 1855 at Stapleton by August Fries, but has since been discontinued.

The Staten Island Chronicle was started at Tompkinsville in 1858, and is still published.

Humphrey, 200; also Coleman, 200; and 7 others, each 200.—Proceedings, Soc. Orléans, Jacques Haduon and Jacques Gamon each possessed 200 acres at the same time.

⁸ The greater part of the lands to which existing titles are traced were granted under Dongan's administration. The descendants of Gov. Dongan were living upon the original estate until the close of the 18th century. Between 30 and 40 grants of land from the colonial governors are upon record in the clerk's office.

⁹ About 150 British prisoners were taken. The Americans lost 13 killed and 130 in prisoners, and the whole party ran a narrow risk of capture. Gen. Sullivan's conduct was subjected to a court of inquiry by order of Congress, but he was acquitted. A particular account of this affair is given in Maxwell's Life of Washington, I., 135. See also Speck's Life and Writings of Washington, V, 7, and Palmer's Life of Sullivan, &c.

Sept. 1776, a conference between Lord Wm. Howe and a committee of Congress consisting of Dr. Franklin, J. Adams, and E. Rutledge was held at the house of Capt. Billop, opposite North Amboy.¹ No events of special interest occurred upon the island during the late war with Great Britain. A brigade of militia, consisting of 2000 men, was stationed here, and remained in camp from Aug. to Dec. 1814. During the troubles that preceded the War of 1812, the Legislature of New York memorialized Congress for the erection of defensive works around the harbor of New York, claiming protection against the arms of a foreign power as no more than an equitable return for the revenues which the State had surrendered to the General Government upon the adoption of the Constitution.² Failing in this, the governor was directed to purchase a tract, not to exceed 25 acres, at the Narrows³ and upon this tract fortifications were afterward erected. The amount of the appropriation made by the State for the defenses upon Staten Island previous to 1820 was $154,105 46. These works were purchased by the General Government, pursuant to an act of Congress passed Aug. 3, 1816,⁴ and they are now being rebuilt at an immense cost. When these and the other contemplated works along the approaches to New York Harbor are completed, the city will be among the best fortified in the world.⁵ A quarantine was established by the State, under an act passed Feb. 25, 1799, upon the S. extremity of the island, in the town of Castleton, and maintained until it was destroyed, on the evenings of Sept. 1 and 2, 1858, by an armed mob encouraged and led by prominent citizens.⁶

CASTLETON—was first recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies in the S. part of the island, and is the smallest but most populous and wealthy town in the co. The surface is mostly hilly. The people are principally engaged in manufacturing. Factoryville (North Shore p. o.) is a populous village in the N. W. part of the town, containing extensive dye and print works⁷ and other manufactories. Elliottsville⁸ is a hamlet. A little E. of this place is the ³Act of Feb. 3, 1810. The erections were chiefly made in 1814.

⁴These defenses consisted of Fort Richmond, a water battery near the water's edge; Fort Tompkins, a heavy fortress on the heights above, and Batteries Hudson and Morton. The last was named from Gen. Jacob Morton, of the N. Y. Artillery. In 1814, the removal of the U. S. Military Academy to this island was proposed, and the governor was empowered to convey to the General Government the jurisdiction of so much territory as might be necessary for this purpose. No further steps toward its removal have been taken.

⁵Additional land was bought in 1857 near Fort Tompkins, and this work is now about to be replaced by one of great strength, at an estimated cost of over $3,000,000. The aggregate of the appropriations made by the General Government for these works has been as follows: for Fort Richmond, $475,000; for Fort Tompkins, $492,500; for Batteries Hudson and Morton, $100,000. A new fort is to be erected upon Sandy Hook (N. J.) which it is estimated will cost $1,000,000, $2,000,000 of which has been appropriated. For an account of Fort Hamilton and the fortification of the inner harbor, see pp. 473, 479. The recent defensive works and those now in progress were chiefly ordered upon the advice of Gen. Totten.

⁶In 1758 an act was passed to prevent the spread of infectious diseases, and a law of similar import was enacted May 4, 1784. By the act of May 4, 1794, Governors Island was assigned as a quarantine; and in March, 1797, a lazaretto was directed to be built upon Redbas Island. The awful visitation of yellow fever in 1798 led to the passage of an act Feb. 25, 1799, for the purchase of 50 acres upon Staten Island for a permanent quarantine. Of this lot 3 acres were sold, and sold April 1, 1800, to the U. S. for warehouses. The first buildings erected were of materials taken from the Lazaretto on Redbas Island. In 1819 a large brick building was erected, in 1823, a fever hospital, in 1828, 20, a smallpox hospital, and subsequently other buildings, as the wants of the institution required. As the surrounding country became thickly settled, the same difficulty arose that led to the removal of quarantine from the vicinity of New York, and for many years an earnest desire had existed among the citizens of this island for its removal. Memorials for this object were not only transmitted from the importers, and nothing was accomplished. In 1836 the yellow fever appeared, and 7999 cases occurred, of which 228 were on Staten Island, between New Brighton and 14th Sts. in Fort Hamilton and Bay Ridge, 64 on Governors Island, and 29 in Bay Kinn. Of these on Staten Island one third were fatal. This alarming event convinced the public that new safeguards were necessary, and the citizens of this co. renewed their demand for the removal of the quarantine. An act for the removal of the "quarantine to Staten" was passed, March 6, 1857, under which George Hall, Egbert Benson, and Obadiah Bowne were appointed commissioners to purchase a new site and erect the necessary buildings. The sum of $175,000 was fixed as the limit of expenditure under this act. After ineffectual efforts to obtain a site on Sandy Hook, the committee purchased a farm of 50 acres, late the property of Joel Wells, situated at Stearns Point in Westville. The sum paid was $22,000, and the land had upon it farm buildings valued at $15,000. The site was approved, and the purchase completed, May 1, 1857. On the night of the 5th of May, all the buildings were burned to the ground by a mob of some 70 persons, who went out disguised. Temporary buildings were erected on the island in June. An attack was made on the 12th of July by 61 well-armed persons, and several shots were fired. The mob burned a building consisting of two hospitals and a cook and wash house, which had on the evening of April 26, 1858, and no effort was made to rebuild them, or to bring the necessaries to justice. The mob's rage against the old establishment continued in daily outbreaks, and a confidence from the approval of many of the Board of Health, some of whom declared their willingness to make a party by daylight and without disguise, to destroy the premises, was openly denied an insufferable nuisance. In the summer of 1858, a hurricane had been ordered, by order of the Board of Health, at Castleton, to prevent communication with the interior. This was taken down by a party of men from the city under the direction of the Health Office. The occurrence of a fever was also a yellow fever outside the walls. In Aug. 1858, led to the passage of a series of resolutions by the town Board of Health, declaring that the quarantine establishment is a nuisance to the public health, is no longer, and recommending the citizens of the co. to protect themselves by abating it without delay. Copies of these resolutions were posted up in the village on the 18th of Sept., and on the evening of the same day the walls were broken down, and the gates burst open by a mob, the sick carried out upon their mattresses, the family of the resident physician driven from their dwelling, and every building, except the women's hospital, was burned. On the following evening the mob again set to work destroying the last building in the process of erection. These acts were saved by a party of militia stationed at the fort, whose presence, on the 7th, the governor sent Capt. Bennett, with 500 of the militia, to the island, to prevent any further acts of violence. The militia, who were stationed there, were on duty all the close of the year. The expenses attending the quarantine were assumed and paid by the government, and the city had a special appropriation in 1858. The necessity for a permanent general quarantine from Staten Island has since been felt by most persons who have given the subject any serious attention, and the practical difficulty of constructing a quarantine on the island, and of the sheds in the lower bay has been pointed out by a number of engineers. The system, however, was in 1859 abandoned, and the appointment of a new one, on the 15th of Dec. 1859, the cult but highly important subject, in the act of 1859.

⁷The N. Y. Dyeing and Printing Works were established in 1810. They employ a crew of 200 to 250 persons.

NORTHFIELD—was formed March 7, 1788. It is situated in the s. w. part of the co., and includes several small islands in Staten Island Sound and Newark Bay. Its surface is level in the northern and central parts and hilly in the southern. Fresh Kils form the boundary between this town and Westfield. The soil is a clayey loam, under excellent cultivation. Along the w. and s. borders are extensive salt marshes. The town is very thickly settled along the shore of Newark Bay and the Kil Van Kull. Port Richmond, (p. v.) in the s. e. part of the town, is a large manufacturing village,⁶ with convenient docks for shipping. Pop. 1,429. Graniteville, adjacent to Port Richmond, is a small settlement, with a pop. of 481. Granite was formerly extensively quarried at this place.⁷ Mariners Harbor is a thickly settled street along the shore of Newark Bay. Pop. 1,142. Old Place and New Springville (p. o.) are hamlets. Chelsea is a small village nearly opposite the mouth of Rahway River. Southfield and Hollins Hook are hamlets, and Long Neck is a p. o. near Fresh Kil. SOUTHFIELD—was formed March 7, 1788. It is a long, narrow town extending along New York Bay. Great Kil is a bay in the s. part.¹¹ Its surface is level or gently undulating, terminating in bluffs upon the e. shore. In the s. part are several small streams bordered by salt meadows. Stapleton (p. v.) is a scattered village in the n. part of the town. It contains 4 churches. ¹ This establishment was founded by Robert Richard Bandall, of New York. By the provisions of his will, dated June 1, 1801, several annuities and bequests were to be paid, and the residue of his estate conveyed in trust to the State Chancellor, the Mayor and Recorder of New York, the senior minister of the Episcopal and of the Presbyterian churches of the city, the President of the Chamber of Commerce and the President and Vice-President of the Marine Society, and their successors, for the support of aged and infirm sailors. The trustees were incorporated, Feb. 6, 1806. The property thus bequeathed lay near 4 non Square, in New York, and a protracted and expensive lawsuit prevented the trustees from fully executing the intentions of the benefactor until many years after his death. This suit was decided in the U. S. Supreme Court, in Feb. 1830, in favor of the trustees. It was allowed to accumulate until 1830, when the present site (and facing buildings) was purchased, and preparations were made for the erection of the necessary buildings. The cornerstone of the edifice was laid Oct. 21, 1831. The buildings consist of a main edifice with two wings, a hospital, erected in 1833, a commodious dining and lodging hall, erected in 1856, a chapel, erected in 1856, the governor, physician, chaplain, and steward's dwellings, a laundry, a gardener's house, and other buildings. The remains of the founder of the institution were interred beneath a monument in front of the main building, Aug. 21, 1831. The officers of the establishment consist of a president, secretary, governor, treasurer, chaplain, physician, assistant governor, steward, and agent, chosen annually by the trustees. Capt. John Whetton was the first governor, and since 1840 Capt. De Peyster has held that office. The total number of inmates received since 1845 has been 477; the present number (Aug. 1858) is 380. Among the inmates the average number of deaths is 25 per annum. The annual income of the institution is $75,000.

² The Society for the Relief of Destitute Children of Seamen was formed in 1840 and incorporated, 1851. An annual payment of $2 constitutes a member, and a single payment of $25 a life member. It is managed and chiefly supported by ladies. The yearly expenditures are about $7,000.

³ A silk handkerchief printing establishment, started here in 1847, gives employment to about 150 persons.

By the act of Feb. 18, 1814, the trustees were authorized to sell this, and the proceeds were invested for the benefit of the church. A large amount of valuable real estate adjoining the Quarantine Ferry is owned by this society, and is leased for a term of 50 years.

¹² In March, 1801, a tax was imposed upon seamen and passengers entering the port of New York, the proceeds of which were applied to the Quarantine Hospital. But the injustice of devoting a revenue derived from the hard earnings of seamen to objects having no connection with their interests or support led to the passage of a law in 1803, by which this tax was directed to be paid to the Board of Trustees of the Seamen's Fund and Retreat in the city of New York. A surplus that had been paid into the State treasury, amounting to $12,357.68, was also placed in the hands of the trustees. A tract of 40 acres was bought for $10,000, temporary buildings were erected, and, on the 1st of Oct. 1803, 47 patients were admitted. The cornerstone of the present structure was laid July 1, 1835, and the building was finished in 1837. It is built of hammered stone, is 3 stories high, and will accommodate 200 inmates. An insane hospital, nurses for the superintendent and physicians, and other buildings, have been erected. The cost of the main building was $90,000, of the insane hospital $6,000, and the total cost has been $115,000. Up to Jan. 1, 1854, 16,764 patients had been received, of whom 680 had died. By an act passed April 7, 1854, the mayor and health officer of New York, the presidents of the Seamen's Savings Bank and the Marine Society, and 7 other persons, (4 of whom must be masters of vessels, appointed by the governor and Senate,) were constituted trustees of the establishment. The trustees must be residents of New York, Kings, Queens, or Richmond Cos.

¹³ By an act passed in 1847, the trustees of the Seamen's Retreat were directed to provide for the support of destitute sick and infirm mothers, wives, sisters, daughters, and widows of seamen, and $10,000 was applied for the erection of suitable build-on a creek tributary to the Fresh Kills, on the line of Northfield. It is the co. seat, and contains the co. buildings, 1 church, and about 50 houses. Bay View is a p. o., and Egbertsville (New Dorp p. o.) is a small village. The census reports 5 churches in town.¹

WESTFIELD—was formed March 7, 1788. It occupies the s.w. extremity of the island, and is the largest town in the co. Its surface is generally level or gently undulating. Princes Bay is an indentation upon the s. coast, to the e. of which is Seguines Point.² Fresh Kills forms the boundary between this town and Northfield. Material for fire brick is found in abundance near Staten Island Sound, and considerable quantities of it have been taken to New York for manufacture. Upon the coast, near the w. extremity of Princes Bay, is a lighthouse.³ The people of this town are principally engaged in fishing and taking oysters. A limited amount of manufactures is carried on.⁴ Tottenville⁵ (Bentley p. o.) is situated on Staten Island Sound, opposite Perth Amboy. Pop. 600. Rossville⁶ (p. v.) has a population of 300. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged, directly or indirectly, in the oyster trade. Lemon Creek (p. o.) is a hamlet, known as "Pleasant Plains," and Marshland is a p. o. Blooming View⁷ and Woodrow are small villages. Richmond Valley (p. o.) is a hamlet, and Southside a p. o. The census reports 7 churches in town.⁸

ROCKLAND COUNTY.

This county was formed from Orange, Feb. 23, 1798. It is triangular in form, Hudson River, New Jersey line, and the s. bounds of Orange co. being respectively its e., s. w., and n. w. boundaries. It is centrally distant 105 mi. from Albany, and contains 208 sq. mi. The Ramapo Mts., extending along the n. w. border, are the connecting link between the Blue Ridge of Eastern Penn. and N. J. and the Matteawan Mts. of Putnam co., e. of the Hudson. They are separated into numerous distinct spurs, ridges, and peaks, and occupy more than one-third of the entire surface of the co. They are generally steep, rocky, and barren, and the valleys between them are narrow, rocky ravines. The Palisade Range from N. J. enters the extreme s. angle of the co., and terminates abruptly s.

of Piermont. A broken ridge, known as the Nyack Hills, forming a n. spur of this range, but without its continuous and wall like character, extends n. along the river to the n. part of Clarkstown, where it unites with Verdrietegees Hook, an e. spur of the Ramapo Range. The surface of the central and s. w. portions of the co., lying between these ranges, is rolling or moderately hilly. The highest summits in the n. w. part are 700 to 1,000 feet above tide. The principal streams are Hackensack River, flowing s. through Clarkstown and Orangetown, Ramapo River, in the w. angle of Ramapo, and Minisceongo Creek, Minas Fall Creek, and Spar Kil, tributaries of the Hudson. The rocks of the Ramapo Mts. are principally primitive. Granite, gneiss, and metamorphic limestone abound. The hills along the river and Verdrietegees Hook are composed of red sandstone, known to geologists as the New Red Sandstone; and the central and w. portions of the co. are principally underlaid by limestone. These rocks yield an abundance of most excellent building material,¹ and from the white limestone in the s. e. corner of the co. large quantities of lime are manufactured.² Trap rock extends from N. J. into the s. border of the co. The people are largely engaged in fruit growing and gardening. Milk is sent from some parts of the co. in considerable quantities to the New York market. The manufacture of lime and brick and the exportation of ice are important branches of the industry of the co. Large quantities of red sandstone for building are annually quarried and exported. The manufactures of the co. are also important and various, consisting principally of shoes, wooden ware, and woolen yarn.

The co. seat is located at the village of New City, in Clarkstown. A combined courthouse and jail, built of brick, is situated upon a beautiful eminence overlooking the village.³ The clerk's office is a fireproof brick building adjacent to the courthouse. The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 43 acres at Mechanicsville, in Ramapo, 7 mi. w. of the courthouse. The average number of inmates is 100, supported at a weekly expense of 75 cts. each. The farm yields a revenue of $700. A school is taught during the entire year, and the house is well kept. The N. Y. & Erie R. R. extends through the w. part of Ramapo, and the Piermont Branch of the same road extends from Piermont, on the Hudson, to Sufferns, where it unites with the main track.⁴

Two weekly newspapers are now published in the co.⁵

This co. was included in patents known as the Kakieta Patent, granted to Daniel Homan and Michael Hawdon, June 25, 1696; the Wawayanda Patent, granted to John Bridges, April 29, 1703; and the Cheesocks Patent, granted to Ann Bridges and others, March 20, 1707. The first patent recorded in the co. clerk's office is one granted to Samuel Bayard, bearing date Sept. 16,

⁴ A. R. R. extends s. from Piermont to Jersey City. It was finished in 1839, and is intended to continue s. to Warren.

⁵ The Palladium was started at Warren, about 1812, by Ezekiel Burroughs, and was continued a short time.

The Rockland Register was commenced at Warren, in 1828, by Ezekiel Burroughs; in 1830 it was changed to The Rockland Gazette, and in 1834 it was united with The Advertiser.

The Rockland Advertiser was started at Warren, in May, 1823, by John Douglas; and in 1834 it was united with The Gazette, under the name of

The Rockland Advertiser and Family Gazette; and in 1843 it was published as

The Rockland News and General Advertiser, by John L. Bur'.

The North River Times was started at Warren, in 1834, by Alexander H. Wells, and was continued a short time.

The Messenger was published at Warren a short time in 1838.

The Rockland County Messenger was established at Warren, in May, 1846, by Robert Marshall; in 1852 it passed into the hands of Robert Smith, by whom it is still continued.

The Rockland County Journal was commenced in July, 1849, at Nyack, by Wm. G. Haeschelarth, and is still continued by him.

1703.¹ The old courthouse, built about 1739 for that part of Orange co. s. of the mountains, was at Tappantown, opposite the old Ref. Prot. D. church, and was burned before the Revolution. The first settlers were Dutch, who lived in the s. e. part of the co. from 1690 to 1710.²

CLARKSTOWN—was formed from Haverstraw, March 18, 1791. It lies upon the Hudson, and is the central town upon the e. border of the co. Verdrietegees Hook, a rocky ridge 500 to 800 feet above tide, extends along the s. line, and the Nyack Range occupies a considerable portion in the s. e. corner. The remaining parts of the town, comprising four-fifths of its surface, are rolling or moderately hilly. Hackensack River flows s. through near the center, and a narrow swamp extends along the greater part of its course. Rockland Lake, about 1 mi. from the Hudson, is a fine sheet of pure water, 3 mi. in circumference and 160 feet above the river. The soil is a reddish, sandy loam underlaid by clay. Considerable attention is given to fruit growing. Rockland Lake,³ (p. v.) in the e. part of the town, and extending from the lake to the river, contains a church, a foundry and machine shop, and a ship yard. Pop. 430. An extensive business is carried on at this place in preserving and exporting ice.⁴ New City, (Clarkstown p. o., the co. seat, a little s. w. of the center, contains the co. buildings, a church, and 28 dwellings. Nanuet, (p. v.) formerly "Clarkstown Station," a station upon the Piermont Branch of the Erie R. R., in the s. w. part, contains 1 church and 20 dwellings. Clarksville, (Nyack Turnpike p. o.) in the s. part, contains a church and 18 dwellings. Dutch Factory, a hamlet in the w. part, contains a cotton factory and 2 woolen yarn factories. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, at an early period. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed near Clarksville.⁵

HAVERSTRAW⁶—was formed March 7, 1788.⁷ Clarkstown and Ramapo were taken off in 1791. It lies upon the Hudson, in the s. angle of the co. Nearly the entire surface is hilly and mountainous. The Ramapo or Blue Mts., extending through the s. w. part, are divided into numerous precipitous and rocky peaks, and spurs from the principal range extend to the banks of the Hudson.⁸ Verdrietegees Hook, a long, rocky ridge, forms a considerable portion of the s. border. The s. e. portion is moderately hilly. The valleys separating these mountains are mostly narrow, rocky ravines. Stony Point is a small rocky peninsula on the river, near the center of the e. border of the town.⁹ The principal streams are Miniseonga and Miners Creeks, flowing into the Hudson, and Stony Brook, a tributary of Ramapo River, a branch of the Passaic. The soil is a sandy loam underlaid by clay. Extensive beds of a fine quality of clay border upon the river above Warren, and from them are annually manufactured 150,000,000 of bricks, giving employment to over 1,000 men. Limestone crops out near Tompkins Cove, from which large quantities of lime are manufactured. A gas spring is found 2½ mi. s. of Stony Point.¹⁰ Warren,¹¹ (Haverstraw p. o.) situated upon the Hudson, in the s. e. angle of the town, was incorp. in 1854.

¹ This tract is described as follows:—"A certain tract of vacant land within our county of Orange called by the Indians Whorinus Peruck, Gron dnoe, and Nanashuck, and is in several small pieces; and also another parcel of land, beginning at the south bounds of lands lately granted to Daniel Honan and Michael Hawdon, being a small creek that runs into Demaree's Creek to the southward of Nanashuck, and runs from thence by Demaree's said creek as it runs southerly to the line parting our said Province from the Jerseys; and so by the said parting line westward to a small river called Saddle River, thence by the said river northward until an east line do run to the southwest corner of the said Honan and Hawdon's land, containing by estimation two thousand acres of improvable land, &c. &c."

² Another deed on record commences, "To all X Tan People," (Christen People), Johannes Mynde, of Haverstraw, &c. &c. to Albert Mynde, of Haverstraw, &c. &c. and dated 1694.

⁴ Among these early settlers were Capt. Cornelius Cuyper, Capt. Cornelius Herring, Johannes Moyer, Gerhardus Clowes, Derrick Street, Jacobus Swartwout, Jonathan Ross, Thomas Pulling, John Gale, Cornelius Smith, Jacob King, William Kurtrick, John Ellison, Rinegar Ksarcke, Col. Vincent Matthews, Hendrick Ten Eyck, Gaylvort Cron, Mibard Hogon Kamp, Garrett Sneiderker, Dand Benton, Petrus Decker, Jonathan Seaman, Thos. Maybes, Daniel De Clark, William Wyant, Evert Hendrick, John Van Elot, Johannes Blauvelt, Nicholas Goeckhu, Lambert Aurnancey, Tomis Van Houten, and Tomis Tabman.

⁵ The landing at this village is sometimes called Slaughter's Landing.

⁶ 200,000 tons of ice are annually exported. The business gives employment to 1000 men during the season of securing the ice, and to about 100 men continually.

⁷ There are 4 churches in town; 2 M. E., Ref. Prot. D., and Presbyters.

⁸ Signifying Out Straw. The name is said to be derived from the quantities of wild oats growing on the borders of the river when the town was first settled.

¹⁰ The principal of these peaks are the Dundelburgh and West Mrs., in the s. e.; Buelan, Barrack, Bulson, Pine, and Colling Hill, near the center; Rock House Hill, Blackum, Red, and Horsedown Mts., in the w.; and Husha Hill and Cheese and Oil Hill in the s.

¹³ It is well known as Haverstraw. The large rolling mill of the Sampson Iron Co., 1½ mi. s. of this place, usually employing 100 to 150 hands, has suspended operations.

It contains 5 churches, a newspaper office, academy,¹ paper mill, ship yard, foundry, and a silk manufactory. Pop. about 1,700. Tompkins Cove, upon the Hudson, is a village grown up around the extensive lineworks of C. Tompkins & Co. It contains a church, a private school supported by the company, and 60 dwellings.² Garnerville, 2 mi. s. w. of Warren, contains 1 church, the Rockland Print Works,³ and 40 dwellings. North Haverstraw, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, 3 mi. n. of Warren, contains 2 churches and 28 dwellings. Thiel's Corner, 4 mi. w. of Warren, contains a needle factory, 2 gristmills, a church, and 15 dwellings. Montville, Caldwells Landing,⁴ and Grassy Point are hamlets. Fort Clinton, the ruins of which are still visible, was situated upon the river, in the s. e. angle of the town. The house in which Arnold and André met to consummate the bargain for the delivery of West Point to the British is still standing, about halfway between Warren and North Haverstraw. There are 11 churches in town.⁵

ORANGETOWN—was formed March 7, 1788, and was named from Orange co., of which it then formed a part. It lies upon the Hudson, in the s. angle of the co. Its surface is broken by abrupt and rocky hills in the e.; but in the center and w. it spreads out into a rolling or moderately hilly region. The Nyack Hills, extending along the river, are 300 to 500 feet high, with steep, rocky declivities upon the e., but more gradual slopes upon the w.⁶ Their summits are rocky and covered with a light growth of forest trees. Snake Hill, in the s. e. corner, upon the line of Clarks-town, is one of the principal peaks. The principal stream is Hackensack River, flowing s. through the w. part. Pascasc Creek flows through the extreme w. angle, and Spar Kil is a tributary of the Hudson. Near the s. line are several bog or peat meadows, generally well drained and under cultivation. The red sandstone which crops out on the e. declivities of the hills, within a few rods of the river, between Piermont and Nyack, is extensively quarried and exported for building stone.⁷ The soil is a reddish, sandy loam intermixed with clay. Fruit growing and furnishing milk for the New York market have become leading pursuits. Nyack, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, in the s. e. corner of the town, contains 5 churches, 5 shoe manufactories,⁸ a steam tub and pail factory,⁹ the Rockland Female Institute,¹⁰ and a private academy.¹¹ Pop. 1,458. Piermont,¹² (p. v.) upon the Hudson, in the s. part, was incorp. May 21, 1850. It is the e. terminus of the Piermont Branch of the N. Y. & Erie R. R.,—the one over which the freight is carried. Nearly the whole business of the place is connected with the r. r. establishment. A pier 1 mi. long has been built into the river, where the freight is transferred to and from the cars and barges in the river. Upon each end of the pier are extensive offices for the transaction of the business of the road. At this place the r. r. co. also have a large iron foundry and extensive repair shops. Pop. 2,204. Tappantown,¹³ (p. v.) near the N. J. line, contains 2 churches and 30 dwellings. This place was the scene of the trial of André, and for a time in 1780 was the headquarters of Gen. Washington.¹⁴ Rockland, (Palisades p. o.) upon the Hudson, in the s. part ¹ The Haverstraw Mountain Institute, a private institution, was established in 1833. It employs 2 teachers, and has an average of 40 pupils.

² This company have 40 linnocks, and manufacture 100,000 bush of lime annually, giving employment to 100 men. The lime is sent s. and is used for agricultural purposes.

⁴ This place is just below the Highlands, and opposite Peckskill, with which it is connected by a steam ferry. The dry line of steamers between New York and Albany land here. About 15 years since, a company was formed for raising an old wreck at this place, said to be one of the pirate Kidd's vessels, laden with treasure! A other place was built, machinery erected, and immense sums were expended in this insane project,—which, it is needless to add, resulted in nothing but a total loss to all concerned. § 4 M. E., 3 Presb., 2 Prot. E., Af. Meth., and R. C.

⁵ The valley of Spar Kil forms a break in these hills, through which the Piermont Branch of the Erie R. R. is constructed. In the hill just s. of Piermont is an opening in the rocks, supposed by some to be the shaft of an ancient mine and by others to be a natural cave. It is divided into 2 passages, one extending 70 feet w. s. w. and the other 40 to 50 feet w. by s. The passage is very irregular, 4 to 6 feet in width and 3 to 9 feet high. At the extremity of the longer passage is an immense spring of clear, cold water.

⁶ The State House at Albany was built of this stone.

⁸ This factory employs 30 hands, and produces $60,000 worth of goods annually.

¹¹ Name derived from the Fort built by the r. r. company and the mountain in rear of the village.

¹² According to Herkewelder, Tappan is from the language of the Delawareans, and derived from Tuphane or Tuphanne, "Cold Stream."—Montion and Yute's Hist. N. Y.

of the town, contains 3 churches and 40 dwellings.¹ Orange Mills, Middletown, and Blauveltville, (p. o.), a station on the N. Y. & E. R. R., are hamlets. The first settlement is supposed to have been made by the Dutch, as early as 1680.² The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed Oct. 24, 1694; and the first preacher was Rev. Guiliam Barch II.³ The first church edifice was erected in 1716. There are 16 churches in town.⁴

RAMAPO—was formed from Haverstraw, March 18, 1791, as "New Hempstead." Its name was changed to "Hempstead" March 3, 1797, and to Ramapo in 1828. It is the most westerly town in the co. The Ramapo or Blue Mts. extend s. e. and s. w. through the w. part.⁵ They are steep and rocky, and the valleys between them are deep and narrow. Ranges of rounded and arable hills extend through the s. e. half of the town and occupy the greater part of its surface. The principal streams are Ramapo River, flowing s. through the w. corner, and its tributaries Maway River and Stony Creek. Niggar and Shepard Ponds, on the line of N. J., in the s. w. angle, are small bodies of water. The people are principally employed in raising vegetables for the New York market. Ramapo, (Ramapo Works p. o.), a station on the N. Y. & E. R. R., in the w. part of the town, contains 1 church, several manufactories, and 50 dwellings.⁶ Sufferns, (p. v.), near the line of N. J., in the w. part, contains a rolling mill and 20 dwellings. It lies at the junction of the two branches of the Erie R. R., and is an important station. Stotsburgh, (p. v.) on the Erie R. R., in the extreme w. part, contains a church, cotton twine factory,⁷ hog factory, and 180 inhabitants. Spring Valley, (p. v.), on the Piermont Branch of the Erie R. R., contains a church and 18 dwellings. Mechanicsville, near the center of the town, contains a church and 15 dwellings. Furmanville and Moneys Depot (Moneys p. o.) are hamlets. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed near the center of the town, Dec. 4, 1774; Rev. Peter Loyt was the first preacher.⁸

² Among the early settlers were families named Arrianenx, Hitting, Blauvelt, Van Houton, and Tallman. These names appear upon the records of the church in 1694. The first settlement on record was that of Durck, (Richardson) of Cornelius Casper and Elsie Bogert, his wife, Oct. 15, 1690, and the first marriage, that of Marinus William House, Crom and Gertrude Lemus, Van Houton, in 1723. The first school was taught by Hermanus Van Housen, from Holland, soon after the first organization of the church. The first mill is believed to have been kept by Casper M. Myer, in the "1794 75 House," now occupied for the same purpose. Abram Myer, kept the first mill; his son, Cornelius MacKen, owned it during the Revolution, but, expiring the cause of the British, his property was confiscated.
³ A tract of 60 acres was originally donated to this church; but at different times all but 14 or 15 acres have been sold. The records of the church during the Revolution, kept in a small book by the past or Rev. Mr. Verbeek, have since been carried away when obliged to move from Philip Tappan's farm, and are lost.

ST. LAWRENCE COUNTY.

This county was formed from Clinton and parts of Montgomery and Herkimer, March 3, 1802.¹ It contains an area of 2,880 sq. mi., and is the largest co. in the State. It is centrally distant 140 mi. from Albany. The surface is broken by a series of parallel ridges extending in a n. e. and s. w. direction, and gradually declining in height from the summits, about 1000 ft. above tide, on the s. border, to the level of the banks of St. Lawrence. The highest summits, in the s. e., are about 2000 ft. above tide. The declivities of the ridges are usually gradual slopes, giving to the surface a rolling character, changing from gentle undulations along the river to a hilly and almost mountainous character in the s. e.

The principal streams are the Indian, Oswegatchie, Grass, Racket, St. Regis, and Deer Rivers.² These streams all have their rise upon the highlands, which occupy the center of the great northern wilderness, flow for a considerable distance in a n. w. direction, and most of them gradually bend toward the n. e. and finally traverse the greater part of the co. nearly parallel to the St. Lawrence. They all are frequently interrupted by rapids and cascades in their upper and middle course, but as they approach the St. Lawrence they become sluggish; and most of them are navigable for short distances from their mouths.³ The southern and central parts of the co. are thus abundantly supplied with water-power. In the s. part are numerous small lakes, the principal of which is Cranberry Lake. Long Lake, the largest body of water in the co., lies along the course of Indian River, near its junction with the Oswegatchie.

The geological formation of the co. is very simple. The whole central and southern portions are underlain by the primitive formation, consisting of gneiss and white limestone.⁴ The northern extremity of this formation may be readily traced, by a line commencing upon the border of Jefferson co., about 2 mi. w. of the Ox Bow, thence extending northerly to near the center of the s. shore of Black Lake, thence bending toward the e., and extending to the e. border of the co. on the n. line of Hopkinton. A belt of country 5 to 10 mi. wide, n. of the primitive region and parallel to it, is underlain by Potsdam sandstone; and the remainder of the co., comprising a belt 3 to 20 mi. wide bordering upon the St. Lawrence, is underlain by the calciferous sandrock. The primitive portion of the co. is generally elevated and considerably broken. Its soil is light and sandy; and in some parts are extensive sand plains, entirely unfit for agricultural purposes. A considerable portion of the co. is covered with drift deposits, which go far to neutralize the effect of the underlying rock upon the character of the soil. In this region the intervalles along the streams are usually fertile; but the whole is best adapted to grazing. Magnetic iron ores abound in the s. part; but they have never been examined or worked to any considerable extent, owing to their remoteness from settlements.⁵ In Rossie rich veins of lead have been found and extensively worked;⁶ and the rich specular iron ore found along the w. border of the co. and in the adjacent portions of Jefferson, lies between the gneiss and sandstone.⁷ The sandstone region is level or gently undulating, broken in some places by disrupted masses of the underlying rock. In this region are numerous quarries, from which are obtained sheets of sandstone of 2 inches to a foot in thickness and of almost any desirable size. This stone acquires hardness by exposure and is indestructible by atmospheric agencies. The soil in this region is usually thin, but fertile, and is derived principally from drift. The calciferous sandstone region commences as a narrow strip on the St. Lawrence, in the n. part of Hammond, and continually widens to the e. border of the co. The soil, consisting of drift and marine clay, is usually very productive.

² These streams are known to the St. Regis Indians by the following names:—Indian, O-ti-ki-wake, "where the ash tree grows with knobs;" Oswegatchie, a Huron word, said to signify "black water;" Grass, Ni-ken-ti-sack, "hill of large fishes;" Racket, Nj-ha-ni-wate, "racket, or noisy river;" St. Regis, Ak-wassiss-ne, "where the partridge drums;" Deer, Oe-ska-rou-ne, "Deer River."

³ In severe cold weather the tributaries of the St. Lawrence are liable to a sudden reversal of their currents near their mouths, from the damming up of that stream by ice; the streams in consequence overflow the lowlands, making the maintenance of fences and bridges impossible.

⁴ This region is remarkable for the variety and beauty of its minerals, of which 60 species are found.—Haugh's Hist. St. Lawrence and Franklin Cos., p. 184.

⁵ The Clifton Mine in Pierrepont has furnished 1,500 tons of iron.

⁶ See p. 582.

⁷ In the town of Pierrepont a substance used for red paint has been found in the same relative geological position.

Dairying and stock raising are the branches of agriculture most extensively pursued. Grain is also cultivated to some extent.¹ Fruits are not extensively cultivated. Manufactures, consisting of iron,² castings, lead,³ lumber,⁴ and articles of wood,⁵ are carried on. Commerce to some extent is carried on by means of the St. Lawrence and the various railways.

The chief works of internal improvement in the co. are the Ogdensburgh R. R., extending from Ogdensburgh to Rouses Point, on Lake Champlain;⁷ the Potsdam & Watertown R. R.,⁸ forming a connection with the O. R. R. on the s. and with the W. & R. R. R. and N. Y. Central on the s. Improvements have been made by the State in the navigation of several of the rivers, for the purpose of floating down logs from the s. forests.⁹ Daily lines of steamboats connect Ogdensburgh and other points on the river with Montreal and with the various ports on Lake Ontario.

The county seat is located at the village of Canton,¹⁰ on the P. & W. R. R., 15 mi. s. e. of Ogdensburgh. The courthouse, jail,¹¹ and clerk's office are in separate buildings, situated not far from each other. The co. poorhouse is situated on a farm of 130 acres 1 mi. w. of Canton Village.¹²

Six newspapers are now published in the co.; 3 at Ogdensburgh, 2 at Potsdam, and 1 at Canton.¹³

² The iron and clay deposits produce fine crops of winter wheat.

³ Furnaces are or have recently been in operation at Rossie, Wazekite, Hillsville, and Brasher Iron Works. The supply of ore is inexhaustible, and large quantities of iron are annually made.

⁴ The Rossie Lead Mines are now worked by an English company. Lead has also been found in several of the localities in the co.

⁶ Consisting of shingles, staves, lath, heading, boxes, doors, sash and blinds.

⁷ Opened to Ogdensburgh Oct. 1, 1850.

⁸ Opened through the co. Aug. 23, 1855.

⁹ These improvements have been made on the Indian, Oswegatchie, Rackett, and Grass Rivers.

¹¹ The jail is a miserable building, poorly adapted to the purpose for which it was erected.

¹² This institution yields an annual revenue of about $1,000. The average number of inmates is about 100. The supplies are furnished by contract. The poorhouse is self-sufficient in necessary conveniences for the health and comfort of its inmates.

¹³ At Ogdensburgh the following papers have been published:

The Palladium was begun in 1819 by Kap & Strong, sold in 1812 to John P. Sheldon, and continued to 1841.

The St. Lawrence Gazette was begun in 1815 by B. R. Strachan and P. B. Furdahl. In 1830 it was bought by Preston Keagy, and merged with

The St. Lawrence Republican, removed to this place from Canton, and continued by him till 1837.

It was afterwards published by the Rev. Mr. Hillsville & Stillwell, and is now published by James H. Platts.

The Northern Light was begun July 7, 1814, by W. B. Rogers, as an anti-slavery organ. In 1834 A. R. Jones became its publisher, and changed it to

The Times; and at the end of the 4th volume it was enlarged, and called

The Ogdensburgh Times. In 1837 Dr. A. Taylor became associated with Jones, and the title was changed to

The Times and Register. In March, 1844, it was transferred to H. G. Foster and S. B. Seeley, and changed to

The People's Sentinel. In June, 1847, Mr. Foote launched it to

The People's Sentinel, under which name it was published by Stillman Foote until 1858, when it was merged in the Examiner.

The Montreal Register was commenced, and a few numbers issued in 1830, edited by Jas. H. Collins, in W. Wood's Press, of Lafayette Coll., Easton, Penn.

The Ogdensburgh Expositor was begun April 24, 1848, by A. Tyler, and discontinued in 1851.

The Daily Citizen was started April 13, 1848, by S. Foster, and published for 5 months.

The St. Lawrence Budget, a small semi-weekly advertising sheet, was issued from The Sentinel office in 1850-51.

The Daily Morning News was begun in Mar. 18, 1843, by Wm. N. Oswell, publisher, and Ego (the Rebus), w.

The Weekly News was issued from the same office in Sept. 1852. Both were discontinued in the Dec. following.

The St. Lawrence American was begun March 1, 1851, by Wm. Yeaton and L. M. Hollbrook, and continued 6 years.

The Boy's Weekly Journal was begun May 1, 1854, by H. P. Davis, J. J. Hopkins, and C. Foster. As boys belonging to the Ogdensburgh Academy, they had previously issued the Morning Glory and Young America. In 1857 Foster withdrew, and the name was changed to

The Daily Journal; the paper is still in issue.

The Weekly Journal is made up from the daily. Neither of the publishers is of age (1855).

The St. Lawrence Democrat was commenced at Ogdensburg in the fall of 1855 by H. C. Simpson, and was afterwards continued at that place by John F. Ames. It is published by Abbott & O'Brien.

At Potsdam the following have been issued:

The Potsdam Gazette was begun Jan. 13, 1816, by E. C. Powell, and continued till April, 1820.

The Potsdam American was commenced by E. C. Powell in Jan. 1824, from the old Gazette press, and was continued by Powell & Keddington till April, 1829. In May of the same year it was re-issued.

The Herald was published as an anti-slavery organ till Aug.

The St. Lawrence Republican was begun in 1826 by W. H. Weyman, and removed to Canton in 1827.

The Day Star was published 6 months in 1827 by Jonathan Wallace.

The Patriot was commenced in April, 1827, by Wm. Hughes, and published one year.

The Northern Sentinel was removed from Canton in 1847, and from the same office was issued.

The Repository in 1846, semi-weekly, made up the literary matter of The Sentinel. This latter was sold to Wm. L. Kane, and changed to

The St. Lawrence Mercury in 1848. W. H. Wallace became proprietor in 1850; and H. C. Fay in 1851, who changed it to

The St. Lawrence Journal. It was continued till July, 1852, when it was united with The Citizen.

The Potsdam Courier was begun in 1851 by A. Haring, and continued till July, 1852, when it was merged with The Journal, and is now as

The Potsdam Courier and Journal was removed to Canton in 1852, and is now published by H. C. Fay & Brother.

The Phœnix was begun in 1852, and a few numbers were issued by students of the St. Lawrence Academy.

The Phœnix Dispatch was discontinued in 1852, and its subscribers are to be found in the directory of the same year.

The Northern Freeman was a monthly paper, begun in 1853, and is still published by D. W. & B. Jones.

The Evangelical Herald, which was begun in 1854, by Jos. A. Loring, and published the same of N. Grant in 1857, was discontinued in 1857, and published at Canton in the Examiner, and is now published

The Ogdensburgher of the St. Lawrence American, and is now published from Potsdam in 1857, was published by the Rev. Mr. Grant, till 1850, when it was removed to the same office.

The Northern Advertiser was begun in 1824, by C. Foster. It was discontinued in 1825, and is now published

The Centinel and Examiner, and is now published

The Lumineer of the New York Journal, and is now published a short time.

The St. Lawrence Democrat was begun in Sept. 1850, by E. A. Butler, and continued 12 years.

The Northern Sentinel and Phœnix Expositor, semi-weekly, was begun Jan. 2, 1854, by Chas. Bayton, and in 1857 removed to Potsdam.

The Engineer was issued in 1844 by Chas. Bayton.

The first white settlement in this co. was made by Francis Picquet, a French Sulpitian, who established an Indian mission at the mouth of the Oswegatchie in 1749 and styled it "La Présentation."¹ In 1759 the first island below Ogdensburg, 3 mi. down the St. Lawrence, was taken possession of by the French and strongly fortified.² It was named Fort Levi; and here the last French resistance was made against the English, in 1760. During the Revolution it was the rendezvous of scalping parties of Tories and Indians, who harassed the frontier settlements on the Mohawk and Hudson. Two expeditions were fitted out against this place during the Revolution; but the English held possession of the fort at Oswegatchie until 1796, when it was surrendered under the provisions of Jay's Treaty.³ The Oswegatchies collected by Picquet were removed, in 1793, from the vicinity of Johnstown, U. C., to a point opposite, on the s. shore, known as Indian Point. In 1807 they removed to St. Regis and elsewhere.⁴

The co. includes the tract known as the "Ten Towns,"⁵ Tract No. 11,⁶ of Macomb's Purchase, containing 821,879 acres, Tract No. 111,⁷ of the same purchase, containing 640,000 acres,⁸ a small portion located by Revolutionary land warrants,⁹ and the islands in the St. Lawrence.¹⁰ The first settlement under State authority was made at Ogdensburg, in 1796, by Nathan Ford, agent of Samuel Ogden. Before 1800, small beginnings had been made at Lisbon, Madrid, and Massena. The "Ten Towns" were opened for settlement, under the original purchasers, within the next 5 years, and the adjacent parts of the Macomb Purchase soon after. At the commencement of the War of 1812 there were about 8,000 inhabitants in the co., thinly scattered over nearly the whole territory now settled. Great alarm was felt along the whole frontier, and many families left the river towns. It soon became the theater of stirring military events, and various expeditions were planned and attacks made on both sides of the border.¹¹

At the close of the war the co. rapidly filled up with an immigration chiefly from Vt. and the other New England States. The completion of the Erie Canal checked the growth of the co. by opening to emigration the more fertile lands of the West. The price of wild lands greatly fell, and many visions of immense wealth were blighted. For the last twenty years a steady and healthy improvement has been going on, which has been greatly increased by the lines of railroad completed through it.¹² In 1837-40 the whole frontier was greatly excited by the "Patriot

The Inquirer and Town Advertiser, a campaign paper, was issued from The Cabinet press in 1844 by Chas. Boynton.

The Canton Weekly Citizen was begun Jan. 1, 1852, by J. S. Sargeant, and continued 4 weeks.

The Canton Independent was removed from Madrid in 1853, and published by O. L. Fay. It was soon discontinued.

The St. Lawrence Plain Dealer was begun in 1855 by Goodrich & Remington; it is now published by S. P. Remington.

Young America is now published by C. W. Ames.

The other papers in the co. have been—

The Northern New Yorker, begun April 2, 1849, at Gouverneur, by Wm. Goodrich and M. F. Wilson; and issued a little more than one year.

The St. Lawrence Advertiser was begun in 1850, at Gouverneur, and a few numbers issued.

The Liberator was commenced in July, 1852, at Gouverneur, by M. Mitchell. It was succeeded by

The St. Lawrence Free Press, begun in 1853 by J. J. Barnes, and afterward published by G. K. Lamont. It was removed to Ogdensburg in the fall of 1854 and united with The Sentinel.

The Progressor was begun in June, 1855, at Gouverneur, by G. D. Greenfield. It was removed to Potsdam in 1856 and changed to The Northern Freeman.

The True Democrat was begun in May, 1850, at Madrid, by M. F. Wilson and O. L. Fay. In its 21 year it became

The Chateaubain Independent; was continued 1 year, when it was removed to Canton and changed to The Canton Independent.

¹ This place became a French military station, and a magazine for supplying expeditions sent to their s. posts; and from this point were fitted out many of the parties that ravaged the back settlements of N. Y., Penn., and Va.

² This island was called by the Indians "As-sag-on-sen-tan," and by the French "Isle Royal." It is now called Chimney Island, from the ruins still visible.

⁴ These Indians claimed large tracts of land and leased them to parties from Canada, who cut off the most valuable timber and committed other wasteful depredations.

⁸ These tracts were conveyed to Dan'l McCormack by patent in 1795-98.

⁹ The town of Massena comprises this portion of the co.

¹⁰ The islands were sold in 1825.

¹¹ A regiment of militia was stationed at Ogdensburg during the summer of 1812. In July, 1812, a fleet of 6 schooners—caught at Ogdensburg by the war—attempted to reach the lake, but were intercepted; 2 were burned, and the rest hauled back. On the last day of July a bloodless engagement took place between the American schooner Julia, and the British vessels, Earl of Moira and Duke of Gloucester. In Sept. an attack was made upon a number of bateaux at Toussaint Island, opposite Lisbon, in which the Americans lost one and the British several men. On the 2d of Oct. the British made a show of attacking Ogdensburg, and on the 4th made a real attack, but were repulsed, with the loss of a combat and 2 men killed. In Jan. the Americans surprised and captured Brockville, liberated several prisoners, paroled 120 of the garrison, and took a quantity of stores. On the 22d of Feb. the British, in rebellion, captured Ogdensburg, carried away the cannon and stores, and paroled a large number of citizens, who were afterward exchanged for those of Brockville. Late in 1812 Gen. Wilkinson's expedition passed down the St. Lawrence, and suffered a disastrous defeat at Chateaubain, opposite Louisa. The British followed the retreating Americans and landed at Hamilton, (Waddington.)—High's Hist. St. Law. & French Cos.

¹² The lands in the co. have doubled in value by the completion of the railroads.

War." The battle of Windmill Point, the most memorable event of that ill-concerted movement, was fought within sight of Ogdensburgh, in Nov., 1838.¹ The U. S. Collection Dist. of Oswegatchie was established March 2, 1844, and embraces the whole co. Its chief office is at Ogdensburgh, with subordinate offices at each of the river towns.

BRASHER²—was formed from Massena, April 21, 1825. A part of Lawrence was taken off in 1828. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is generally level, with gentle undulations in the w. part. The principal streams are St. Regis and Deer Rivers and Trout Brook. The soil in the w. part is stony and in parts sandy; in the s. r. it is light and sandy; and in the s. it is a clay loam and very productive. Bog iron ore is obtained abundantly in the e. part, in the range where the sand rests upon the clay deposits. Brasher Falls (p. v.) is a manufacturing village upon the St. Regis, in the s. w. corner of the town, 1 mi. below the R. R. station. Pop. 257. Helena³ (p. v.) is situated at the mouth of Deer River, and has a limited amount of water-power. Pop. 100. Brasher Iron Works, (p. o.) 2½ mi. above Helena, on Deer River, is the seat of an important furnace. Brasher Center is a hamlet on the St. Regis River. The first improvement in town (at Helena) was under the agency of Russell Atwater, in 1817. Stillman Fuller built the furnace at Brasher Iron Works in 1825.⁴ The first settlement at Brasher Falls was made in 1826. In 1839 C. T. Hulburt purchased 600 acres, including the village site of Brasher Falls, and in 1841 made the first considerable improvement. On the 26th of May, 1857, a fire in the woods ravaged this town, and destroyed the furnace and nearly the whole village at the "Iron Works."⁵ The census reports 6 churches in town.⁶

CANTON⁷—was formed from Lisbon, March 28, 1805. It occupies a nearly central position in the co. Its surface is level or gently undulating. Grass River, flowing through the center, and the Oswegatchie, flowing through the s. w. corner, are the principal streams.⁸ It is underlain by white limestone and gneiss in the s., and by Potsdam sandstone in the central and s. parts. The soil is a deep, fertile, gravelly loam. Iron pyrites, from which copperas (sulphate of iron) has been manufactured, is found in abundance near High Falls, on Grass River.⁹ Canton,¹⁰ (p. v.) the county seat, is pleasantly situated on Grass River, a little e. of the center of the town. It is an important station on the P. & W. R. R. It has a number of manufactures,¹¹ and is the seat of the Canton Academy, founded in 1831, and of the St. Lawrence University,¹² an institution founded under the auspices of the Universalist denomination in 1856. Pop. 1,929. Mortey¹³ (p. v.) is on Grass River, near the s. border of the town. Pop. 359. Russelacr Falls¹⁴ (p. v.) is a small village on the Oswegatchie, in the s. w. corner of the town. It was formerly the seat of an iron forge. Crarys Mills (p. o.) is a hamlet on the line of Potsdam. South Canton is in the e. part. Daniel Harrington settled on the site of the Agricultural Fair Grounds in Canton Village in 1800. The first permanent settler was Stillman Poote, who bought a mile square where the village now stands, and removed thither in 1801, accompanied by several men. In 1802 he built a mill, and the town began to be rapidly settled.¹⁵ Religious meetings were held as early as 1804. The first church (Presb.) was formed under the Rev. Amos Pottingill, in 1807.¹⁷

¹ The leaders in this movement dared not risk their own lives in the battle, and left the bow, consisting mostly of young men and boys, to engage the greatly superior numbers of the British. The battle was short and bloody. Of the 139 patriots taken prisoners, 18 were released without trial, 3 were acquitted, and 129 were sentenced to be hung. Of the 1st number, 19 were hung, 69 transported to Van Diemens Land, 36 pardoned, 2 sentenced to 7 years' term in the penitentiary, and 2 died of their wounds.—Boyle's Hist. St. L., v. d. French, Cos.

² Named from Philip Brasher, of Brooklyn, part owner. It embraces the townships of "Grassy" and "Cromack," or Nos. 17 and 18 of Great Tract No. H, Maynard's Purchase.

³ Mills, a fork and the factory, and an agricultural implement factory, are located here.

⁴ Named from Helen, daughter of Joseph Patearin, of New York, former owner of a large part of the town.

⁶ The fire desolated nearly the whole town, and for a time threatened Brasher Falls. The country around was also desolated by running fires in 1849.

⁷ 2 Presb., and M. E. at Brasher Falls, Presb. at Helena, M. E. at "Morph Kobey," w. part of the town, R. C. near Brasher Falls, and F. W. Bap.

⁸ It embraces No. 6 of the "Ten Towns," and is 10 mi. sq.

⁹ A natural canal connects the channels of the two streams.

This canal was formerly 3 to 20 rods wide, and was navigable for small boats in high water. It flowed toward the w. and overflowed an alluvial flat of 400 acres. To reclaim the 1000 ends of the canal have been closed and a drain dug along the Oswegatchie to below Russelacr Falls.

¹⁰ Fruitless explorations for copper have here been made at great expense.

¹² Consisting of lumber, shingles, sash, wagons, flour, and leather.

¹³ An elegant brick building was erected here in 1877 and in 1878 a theological school was organized by T. Fisher. The collegiate department has not yet been organized.

¹⁴ Formerly "Loni Express." Named Morley in honor relative of the Harrison family. It contains several sawmills, a sash factory, and tannery.

¹⁶ Daniel W. Church, the pioneer millwright of the co., erected the first mill here, for 8 posts in 1800. The summer of that year was very sickly, and in May the father of S. J. Church, d. of the smallpox, and was buried in a grave in the Wm. Baker's churchyard. The first school, in 1814. The first bath was a daughter of I. Johnson.

¹⁷ The census reports 9 churches: 2 M. E., Bap. Conv., Prot. E., (Grace C.), Wes. Meth., Cong., I. W. Bap., and R. C.

The late Gov. Silas Wright settled in Canton Village as a lawyer in 1819, and continued to reside here until his death, Aug. 27, 1847.

COLTON¹—was formed from Parishville, April 12, 1843. A small part was annexed from Parishville in 1851. It is a long, narrow town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. and extending to Hamilton co. on the s. Its surface is broken and hilly; and it is nearly all covered with forest. It is crossed by the Racket, Grass, and Oswegatchie Rivers. In the central and s. parts are numerous small lakes, the principal of which is Cranberry Lake. The extreme n. part only is inhabited. The principal business is lumbering. Colton (p. v.) is an important lumber station upon Racket River, near the n. w. corner of the town. Several extensive gang sawmills were erected here in 1850-52; but the business has been partially suspended. An extensive tannery for the manufacture of sole-leather was built here in 1857.² Pop. 379. South Colton is a p. o. at Three Falls. The first settlement was begun in 1824, at Colton Village.³ There are a M. E. and a Univ. church in town, both built in 1852.

DE KALB⁴—was formed from Oswegatchie, Feb. 21, 1806. A part of De Peyster was taken off in 1825, and a part of Hermon in 1830. It lies on the Oswegatchie, w. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of broken ridges of white limestone and gneiss with narrow valleys between them. The soil is excellent and is generally under a good state of cultivation. De Kalb⁵ (p. v.) is situated on the Oswegatchie, near the center of the town. Pop. 120. Richville⁶ (p. v.) is situated on the Oswegatchie, in the s. w. corner of the town. Pop. 250. East De Kalb is a p. o. and station on the P. & W. R. R. Coopers Falls is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in 1803, under Judge William Cooper, of Cooperstown, as agent. The first settlers were principally from Otsego co. There are 5 churches in town.⁷

DE PEYSTER⁸—was formed from Oswegatchie and De Kalb, March 21, 1825. It lies on the s. shore of Black Lake, n. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken in the s. by the parallel primitive ridges, and is level in the n. The principal streams are the Oswegatchie, on the s. border, and Beaver Creek, on the s. Moon Lake lies in the s. part. The soil along the lake is very fertile, in the center of average fertility, and in the s. it is light and sandy. The "Old State Road," the first traveled route through this part of the co., extended through this town. De Peyster Corners (De Peyster p. o.) is a small village. Edenton is a p. o. The first settlement was made in the fall of 1802, by Sam'l Bristol and others.⁹ The census reports 2 churches: a M. E. and a Cong.

EDWARDS¹⁰—was formed from Fowler, April 7, 1827. A part of Hermon was taken off in 1830, and a part was annexed from Hermon in 1850. It lies on the Oswegatchie, s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of ridges of the primitive formation and the narrow valleys between them. The soil is generally a light, sandy loam, and in the valleys is very productive; but the town is best adapted to grazing. A large number of minerals are found among the primitive rocks.¹¹ Edwards (p. v.) is situated on the Oswegatchie. Pop. 350. South Edwards¹² (p. v.) contains a grist and saw mill and several mechanic shops. The first settlement commenced along the St. Lawrence Turnpike, in 1812.¹³ Several Scotch families came into town in 1817. There are 5 churches in town.¹⁴

FINE¹⁵—was formed from Russell and Pierrepont, March 27, 1841. It lies in the extreme s.

² This establishment employs about 25 men.

⁴ Named in honor of Baron De Kalb. It originally embraced No. 7 of the "Ten Towns."

⁵ Originally named "Williamstown."

⁶ About 30 families came in the first year. Salmon Rich, J. n. Haskins, and S. J. Pratt were among the first settlers of Richville, in 1804. The first child born was Jehiel Dimick; the first marriage, that of Eliza Cook and Lotta Willey; and the first death, that of George Cowdrey. Bela Willis taught the first school. Dr. DeWitt, an L. J. C. Kneeland at Richville. Wm. Cooper built the first hotel, in 1803, and the first mills, at Coopers Falls, in 1804.

⁷ Bapt. and Cong. at Richville, Presb., M. E., and Union (M. E. and Bapt.) at East De Kalb.

⁸ Named from Frederick De Peyster, of New York, former proprietor. Mr. De P. gave the town $200 to assist in building a union church and town-house; and he also caused a bell to be cast, with an appropriate inscription for its use.

⁹ Among the first settlers were Thos. Wilson, Joseph Round, Sam'l Bernard, — Green, Ichabod Arnold, Robt. Hill, Fred R. Plympton, David Day, Rufus Washburn, and Smith Stillwell. Bela Willis taught the first school and was the first local preacher.

¹⁰ Named from Edward McCormick, brother of the proprietor. It embraces most of No. 8 of Great Tract No. 11.

¹¹ Among these are iron ore, mica, Rensselaerite, serpentine, and tourmaline.

¹² Locally known as "Shoreville," from Elijah Shaw, who opened the first store in 1825. Eveningwash, in the e. part, was the seat of a large furnace destroyed by fire.

¹³ Among the first settlers were Asa Brayton, Jos. M. Warner, S. & E. Jones, and — Johnson. The first birth was that of John B. Brayton, in 1812; and the first death was that of — Carbridge, accidentally killed in 1812. Oren Sheard built the first grist-mill, in 1814. In 1817 a large number of Scotch settlers came into town.

¹⁴ M. E., Univ., Cong., Bapt., and Union.

¹⁵ Named from John Fine, of Ogdensburg, principal pro-part of the co. Its surface is elevated and broken, and its soil is a moderately fertile, gravelly loam. It is drained by the Oswegatchie and its branches. It is principally a wilderness, the settlements being confined to the s. part. Iron ore is found in town. Fire is a p.o. in the s. There is no village in town. The first clearing was made in 1823, by Elias Trull.¹

FOWLER²—was formed from Rossie and Russell, April 15, 1816. The townships of Edwards and Fitz William (now a part of Hermon) were annexed from Russell in 1818. Edwards was taken off in 1827, a part of Hermon in 1830, and Piteairn in 1836. It lies upon the Oswegatchie, in the southwesterly part of the co. Its surface is much broken by ridges of gneiss. It is drained by the Oswegatchie and its branches. Silver Lake lies s. of the center of the town. The soil along the streams is a fertile loam, in the s. w. a clayey loam, and in the n. a light sand. Several valuable minerals are found in town.³ Halesborough, on the Oswegatchie, and Little York (Fowler p.o.) are small villages. Fullerville (Fullerville Iron Works p.o.) is the seat of an extensive manufactory of iron.⁴ West Fowler is a p.o. The first settlements were made by Brig. Gen. Haile, at Halesborough, in 1807,⁵ and by Sam'l B. Spragne, at Little York, in 1811. The town did not begin to be settled rapidly until after 1820. The census reports 4 churches in town.⁶

GOVERNEUR⁷—was formed from Oswegatchie, April 5, 1810. A part of Macomb was taken off in 1811. It lies in the w. part of the co. Its surface is generally level, but somewhat broken in the s. by low ridges of white limestone. It is drained by the Oswegatchie, which twice flows across the town. The town abounds in interesting minerals.⁸ The soil is sandy in a few places, but is chiefly clay and loam, and is highly productive. The Kearney Iron Mine, in the s. corner, has furnished an immense quantity of ore. Gouverneur (p.v.) was incorp. Dec. 7, 1847. Pop. 785. It is the seat of a flourishing academy,⁹ and has a considerable local trade and the only p.o. in town. Riverside Cemetery is beautifully located on the opposite bank of the Oswegatchie, e. of the village. It was consecrated June 23, 1858. It is a station upon the P. & W. R. R. The first settlement was made in the summer of 1805, by Dr. Richard Townsend, agent of Gouverneur Morris, the proprietor.¹⁰ The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1810.¹¹

HAMMOND¹²—was formed from Rossie and Morrinstown, March 30, 1827. A part was annexed to Macomb in 1842, and a part to Rossie in 1844. It lies upon the St. Lawrence, in the extreme w. part of the co., and includes a portion of The Thousand Islands. The surface is generally level, but broken upon its s. and s. borders by low primary ridges. A level terrace of sandstone, forming a continuous and regular mural wall, extends from the s. shore of Black Lake through the center of the town into Jefferson co. Black Brook flows through a stagnant swamp, which borders upon this sandstone terrace. Its soil is generally a deep, fertile loam. Hammond, (p.v.), on the Rossie Plank Road; South Hammond, on the "Old Military Road;" and Oak Point,¹³ (p.v.), a landing on the St. Lawrence, are small villages. Chippewa is a hamlet on a bay of the same name. Slight improvements began here in 1812; but settlements did not increase until 1818-21, when a number of Scotch families located just w. of the present site of Hammond Village.¹⁴ There are 4 churches in town.¹⁵

¹ Priest r. It embraces "Scriba," "Bloomfield," "Fullville," and the south half of "Scribbsburg," or Nos. 12, 13, 14, 15, and 9 of Great Tract No. III, Macomb's Purchase.

² Jas. C. Haile built a mill in 1828. The settlement was soon after abandoned, but renewed in Feb. 1834, by Amasa J. Brown.

³ Named from Theodosius Fowler, of New York, former proprietor. It embraces "Kilbenny," or No. 7 of Great Tract No. III, Macomb's Purchase.

⁴ Iron ore, white marble, sulphates of lead, copper, and zinc, asbestos, Russel-ore, mica, and chalcidony.

⁵ This village contains a furnace, 21 grists, and several mills.

⁶ Gen. H. purchased a mile square, with an agreement to build a mill within a year. Among the other early settlers were Hugh S. Kett, James Arnold, John Ryan, and Ebenezer Parker. The first birth was a child of ——— Merrill; the first marriage, that of John Parker and Elizabeth S. Sackett, in 1812.

⁷ John B. Bap., F. W. Bap., and M. E.

⁸ Named from Gouverneur Morris, the proprietor of most of the town. It originally embraced the township of "Cimbrary," or No. 8 of the "Ten Towns."

⁹ Among the useful minerals are red specular iron ore, marble, limpid calcite, sulphate of barytes, serpentine, Russel-ore, mica, tourmaline, and fluor-sp. and among these interesting to men of science are spinelle, scapolite, tremolite, schist, sphene, chondroite, apatite, Epidimontite, and H. quartzite.

¹⁰ The "Gouverneur High School" was opened in 1826 and incorp. April 25, 1828. A new edifice was erected in 1834; and in 1857

it was received under the patronage of the M. E. Black River Conference. The building was burned in 1859, and a new stone edifice erected the next year. The name was changed to the Gouverneur Wesleyan Seminary April 24, 1849. It is a flourishing institution.

¹¹ The first party of settlers came through the wilderness from the head of Lake George, guided by a compass. They were seven days on the journey. Among the settlers in 1805 were Pardon Fabesok, Willard Smith, Isaac Nichols, and Isaac Austin, who all occupied a small shanty in common. In 1810 there were 50 families in town. A school-house was built in 1812, near where the store of Harvey D. Smith now stands. Miss F. S. Sackett taught the first school, in the first shanty; Israel Porter kept the first inn, and John Brown the first store, in 1808. The first religious services were held in 1809, by missionaries. The first child born was Allen Smith; the first birth, that of Madal Cole and Mrs. Patterson; and the first death, that of Emily Porter.

¹³ The last before his meetings in the chapel of the academy.

¹⁵ Cross-over-Island Lighthouse was built just above this place in 1847.

¹⁶ The first of these were John and David Greger, John Baird, John and James Hill, and Peter Allen. James Scott taught the first school, in 1818-19.

¹⁷ Presb., M. E., F. W. Bap., and Prot. E.

HERMON¹—was formed from Edwards and De Kalb, April 17, 1830, and named "Depon." The name was changed Feb. 28, 1834, and a part was annexed to Edwards in 1850. It lies in the primitive region, s. w. of the center of the co. The surface is generally rolling, but broken and hilly in the s. part. Elm and Cedar Creeks are the principal streams. Trout and Clear Lakes lie near the s. border, and Gardners Pond near the center of the town. The soil is generally a sandy loam interspersed with tracts of sand, and is best adapted to grazing. Hermon (p. v.) is situated on Elm Creek, in the s. e. corner of the town. Pop. 346. Marshville is a hamlet, 1 mi. s. of Hermon. The first settlement was made by Jas. Taylor, and a few others who came soon after him, previous to 1812.² The town did not begin to be settled rapidly until 1822-25. Rev. Mr. Wright was the first preacher.³

HOPKINTON⁴—was formed from Massena, March 2, 1805. Russell was taken off in 1807, Parishville in 1818, and a part of Lawrence in 1828. It lies along the e. border of the co., and is the second largest town in the State. Its surface is level in the s., but broken and hilly in the n. It is crossed by the St. Regis and Racket Rivers; and in the central and s. parts are several extensive lakes, the principal of which is Tupper's Lake, on the line of Franklin co. The whole town is a wilderness, except the extreme n. part and a small tract upon Tupper's Lake. The soil is a fertile loam in the n. part. Hopkinton (p. v.) contains about 20 houses. Nicholville is a small village on the line of Lawrence and mostly in the latter town. Fort Jackson, in the n. part, on St. Regis, is a hamlet of a dozen houses. The first settlement in town was made by Roswell Hopkins, in 1802.⁵ In 1814 a party of British, consisting of 30 men, under Maj. P. W. De Haven, visited this town and captured a large amount of flour belonging to the U. S., which was here stored in a barn.⁶ In the spring of 1858 a company consisting of 13 families located in the vicinity of Tupper's Lake, with the design of forming an agricultural settlement.⁷ The township of Mortlake, or No. 3 of Tract H, has been called "Atherton," but it has yet no legal organization. There are 4 religious societies in town.⁸

LAWRENCE⁹—was formed from Hopkinton and Brasher, April 21, 1828. It lies on the e. border of the co., s. of the center. The surface is very level, and the soil is a fertile, sandy loam underlain by Potsdam sandstone. It is drained by St. Regis and Deer Rivers. Lawrenceville (p. v.) and North Lawrence (p. v.) are villages upon Deer River, each with a pop. of about 220. The latter is a station on the Northern R. R. Nicholville,¹⁰ (p. v.) on the line of Hopkinton, contains about 200 inhabitants. The first settlement began in 1806.¹¹ Since the completion of the r. r. this town has rapidly increased in population. The Quakers held the first meeting in 1808. There are 7 churches in town.¹²

LISBON—was formed March 6, 1801.¹³ Madrid and Oswegatchie were taken off in 1802, and Canton in 1805. It lies upon the St. Lawrence, s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is level or gently undulating. It is drained by Great and Little Sucker Creeks, and several smaller streams. Its soil is a light but fertile loam underlain by calciferous sandstone. The town includes Gallop¹⁴ Island in the river. Lisbon Center (p. o.) is a station on the Ogdensburgh R. R., and contains about a dozen houses. Flackville¹⁵ (p. o.) is a hamlet, on the Ogdensburgh & Canton Road. Red Mills¹⁶ (Lisbon p. o.) is a hamlet, on the river, opposite Gallop Island. This town was the first one organized in the co. The first settlement was made by Wm. O'Neal, in 1799. Alex. J. Turner came in as agent in Feb. 1800.¹⁷ He was from Salem, N. Y., and induced many families

² Among the early settlers were Geo. Davis, Philemon Stuart, Jas. Farr, Ariel Luman, and Rufus Hopkins. William D. Moore taught the first school, in 1817. The first death was that of Thos. Farr.

³ There are 3 churches in town; M. E. Bap. and Christian.

⁷ This township was purchased Oct. 23, 1853, by a company consisting of Chas. C. Atherton, John H. Gage, and Dan'l B. Bear-born, of Nashua, N. H., Elbridge G. Read and Wm. D. Beason, of Chelsea, Mass., and Moses A. Herrick, of Boston, for its purchase. The settlement was made under the auspices of this Company.

⁸ Cong., Bap., M. E., and F. W. Bap.

⁹ Named from Wm. Lawrence, of New York, proprietor. It embraces "Chateaufield," or No. 16 of Great Tract No. 11, Macomb's Purchase.

¹⁰ Named from E. S. Nichols, an agent of the proprietors.

¹¹ Mr. Brewer, a sub-agent, came in as early as 1801; J. and S. Tyler, A. Saunders, A. Chandler, J. Allen, and J. and J. Pierce came in 1807. Ephraim Martin built the first sawmill, in 1809; Miss S. Tyler taught the first school, in 1810.

¹² 2 Cong., 2 M. E., 2 Bap., and F. W. Bap.

¹³ It originally contained the whole territory of the "Ten Towns." It now includes No. 5 of the "Ten Towns."

¹⁴ Pronounced "Gal-lop" Island.

¹⁵ Named from John P. Flack, first p. m.

¹⁶ Named from the color of the mills erected by Daniel W. Church for the proprietor, Stephen Van Rensselaer, in 1804.

¹⁷ Among the first settlers were Peter Sharp, Peter Hinman, John Tibbets, Rouben Turner, Wm. Shaw, Lemuel Hoskins, Wm. Lytle, James Aikens, Benj. Stewart, Matthew Perkins, Wesson to remove from Washington co. A fatal epidemic prevailed in town in 1813. In the fall of 1813 a small party of dragoons stopping at the village were surprised by the Canadians: one was shot, another wounded, and two or three were taken prisoners to Canada. There are 6 churches in town.¹

LOUISVILLE²—was formed from Massena, April 5, 1810. A part of Norfolk was taken off in 1823, and a part of the same town was annexed in 1844. It lies upon the St. Lawrence, in the N. E. part of the co. The surface is level. Grass River, the principal stream, flowing centrally through the town, affords a water-power at the village. The soil is a fertile, sandy loam, underlaid by calciferous sand-stone. Louisville,³ (p. o.) on Grass River, and Louisville Landing, (p. o.) on the St. Lawrence, are hamlets. The water-power at the former place has been somewhat improved; and the latter place is a landing for the American line of steamers. The first settlement was made by Nahum Wilson and Aaron Allen, in 1800.⁴ The growth of the town was checked by the war; but it soon revived. There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Union.

MACOMB⁵—was formed from Gouverneur and Morristown, April 3, 1841. A small tract was annexed from Hammond in 1842. It lies upon the S. shore of Black Lake, in the W. part of the co. Its surface is broken by ridges of gneiss and white limestone parallel to the lake. Fish and Birch Creeks are the principal streams. Pleasant and Yellow or Hickeys Lakes are fine sheets of water, with rocky shores, in the central part of the town. The soil is a light, sandy loam. The ridges are often without vegetation, but the valleys are fertile. Several valuable minerals are found in town.⁶ Macomb, (p. o.) on the "Old State Road," and Popes Mills, (p. o.) on Fish Creek, are hamlets. The first settlements were made upon the "Old State Road," about 1805-06.⁷ Timothy Pope made the first improvement at Popes Mills, in 1816. There is 1 church (M. E.) in town.

MADRID⁸—was formed from Lisbon, March 3, 1802, and Potsdam was taken off in 1806. It lies upon the St. Lawrence, E. of the center of the co. The surface is level or gently undulating. It is watered by Grass River, and by Great and Little Sucker, Brandy, and Trout Brooks. Upon both the St. Lawrence and Grass Rivers are rapids, from which are derived an immense amount of water-power. The soil is a light, sandy loam, generally fertile. Waddington⁹ (p. v.) is situated upon the St. Lawrence, opposite Ogden's Island and the "Rapid Flat."¹⁰ The rapids at this place impede the river navigation, but furnish an abundance of water-power.¹¹ The entire fall is 14 ft. Pop. 705. Columbia Village (Madrid p. o.) is situated at the falls of Grass River, 1 mi. from the R. R. station. It is a place of considerable business. Pop. 300. Chases Mills (p. o.) is a new settlement, upon Grass River, on the line of Louisville. The first settlement was made along the St. Lawrence, in 1798, under Joseph Edsall, agent of the proprietors.¹² In Jan., 1814, a party of Canadian militia, under Capt. Sherwood, crossed the St. Lawrence at Point Broquois and marched to Columbia Village, pressed teams, and carried off a quantity of merchandise which had been captured upon bateaux on the preceding Oct. There are 9 churches in town.¹³

MASSENA¹⁴—was formed March 3, 1802. Hopkinton was taken off in 1805, Stockholm in 1806, Louisville in 1810, and Brasher in 1825. It lies upon the St. Lawrence, in the S. E. corner of the co. The surface is generally level or gently undulating. The principal streams are the Grass¹⁵ and Racket Rivers, which flow through the town in parallel channels 1 to 2 mi. apart. Its soil is a productive, gravelly and sandy loam. Massena (p. v.) is situated upon Grass River, at the lower falls. It has a limited amount of manufactures. Pop. 310. Massena Springs¹⁶

Briggs, and Bez. Pierce. The first birth was in the family of J. Brooks, in 1809. Rev. Alex. Prudden held the first meetings. Prof. J. W. Smith, the first physician in the co., settled here in 1810 and remained two years.

¹ Cong. Assn. Ref. Presb., M. E., Wes. Meth., Ref. Presb., and Prof. (St. Luke's).

² It comprises the greater part of No. 1 of the "Ten Towns."

³ It is well known as "Middleville," from Rev. Levi Miller of Turin who was here agent of McVicker, the proprietor, in 1823.

⁴ Among the early settlers were John Wilson, Lyman Bostwick, Eliza W. Barber, and Griffin Place. The first child born was a son of Nahum Wilson; and the first death, that of Phileo Barber. Eliza W. Barber taught the first school, and N. Wilson kept the first inn.

⁵ Named from Alex. Macomb, the great land speculator.

⁶ Among these are lead, mica, copper pyrites, and blende. Stock companies have been engaged quite extensively in lead mining at Mineral Point, on Black Lake, and elsewhere.

⁷ Among the first settlers were Sam'l Bristol, Rufus Washburn, Sam'l and E. E. and Sam'l Peck.

⁸ It embraces No. 4 of the "Ten Towns," and is about 10 mi. sq.

⁹ Named from Joshua Waddington, proprietor. Formerly called "Hamilton." Incorporated April 26, 1825. A furnace, supplied with log-wood, was established here in 1811, but it was abandoned in 1840. A tract of 11,500 acres on the shore opposite the mill, together with the island and water power, was conveyed in 1811 to Joshua Waddington and Thos. L. and David A. Ogden.

¹⁰ In 1808, 18 lands were purchased and a dam erected at this place, and a lock was built for the passage of small boats.

¹¹ Among the early settlers were John Slapp, Bart. Fitch, John Tuttle, Eng. Barth, G. W. Myers, Ben. Compton, and E. Duane. Dorothy Fitch ran the first grist mill. S. C. Lefferts built the first mills, at Grand and Village, in 1817. Mills were built at Waddington in 1804.

¹² Cong. 2, M. E., Univ. Bap., Prot. East. Bap., Aso. Bap., and R. C.

¹³ Named from Marshal Massena, of the French army.

¹⁵ These springs are saline and sulphureous. Capt. John Pally built the first public well here in 1822. A spacious brick hotel was built in 1843, and the accumulation of those who resort here is a healthy resort.

lies upon the Racket, about one mi. distant from Massena. Pop. 120. It is a favorite summer resort. Massena Center (p. v.) contains about 25 houses, and Racket River (p. v.) about 20. By the treaty of 1796, a mile square at the mouth of Grass River was reserved by the St. Regis Indians; and most of the other lands in the town were located on Revolutionary land warrants before the sale of the rest of the co. Before the treaty the Indians issued unauthorized leases to different parties; and hence arose much annoyance from conflicting claims.¹ The first improvements were made on Grass River, on land leased of the Indians, in 1792. The first settlements on Revolutionary grants were made in 1798, by Amos Lay and others.² In 1812 the U. S. Government erected barracks here, which were occupied 3 months by militia. In Sept. 1813, a party of Canadians burned the barracks and carried away several prisoners. There are 5 churches in town.³

MORRISTOWN⁴—was formed from Oswegatchie, March 27, 1821. A part of Hammond was taken off in 1827, and a part of Macomb in 1841. It lies between the lower end of Black Lake and the St. Lawrence. Its surface is gently undulating, rising from either side toward the center. Chippewa Creek, flowing through the center, is the principal stream. The soil is a gravelly loam and generally fertile. Morristown (p. v.) is situated upon the St. Lawrence. Pop. 254. Edwardsville⁵ (p. o.) is a small village on Black Lake, at which point a ferry has been established. Brier Hill (p. o.) is a hamlet. David Ford—as agent of Gouverneur Morris, the proprietor—made the first settlement on the site of the village, in 1790.⁶ John K. Thurbur and Henry Ellenwood made the first improvement in the vicinity of Edwardsville, in 1810. In 1817–18 several English families located at a place still known as the “English Settlement.” There are 7 churches in town.⁷

NORFOLK—was formed from Louisville and Stockholm, April 9, 1823. A part was annexed to Louisville in 1844. Its surface is moderately uneven. Racket River, the principal stream, flows diagonally through near the center of the town, and affords a large amount of water-power, partially improved.⁸ The soil is generally fertile, resting upon drift deposits of gravel and marine clay, and all underlaid by calciferous sandstone. The e. part is sandy; and a swamp lies between the Racket and Grass Rivers. Norfolk (p. v.) is situated upon Racket River. Pop. about 200. It has manufactories of lumber, shingles, and articles of wood. Raymondville⁹ (p. o.) is a small village on the Racket, below Norfolk. The first settlement was made by Erastus Hall, in 1809, at Raymondville.¹⁰ The Racket was formerly navigated, to some extent, as far as this place. There are 4 churches in town.¹¹

OSWEGATCHIE¹²—was formed from Lisbon, March 3, 1802. De Kalb was taken off in 1806, Gouverneur in 1810, Morristown in 1821, and a part of De Peyster in 1825. The surface is level or gently undulating. Oswegatchie River, the principal stream, affords water-power at Hevelton and at Ogdensburgh, which is available most of the year. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam, and is under a good state of cultivation. Ogdensburgh,¹³ (p. v.) situated upon the St. Lawrence, is one of the largest and most important villages in Northern New York. It is the w. terminus of the Ogdensburgh R. R., and stands at the foot of sloop navigation upon the great lakes and St. Lawrence River, giving to it important commercial advantages. A limited amount of manufacturing is also carried on, chiefly on the w. side of the Oswegatchie. It contains the depôts and buildings of the Ogdensburgh R. R.—among the finest in the co.—an academy,¹⁴ a townhall,¹⁵ U. S. customhouse,¹⁶ and an armory.¹⁷ Pop. Jan. 1858, 7,308. Hevel-

¹ Most of the valuable timber was stolen before settlement.

³ 2 Cong. Rep., M. E., and R. C.

⁴ Named from Gouverneur Morris, principal proprietor. It originally embraced the township of “Hugot,” or No. 9 of the “Ten Towns.”

⁵ Locally known as the “Narrons.” Named from Jonathan S. Edwards, the first postmaster. On early maps it was marked “Morrisburgh.”

⁶ Arnold Smith and Thomas Hill were first settlers on the river, and H. Harrison, Ephraim Story, and Benj. Tabbs on the lake. Smith kept the first inn, and Ford built the first house.

⁷ M. L., Presb., Cong., Prot. E., Evang. Luth., and Union.

⁸ There is a dam 1 mi. from the R. R. station, near the s. w. corner of the town, another at Norfolk, and another at Raymondville.

⁹ Named from Benj. Raymond, the first agent for this town and Potsdam. First named “Raykton.”

¹⁰ Among the early settlers, who came in about 1810, were Elen Judson, Martin Barney, J. W. Osborn, C. G. Stowe, and Milo Brewer. The first death was that of E. Judson, in 1813. The first clearing at Norfolk Village was made for Le Bay, in 1811; and the first settlement was begun by Russell Atwater, in 1816.

A furnace was built at the village in 1825, and supplied with bog ore. It was burned in 1844.

¹¹ M. E., Prot. E., and Presb., at Norfolk, and Presb. at Raymondville.

¹² Pronounced Oswegatch'ee; named from the river. It embraces most of No. 8 of the “Ten Towns.”

¹⁵ By special act of 1858 a town hall was erected, at an expense of $10,000, on the corner of Washington and Franklin Sts.

¹⁶ The cornerstone of the old French Mission house is placed over one of its entrances.

¹⁷ An appropriation of $110,000 was made in 1857 for a customhouse, p. o., and U. S. court room. It is to be erected on the site of the old courthouse, corner of State and Knox Sts.

TOWN¹ (p. v.) lies upon the Oswegatchie, 7 mi. above Ogdensburg. It has a limited amount of manufactures. Pop. 300. Black Lake is a p. o. in the s. w. part of the town. The early history of the town has already been noticed.² The first improvement, after Ogdensburg was abandoned by the British, was made in 1796, by Nathan Ford; and it soon became a place of commercial importance. The war checked the prosperity of the place, and after the return of peace business revived slowly. The opening of the Welland Canal and completion of the Ogdensburg R. R. greatly increased the trade and added to the population of Ogdensburg.³ The completion of the Grand Trunk Railway through Canada has in some measure checked its growth, by diverting business into other channels. The first religious meetings were held while it was a French, and afterward a British, post. The census reports 11 churches.⁴

PARISHVILLE⁵—was formed from Hopkinton, April 15, 1818. Colton was taken off in 1843, and another part of Parishville annexed to it in 1851. It lies upon St. Regis River, s. r. of the center of the co. Its surface is level in the s. and considerably broken in the n. The soil is a deep loam in the s., but in the n. is light and sandy. A large portion of the town is yet a wilderness. Parishville (p. v.) is situated upon the w. branch of St. Regis River. Pop. 295. It has a limited amount of manufactures.⁶ Parishville Center, in the s. part, is a hamlet. Daniel Hoard settled in 1810, as agent for the proprietors.⁷ During the war the settlement was greatly increased by immigrants from the frontier towns. The census reports 4 churches.⁸

PIERREPONT⁹—was formed from Russell, April 15, 1818. A part of Fine was taken off in 1844. It occupies a long, narrow strip s. of the center of the co. The surface is quite broken. The three branches of Grass River, e. branch of the Oswegatchie, and Racket River are the principal streams. The soil in the s. is well adapted to grazing, and that in the n. is light and sandy. Settlements are confined to the s. part. Magnetic iron ore and other valuable minerals are found in large quantities. Pierrepont (p. o.) is a small village upon the hills, near the center of No. 3. East Pierrepont¹⁰ (p. v.) is situated on Racket River. Pop. about 100. Flavius Curtis settled upon the line of Canton in 1806-07. The principal settlement commenced upon the completion of the St. Lawrence Turnpike, in 1811-12.¹¹ There are 2 churches; M. E. and F. W. Bap.

PITCAIRN¹²—was formed from Fowler, March 29, 1836. It lies on the s. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is much broken by ridges, separated by swamps, lakes, and fertile intervalles. The soil is light and sandy, with a few alluvial flats along the streams. Iron ore, marble, and lead are found in town. The Jay Iron Ore Bed has been worked; and unprofitable attempts have been made to work some lead mines. The town is thinly settled. Pitcairn and East Pitcairn are p. offices. Settlement was begun in 1821 by immigrants from Potsdam.¹³ There is no church in town.

POTSDAM¹⁴—was formed from Madrid, Feb. 21, 1806. It lies on Racket River, s. r. of the center of the co. Its surface is rolling; and its soil is a deep, rich loam. The streams are Racket River, affording a large amount of water-power, and Grass River, with a limited amount. Lumber and articles of wood are largely manufactured. There are extensive quarries of sand-stone above the village.¹⁵ This is the leading agricultural town in the co., and every part is under improvement. Potsdam¹⁶ (p. v.) is located upon Racket River, e. of the center of the town. The river is here divided by islands and broken by rapids, and furnishes an extensive water-power. Pop. in 1st and 4th election districts, 2,123. It has a considerable amount of manufactures, and

⁴ A narrow railway, constructed here in 1833, has been of great service to the interests of navigation.

⁵ M. E., 2 Presb., Univ., Unitarian, Bap., Cong., Prot. E., and R. C.

⁷ The river here descends 125 ft. within a mi., furnishing an abundant water-power.

⁸ Among the early settlers were Luke Brown, Isaac Tower, H. Shattuck, and Levi Sawyer, who came in about 1811. During this and the succeeding year the proprietors caused a road to be opened to Carthage, and built a distillery, hotel, and forge to be built. The first birth was in the family of Luke Brown in 1812. Huntley was the first school in the town of Mr. Huntley.

⁹ Cong., M. E., Wes., Meth., and Bap.

¹⁰ Named from Hozekiah B. Pierrepont, of Brooklyn, p. o. proctor. It embraces the townships of "the Parishville" and "the Black," an Ex parte of "the Wells," and Nos. 1, 19, and 20 of Grant's Tract No. 111, of Macomb's Purchase.

¹¹ Some farms, called "the Mary," in the Grass River Co. s. w. settled here and built mills in 1817-22. It has a large saw-mill and a starch factory.

¹² Among the early settlers were Fox, Hunt, and Putnam, George, J. S. Marthew, and Ebenezer Dyer.

¹³ Named from Joseph Pitcairn, p. o. proctor. It embraces the townships of "the Pierrepont," "the Black," and "the Parishville," of Macomb's Purchase.

¹⁴ Among the early settlers were Nathl. DeKens and sons, Levi Glasson, Nathl. C. S. Will, and James Streetor. There are Dickenson lands, the first of which was the first settlement in the family of N. C. S. s. d. The first marriage that of Ann and Benjamin and Cora, in 1808, was at "the Potsdam."

¹⁵ It embraces Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

is the seat of an academy.¹ It also contains a bank and 2 printing offices. Racketville (North Potsdam p. o.) lies on Racket River, in the s. corner of the town. Pop. about 150. It has an extensive water-power, and is the Potsdam Junction station on the Ogdensburgh R. R. Bucks Bridge² is a hamlet upon Grass River, in the w. part of the town. West Potsdam (p. o.) is a small village in the midst of an agricultural region. The first settlement commenced in 1803, under Benj. Raymond, agent for the proprietor, and the town rapidly filled up by immigrants from Vt.³ In Nov. 1804, Wm. Bullard took up 2,427 acres of land, and formed an association, styled "The Union," holding the land in common. The association broke up in 2 or 3 years. There are 10 churches in town.⁴

ROSSIE⁵—was formed from Russell, Jan. 27, 1813. A part of Fowler was taken off in 1816, and a part of Hammond in 1827. A part of Hammond was annexed in 1841. It lies on the s. w. border of the co. Its surface is level in the e., and broken by ledges of gneiss, limestone, and sandstone in the remaining parts. It is drained by Oswegatchie and Indian Rivers. Its soil is like that of the adjoining towns. Between the gneiss and limestone, near Indian River, are extensive and valuable mines of lead and iron,⁶ and a great variety of valuable minerals.⁷ Rossie (p. v.) is situated on Indian River, at the head of the Black Lake navigation. Pop. 214. It owes its importance to its iron manufacture, commenced here in 1813. Churchs Mills,⁸ (Oswegatchie p. o.) situated on the Oswegatchie, is the seat of a furnace. Pop. about 170. Somerville (p. v.) contains 20 houses. Shingle Creek is a p. o., in the s. e. corner. The first settlement was made in 1807.¹⁰ A number of Scotch families came in about 1810. A blockhouse was built near Somerville in 1812. There are 2 churches in town; Univ. and M. E.

RUSSELL¹¹—was formed from Hopkinton, March 27, 1807. Rossie was taken off in 1813, a part of Fowler in 1816, Pierrepont in 1818, and a part of Fine in 1844. It lies upon Grass River, s. of the center of the co. Its surface is much broken, and its s. part is still a wilderness. Its soil is light and sandy, but fertile in the valleys. Russell (p. o.) is a small village, upon Grass River, in the central part of the town; North Russell is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1804, under the agency of R. Atwater.¹² A State arsenal was built in the village in 1809;¹³ and the St. Lawrence Turnpike was opened the same year. The principal growth of the village was received in 1811 and 1812. A forge was built in 1816, and supplied with bog and magnetic ores. There are 2 churches in town; Univ. and M. E.; the Presb. and Prot. E. each have societies formed.

STOCKHOLM¹⁴—was formed from Massena, Feb. 21, 1806. A part of Norfolk was taken off in 1823. It lies in the northeasterly part of the co. Its surface is rolling. Its soil is a light, sandy loam, generally productive. It is watered by the two branches of St. Regis River. It is strictly an agricultural town, and one of the most wealthy in the co. Stockholm Depot (p. o.) is a small village upon the R. R., in the e. part of the town. East Stockholm (Stockholm p. o.) and Sanfordville are hamlets of a dozen houses each. West Stockholm (p. o.) is a small manufacturing village upon St. Regis River. Knapps Station (North Stockholm p. o.) is a R. R. station on the s. w. border of the town; and Southville is a p. o. Skimerville is a hamlet on the w. branch of the St. Regis. The first settlement was begun in 1802, by Ebenezer Hullbard and Dr. Luman Pettibone, agents.¹⁵ The census reports 5 churches.¹⁶

² Named from Isaac Buck, who settled here in 1807.

³ Among the early settlers were Wm. and Gordon Smith, Benj. Stewart, John DeLancey, David French, Chester Dewey, Joseph Bailey, Bester Pierce, Roswell Parkhurst, Wm. Bullard, Reuben Field, and Abner Royce. The first birth was a daughter of Wm. Smith; and the first death, that of Jas. Chadwick. Mills were built by Raymond.

⁴ The members were not professedly united in religious or political views. Spafford, in his Guide-Book, erroneously calls them "Methodists."—Hughes's Hist. St. L. and Fran's Co., p. 435.

⁵ M. E., Presb., Univ., Prot. E., (Trinity,) Bap., Ref. Presb., R. C., and Catholic Apostolic.

⁶ Promoted by Rossie. Named from a sister of David Parish, the proprietor. It embraces "Somerville," or No. 1 of Great Tract No. 111, Massena's Purchase.

⁷ The first lead mining operations in this town were unskillfully performed and attended with ruinous results, which led to their abandonment. After 20 years' suspension, the mines were re-opened by an English company, (The Rossie & Canada Lead Company,) formed under special act, and working upon a lease of 20 years from June 1, 1856; and they are said to have been successful. The Calabonan and Keene Iron Mines, now the property of Dr. Parish, have yielded an immense quantity of ore, which has mostly been worked at Rossie Iron Works.

⁹ Formerly called "Calabonan," and "Howards Mills," from Jas. Howard, former proprietor.

¹⁰ Among the first settlers were Jos. Teall, Reuben Streeter, A. Simmons, O. Maltener, A. Kenney, jr., S. Bondy, S. Waters, and J. Stearns. The first child born was Wm. Rossie Williams. Reuben Streeter built the first mill.

¹¹ Named from Russell Atwater, first settler.

¹² Among the early settlers were Nathan Loren, and David Ruess, Heman Morgan, Elias Hayden, Reuben T. Ashman, Jesse Bunnell, Eldon Morgan, and Joel Clarke, who came in 1805. The first child born was a son of Reuben Ashman, in 1806; the first marriage, that of Colvyn Hill and Harriet Knox; and the first death, that of ——— Curtis. Reuben Smith taught the first school, and Abwater built the first mills.

¹³ Sold for a school building, in 1850.

¹⁴ It originally comprised No. 2 of the "Ten Towns," and is nearly 10 mi. sq.

¹⁵ Among the early settlers were Benj. Wright, Isaac Kelsoy, Abram Sheldon, and John and Bolt Babcock. S. Reynolds built the first mill, in 1804. Mrs. Sheldon was the first woman who came into town.

¹⁶ Cong., M. E., Bap., W. Meth.; the Christians and F. W. Bap. have also societies in town.

SARATOGA COUNTY.

This county¹ was formed from Albany, Feb. 7, 1791. It lies in the N. angle formed by the junction of the Hudson and Mohawk Rivers, centrally distant 31 miles from Albany, and contains 862 sq. mi. Its surface is hilly or undulating in the S. and mountainous in the N. Two ranges of mountains traverse the co. from N. E. to S. W. The Palمرتown or Luzerne Mts., the most eastern of these ranges, extend from Warren co., through the W. part of Moreau and Milton and the E. part of Corinth, into Greenfield, where they terminate in a series of low, irregular hills. Hudson River breaks through this range on the N. border of the co. in a deep ravine 3 mi. in extent. The mountains rise abruptly from the water's edge to a height of 800 feet. Their declivities are generally rocky and precipitous, and their summits spread out into a broad, rocky upland covered with forests. The Kayaderosseras Range extend through the N. part of the co. and occupy the greater part of Corinth, Edinburgh, Day, and Hadley. The declivities of these mountains are generally precipitous, and their summits spread out into broad, rocky uplands broken by ledges and craggy peaks. A group of isolated hills, 450 feet high, with rounded summits and terraced declivities, extend through the W. part of Stillwater and Saratoga. A broad intervalle extends along the Hudson, bordered by a range of clay bluffs 40 to 200 feet in height. From the summits of these bluffs an extensive sand plain extends westward to the foot of the mountains, covering the greater part of Moreau, Wilton, Northumberland, Saratoga Springs, Malta, and Clifton Park. The S. W. portion of the co. is rolling or moderately hilly.

Hudson River flows nearly 70 mi. along the E. border of the co. It is interrupted by falls and is crossed by several dams and bridges.² The Mohawk forms a portion of the S. boundary. The Sacandaga, forming the outlet of the principal lakes in the S. part of Hamilton co., flows in a tortuous channel through Edinburgh, Day, and Hadley. It is navigable for boats and steamboats of light draught from Fish House, on the border of Fulton co., to Conklingville Falls, in Hadley, a distance of 20 mi. Below the falls it flows between high, rocky hills in a series of rapids to the Hudson. Kayaderosseras River drains the central part of the co. and flows into Saratoga Lake. The outlet of the lake takes the name of Fish Creek. The other principal streams are Snook Kil, Anthony's Kil, and Glowgee Creek. Saratoga Lake is a beautiful sheet of water, 6½ mi. long and 2 broad, situated about 4 mi. S. E. of Saratoga Springs. Ballston, Round, and Owl Lakes are small sheets of water in the S. part of the co. Among the mountains and forests in the N. are numerous other small lakes but little known.

The Kayaderosseras and Luzerne Mts. are both principally composed of primary rocks. A stratum of crystalline limestone extends along the foot of the mountains; and this is succeeded by Potsdam sandstone. In these formations iron ore has been obtained; but the beds have been imperfectly explored.³ The rocks in the S. half of the co. belong to the shales and slates of the Hudson River group. A large part of the co. is covered with drift deposits, consisting of sand and clay. The soil among the mountains is a light, sandy or gravelly loam, and is best adapted to grazing; upon the intervalles along the rivers it is a deep, fertile, clayey loam and alluvium; and in the S. W. part it is a heavy, clayey loam. A strip of light sand occupies the greater part of the two eastern tiers of towns. The people are chiefly engaged in grain and stock raising. Lumbering and tanning are extensively carried on in the N. part of the co. Considerable attention is also paid to the manufacture of cotton and woollen goods and paper.⁴

The county seat is located at the village of Ballston Spa, in the town of Milton.⁵ The courthouse, a

¹ The origin of the word Saratoga is uncertain. The termination "oga" or "uaga," is said to signify "place." The first part of the word has been thought to imply "hill-side" by some, and "flow of salt springs" by others,—"sarachi" in some Indian dialects being the name for salt.

² See descriptions of Warren and Washington co's.

³ Among the other minerals are agate, chert, iron, chrysoberyl, garnet, tourmaline, phosphate of lime, graphite, iron pyrites, and mica. A full catalogue of minerals is given by John H. Steele in his geological survey of the co.

⁴ Important manufactures have for many years been carried on in Milton, Moreau, Mechanicville, Schuylerville, and Waterford. The manufacture of lumber is chiefly limited to Glenn Falls and Jessup's Landing, on the Hudson.

⁵ The first courthouse was located 2 mi. S. W. of Ballston Spa. By an act of March 2, 1794, the sum of £1000 was appropriated to build a courthouse and jail, and a tract of the following two years 1799 was added for the purpose. John Bradford, S. J. Allen, Richard Davis, jr., John Hall, John McClintock, and Jas. Linnert, were appointed commissioners to superintend the erection of the plain brick building, contains the usual rooms and offices and the jail. The co. clerk's office is a small building situated on Main Street. The co. poorhouse is situated on a farm of 112 acres, 1 1/2 mi. S. W. of Ballston Spa. The average number of inmates is about 100; and the institution yields an annual revenue of $9000.¹

The Champlain Canal extends along the Hudson from Waterford to the S. border of Northumberland, at which point it crosses the river into Washington co.² The Saratoga & Schenectady R. R. extends from Saratoga Springs through Milton, Ballston, and Clifton Park to Schenectady.³ The Saratoga & Whitehall R. R. extends from Saratoga Springs S. through Wilton and Northumberland to Moreau, where it crosses the Hudson to Fort Edward. The Rensselaer & Saratoga R. R. crosses the Mohawk at Waterford, and passes through that town, Half Moon, Clifton Park, Malta, and Ballston to Ballston Spa. The Albany, Vermont & Canada R. R., crossing the Mohawk at Cohoes, intersects the R. & S. R. R. at Saratoga Junction, and crosses the Hudson at Deepkill into Rensselaer co. The Lake Ontario & Hudson River R. R.⁴ has been laid out and partly worked from Saratoga Springs through Greenfield, Corinth, and Hadley.

Eight weekly and 1 daily papers are published in the co.⁵

The greater part of this co. is embraced within the "Half Moon," "Clifton Park" or "Shannonhold," "Saratoga," "Appel," and "Kayaderoseras" or "Queensborough" Patents.⁶ The last named patent includes the greater part of the co. The purchase of the tract was confirmed by the Mohawks, July 26, 1683. The bounds were so loosely defined that disputes arose between the buildings. By an act passed March 14, 1817, Jas. Merrill, Ebenezer Powell, Isaac Gore, John Gibson, and Gilbert Waring were appointed commissioners to superintend the erection of new buildings in the place of the old ones, which had been burned.

proprietors and the owners of the Schenectady, Clifton Park, and Half Moon Patents, which were not settled until after the Revolution.

The first settlements in the co. were made by the Dutch, within a few years after their first colonization of the country about Albany. These settlements commenced near Waterford, on the Mohawk, and gradually extended up the valley of the Hudson. Lying in the great thoroughfare between the English settlements at Albany and the French posts on Lake Champlain, the continual passing of military parties checked the progress of settlement and exposed the few hardy pioneers to all the dangers and anxieties of border warfare. Immediately after the conquest of Canada, in 1760, settlements rapidly extended along the river valleys and to some distance into the interior. During the Revolution, some of the most important events of the war transpired within the limits of this co. Upon the approach of Burgoyne in 1777, Gen. Schuyler retreated from Fort Edward and made a stand first at Saratoga, then at Stillwater, and finally at the mouths of the Mohawk.¹ This last stand he considered the best position for checking the advance of the enemy, which he was expecting both from the s. and w. The inhabitants of the co. above fled in consternation to Albany, leaving their homes and fields of grain to be destroyed by the advancing foe. The islands at the mouth of the Mohawk were fortified about the 1st of August, and Burgoyne took possession of Fort Edward at nearly the same time. While the armies lay in this position, two events took place which served greatly to embarrass Burgoyne and to render sure his final defeat. The first of these was the defeat of Bann at Bennington, and the second the retreat of St. Leger from the siege of Fort Schuyler.²

The American army in the mean time, under Gen. Gates, who had superseded Gen. Schuyler, advanced toward the enemy, and about the 1st of September took possession of and fortified the high bluffs known as Bemis Heights, upon the river, in the s. part of Stillwater.³ Greatly perplexed and embarrassed, Burgoyne finally concluded to continue his march toward Albany. On the 14th of September he crossed the Hudson, above the mouth of the Batten Kil, into the s. part of Saratoga, and continued his march southward. On the 19th the first battle of Stillwater was fought, in front of the American intrenchments at Bemis Heights. The American loss was 315 and the British 500, the former returning to their camp and the latter retaining possession of the battle field. On the 7th of October another severe battle was fought, in which the British lost 700 and the Americans 150. During the succeeding night the British abandoned their camp and retreated northward, and finally took position upon the heights of Saratoga, just w. of the present village of Schuylerville. Here Burgoyne found himself completely hemmed in. A victorious and hourly increasing army was in front; a strong detachment was posted on the e. bank of the river to prevent his crossing that stream; Fort Edward, in his rear, had been taken by the Americans; his bravest officers had fallen in battle; Lord Howe had failed to afford the promised support from New York;⁴ and his army was reduced to the last extremity for want of provisions. Under these circumstances, the British commander reluctantly yielded to an imperative necessity, and on the 16th of October signed articles of capitulation. On the 17th the whole British army laid down their arms and were marched eastward to Mass.⁵ The close of this campaign left the co. stripped of nearly every evidence of civilized occupation. The fear of continued Indian hostilities prevented the immediate re-occupation of the abandoned lands; but after the close of the war settlements rapidly spread. Since this period few incidents of general interest have occurred, and the history is but the record of the everyday events connected with the conversion of a wilderness into fruitful fields and happy homes.

BALLSTON⁶—was formed from Saratoga as a district, April 1, 1775, and was organized as a town, March 7, 1788. Charlton, Galway, and Milton were taken off in 1792, and the line of Charl-

² Gen. St. Leger, at the head of a body of Tories and Canadians was to co-operate with Burgoyne by marching through the Mohawk Valley and joining the main army at Albany. At Oswego he was joined by a body of Indians under Brant, making his force 1700 strong. On the 2d of Aug. he invested Fort Stanwix, where Rome, Oriskany (now Stande), and continued the siege until the 23d, when, learning that an American reinforcement was approaching, he hastily retreated.

³ The fortifications of the American camp were erected under the direction of Kosciuszko, then holding the office of engineer in the army. They were so constructed as to completely command the passage down the river. The position afterward chosen by the British was about 1 m. distant, and separated from the American works by a deep ravine.

⁵ The place where the British had down their arms was a front of 1st Hardy, an old fortification erected by DuRoi in 1755. The number of the army at the time of the surrender was 5,792, of whom 2,012 were Germans. The Americans also captured 12 brass cannon, 4,447 muskets, 6,000 dozen of cartridges, and a large amount of estranges and camp equipage.

ton was changed March 5, 1795. It lies upon the border of the e. & w. of the county. The surface is gently rolling. Mourning Kill and the Outlet Creek are the principal streams. Bull's Pond in the s. e. part, is a long, narrow, and deep body of water, the outlet of which is the principal stream of Round Lake. The soil s. e. of the lake is generally a light sand, and s. w. it is a heavy sand and gravelly loam. Ballston (p. v.) is situated on the line of Malta. A small part of the village is within the limits of this town. Burnt Hills, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 42 dwellings. Ballston Center (p. o.) and Academy Hill, near the center, are hamlets. East Line, (p. o.), on the border of Malta, contains 15 houses. It is a station on the R. & S. R. R. South Ballston is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1753, by two brothers named Michael and Nicholas McDonald,¹ who located near the w. bank of Ballston Lake. In 1770, Rev. Eliphalet Ball, with his three sons John, Stephen, and Theron, and 120 members of his congregation, removed from Bedford, N. Y., and settled in the village of Academy Hill.² Soon after their arrival a large number of settlers came in from New England, New Scotland, and the north of Ireland.³ The settlements in this town were twice invaded during the Revolution, and several of the inhabitants were carried away prisoners to Canada.⁴ The first church (Presb.) was organized Oct. 6, 1792.⁵ There are 6 churches in town.

CHARLTON—was formed from Ballston, March 17, 1792. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is undulating, with a gentle inclination toward the s. Its streams are the Ad-plaats and a branch of the Mourning Kill. The soil is an excellent quality of sandy, gravelly, and clayey loam. Lodges of limestone in the w. part, affording an excellent quality of building stone, are extensively quarried. Charlton, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, contains 3 churches and 48 houses; West Charlton (p. v.) contains about 20 houses. The commissioners appointed to divide the Kayaderosseras Patent appropriated 5,000 acres in the s. part of this town to defray the expenses of the division. The first settlement was commenced in 1774, by Thos. Swastman, who located in the e. part of the town.⁶ The first church (Presb.) was incorp. Dec. 11, 1792; Rev. Wm. Schouck was the first pastor.⁷

CLIFTON PARK—was formed from Half Moon, March 3, 1828, as "Clifton." Its name was changed March 31, 1829. The surface is level or undulating, except in the s. e., where it is broken by sand hills and ravines. A line of rugged clay bluffs borders upon the Mohawk Valley. Stony Creek, Swarts and Dwaas Kils are the principal streams. A belt of heavy clay and gravelly loam extends along the river above the bluffs. The soil is alluvial upon the Mohawk flats and a sandy loam in the central and s. parts. Clifton Park, (p. v.) on the border of Half Moon, contains 2 churches and 22 houses; Amity, Vasschers Ferry p. o., a canal village in the s. part, contains 1 church and 45 houses; Jonesville, (p. v.) in the s. part, 1 church, the Jonesville Academy,⁸ and 20 houses; and Bexford's Plains, (p. v.) a canal village in the s. w. corner of the town, 25 houses. Grooms Corners, (p. o.) in the s. w., Dry Dock, (p. o.) in the s. e., and Fort's Ferry, on the Mohawk, are hamlets. Part of this town was included in the "Clifton Park" or "Shannondhoi" Patent, granted Sept. 23, 1708.⁹ Settlements were made in the

² The McDonalds were natives of Ireland. They had been emigrated on board a vessel in the shannon, brought to Philadelphia, and sold for a term of years to pay for their passage.

⁴ Among these early settlers were Judge Bariah Feltner, and Edward M. C. Andie, Epiphanius What, Edward A. Watson, Capt. Stephen White, Paul Pierson, Capt. Tyrannus O'Brien, Bez Malobrook, Eliza Boncher, John Hoyle, Edmund Johnson, Saml. Nash, and Joseph Betts, and his son, John, (who was afterwards hung as a forger) all from New England. Capt. Kenneth Gordon, and ———— McCook from N. J.; Tombs named Stewart, M. Dermdals, and Frazee, from Scotland; and Gen. Joseph Gordon, George Scott, Francis Hunter, and 100 others, Kentucky, from the north of Ireland. The Scotch families ———— (The "Scotch Bush" and "Parlay" streets) ———— Gen. Gordon was killed in the army during the Revolution, and afterwards reached by Tombs.

⁵ In the 10th of Oct. 1779, a party of 100 regulars and Indians from Canada, under Major Munnick, came from their headquarters in their appearance in the latter settlement. They designed to attack Schoene Kill; but their commander, on impeding several days, they returned without effecting this object. They pillaged and burned several houses at Ballston, killed one man, and took 24 prisoners. After losing the Kayaderosseras Patent, a address of his men, stating his expectations that they would be punished, and desiring that no one of the few who were prisoners should at once be killed. For this trouble, he was afterwards ordered out of his army at Montreal. The next day 1000 prisoners were allowed to return after the first of the British left New York for the Hills of Swarth, where they were met by the notorious Joe Betts, with about 100 men. On Oct. 10, 1779, captured 50 prisoners and at the same time killed 300. While on the way of their march, they captured 500 men, including the Capt. Gordon, and were afterwards captured by the British, and taken to the wilderness of the St. Lawrence, where they were kept in a Magazine. They then made their escape, and returned to the city way of Hudson and Albany.

⁶ Clifton Park, Ross, Potts, Putnam, and R. C. Hunt.

⁹ The lands were divided into 3000 acres, divided into 1000 lots, and M. P. was a member of the 18th of Oct. 1779. The lands were divided into three parts, each of 1000 acres, and M. P. was a member of the 18th of Oct. 1779.

Mohawk Valley, previous to 1700. The names of the first settlers and the precise date of their settlement are unknown. The first church (Bap.) was organized Sept. 3, 1794; Rev. Abijah Peck was the founder and first pastor.¹

CORINTH—was formed from Hadley, April 20, 1818. A part of Moreau was annexed Jan. 28, 1818. It lies upon the Hudson, in the s.e. part of the co. The Kayaderoseras Mt. Range occupies the central and s. parts, and the Palmertown Mts, the s.e. corner. The declivities of these mountains are steep, rough, and broken, and their summits are rocky and mostly covered with forests. A valley 4 mi. wide separates the two ranges. The principal streams are the Hudson, forming the s.e. border, and Cole Brook, flowing along the s. foot of the mountains. The Great Falls, in the Hudson, are on the border of this town.² Among the mountains in the s. part are several fine lakes, the principal of which are Efnor, Hunt, Jenny, and Black Lakes. The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. Lumbering is extensively carried on, the Hudson River and small streams from the hills furnishing an abundance of water-power. Jessups Landing, (Corinth p.o.) on the Hudson, contains 3 churches and 88 dwellings; and South Corinth (p.v.) 1 church and 30 dwellings. The first settlement was made near S. Corinth, in 1790, by Fred. Parkman, Washington Chapman, Jeremiah Eddy, Jephtha Clark, and Jonathan Dewel.³ The first church (Bap.) was organized June 1, 1822.⁴

DAY—was formed from Edinburgh and Hadley, as "Concord," April 17, 1819. Its name was changed Dec. 3, 1827. It is the n.w. corner town of the co. Its surface is principally occupied by several spurs of the Kayaderoseras Mts. Oak and Bald Mts., the principal peaks, near the center of the town, are 900 feet above the river. The whole mountain region is wild, rugged, and rocky, and scarcely susceptible of cultivation. The Sacondaga River flows in a narrow valley through the s. part. Its course is tortuous, and it is navigable through the town. Paul, Glass House, and Allens Creeks are the other principal streams. Livingston, Sand, and Mud Lakes are small bodies of water in the n. part. The soil is a moderately fertile, sandy and clayey loam. Lumbering is extensively carried on. Huntsville (West Day p.o.) is a hamlet in the s.w. part. Day is a p.o. The first permanent settlers were Phineas Austin, James Thomas, and Dyer Perry, and families named Clay and Bond. The first religious meetings were held in the barn of Peter Van Vleck, in 1801-02. The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1809. The census reports 2 churches; Christian and Ref. Prot. D.

EDINBURGH—was formed from Providence, March 13, 1801, as "Northfield," and its name was changed April 6, 1808. A part of Day was taken off in 1819. It lies upon the w. border of the co., n. of the center. Its surface is principally occupied by two high mountain ridges separated by the valley of the Sacondaga River. The mountain regions are rocky and broken, with a thin, sandy or gravelly soil, and are covered with forests. Beechers Creek is a small mill stream w. of the river. The soil on the river flats is a good quality of clayey and gravelly loam. Lumbering is the chief occupation of the people. Batchelerville, (p.v.) on the e. bank of the Sacondaga, contains 30 houses; and Beechers Hollow, (Edinburgh p.o.) on the w. side of the river, 12. The first settlers came in about 1790 and located in the valley below "Fish House."⁵ The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1798, by Rev. Mr. Munroe, from Galway.⁶ Traces of an ancient Indian burial place are visible on the s. bank of the Sacondaga, near the border of Day.⁷

GALWAY⁸—was formed from Ballston, March 7, 1792. Providence was taken off in 1796. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its n. half is occupied by a group of rounded hills forming the southern continuation of the Kayaderoseras Mts. The surface of the s. half is gently undulating. The principal streams are head branches of Feegowesee and Calderwood Creeks and the Mourning Kil. The soil is generally a heavy clay, intermixed in places with sand and gravel. Galway, (p.v.) near the center of the town, was incorp. April 18, 1838. It contains 3 churches, a female seminary,⁹ and about 15 houses; West Galway, (p.v.) on the border of Fulton co., contains 1 church and 20 houses. Yorks Corners, (E. Galway p.o.) in the s.e.

⁴ There are 3 churches in town; Bap., Presb., M. E.

⁵ In 1790 the following persons were living in the valley, viz: Moses Crane, Jacobus Filkins, Daniel Washburn, John Sumner, Obadiah Perry, and Saml. Rogers. Daniel Abbott, from Conn., taught the first school, in 1794; — Chatfield kept the first store, in 1795; Isaac Daming built the first grist-mill, in 1793; and Palmer Munroe, the first woolen factory, in 1808.

⁶ The census reports 3 churches; 2 M. E., Presb.

⁷ Tradition says that a band of Canadian Indians, in 1650, on an expedition against the Mohawks, at this place fell into an ambuscade and were all slain. Bullets are frequently cut out of the trees in this vicinity.

⁸ Named from the native place of the first Scotch settlers.

part. Mosherville, (p.o.) near the s. border. Whiteside Corners, (p.o.) in the s.w., South Galway (p.o.) and North Galway (p.o.) are hamlets. The first settlers in Galway, Scotland, located in town in 1771.¹ Rev. Simeon Smith, from Claverhoe, came into town in 1778, and located near Yorks Corners.² He formed the first religious society (Bapt.) during the following year.³

GREENFIELD—was formed from Saratoga and Milton, March 12, 1793. A part of Halley was taken off in 1801. It occupies a position a little s.w. of the center of the co. The Palaeozoic Mountain Range extends along the n. border, and the Kayaderoseras Range occupies the s.w. part of the town. A valley 6 mi. wide separates these ranges. The principal streams are the Kayaderoseras and its branches. The soil is generally a gravelly loam intermixed with clay. Sections of the surface are very stony. Iron ore has been found in the n. part. Greenfield Center (p.v.) contains 2 churches. Pop. 85. Jamesville, (Middle Grove p.o.) on the s. border, contains 1 church, 2 paper mills, and 31 houses; Mount Pleasant, (p.v.) in the s.w. corner, a glass factory and 149 inhabitants; and Porters Corners, (p.v.) near the center of the town, 2 churches and 20 houses. West Greenfield, (p.o.), North Greenfield, (p.o.) and Pages Corners are hamlets. The first settlers were two men named Haggerty and Root, who located near Haggerty Hill in 1784.⁴ The census reports 9 churches in town.⁵

HADLEY—was formed from Greenfield and Northumberland, Feb. 27, 1801. Its boundaries were amended Feb. 28, 1808. Corinth was taken off in 1818, and a part of Day in 1819. It lies upon the Hudson, in the s.e. corner of the co. A large share of its surface is occupied by the peaks and ridges of the Kayaderoseras Mts. Mt. Anthony is an isolated peak in the s.w. part. Sacandaga River flows through the s. part. Its valley is narrow and below Conklingville its current is rapid and frequently interrupted by falls. The soil generally is a coarse, yellowish, unproductive sand and gravel. Lumbering and tanning are extensively carried on. Conklingville, (West Hadley p.o.) on the Sacandaga, in the w. part of the town, contains 1 church, a large tannery,⁶ and 39 houses. Hadley (p.o.) is a hamlet at the junction of Sacandaga and Hudson Rivers. Richard Hilton commenced the first settlement, just after the close of the Revolution, on the Hudson.⁷ The census reports 2 churches in town: a F. W. Bap. and a Wes. Meth.

HALF MOON⁸—was formed as a district, March 24, 1772, and as a town, March 7, 1788. Its name was changed to "Orong" April 17, 1816, and the original name was restored Jan. 16, 1820. Waterford was taken off in 1816, and Clifton Park in 1828. Its surface is undulating and broken by the narrow ravines of small streams. Hudson River forms the e. boundary, and the Mohawk a portion of the s. The river intervals are about $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. wide, and are bordered by a line of steep, clay bluffs 60 to 100 feet high. The other streams are Anthony's, Duwa's, and Steena Kils. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam upland, and a fine quality of alluvium in the intervals. Crescent⁹ (p.v.) is a canal village near the center of the s. border of the town. Pop. 593. Middletown, (Half Moon p.o.), $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi. n. of Crescent, has a pop. of 230; Mechanicsville, (p.v.) at the mouth of Anthony's Kil, lies mostly in Stillwater. Pop. in Half Moon, 146. Clifton Park (p.v.) is on the w. line. Newtown, Smithtown, and Grays Corners are hamlets. The first settlements are supposed to have been made between 1680 and 1700, by Germans, on the Mohawk flats.¹⁰ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was organized in 1800.¹¹

¹ Among the early settlers were John and James Major, John M. O'Brien, Wm. Root, and Alex. Kelly, and John M. Harg, who all recovered in the same ship, in 1774. The first death was that of James Major, killed by the fall of a tree, 8 pt. 11, 1776; John M. O'Brien, or ———, probably kept the first store, in 1785; Daniel Campbell built the first grist-mill.

² Mr. Smith was accompanied by his parents and 2 brothers-in-law, Simon Bates, Jr., Reuben Mattison, and Joseph Brown.

³ The census reports 2 churches in town: 2 Bap., Christian, Episcop., M. E., and Presb.

⁴ Among the other early settlers were ——— Brewster, Wm. S. (settled in the Kayaderoseras, where he died in 1788), Isaac Deming, John Bond, Nathl. Sweeney, and E. M. Ingram, in 1787; Jos. V. and Chas. March, to 1789; Isaac and Durins Stebbins, ———, R. J. and Chas. H. S. in 1790; P. S. Tindler, in 1790, and ——— Munro, soon after. J. O. Reynolds kept the first inn, in 1788; G. Ashon, Moorhouse built the first saw and grist-mill, at Middle Galway, the same year; Benj. Church kept the first store, at Pages Corners, in 1787.

⁵ Bap., 2; M. E., 2; Presb., Cong., and Unit.

⁶ This tannery was formerly obtained on the w. side of this mountain, to supply the tanneries at Inverine.

⁷ This tannery is now used for the manufacture of oak and manufactures 50,000 sh. of leather per annum.

⁸ Alex. Stewart settled on the Hudson in 1788; Elyah Ellis, on the s. side of the Sacandaga; ——— Royal, on the N., and Henry Weller, at Halley, in 1790. ——— Weller, settled at Middle Galway in 1791-22. Pelagee Hill, a German, settled in 1792, and Alex. Stewart, the first settler on the w. side of the Hudson, kept the first inn, on the w. side of the Hudson, in 1792. Col. Gould and Col. Bond, settled in 1793, and placed the first mill, at Middle Galway, in 1794.

⁹ Named from the crescent shape of the river, and the fact that Hudson and the Mohawk.

¹⁰ The census reports 70 Mechanicsville, 100 Clifton Park, and 100 Half Moon.

¹¹ In 1688 it was purchased by a Dutchman, and was afterwards moved to the present site. The first settlement was made on the Half Moon, to a small extent, in 1711, by a Dutchman, who was afterwards joined by a number of Germans, who settled in 1714 the present site of Half Moon, and in 1715, on the present site of Middletown.

——— First, on the Half Moon, then on the present site of Mechanicsville, by 1716. The census reports 100 Half Moon, 100 Clifton Park, and 100 Middletown. The first settlement was made on the Half Moon, to a small extent, in 1711, by a Dutchman, who was afterwards joined by a number of Germans, who settled in 1714 the present site of Half Moon, and in 1715, on the present site of Middletown.

MALTA—was formed from Stillwater, March 3, 1802, and a part of Saratoga was annexed March 28, 1805. It lies upon the w. bank of Saratoga Lake, s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is chiefly an undulating upland, 60 to 80 feet above Saratoga Lake, and broken by the deep gulleys of small streams. The streams are Kayaderosseras Creek, forming the n. boundary, Ballston Outlet Creek, an inlet, and Anthony's Kil, the outlet of Round Lake, and Drummonds Brook, flowing into Saratoga Lake. Round Lake, in the s. e., is nearly circular, and 1 mi. in diameter. A swampy region covering an area of several hundred acres lies in the n. e. part of the town, at the mouth of the Kayaderosseras. The soil is principally a light, sandy loam, with clay and muck in the lowlands. Dunning Street, (Malta p. o.) near the center of the town, contains 1 church and 17 houses. Maltaville, (p. o.) in the s. part, Malta Ridge, in the n., and Halls Corners, are hamlets. The first settlers were two men named Drummond and McKelvin, who came before the Revolution and located w. of the lake.¹ The census reports 5 churches in town.²

MILTON—was formed from Ballston, March 7, 1792, and a part of Greenfield was taken off in 1793. It lies a little s. of the center of the co. Its surface is moderately hilly in the s., and undulating in the n., with a slight inclination toward Kayaderosseras Creek, which flows s. e. through the center of the town. This stream has a rapid fall and furnishes a valuable water-power. Glowegee Creek, from the w., is its principal tributary. In the n. part are limestone ridges, extensively quarried for building stone and lime. The Saratoga mineral spring region extends through the s. e. part. The soil is generally a sandy loam. Ballston Spa, (Ballston p. o.) the co. seat, was incorp. March 21, 1807. It is situated on Kayaderosseras Creek, in the s. e. corner of the town. It contains the co. buildings, 2 seminaries,³ 5 churches, 2 printing offices, and several manufacturing establishments.⁴ Pop. 2,285, of which 1,941 are in this town. This village has long been celebrated for its mineral springs.⁵ Rock City Mills (p. v.) contains 3 paper mills and 34 houses; West Milton (p. v.) a church, a paper mill, a shingle mill, a hoe factory, and 40 houses; Bloodville a scythe, edge tool, and knitting factories, and 40 houses; and Factory Village 2 paper mills and 22 houses. Milton Center and Cranes Village are hamlets. The first settlement in town was made by David Wood and his sons Stephen, Benj., Elijah, Nathan, and Enoch, who purchased 600 acres and moved into town before the Revolution.⁶ The first church (Bap.) was organized Jan. 22, 1793.⁷

MOREAU⁸—was taken from Northumberland, March 28, 1805. A part was annexed to Corinth in 1848. It lies in the great bend of the Hudson, in the s. e. corner of the co. The w. part of the town is occupied by the rocky and precipitous peaks of the Palmertown Mt. Range. The central and e. portions are undulating and broken by the narrow ravines of small streams. The Hudson River forms the n., the e., and a part of the w. boundary of the town. Upon its course are numerous rapids and waterfalls.⁹ The Snook Kil and its tributaries drain the s. part of the town. The soil is generally a light, yellow, sandy loam, but in the s. and w. are tracts of clay and gravel. South Glens Falls, (p. v.) on the Hudson, opposite Glens Falls, contains several manufacturing establishments;¹⁰ pop. 513. Fortsville, (p. v.) in the central part, contains 25 houses. Clarks Corners, Reynolds Corners, and State Dam are hamlets. Moreau Station is a p. o., situated on the R. & W. R. R. Settlements are said to have been made before the Revolution; but their history is only a vague tradition.¹¹ The first church (Bap.) was built in 1795.¹²

¹ These men were suspected of Toryism and were driven from the co. Michael Dunning, with 6 sons and 3 daughters, from Conn. came into town in 1777-78. John Rhodes and Timothy Shapman were the first settlers on Malta Ridge; E. G. and John Hunt and John Parks located at Maltaville about the commencement of the Revolution.

² M. E. Cong., Prot. Meth., and Presb.

³ The Ballston Spa Institute for boys, was established in 1846. The Ballston Spa Academy was opened in 1856.

⁴ In the village are a cotton, oilcloth, edge tool, 2 seamless loom, and 2 knitting factories, a tinney, and 2 gristmills. A mill, co. was incorp. here March 10, 1819.

⁵ These springs were first discovered in the survey of the Kayaderosseras Patent in 1769. They are situated on the margin of a small stream that flows into Kayaderosseras Creek. The Old Spring, formerly much used, was greatly impaired by the opening of Le Fay's Spring, within 30 feet, in 1825. McKean's Spring was obtained in 1827, by boring 237 feet in the slate. The Silvan, or United States Spring, is considerably impregnated with salt. Besides these are the Fulton and Franklin Springs and the Low Well. In 1817, 4 springs were discovered within 20 feet of each other in the bed of the stream. Their properties were unlike, and after a little time they became fresh. These springs are generally clear, cool, and sparkling. Their average temperature is about 56°. The mineral properties are different in different springs; but generally the water is similar to that of the Saratoga Springs, only less strong. Gas is copiously discharged with these waters.

⁶ Benjamin Douglas, grandfather of Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, built a log house near the spring, for the accommodation of visitors, in 1792. Silas Adams and Elijah Wallbridge located in the n. part of the town in 1784-85. In 1792 Nicholas Low built a tavern close by the spring; and in 1804 he erected the "Sans Souci Hotel."

⁷ The census reports 5 churches in town; 2 Bap., 2 M. E., 2 Presb., Prot. E., and R. C.

⁸ Named from Marsball Moreau, who visited the U. S. in 1801-05.

⁹ See page 609.

¹¹ A man named Marvin was the first settler at Fortsville, about 1795; Edward and Elijah Burham and Holly St. J. by were the first settlers at Clarks Corners; — Hamilton built the first gristmill, about 1800. Abel Crandall kept the first inn, in 1798.

¹² The census reports 5 churches; Bap., Cong., M. E., Union, and Friends.

NORTHUMBERLAND—was formed from Saratoga, March 16, 1798. A part of Halfey was taken off in 1801, Moreau in 1805, and Wilton in 1818. It lies upon the Hudson, s. of the center of the co. Its surface is level or undulating and broken by deep ravines. A line of clay and slate bluffs, 30 to 100 feet high, extends along the river. Snook Kil and its tributary, Beaver Dam Creek, are the principal streams. The soil is generally a light, sandy loam. This town shares with Fort Edward the Fort Miller Falls.¹ Gansevoort,² (p. v.) on Snook Kil, in the s. part of the town, contains 2 churches and a pop. of 162. It is a station on the S. & W. R. R. Bacon Hill³ (p. o.) and Northumberland, (p. o.) in the s. e. part of the town, are hamlets. Fort Miller was built in this town in 1755, under the direction of Col. Miller. It was located upon the flat, above the rapids, and was enclosed on three sides by the river. A blockhouse was built on the heights that commanded the position on the w. The first settlers probably came in before the Revolution. Among them was a man named Munroe,⁴ who built the first sawmill, at Gansevoort.⁵ There are 4 churches in town.⁶

PROVIDENCE—was formed from Galway, Feb. 5, 1796, and Edinburgh was taken off in 1801. It lies near the center of the w. border of the co. Its surface is mountainous in the s. e. and broken and hilly in the s. w. The high regions along the s. and e. borders are mostly covered with forests. Hagadons, Hans, Cadmans, and Frenchmans Creeks, small mill streams rising in the mountains and flowing s. w. into Fulton co., are the principal water-courses. The soil is chiefly a coarse, yellow sand or gravel of poor quality. Large tracts are stony and rocky. Wooden ware, leather, and lumber are extensively manufactured. Barkerville (p. o.) and Hagadons Hollow are hamlets. Providence and W. Providence are p. offices. The first settlement was made previous to the Revolution, but the settlers were driven off during the war. Among the first settlers after the war were Nathaniel Wells and Seth Kellogg.⁷ There are 3 churches in town: Bap., Christian, and M. E.

SARATOGA⁸—was formed as a district, March 24, 1772, and as a town, March 7, 1788. Easton (Washington co.) was taken off in 1789, a part of Greenfield in 1793, Northumberland in 1798, a part of Malta in 1802, and Saratoga Springs in 1819. It lies upon the Hudson, near the center of the e. border of the co. A range of high, rounded, and sometimes terraced hills extends s. and s. through the central and w. parts. These hills rise 450 feet above the Hudson and slope in every direction. Narrow alluvial flats bordered by high clay bluffs extend along the Hudson. Saratoga Lake forms a portion of the w. boundary. Fish Creek, the outlet of the lake, flowing through the s. part of the town, is the principal stream; and upon it are several fine mill sites. The other streams are small brooks. The soil s. of Fish Creek is light and sandy, and in the remaining parts of the town it is a gravelly and clayey loam. Three mineral springs, known as "Quaker Springs," issue from the Hudson River slate, in a ravine a little s. e. of the center of the town.⁹ Schnylerville,¹⁰ (p. v.) incorp. April 16, 1831, is situated on the river, at the mouth of Fish Creek. It contains 4 churches, the Schnylerville Academy, a newspaper office, a bank, cotton factory, and foundry; pop. 1,181. Victory Mills, (p. v.) situated on Fish Creek, contains 1 church, a machine shop, and an extensive cotton factory;¹¹ pop. 729. Quaker Springs, (p. v.) near the center of the town, contains 1 church and 22 houses. Grangerville, (p. o.) on Fish Creek, is a hamlet. Deans Corners (p. o.) and Coveville are hamlets. Settlement was begun in the early part of the last century, upon the Hudson.¹² The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed before the Revolution.¹³ The census reports 7 churches in town.¹⁴

SARATOGA SPRINGS—was formed from Saratoga, April 9, 1819. It occupies a nearly central position in the co. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly. Kayaderosseras Creek

² Named from Col. Peter Gansevoort, who located here soon after the war.

³ Named from Ebenezer Bacon, who came from Conn. in 1794, and opened the bridge tavern the same year. The place has been called "Fiddleboon" and "Figs Corners" at different times.

⁴ Munroe was a Tory, and fled to Canada, and his property was confiscated.

⁷ — Cove built the first sawmill, in 1786, and the first gristmill, a year afterward. The first inn was kept by — Shankland.

⁸ Written "Saratoga" until about 1793. Upon the old map of the Kayaderosseras Patent this name is spelled "Saratogla."

The name was first applied to a settlement on the Hudson, in the vicinity of the present village of Schnylerville. It is said to signify "swift water," and was applied to the rapids in the river, in contradistinction to still water just below.

⁹ The water of these springs contains lime, magnesia, and iron, held in solution by carbonic acid, and a large proportion of common salt and soda.

¹⁰ Named in honor of Gen. Philip Schnyler, who resided here previous to the Revolution. During the war his buildings and mills were burned by order of Burgoyne.

¹¹ There are 45 looms in this factory. In 1857, 2,565,411 yds. of print cloth and shirtings were manufactured.

¹³ The British troops made a riding school of this church during the war.

and Saratoga Lake, forming the s. boundary, are skirted by a line of low bluffs. The streams are Ellis and Owl Pond Creeks. An extensive tract lying N. of Saratoga Lake and along the course of Owl Pond Creek is low and swampy. The soil is an inferior quality of yellowish, sandy loam. The far famed mineral springs, which give to the town its name, are situated about 3 mi. N. W. of Saratoga Lake. They are near the center of the mineral spring region, which has a radius of nearly 10 mi.¹ Saratoga Springs (p. v.) was incorp. April 17, 1826. It contains 2 female seminaries,² 7 churches, 2 banks, 5 printing offices, 2 public halls, 22 hotels,³ and several sanitary institutions.⁴ Pop. 5,129. The business of the village is principally connected with the entertainment of strangers during the fashionable watering season. The springs are on that part of the Kayaleroseras Patent that fell to the share of Rip Van Dam. Sir Wm. Johnson is said to have been the first white person who ever used the Saratoga waters for medicinal purposes. In 1767 he was brought to the place on a litter, and, after remaining several days, he was able to return on foot. His example was followed, and the visits of invalids soon became of frequent occurrence. In 1773, Derick Sewton made the first clearing and erected a hut. He was followed soon after by George Arnold and Saml. Norton.⁵ In 1783, Gen. Schuyler cut a road through from Fish Creek, and spent several weeks here, living in a tent. The next year he erected a framed house, (the first in town,) and annually afterward until his death he spent a part of the summer here with his family.⁶ Several prominent men have resided in the village.⁷ The census reports 7 churches in town.⁸

STILLWATER⁹—was formed March 7, 1788. A part of Easton (Washington co.) was

¹ High Rock Spring, the first discovered of these, was so named from a pyramidical mound of calcareous tufa 34 feet high and 24 feet in diameter at the base which has been formed around it. An aperture 1 foot in diameter opens from the top of the rock downward, in which the water generally rises 1½ feet above the surface of the ground. It is said that the water once overflowed the top; but at an early day the rock was cracked by the fall of a tree, and the water sunk to its present level. Congress Spring was discovered in 1792, by a hunting party, and named in compliment to John Taylor, one of the number, who had been a member of the Continental Congress. The present spring was obtained by sinking a well in the bed of the stream near the original fountain. The Columbia Spring, a few rods S. W. of the latter, is chalybeate, and constantly boiling from the escape of gas. It was opened in 1806, by G. Putnam. The Hamilton Spring, 50 rods S. E. of Congress, was discovered by G. Putnam, and brought into use by Dr. Clarke. The Pavilion Fountain, opened in 1830, has a smart, pungent taste. The Indian Spring, situated a few rods N. of High Rock, was opened in 1839. The water contains a large proportion of iodine and very little iron. This spring has sometimes been called the Walton Spring, from Henry Walton, a large proprietor of lands in the vicinity. The Empire Spring, the most northerly in the village, was opened in 1846. It discharges 75 gallons per hour. The Washington Spring, 50 rods S. W. of Congress Spring, was opened in 1806. Putnam Spring is in the immediate vicinity. Hot Rock Spring, 100 rods N. E. from Hamilton, is chalybeate. Hot Spring 3-90 rods N. E. of High Rock; and Mount Spring, 15 rods S. of Flat Rock. Ten Springs were discovered in 1844, 1 mi. S. E. of the village. Ellis Spring is situated in a ravine 2 mi. S. W. of Congress. There are several other springs in the immediate vicinity. Baths are connected with most of these springs, and an immense trade has sprung up in the bottling and sale of the water. The temperature of the fountains ranges from 48 to 51°, and it is not sensibly affected by the seasons. The following table gives an analysis of several of these springs. The figures show the number of grains in a gallon of water.

² Temple Grove Female Seminary, a boarding school, was established in 1833. The Saratoga Female Seminary, ³ Several of these hotels are among the most extensive in the country. Union Hall was built in 1802, by G. Putnam; The Columbian, in 1808, by Jetham Holmes; Congress Hall, in 1812, by G. Putnam; The Pavilion, in 1819, by Nathan Lewis; and The United States, in 1824, by Elias Benedict. All of these have been rebuilt since their erection.

⁴ Among these are the Saratoga Water Cure, and the Medical and Surgical Institute, both established in 1832.

⁵ Norton joined the British, and his property was confiscated.

⁶ Alexander Bryan and Henry Livingston were the first set thers after the war. Gideon Putnam came in 1789. Mr. P. built the first sawmill, the first large hotel, and opened several of the springs. Dr. Clement Bickels, the first physician, came with Putnam, and remained 3 years. John and Ziba Taylor opened the first stores in 1794; Robt. Ellis and Geo. Peck built the first gristmill, in 1814; and Wm. A. Rogers, the first clothing works, in 1815. Henry Walton resided here for several years. He was proprietor of the whole village N. of Congress St. Several of the noted springs were on his estate.

taken off in 1789, and Malta in 1802. It lies upon the Hudson, s. e. of the center of the co. It is uneven in the s. and moderately hilly in the n. The highest point is about 250 feet above the Hudson. A range of clay bluffs 60 to 100 feet high borders upon intervals of the Hudson and Anthony's Kil. The streams are generally small brooks flowing in deep gulleys worn in the drift deposits.¹ The s. w. corner borders upon Saratoga Lake. The river intervals are alluvial. West of the river bluffs is a wide belt of heavy clay; and in the s. w. part is a sandy tract interspersed with swamps. Upon the lake shore is a sulphur spring.² Stillwater, (p. v.) incorp. April 17, 1816, is situated on the Hudson. It contains 4 churches, and manufactories of lumber, paper, woollens, and castings. Pop. 552. Mechanicsville, (p. v.) incorp. July 16, 1859, situated on the Hudson, at the mouth of Anthony's Kil, on the line of Half Moon, is a station on the Rensselaer & Saratoga R. R. It contains 5 churches, a printing office, and an extensive line of a lumber manufactory.³ Pop. 1,111.—616 in Stillwater, 495 in Half Moon. Bemis Heights,⁴ (p. v.) on the Champlain Canal, near the Hudson, and Ketchums Corners (p. v.) are hamlets. This town was included in the Saratoga Patent of 1684; and settlement was commenced about 1750.⁵ The first church (Cong.) was established in 1763.⁶ There are 8 churches in town.⁷

WATERFORD⁸—was formed from Half Moon, April 17, 1816. It lies at the junction of the Hudson and Mohawk Rivers, in the s. e. corner of the co. Its area is about 7 sq. mi. Its surface is mostly an upland, 50 to 100 feet above the river. The Mohawk is bordered by an almost perpendicular range of slate bluffs, and the Hudson Valley by a range of clay bluffs. The soil is a sandy, clayey, and alluvial loam of great fertility. The falls in the Mohawk furnish a valuable water-power. Waterford,⁹ (p. v.) incorp. April 6, 1801,¹⁰ situated on the Champlain Canal, near the confluence of the Hudson¹¹ and Mohawk Rivers, is a station on the Rensselaer & Saratoga R. R. and the Albany & Northern R. R. It contains 6 churches, a newspaper office, a bank, and several manufacturing establishments.¹² Pop. 3,983. Settlement was commenced by the Dutch at a very early day. The census reports 7 churches in town.¹³

WILTON—was formed from Northumberland, April 20, 1818. It lies a little s. e. of the center of the co. The Palmertown Mts., with their steep, rocky slopes and broken, forest-covered summits, extend across the s. w. corner. The center and s. w. are gently undulating, or broken by low ridges. The principal streams are Snook Kil and Bog Meadow and Cold Brooks. The soil in the e. and s. e. is a yellow, sandy loam resting on clay, and in some places swampy. At the foot of the Palmertown Mts. is a belt of productive gravel and clay loam. A heavy growth of white and yellow pine originally covered the plains, but little woodland now remains. Near Emersons Corners is a spring of acidulous and carbonated water, and in the s. part of the town is a sulphur spring. Wilton (p. v.) contains 20 houses; and Emersons Corners, in the n. part of the town, is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in 1774 or '75, by Rowland Perry and his sons Samuel, John, Benj., Absalom, Roswell, Artemas, Rowland, and Joseph, from Dutchess co.¹⁴ Near the mill pond on Snook Kil are traces of Indian occupation; pestles, broken pottery, and flint arrow heads have been found in abundance. The census reports 4 churches in town.¹⁵

² This spring is called the White Sulphur Spring. A few years since, a hotel and bathing house were erected here, and a small steamer was put upon the lake. The building was burned 2 or 3 years after, and the enterprise was abandoned.

³ The American Linen Thread Manufacturing Co. was organized in 1852. The number of men employed is 425.

⁴ Named from Jonathan Bemis, who during the Revolution kept the only inn worthy of note on the Albany & Fort Edward Road.

⁵ Among the first settlers were John Thompson, Geo. Palmer, — Benjamin, Brock Swart, — Fusion, — Burlington, and — Abel. The first gristmill was built by Geo. Palmer, before the Revolution.

⁶ This church was organized at Latfield, Conn. in 1752, and in 1763 was removed to Stillwater. Rev. Robt. Campbell was the first pastor.

⁹ In 1784 the site of the village was purchased by Col. Jacobus Van Schoon, — Middlebrook, Ezra Haddock, Judge White, and several others, most of whom were from Conn.; and Flores Banker was employed to lay it out into villages. In July 11, 1841, a destructive fire occurred, which destroyed 200 houses.

¹⁰ On the 2^d of March, 1794, Rev. John W. C. Van Der Schuerhoven, Martha W. G. Zeeb, Isaac K. Van Der Post, Van Buren, Oliphant, and Thos. Smith were appointed trustees of Half Moon Point.

¹¹ A bridge across the Hudson at this place was built in 1841, at a cost of $20,000. The present structure, known as the "Union Bridge," was built in 1912, at a cost that was $1,000,000.

¹³ Pop., Cong., M. E., Presb., Prot. E., R. C., D. C., and F. B. C.

¹⁴ John Stiles, Ebenezer King, Daniel Smith, Peter Johnson, and Jas. and Wm. Metzger settled in 1774; and John Boyce, Robt. Miller, and Jacobus Van Schoon, and John M. Day in 1784. John King built the first saw-mill in 1791-87, and Wm. Metzger the first grist-mill, in 1791-87, and Stephen King kept the first store, and — Ostrin the first shop.

SCHENECTADY COUNTY.

This county was formed from Albany, March 7, 1809. It is centrally distant 20 mi. from Albany, and contains 221 sq. mi. The greater part lies between Mohawk River and Schoharie Creek,—one town only lying s. of the Mohawk. The surface consists of the Mohawk Valley and an upland, generally much broken by ridges and isolated hills, 200 to 350 feet above the river. The highlands are the northern continuation of the Helderbergh and Schoharie Mts. The underlying rock is generally the shales of the Hudson River group, which crop out in the valleys and the bottoms of the ravines. In portions of Glenville and Duaneburgh this rock is underlain by bird-eye limestone, from which are obtained both lime and stone for building. The greater part of the surface is covered with a thick deposit of drift, consisting principally of clay in the w. part and sand in the e. The rocks crop out on the banks of the streams and form the declivities of the steeper hills. The soil in the w. part is a tenacious, clayey loam, underlain by hardpan on the hills, and in the e. a light, unproductive sand. The valley of the Mohawk consists of a deep, rich alluvium, well adapted to tillage, and extensively devoted to the cultivation of broomcorn.¹

The principal streams are Mohawk River, Schoharie Creek, and Normans Kil, and their branches. The valleys of these streams are generally bordered by the steep declivities of the uplands, rising to a height of about 300 feet. Many of the smaller streams have worn deep gulleys in the loose drift deposits, giving to the surface a very broken character. These small streams are mostly dry in summer. The fine alluvial flats near Schenectady, extending 5 mi. w. on the s. side of the river, were called by the first settlers "The Bourland."² A tract 2 mi. in extent, s. of the river, was called the "Maulwyck;"³ and a tract on both sides, 4 mi. w. of the city, was known as the "Wostint."⁴ A region immediately about Schenectady was called "Oron-nygh-wurrie-gughre;" the hills s. were known as the "Yan-ta-pach-a-berg;"⁵ and those on both sides of the river above the city were called "Tin-ar-ou-ne." The streams of "Wostint" were "Wolf Kil,"⁶ "Zantzee Kil," and "Righelbrigh Kil."⁷ The valleys are best adapted to tillage and the hills to pasturage.⁸ Manufactures are chiefly limited to the city of Schenectady.⁹ In Glenville are about a dozen broom factories, employing 150 persons.

The county seat is located at Schenectady City.¹⁰ The courthouse and clerk's office are both situated on Union St.; the former contains the courtroom, jail, sheriff's and supervisors' rooms,¹² and the latter the clerk's and surrogate's offices. The poorhouse is located on a farm of 116 acres, on the Albany Road, just e. of the city. It has, on an average, about 75 inmates, and the farm yields a revenue of $1,200. There are 4 newspapers published in the co.¹³

² "Arable Land."
³ "Whirl-back," from the tortuous course of the Mohawk.
⁴ "Wilderness."
⁵ Mixed Indian and Dutch, signifying "John-enr-of-corn-hill."
⁶ "Paint Creek," from the yellow earth along the banks.
⁷ "Sea-Sand Creek." ⁸ "Rail bridge Creek."
⁹ At an early period the Mohawk Valley was celebrated for its large wheat crops; but now very little is raised.

¹⁰ See page 595.
¹¹ By the terms of the act making Schenectady the co. seat, the courthouse was to be built at the expense of the city. The first county officers were Gerrit S. Vender, First Judge; Peter V. Vender, Clerk; Jas. V. S. Rider, Sheriff; and Wm. J. Teller, Surrogate.

¹² The first courts were held in the City Hall, and afterward in the West College.

¹³ The following is a nearly complete list of the newspapers in the co:—

The Western Spectator was issued prior to 1807.
The Schenectady Cabinet was commenced in Jan. 1809, by Isaac Riggs. In 1850 it passed into the hands of S. S. Riggs, who continued it until 1857.

The Western Budget was issued a short time in 1809.
The Mohawk Advertiser was pub. in 1810 by R. Schermehorn.
The Floral, &c., was published in 1811.

The Schenectady Gazette was published in 1812, by Ryer Schermehorn.

The Schenectady County Whig was issued in 1839, by C. G. and A. Palmer, and was continued until 1841.

The Schenectady Standard was published in 1850, by T. J. Sutherland.

The Schenectady Democrat was begun in 1825, by C. G. and A. Palmer. T. W. Bang became its publisher in 1837, and the same year it was changed to

The Reflector and Schenectady Democrat. It has been successively published by G. Yates, T. H. Knecud, and A. A. Keyser, and is now published by Fred. W. Hoffman.

The Corsair was published in 1834, by the students of Union College. The Parthenon, mo., was published in 1840-47, by the college students.

The Mohawkley was published in 1835, by Riggs & Norris.

The Protestant Sentinel was commenced in 1835, by Rev. John Maxon, and continued 2 years.

The Wealth was started in 1835, by W. H. Burleigh, and continued 1 year.

Freedom's Sentinel was issued during the campaign of 1840, by Stephen S. Riggs.

The Antagonist and General Review, mo., was started in 1845, by Rev. W. Arthur, and continued 12 years.

The Scroll, mo., was published a short time in 1849.

The Schenectady Democrat was founded in 1853, by Wm. M. Colbourne and W. N. Clark, and since 1857 it has been published by Alex. J. Thompson.

The great flat upon the Mohawk w. of "Fort Orange," and where the city of Schenectady now stands, was bought of the natives in July, 1661, in the name of Arent Van Corlear;¹ and settlement was commenced during the same year. It was under the charge of 5 commissioners until Nov. 1, 1684, when Gov. Dongan granted a patent confirming previous rights and extending the territory.² On the night between the 8th and 9th of Feb. 1690, N.S.,³ the settlement—then consisting of about 80 houses—was surprised by a party of about 300 French and Indians, and nearly every house was burned. Sixty-three persons were killed, and 27 were carried to Canada as prisoners. The night was intensely cold, and the nearest place of refuge was Albany, to which a few escaped after much suffering.⁴ In 1702 R. Schermerhorn became sole trustee; and in 1705 a new patent was issued, conferring certain township privileges. On the 23d of Oct. 1765, the place was created a borough, with the rights and immunities incident to these corporations.⁵ From 1726 to the Revolution the township of Schenectady sent a representative to the General Assembly. During the war the village was fortified and garrisoned at the public expense, and many families from the Upper Mohawk sought protection here from the incursions of the Tories and Indians.⁶ For several years after 1779 a large number of friendly Oneida and Tuscarora families, driven from their homes by the hostile tribes, were supported in this vicinity at the expense of the General Government. At the return of peace the settlement shared in the general prosperity. A new impulse was given to business by the improvements effected by the Western Inland Navigation Co., which enabled large boats to make longer voyages.⁷ Upon the completion of the Erie Canal the Mohawk navigation was entirely superseded. For several years after the completion of the r. r. from Albany in 1831, large quantities of merchandise were sent here to be shipped on the canal, saving the delay of the circuitous route and numerous locks on the canal between Schenectady and Troy.⁸ In 1832 a r. r. was built to Saratoga, in 1835, to Utica, and in 1843, to Troy. In 1849 several plank roads were built, which since have been mostly abandoned.

DUANESBURGH⁹—was erected as a township, by patent, March 13, 1765, and it was first recognized as a town March 22, 1788. It lies in the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface consists of an upland, broken by the narrow valleys and gulleys of small streams. Schoharie Creek forms a portion of its w. boundary, and Normans Kil flows through the s. part. The hills that border upon these streams are steep, and in some places rocky. The other principal streams are Carrys Brook, Chuetenunda Creek, and Bozen Kil. Maria Pond and Featherstons Lake are 2 small bodies of water in the n. e. part, about 250 feet above the canal. The soil is principally a stiff, clay loam, with a slight intermixture of gravel. It is best adapted to pasturage. Duanesburgh (p. v.) contains about a dozen houses, Quaker Street¹⁰ (p. v.) 30, Mariaville¹¹ (p. v.) 20, and Bramans Corners (p. v.) 18. Eatons Corners is a hamlet. Large tracts in this town were purchased by different parties between 1736 and 1770,¹² but no active measures of settlement were taken till about the time of its organization in 1765. During that year Duane, who had become an extensive proprietor, con-

¹The Schenectady Morning Star, started Feb. 24, 1854, by W. M. Colbourne and W. N. Clark, was changed in 1854 to The Evening Star, &c., now published by W. M. Colbourne.

²The Schenectady Republican has been published since Sept. 1857, by Colbourne & London.

³The Schenectady Daily News was started in April, 1853, by Frederic Hoffman.

⁵Wm. Teller, Rens. Schermerhorn, Sweer Timson, Jan Van Epe, and Myndert Wemp were appointed trustees under this grant. The tract embraced the present city, and the towns of Glenville, Rotterdam, and part of Niskayuna.

⁶Previous to 1752 time was reckoned in England by "Old Style," the year commencing on the 25th of March. All dates previous to that time, between Jan. 1 and March 25, are reckoned in 1 year by "Old Style," and in the following year by "New Style."

⁷*Calden's Five Nations*, 3d ed., l. p. 120.

⁸This and West Chester were the only boroughs in the colony.

⁹The place was never visited by a hostile army after 1690. The colonial statutes contain frequent provisions for the rebuilding, repairs, and supplies of this fort.

¹¹This business was stopped by the repeal of the statute prohibiting the r. r. from carrying freight w. of this place.

¹²Named from James Duane, the principal proprietor. It was first joined with Schoharie, as "the united district of Duanesburgh and Schoharie." It was made a separate district, March 21, 1772. Mr. Duane took an active part in public affairs during the Revolution and the earlier years of the State Government, and was a liberal benefactor of the town.

¹³Boats and sleds, wagons, and sash and blinds, are manufactured here.

¹⁴Named from a daughter of James Duane.

¹⁵Among the purchasers were Thos. Freeman, in 1736, Timothy Bagley, in 1737, A. P. and William Cosby, in 1738, Walter Butler, in 1739, and Jonathan Brewer, in 1750. Wm. North, an officer of the Revolution, married a daughter of Duane and resided several years in this town.

tracted with 20 Germans from Penn., of whom 16 came on and made a permanent settlement.¹ The first church (Christ's Ch., Prot. E.) was formed Aug. 3, 1795, and the church edifice was erected by Judge Duane. Rev. David Belden was the first rector.²

GLENVILLE³—was formed from Schenectady, April 14, 1820. It is the only town in the co. s. of the Mohawk. The central and w. parts are occupied by rugged and wooded hills abruptly rising from the valley of the river to a height of 300 feet. The e. part is nearly level. The streams are Crabbs Kil, Chaugh-ta-noon-da, Aalplaats,⁴ and Jan Wemps Creeks, and Verf Kil. The soil among the hills is a stiff clay, underlain by hardpan, with an occasional outcrop of slate; and in the e. part it is a sandy and gravelly loam. The Mohawk intervals are very fertile, and are chiefly devoted to the culture of broomcorn. Glenville (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 20 houses, Scotia⁵ (p. v.) 2 churches and 266 inhabitants, Roseville 12 houses and a broom factory, and High Falls 13 houses, a grist mill, and woolen factory. Hoffmans Ferry⁶ (p. o.) is a hamlet and station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. East Glenville is a p. o. Bridges connect this town with Schenectady and Niskayuna. Settlements were made about 1665, and were among the earliest in the co.⁷ The Sanders House, in this town, was spared by the enemy when Schenectady was destroyed.⁸ There are 5 churches in town.⁹

NISKAYUNA¹⁰—was formed from Watervliet, (Albany co.) March 7, 1803. A part of Schenectady was annexed in 1853. It lies upon the Mohawk, in the e. part of the co. Its surface is mostly upland, terminating in steep bluffs upon the river valley. The intervals are very rich and productive. A strip of land about 1 mi. wide, extending back from the summits of the bluffs, has a hard, clay soil, and a considerable portion of it is swampy and unfit for cultivation. Further s. the soil is sandy. Watervliet Center (p. o.) is within the limits of this town. Niskayuna is a hamlet in the s. e. corner. The first settlements were made about 1640.¹¹ The canal crosses the Mohawk into this town upon a magnificent stone aqueduct.¹² There is 1 church (Ref. Prot. D.) in town.

PRINCETOWN¹³—was formed from Schenectady, March 26, 1798. It lies a little w. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of a broken upland, gently descending toward the s. r. The streams are Normans Kil in the s. and Zantzeo Kil in the s.¹⁴ The soil is a heavy clay loam, underlain by hardpan, and is best adapted to grazing. Princetown (p. o.) is a hamlet. The town was chiefly conveyed to Geo. Ingoldsbj and Aaron Bradt, in 1737. Wm. Corry afterward became owner, and formed a settlement, which was long known as "Corrybush." The town was thinly settled at the time of the Revolution. The Princetown Academy, a Presb. institution, was opened here, on an extensive scale, in 1853, and was discontinued in 1856. There are a Presb. and a Ref. Prot. D. church in town.

ROTTERDAM—was formed from Schenectady, April 14, 1820. A part of the city was annexed in 1853. It lies near the center of the co., upon the s. bank of the Mohawk. The surface consists of a broken, hilly region in the s. w., a level interval extending from the center toward the s., and a high plain in the e. The soil upon the w. hills is a tough clay, underlain by slate, which frequently crops out. The central valley or plain, 5 mi. in extent, was called by the Dutch the "Boulandt." The soil is a deep alluvium. The e. plateau is sandy and barren. Rotterdam, Mohawkville, and Factoryville are hamlets.¹⁵ Settlements were first made about 1661.¹⁶ The first church was organized Aug. 29, 1800; Rev. Thos. Romeyn was the first pastor.¹⁷

² The name in town 5 other churches: Cameron in, Bap. Univ., Presb. and Quaker. ³ Named from the original patentee, A. J. H. 1667. ⁴ Locally pronounced "Steeley."

⁷ On a former occasion a party of French, sent against the Mohawks, became reduced to the extremity of want, and were obliged to seek assistance of the English. The kindness shown them by Mr. Sanders was remembered, and his house was spared. A stone house built in 1713 is still owned by the Sanders family.

⁹ Said to be a corruption of Niskayuna, or Niskayuna, by which it is known on the old maps. The name is also commonly "extensive corn flats." The term was also applied to portions of Watervliet and Half Moon, in the absence of the whites this place was occupied by a tribe of Indians, known as the "Conestogons."—Reber's H. C. B. C. C. N. Y. L. 1785.

¹⁰ Among the early settlers were Clites, Van der Aalplaats, Groves, Jamesons, Barce, Jamies, and Van Baskel.

¹¹ By an act of 1806, Alexander Alexander was authorized to build a dam at this place.

¹² Named from John Prater, a member of the Assembly in Albany co. at the time of the formation of this town.

¹³ Upon this stream, on the farm of Elmer D. McGill, is a cascade 60 feet high, and from this point to the Mohawk are numerous rapids and cascades.

¹⁵ At this place is a town and this factory.

¹⁶ There are 3 churches in town: 2 Ref. Prot. D. and 1 M. E.

SCHENECTADY CITY—was patented, with certain municipal rights, Nov. 4, 1684; chartered as a borough Oct. 23, 1765; incorp. as a district, March 24, 1772, as a town, March 7, 1788, and as a city, March 26, 1798. Princetown was set off in 1798, Rotterdam and Glenville in 1820, and parts of Niskayuna and Rotterdam in 1853.¹ It is situated on the Mohawk, and on the borders of one of the finest intervals in the State. A considerable amount of trade is carried on in the city by means of the canal and the railroads that center here; but the people are more largely engaged in manufactures.² The engine houses and repair shops of the N. Y. C. R. R. Co. are very extensive; and one of the largest locomotive manufactories in the country is located here.³

This city is especially noted as the seat of Union College. This institution was incorp. by the regents, Feb. 25, 1795, and received its name from the cooperation and union of several religious denominations in its foundation.⁴ A fund was first raised by private subscription to erect the necessary buildings and to defray the expenses of opening the school;⁵ and this was increased by the avails of several lotteries authorized by the legislature,⁶ by grants of land and money from the State, and by private donations. The total amount received from the State, up to 1822, for permanent investment, was $331,612 13. In a will dated Dec. 28, 1855, Dr. Nott, the president of the college, bequeathed to the trustees $555,000 for specific purposes and an additional fund for miscellaneous expenses.⁷ The funds thus bequeathed were derived from the profits of certain investments of college funds, and amounts from other sources, which had been employed for the purpose of creating a fund for the endowment of the institution. The first college building was erected in the city;⁸ but in 1814 a tract of land upon an eminence e. of the city was purchased, and the two principal buildings were erected.⁹ The site commands an extensive view of the city, the river, and the valley. The faculty of the college now consists of a president, 12 professors, 1 lecturer, and 3 tutors. The total number of students is 420, and has not materially varied from this number for a great number of years, the junior and senior classes being invariably larger than those that preceded them. A considerable number of students derive aid from the State fund, which is extended to students of limited means without reference to the profession they intend to follow. The college has received from E. C. Delavan, Esq., a magnificent donation of minerals and shells, known as the "Wheatley Collection," which was purchased for this purpose at a cost of $10,000. Departments of Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry have been organized, and the facilities which they afford are of the most ample kind.

The Public Schools are under 8 commissioners, elected once in 2 years. There were, in 1857, 9 school districts, employing 3 male and 22 female teachers. The number of children between 4 and 21, was 3065, of whom 1729, or 56 per cent., attended the public schools.¹⁰

The first settlement was made in 1661, as already noticed.¹¹ As this was an advance frontier settlement, the compact part, at an early period, was enclosed by palisades. In 1690 the enclosure

² The manufacturing establishments of the city consist of the mill, machine shops, locomotive works, a cotton factory, 3 carriage shops, an agricultural implement factory, 3 turning and machine shops, sawmill, 2 brick works, 1 brick yard, 2 cabinet shops, 4 founderies, a planing mill, pump factory, foundry, 2 tool factories, a vice and spring factory, and a great variety of other non-ferrous shops.

⁴ Rev. Wm. Andrus opened the first grammar school, in 1771; and before the close of the year he proposed to change it to an academy. The Consistory of the Ref. Prot. D. church erected a small academy in 1785. The Schenectady Academy was incorp. Jan. 29, 1793, and was merged in the college in 1795. Rev. John Blair Smith was the first President. He was succeeded in June, 1793, by Rev. Jonathan Edwards, who remained until his death in Aug. 1801. Rev. Jonathan Maxcy was next elected president, and continued till 1804, when he resigned, and was succeeded by Rev. Eliphalet Nott, the present venerable president of the College.

⁵ In 1779, the inhabitants of the northern part of the State petitioned for the incorp. of a college, but without success. The petition was renewed in 1791, but did not succeed. In 1794 another effort was made, and a subscription of $7065 was raised from 39 persons in Albany, and of $3425 from 231 persons in Schenectady, for an endowment. This sum was afterward largely increased by subscription. The location was fixed at Schenectady, it is said, chiefly through the influence of Gen. Schuyler, and because of its then central location.

⁶ Lotteries were authorized in 1805, 1814, and 1822.—Mansell's Ann. of Albany, VII, 126; Semi-Centennial Celebration of Union Coll.

⁷ The items of this bequest are as follows:—
 $225,000 for 9 professorships, with a salary of $1500 each.
 $60,000 for 6 assistant professorships, at $600 each.
 $60,000 for an astronomical observatory.
 $20,000 for 60 auxiliary scholarships, of $10 and $12 per term.
 $60,000 for 60 prize scholarships for undergraduates, of $15 and $18 per term; in certain cases to be increased to $24.
 $45,000 for 9 scholarships for graduates or fellows, of $200 each.
 $20,000 for a cemetery.
 $10,000 for apparatus.
 $5,000 for textbooks.
 $20,000 for an eclectic library.
 $5,000 for a geological and mineralogical cabinet.
 $5,000 for a historical cabinet.
 $10,000 for a lecture fund.

The miscellaneous fund was left discretionary with the trustees to fill deficiencies and extend the operation of any of the foregoing objects. At the time of this gift the greater part of the funds were invested in real estate in Greenpoint village, opposite N. York City.

⁸ This building, formerly known as "West College," was sold to the city, and, with an adjoining building, accommodates the 10 departments of the public schools of the city.

¹⁰ Total receipts, $14,423.06; total expenses, $14,423.06. Volumes in district libraries, 3045.

was in form of an oblong rectangle, with gates at the ends. The people, however, felt so secure that the gates were habitually left open, and no guard was kept; and hence it was easily entered by the enemy on the memorable 9th of Feb. 1690, N. S. The lives of 60 old persons and children were spared from the massacre. The settlement recovered slowly from the disaster, and not until the close of King William's War did it receive any considerable accessions. A new fort was built in May, 1690, which was garrisoned for many years. Another fort was built in 1755, and another in 1780.¹ The old fort stood at the intersection of Ferry and Front Sts. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was organized in 1684, and the building was erected on the s. end of Church St. in 1685. It was burned in 1690; and a new building was erected, about 1702, on the site of the present church, corner of Union and Church Sts.² St. George's Church (Prot. E.) was organized, in 1735, by Rev. H. Barclay, incorp. in 1766, and an edifice erected in 1768.³ The first mail was brought to the town April 3, 1763.⁴ The first English school was opened, under the care of Rev. Henry Barclay, in 1710.⁵ The Vale-Cemetery Association was formed Feb. 25, 1858.⁶ The population of the city has slowly and steadily increased, although, from the setting off of portions of its territory, the census reports for some periods show an apparent decrease.⁷

¹ By an act of 1780, all the people living within a half mile of the Dutch church were assessed, in labor and materials, for the erection of defensive works—the work to be done under the direction of the field officers and magistrates.

² Rev. Peter Tasselmaeker, the pastor and first teacher, was killed, and all his papers were destroyed.

THIS county was formed from Albany and Otsego, April 6, 1795.¹ A small part of Greene was annexed in 1836. It is an interior co., lying s. e. of the center of the State, is centrally distant 35 mi. from Albany, and contains 675 sq. mi. Its surface is an upland, broken by mountains in the s. and by hills in the center and n. A northerly branch of the Catskill Mts. lies along the s. border, the highest summits of which are 3,000 ft. above tide. From them irregular spurs extend northward, occupying the greater part of the co. Many of the summits along the e. and w. borders are 800 to 1,000 ft. above the valleys and about 2,000 ft. above tide. In the s. the hills are generally rounded and are arable to their summits; but in the center and s. the declivities are steep and in many places precipitous. The high ridge along the e. border, and extending into Albany co., is known as the Hellebark Mts.

The hills derive their general features from the rocks that underlie them. The extreme n. part of the co. is terraced like the limestone region farther w. Toward the s. the hills become more steep; and in the shaly region they are broken by deep, irregular ravines. In many places the hills bordering upon the streams are 1,000 ft. high and in places very steep. Schoharie Creek flows n. e. through the co., a little e. of the center. It receives as tributaries Foxes Creek, Stony Brook, Little Schoharie Creek, Keyzers, Platter, and Manor Kils from the e., and Cripplebush, Cobles, Line, Panther, West, and Mine Kils from the w. West and Punch Kils are tributaries of Cobles Kil. Charlotte River, a branch of the Susquehanna, takes its rise in the w. part, and Catskill Creek in the s. e. part, having its source in a marsh called the Vlaie, Utsyanthia² and Summit Lakes, two small ponds, are the only bodies of water in the co. The former is 1,900 ft. and the latter 2,150 ft. above tide.

The rocks in the co., commencing upon the n. border and appearing successively toward the s., are those belonging to the Hudson River group, Clinton group, Onondaga salt group, Helderbergh series, Hamilton group, Portage and Chemung group, and the Catskill group. The limestones are cavernous; and the minerals which they afford are particularly interesting to mineralogists.³ Drift is scattered over the co. to a limited extent. Waterlime is found, but is not now manufactured.

The soils are principally derived from the disintegration of the underlying rocks. In the n. the soil is a productive, clay loam, and in the center and s. it is a clay and sandy loam, the latter predominating upon the s. hills. The alluvial flats along Schoharie Creek are unusually fertile.

The co. is eminently an agricultural region. Spring grains are largely produced. Hops are cultivated in the w. part, and broomcorn upon the Schoharie Flats. Dairying is the principal business in the s. part. Very little manufacturing is done, except such as is customary in an agricultural region.

The county seat is located at the village of Schoharie.⁴ The courthouse is a fine edifice built of blue limestone, located near the center of the village. The jail is a stone building, situated in rear of the courthouse. The clerk's office is a small, fireproof building, upon the courthouse lot, nearly in front. The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 160 acres in Middleburgh, 5 mi. s. w. of the courthouse. The average number of inmates is 60, supported at a weekly cost of 75 cents each. This institution seems to be well managed and much above the average of similar institutions in the State.

The Albany & Susquehanna R. R. is located along the valleys of Schoharie Creek and Cobles

¹ Schoharie is said to signify "drift wood." At a place 1/2 mi. above Middleburgh Bridge the Line Kil and Little Schoharie flow into Schoharie Creek from opposite sides; and here drift wood is said to have accumulated in large quantities, forming a natural bridge.—Brown's Hist. Schoharie.

The original Indian name was To-wes-sche-har; and it has been written Sheny, Skihary, Schughharie, &c.

² Utsyanthia was the N. E. corner of the Hardenburgh Patent, and a distinguished landmark in early records.

Kil, through Esperance, Schoharie, Cobleskill, and Richmondville.¹ Several turnpikes and lines of plank road extend across the co.²

About thirty years previous to the advent of the whites, a number of Indians belonging to the Mohawks, Mohicans, Delawares, Tuscaroras, and Oneidas united together, formed the Schoharie tribe, and took up their abode along Schoharie Creek.³ Their principal chief was Ka-righon-don-tee, who had been a prisoner of the French in Canada and had married a Mohawk woman. This tribe was subordinate to the Six Nations. They could bring into the field about 600 warriors, and in the wars that ensued they steadily espoused the cause of the British. At an early period, with the aid of the Colonial Government, they erected several strongholds to protect themselves from the attacks of the Canada Indians. A band of 200 Indians remained in the valley, at peace with the settlers, until the commencement of the Revolution. Efforts were made to induce them to remain neutral during the war; but the offers of the British were so tempting that at last they took up arms against their neighbors. Previous to this a pestilence had swept off the greater part of the tribe, though the whites were not in the least affected by it.

The first white settlement was made by a colony of German Palatinates, in 1711. These people had previously settled at East and West Camp, on the Hudson. Their number is estimated at 600 to 700. They settled in 7 clusters, or villages, each under a leader or head man, from whom the Dorf, or village, was usually named.⁴ The Dutch soon after began a settlement at "Vroomansdorp," on the w. side of the creek, 2 or 3 mi. above the German settlement.⁵ The Palatinates at first did not secure a patent for the lands they occupied, and a short time after their settlement Nicholas Bayard appeared as agent of the British Government, and offered to give the settlers deeds for their lands; but he was assailed by a mob and was obliged to flee for his life. Upon reaching Schenectady he sent back word that for an ear of corn each he would give a clear title to the lands occupied by each; but this offer was rejected. He returned to Albany and sold the tract to 5 persons at that place.⁶ A sheriff, named Adams, was sent to arrest some of the trespassers; but no sooner was his business known than he was assailed by a mob and ridden upon a rail. For a considerable time after this outrage none of the German settlers dared visit Albany; but after a time they ventured to do so, and were at once arrested and thrown into jail. They were at length released on making a written acknowledgment of the outrage they had perpetrated.⁷ The settlers at length sent an embassy, consisting of Conrad Weiser, — Casselman, and another, to England to petition the king for redress. The ship that took them out carried also a statement of the outrages, and the ambassadors were at once imprisoned; but after a time they were set at liberty and permitted to return. Weiser was so chagrined at the result of the controversy that soon after, with about 60 families, he emigrated to Talpehoeton, Berks co., Penn. Other families removed to German Flats and others to Stone Arabia.⁸ Peter Vrooman, with several Dutch families,⁹ perma-

² The principal turnpikes in the co. in early times were the Great Western, extending to Cherry Valley, built in 1802; and the Charlotte River Turnpike, built in 1801. The latter formed the great thoroughfare to the settlements in Delaware co. and adjacent regions. The plank road project was pretty thoroughly tried, and has been abandoned after a sacrifice of nearly all the capital invested.

³ The Mohicans principally settled near the mouth of the Little Schoharie; and the largest settlement of the others was at "Vroomansdorp," in the present town of Fulton.

⁵ Adam Vrooman, from Schenectady, obtained a patent for 1,100 acres, Aug. 26, 1714. His tract was afterward found to contain 1,400 acres. It embraced the flats along the creek in the present town of Fulton, except Wilder Hook, at which place was an Indian castle and settlement. His son Peter, for whom it was bought, built a house, planted corn, and the first winter left the premises in charge of a man named Truxy, and a negro man and his wife. Truxy was murdered, and the negro and his wife were arrested, tried at Albany, and burnt alive; but years after, one Moore, a resident of "Beers," De W., confessed that he and the negro man committed the deed, and that the woman was innocent. — Narrative Schoharie, p. 26.

⁶ The purchasers were Mynder S. Jansker, Peter Van Brugh, Robert Livingston, Jr., John Schoddratt, and Henry Weblman. They received a patent Nov. 3, 1714, for 10,000 acres, which was designed to include the flats from "Vroomansdorp" to Mount Senary co. line; but on being surveyed by Lewis Morris, Jr., and Andrus Coeyman, it was found that the flats on Fox Creek and at the mouth of Cobleskill were not included and these lands were secured by the surveyors. In a short time Morris and Coeyman joined interest with the five proprietors, and the company became known as the "Seven Partners." Land suits for partition and settlement were a pestilence in 1819, 20, 21, 22, and 23.

⁷ After this time a large number of settlers took leave of the proprietors, thus abandoning their claims to the lands.

⁸ Among those who removed to the Mohawk was Elias Garlock, the first and long the only settler in the sch. town.

nently located upon his patent in 1727. The German and Dutch races long remained distinct. The Dutch were generally wealthier than the more hardy and laborious Germans, and preferred to contract marriages with those of their own class in the older Dutch settlements. They often kept slaves, while the Germans seldom had further assistance than such as their own households, of both sexes, might afford. The Germans, by intermarriage, became a "family of cousins;" and they were united by many ties of common interest. Industry and frugality gradually brought them to a level, and long acquaintance has almost entirely obliterated these hereditary distinctions of society. Upon the approach of the Revolution, a part of the people espoused the cause of the British; but the majority were ardent patriots. In many cases members of the same family were engaged on opposite sides, and the struggle assumed all the horrors of a civil war, aggravated by Indian barbarities. A Council of Safety was organized in 1774, of which Johannes Ball was chairman. During the war several conflicts took place within the limits of the co., and the people were continually exposed to the attacks of small scalping parties of the Indians.¹

At the close of the war a large number of families removed to Canada, and their property was confiscated.² Several Tories and Indians who had been active during the war returned at its close and were waylaid and shot. Others, warned by these examples, fled the country.³ Since that period little of especial interest has occurred in the history of the co. In 1845 and '46, in common with the surrounding regions, this co. partook largely in the anti-rent excitement,—though no actual violence took place within its limits.⁴ Within the last ten years, a mania for building large seminaries, far beyond the wants of the people, has spread through the co. The speculation has proved a ruinous one, and the entire amount of capital invested in the enterprises has been sunk.⁵

Three weekly newspapers are now published in the co.⁶

1774. Council of Safety formed.
 1776. Col. James Huston enlisted Tories at Loomenburgh.
 1777. Schoharie militia called into service under Captain Hager. Col. Huston and 20 others were arrested, and Huston was hung.
 " Aug. 10.—Engagement between an American force under Col. John Harper and the Tories under Capt. McDonald at Brakabeen. The Tories were defeated and fled. Capt. Geo. Mann, one of their number, remained secretly in the vicinity until the succeeding spring, when he delivered himself up to the authorities. He never afterward joined the enemy, and his property was not confiscated.
 " In the autumn of this year the middle fort was built, and the upper and lower forts were begun. The lower fort is the old stone church, lately changed to an arsenal.
 1778. May 8.—Battle of Cobles Kill, in which Captain Patrick and 22 men were killed.
 " July.—Lieut. Col. Wm. Butler, with 3 companies of Morgan's Riflemen, was stationed at Schoharie. Several Tories recruiting for the British were shot.
 1779. Aug.—Col. Butler joined Sullivan's expedition against the Western Indians.
 1780. Aug. 9.—A party of 73 Indians and 3 Tories made an attack upon the settlements at Vroomansland, killed 5, and took 30 prisoners.
 " Oct. 16.—Sir John Johnson, with 500 troops and a large body of Tories and Indians, invaded the Schoharie settlements from the S. The upper fort was garrisoned by 100 men, under Capt. Jacob Hager and Joseph Harper; the middle fort by 350 men, under Maj. Woodsey; and the lower fort by 150 men, under Maj. Becker. The middle fort was attacked, and the commander, Major Woodsey, being an arrant coward, wished to surrender it, but a soldier, named Murphy, fired upon the flag which was sent with a summons to surrender, and after an ineffectual attack, Sir John abandoned the attempt. The dwellings, barns, stacks, and all the property of the inhabitants were destroyed, though but few persons lost their lives.
 1781. Early in the year blockhouses were built at "Kneifshans Dorf," "Hartmans Dorf," and Cobleskill.
 1781. July 9.—An engagement took place in Sharon, 2 mi. E. of the springs, between a party of Tories and Indians under Dextader, and an American force under Col. Willott, in which the former were defeated, with a loss of 40 killed.

1781. July.—Several persons at Middleburgh were surprised and taken prisoners while harvesting. One escaped, and the others were carried prisoners to Canada.
 " Oct.—Three men at Christian Mynder's house, in Sharon, were taken prisoners by a small party of Indians, and carried to Canada.
 " Oct. 24.—A party of 60 or 70 Indians, under Brant, entered Vroomansland and commenced their work of plunder. Isaac Vrooman was murdered. A party of Americans, under Capt. Hager, rallied to their assistance, and the Indians retreated. A sharp skirmish took place at Utsuntha Lakes, but a part of the American force, under Capt. Hale fled at the commencement, and the remainder were obliged to retreat. Hale was arrested in his retreat by the threat of being shot; but the enemy had escaped.
 1782. July 26.—Several Tories and 22 Indians made an incursion into Foxes Creek Valley for the purpose of capturing Maj. Becker; but the Maj. and family defended the house with such vigor that the Indians retreated. Several persons were murdered by the Indians, and several of the latter were shot.
 1784. Dec. 16.—Many persons who had been taken to Canada were released on Lake Champlain, and returned to their homes.

² In Canada, opposite St. Lawrence co., are many families who claim relationship to inhabitants of this co. They were refugees to whom grants of land were made by the British Government.

⁵ Of 9 academies built in this co. 3 have been burned, 3 are "to let," and 3 are still open.

The True American was commenced at Schoharie in Dec. 1809, by T. M. Tallman. It was discontinued in 1812 or 1813.

The Schoharie Budget was commenced in June, 1817, by Derick Van Veghten. In 1820 its name was changed to BLONHEIM¹—was formed from Schoharie, March 17, 1797. Jefferson was taken in 1818, and a part of Gilboa in 1848. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. Schoharie Creek flows s., through the center, receiving West Kill and several smaller streams from the w. A wide alluvial flat extends along its course. The streams generally are bordered by steep hills rising to a height of 200 to 300 ft. The soil is principally a clayey loam. Patchin Hollow.—Near Blenheim, upon Schoharie Creek, contains 2 churches, a tannery, and 41 houses. The first settlements were made by Dutch and Palatinates, before 1761; but the settlers were driven out during the late war. The present race of settlers came mostly from New England, soon after the close of the war. Rev. Stephen Tenn was the first preacher.²

BROOME³—was formed March 17, 1797, as "Beistol." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A part of Conesville was taken off in 1836, a part of Gilboa in 1848, and parts of Middleburgh were annexed Feb. 9 and Oct. 5, 1849. It lies upon the e. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. The highest summits are 350 to 500 ft. above the valleys. Catskill Creek takes its rise in the s. part, and several branches of Schoharie Creek drain the s. and w. portions.⁴ The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Livingstonville. (p. v.) in the e. part, s. of the center, contains 2 churches, a sawmill, gristmill, and sash factory. Pop. 150.⁵ Franklinton. (p. v.) in the s. part, contains a church and 190 inhabitants. Smithton is a hamlet, near the s. line. The first settlements were made before the Revolution.⁶ There are 6 churches in town.⁷

CARLEISLE⁸—was formed from Cobleskill and Sharon, March 31, 1807.⁹ It is the central town upon the s. border of the co. Its surface consists principally of an immense ridge lying between the valleys of the Mohawk and Cobles Kill, the summit of which is 800 to 1000 ft. above the former stream.¹⁰ This ridge descends to the s. by a series of terraces formed by the different geological strata, and on the s. by gradual slopes following the general dip of the rocks. The streams are small brooks. The soil is principally a clay loam. Hops are extensively cultivated.

The Schoharie Republican. It soon after passed into the hands of Peter Keyser, Lemuel Cuthbert, A. A. Keyser, Wm. H. Underwood, Wm. H. Gallup, P. D. Lawyer, and — Bossiter have since been interested in its publication. It is now published by J. B. Hall.

The Observer was commenced at Schoharie in Oct. 1818. In 1819 it passed into the hands of Solomon Baker, in 1820 to Baker & Fishcut in 1822 it was again in the hands of Mr. Baker, and was soon after discontinued.

The Evangelical Luminary was commenced at Schoharie Jan. 1, 1824, by Rev. Geo. A. Luther and L. Cuthbert. It was continued about 1 year.

The Lutheran Magazine, Inc. was commenced in Feb. 1827, by the Western Conference of Lutheran Ministers, L. Cuthbert, printer, and was published for some years.

The Schoharie Free Press was commenced June 9, 1829, by Duncan McDonald. In 1832 it was removed to Esperance and its name changed to

The Esperance Sentinel and Schoharie and Montgomery Reporter. It was discontinued in 1835 or '36.

The Gem was published a short time in 1837.

The Schoharie Patriot was commenced Feb. 13, 1838, by Peter Mix. It is now published by him and his son, S. H. Mix.

The Star was commenced in April, 1838, by S. H. Mix, then a schoolboy.

The Sun was commenced as an opposition paper in May, 1838, by D. L. Underwood another. Both of about the same age. These papers were about 3 by 4 inches. Early in 1839 they were enlarged. On the issue of Nov. 5 of the Sun it went down never to rise again, and the Star ceased to twinkle after the 12th number.

The Hung Town, a campaign paper, was published from Aug. 12 1840, to Nov. 11 following, by Wm. H. Gallup.

The Helderberg Advertiser was commenced in 1841 by Wm. H. Gallup. Its name was changed in 1843 to

The Guardian of the Fall, and it was discontinued in 1 year.

The American Liberator was commenced at Lee-ville Jan. 7, 1847 by J. D. Lawyer. It was soon after discontinued.

The Schoharie County Sentinel was commenced at Cobleskill Jan. 22, 1852, by Hiram C. Pugh. It was published a short time by Chas. Cleveland, and by Williams & Knister, and was soon after purchased by J. B. Hall, who merged it with the Schoharie Republican.

The Charlotteville Journal was commenced at Charlotteville in 1854 by Furman & Brown. In 1855 John Brown became sole proprietor, and removed it to Cobleskill and changed the name to

The Cobleskill Journal. It has since been discontinued.

The Acad.—Seminar, was commenced at Schoharie by the students of the academy in 1856. It was soon discontinued.

The Schoharie County Jeffersonian was commenced at Cobleskill in 1856 by Walter Freeman, and is still published.

¹ Named in the Blenheim Patent, a portion of which lies in the s. part of this town.

² Hendrick Mattice, the pioneer, built a mill on West Kill at Patchin Hollow. He became a capitalist and went to Canada, Henry Fittler, Lambert Stenberg, Wm. Krook, Isaac Smith, Banks Moorhouse, George Martin, and Henry Rizer were early settlers. Freetag Patchin settled in 1768, built the second mill, and gave name to the village. Gen. Patchin had been taken prisoner by the Indian and suffered extremely at the hands. The first inn was kept by H. Fittler; the first store, Thomas Cuyler, in 1806; and the first tannery was built in 1825, by Jones & Lathrop. Jacob Sutherland, afterward Judge of the U. S. Supreme Court, resided several years at North Lee-ville.

⁴ Named from John Broome, Lieut. Gov. of the State at the time of the formation of the town. Scott's Patent of 67,840 acres, granted Jan. 2, 1779, and a part of Isaac L. Key's Patent, are within the limits of this town.

⁷ Derck Van Dyck settled before the Revolution at Lee-ville. — Gulliver, a full-blooded, Allen Fair, John and Asa Bushnell, Geo. and Hezekiah Watson, E. C. and Wm. Keen, Geo. Burtwick, Timothy Kelley, Joseph Gulliver, and Peter Chapman settled previous to 1770. The first known settler was that of Francis Kelso, in April, 1761, and the first of 1800, that of Ezra Chapman, Aug. 1794. George W. C. and Wm. C. began the erection of a sawmill in 1796, and a gristmill in 1802, as in —

⁸ M. L., Meth. Prot., Pap. and E. P. C.

⁹ This town contains 100 papers of New York City, to wit, Livingston's, Van Brossier's, Michael's, and the 8000 Paper Patents.

¹⁰ A cone of elevation near the s. line is well known. It is a cone some 100 ft. of the highest points in the country, only 1000 ft. from Hamilton in a direct line.

Several caves are found in the limestone regions in various parts of the town.¹ Argusville,² (p. v.) in the s. w. corner, upon the line of Sharon, contains 3 churches, a sawmill, gristmill, tannery, and 35 houses. Carlisle, (p. v.) upon the Western Turnpike, in the n. part, contains a church, boarding school,³ and foundry. Pop. 107. Grovenors Corners, (p. o.) in the s. e. corner, contains a church and 10 houses. The first settlement was made in the s. w. part, about 1760.⁴ The first church was formed by Dr. Simon Hosack, of Johnstown, in 1803 or '04.⁵

COBLESKILL⁶—was formed from Schoharie, March 17, 1797. The line of Sharon was changed March 15, 1799. A part of Carlisle was taken off in 1807, a part of Summit in 1819, and Richmondville in 1845. It is an interior town, lying n. of the center of the co. Its surface is principally a hilly upland, broken by the deep valley of Cobles Kil, which extends e. and w. through the center. The highest points, on the n. and s. borders, are 600 to 900 ft. above the valley. The soil upon the hills is a sandy loam, and in the valley an alluvium. Cobleskill, (p. v.) in the w. part, contains 3 churches, a sawmill, gristmill, planing mill, and tannery. Pop. 364. Cobleskill Center (p. v.) contains a church, sawmill, and 20 dwellings. Lawyersville,⁷ (p. v.) in the n. w. corner, contains 3 churches, 2 sawmills, and 25 dwellings. East Cobleskill,⁸ (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, contains 2 churches and 21 dwellings. Barnerville, (p. v.) near the center, contains a church, gristmill, clothing works, and 16 dwellings. The first settlement was made about 1750.⁹ The first land grants were made about 1730. During the Revolution the people mostly espoused the cause of the colonists, and in consequence were subjected to constant incursions from the Indians. A regular engagement took place between a company of militia and a large Indian force under Brant, May 31, 1778. The Americans were defeated, and about one-half of their number were killed.¹⁰ Howe's Cave, near the e. line, is a place of considerable interest.¹¹ The census reports 7 churches in town.¹²

CONESVILLE¹³—was formed from Broome and Durham, (Greene co.) March 3, 1836. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is generally a hilly upland, mountainous along the e. border. The highest summits are 1,600 to 2,000 ft. above the valleys. Schoharie Creek forms a small portion of the w. boundary; and Manor Kil flows w. through near the center. Upon the latter stream, near its mouth, is a cascade of 60 ft. The valleys of these streams are bordered by high and often nearly precipitous hills. Strykersville, (West Conesville p. o.) upon Manor Kil near its mouth, contains a church, tannery, and 20 houses; and Stone Bridge, (Conesville p. o.) near the center, a church and 10 houses. Manorkill (p. o.) is a hamlet. The first settlement was made by Ury Richtmeyer, in 1764.¹⁴ There are 3 churches in town; 2 M. E. and Ref. Prot. D.

ESPERANCE¹⁵—was formed from Schoharie, April 4, 1846. A small portion was annexed to Schoharie in 1850. It is the e. town on the n. border of the co. Its surface consists of two ridges, extending e. and w. across the town, separated by the valley of Schoharie Creek. The

² Named from the Albany Argus, at the time the principal paper taken in town. Formerly known as "Malick's Mills."

⁴ Andrew Luarks, Conradt Enche, Philip Hooker, and Peter Young were among the first that located in town. The late Judge Brown, author of a small local history, settled at an early period. John C. McNeill, Wm. Caldwell, John Sweetman, Aaron Howard, Tomm's Van Camp, Mathias Cass, and Ludowyck Pruiner were also early settlers.

⁵ There are now 5 churches in town; Bap., Evan. Luth., Presb., Univ., and Union.

⁶ Named from — Cobel, who built a mill near Central Bridge at an early period. Cobles Kil was called by the Indians Ots-ga-ra-goo.

⁷ Named from Lawrence Lawyer, said to have been the first settler in town.

⁸ Locally known as "Punchhill."

ing in the flames. The delay occasioned by the resistance made at this house gave the remainder of the fugitives and the inhabitants time to escape. The whole number of Americans killed was 22; and it is supposed that the Indians lost about an equal number. Fort Du Bois, a strong blockhouse, stood in this town during the war.

¹⁵ The town was named from the village. The site of the latter was bought by Gen. Wm. North in 1809, laid out into lots, and named by him from a French word signifying Il ps.

highest parts are 600 to 800 ft. above the valley. The soil is principally a clayey loam. Esperance, (p. v.) upon the e. line, was incorp. April 21, 1832. It contains 2 churches, a paper mill, gristmill, sawmill, and foundery. Pop. 322. Stoansville,¹ (p. v.) near the center, contains 2 churches, 3 sawmills, and 2 gristmills. Pop. 252. The first settlements were made by Palatinates, about 1711.² There are 4 churches in town: 2 Bap., Presb., and M. E.

FULTON³—was formed from Middleburgh, April 15, 1828. It is the central town in the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the ravines of the streams. Schoharie Creek⁴ flows s. through the e. part, receiving Panther Creek from the w. The highest summits are 1,000 ft. above the valleys. The hills next to the creek are conical and often precipitous; but further w. they assume a rounded form and are bounded by more gradual slopes. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Brakabeen,⁵ (p. v.) upon Schoharie Creek, in the s. part, contains a church, gristmill, foundery, 2 sawmills, and 200 inhabitants. Fultonham, (p. v.) near the n. line, contains a church, gristmill, 2 sawmills, and 25 dwellings; and West Fulton (p. v.) a church, sawmill, gristmill, and 16 dwellings. Watsonville is a small village, in the e. part; and Petersburgh a hamlet, in the s. part. The first settlements were made by Dutch and Palatinates, about 1711. The upper fort of the Schoharie during the Revolution was situated upon the present site of Fultonham. The census reports 5 churches in town,⁶ Gov. Wm. C. Bouck was born in this town Jan. 7, 1786, and died here in April, 1859.

GILBOA—was formed from Blenheim and Broome, March 16, 1848. It is the central town upon the s. border of the co. Its surface is a mountainous upland, broken by deep ravines. Schoharie Creek⁷ flows s. through the center, receiving Platter Kil from the e. and Mine Kil from the w. The streams are bordered by steep hillsides rising to a height of 2,000 to 3,000 ft. above tide. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Gilboa, (p. v.) upon Schoharie Creek, contains 2 churches, a private seminary, cotton factory,⁸ gristmill, tannery, and 566 inhabitants. South Gilboa, (p. v.) in the w. part, contains a church and 20 dwellings. West Gilboa, (p. o.) in the s. w. part, is a hamlet. Mackies Corners, (Broome Center p. o.) in the n. part, contains a church and 15 dwellings. Mine Kil Falls is a p. o. Settlement was commenced in 1764, by Matthew and Jacob Dise.⁹ The first preacher was Rev. Joel Peeldes, settled in 1808.¹⁰

JEFFERSON—was formed from Blenheim, Feb. 12, 1803. A part of Summit was taken off in 1819. It is on the s. line of the co., near the s. w. corner. Its surface is a hilly upland, the principal summits being about 1,000 ft. above the valleys and 2,000 ft. above tide. Mine Hill, in the extreme s. part, is estimated to be 3,200 ft. above tide. A high ridge extending s. e. and s. w. through near the center forms the watershed between Delaware and Mohawk Rivers. Utsyantha Lake is a small sheet of water on the s. line.¹¹ The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Jefferson, (p. v.) near the center, contains 2 churches and 25 houses. Morseville, in the ¹ Named from John R. Sloan, an early settler. Many years since, near this place, by the side of a path leading to Fort Hunter, was a stone heap thrown up by the Indians, who, from a superstition among them, never failed to add a stone to the pile whenever they passed it. The Rev. Gideon Hawley, who passed it in 1763, relates (Misc. Coll. II) that this heap had been accumulating for ages, and that his native guide could give no other reason for the observance than that his father practiced it and enjoined it upon him. He did not like to talk about it; and the missionary believed that the custom was a religious offering to the unknown God. Others state that a tradition fixes this as the spot where a murder was committed. The heap gave name to the "Stone Heap Patent," granted to John Fowler and others Sept. 15, 1770. The heap was 4 rods long, 1 or 2 wide, and 10 to 15 ft. high, and consisted of small, flat stones. The covenant-owner many years since built the material into a stone wall, and no trace of this curious monument of Indian superstition now remains. Similar stone heaps have been noticed in other sections of the State. The path that led by this pile was that taken by Sir John Johnson and his men from Schoharie to the Mohawk in Oct. 1789.—Summit's Schoharie, p. 632.

13, 1770; Hendrick Hager's, 900 acres, Dec. 1, 1768; part of John Butler's, of 100 acres, and of Isaac Levy's tract of 4,000 acres, surveyed in July, 1770. Vrooman's Land Indian deeds are still extant, one of which is dated Aug. 22, 1711. Among the early settlers were Peter, son of Adam Vrooman, the patentee; Cornelius and Bartholomew Vrooman, Nicholas Peck, Adam Brown, Tomis Vrooman, Michael Brown. — Knoekskern, Eric Becker, and Stephen Young, on the w.; and William Bouck the patentee, with his sons, Johannes E., Christian, and William, Nicholas York, and Henry Hager, on the e.

⁷ A fall in the creek at the village was called by the Indians De-wa-se-go.

⁸ The Gilboa Cotton Mills Co. has a capital of $20,000, and runs 100 looms.

¹⁰ The census reports 8 churches: 4 Pap., 2 M. E., Ref. Prot. B., and Christian.

MIDDLEBURGH—was formed from Schoharie, March 17, 1797, as "Middletown." Its name was changed in 1801. A part was re-annexed to Schoharie March 26, 1798. Fulton was taken off in 1828, and parts were annexed to Broome in 1849. It is the central town upon the e. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, divided into two ridges by the valley of Schoharie Creek, which extends n. and s. through the town. The highest summits are 600 to 800 ft. above the valley.³ Schoharie Creek receives Little Schoharie Creek from the e. and Line Kil from the w. The hills bordering upon the streams are usually steep and in many places precipitous. The soil is a clayey loam upon the hills, and a sandy loam in the valleys. Hops and broomcorn are extensively cultivated. Middleburgh, (p. v.,) upon Schoharie Creek, contains 4 churches, a private seminary, 2 steam paper mills, a steam gristmill, a foundery, and 110 dwellings. Hunters Land, (p. v.,) near the s. e. corner, contains 2 churches, a sawmill, gristmill, foundery, and 101 inhabitants. Mill Valley, on the line of Fulton, contains 2 large tanneries, a gristmill, and 25 dwellings. The first settlements were made by Palatinates, in 1711.⁴ The middle fort of Schoharie stood a little below the present site of Middleburgh Village during the Revolution. The census reports 5 churches in town.⁵

RICHMONDVILLE—was formed from Cobleskill, April 11, 1845. It lies upon the w. border of the co., a little s. of the center. The surface is a hilly upland, separated into two distinct parts by the valley of Cobles Kil, which extends e. and w. through the center. The highest summits are 500 to 700 ft. above the valley. The soil is generally a clayey loam. Hops are extensively cultivated. Richmondville,⁶ (p. v.,) near the center, contains 3 churches, a foundery, sawmill, gristmill, and 370 inhabitants. Warnerville,⁷ (p. v.,) upon Cobles Kil, at the mouth of West Kil, contains 2 churches, a boarding seminary,⁸ 2 tanneries, and 44 dwellings. West Richmondville is a p. o. The first settlement was made before the Revolution, by George Warner and his sons Nicholas, George, and Daniel, from Schoharie.⁹ The census reports 5 churches in town.¹⁰

SCHOHARIE—was formed as a district March 24, 1772, and as a town March 7, 1788. Sharon, Cobleskill, Middleburgh, and Blenheim were taken off in 1797, and Esperance and Wright in 1846. A part of Middleburgh was re-annexed in 1798, and a part of Esperance in 1850. It lies in the n. e. part of the co., its n. e. corner bordering on Schenectady co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep valleys of the streams. The declivities of the hills are generally gradual slopes, and their summits are 400 to 500 ft. above the valleys.¹¹ Schoharie Creek flows n. through near the center, receiving Foxes Creek from the e. and Cobles Kil from the w. In the limestone region in this town are numerous caverns.¹² The soil upon the hills is a clayey loam, and in the valleys a gravelly loam and alluvium. Hops and broom corn are largely cultivated. Schoharie, (p. v.,) the county seat, is situated upon Schoharie Creek, s. of the center of the town. Besides the co. buildings, it contains 3 churches, the Schoharie Academy, 2 newspaper offices, an arsenal, and a bank. Pop. 806. Central Bridge, (p. v.,) at the mouth of Cobles Kil, contains a church, sawmill, gristmill, machine shop, and 12 dwellings. Barton Hill is a p. o., near the n. e. corner. The first settlement was made in 1711, by a colony of German Palati-

¹ Amos and Caleb Northrop settled in the e. part; Samuel and Neal Johnson, near Utsyantha Lake; Henry Shelmeidine and James McKenzie, on West Kil; Stephen Marvin, Erasmus Judd, and Aaron Jones, near the village. These were mostly from New England. The first marriage was that of Marvin Judd and Lois Gibbs, Aug. 1800; and the first death, that of Elsie Judd, in June, 1799. Heman Hickok taught the first school, in 1799. Canteloe Coe kept the first inn, in 1794; and Rodman Lewis the first store, in 1800. Stephen Judd built the first sawmill, in 1799; and Heman Hickok the first gristmill, in 1799. Eh Jones built the first tannery, in 1810.

⁷ Named from Capt. Geo. Warner, the first settler.

⁸ Warnerville Seminary was built in 1851, at a cost of about $25,000, grounds and furniture being $3,000 additional. It has accommodations for 200 boarding students. A school was in operation about 3 years, when it was closed and has not since been opened.

⁹ Geo. Mann, John and Henry Shafer, Andrew Michael, Elijah Hulseh, John Lick, and John Dingman settled soon after the Revolution. The first school (German) was taught by — Skinsky. The first inn was kept by — Behall; the first store by Geo. Skillman; the first sawmill was built by a company of settlers; and the first gristmill by David Lawyer, on Cobles Kil. The town is comprised in the Skinner and portions of the Franklin, John F. Bonck, and B. Glazier Patents. Bonck's Patent, of 3,000 acres, was granted March 19, 1754, and Glazier's, of 3,000 acres, July 28, 1772.

nates, who had previously located upon the Hudson.¹ The first church (German) was established soon after the first settlement.² Rev. Peter Nicholas Sommer was the first clergyman.

SEWARD³—was formed from Sharon, Feb. 11, 1840. It lies on the w. border of the co., x. of the center. Its surface is a hilly and broken upland, the highest summits being 300 to 500 ft. above the valleys.⁴ West Kil, the principal stream, flows s. e. through the center. The soil is a clayey loam. Hops are largely cultivated. Hyndsville, (p. v.) upon West Kil, in the s. part, contains a sawmill, gristmill, tannery, and 143 inhabitants. Seward Valley,⁵ (Seward p. o.) in the s. w. part, contains a gristmill, sawmill, and 16 houses. Gardnerville, (p. v.) contains a church and 84 inhabitants. Clove is a hamlet. The first settlements were made in the s. part of the town, by a colony of Germans, in 1754.⁶ Their settlement was known as "New Dorlach." The census reports 8 churches in town.⁷

SHARON⁸—was formed from Schoharie, March 17, 1797, as "Dorlach." Its name was changed March 17, 1797. Seward was taken off in 1840. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is a rolling and hilly upland. The highest summits, in the s. w. corner, are about 500 ft. above the valleys. West Kil, flowing s. through the w. part, is the principal stream. The soil is a gravelly loam. In the underlying limestone are numerous caves. Hops are largely produced. Sharon Springs, (p. v.) a little s. w. of the center, is celebrated for its sulphur and chalybeate springs.⁹ It contains 5 large hotels for the accommodation of the visitors to the springs, and 2 churches. Pop. 230. Rockville, upon the turnpike, about a quarter of a mi. above the springs, contains 3 churches and 20 dwellings. Sharon Center (p. v.) contains 20 dwellings. Sharon Hill, (Sharon p. o.) in the s. e. part, contains a gristmill, sawmill, foundery, and 20 dwellings; Lcesville, (p. v.) in the s. w. part, 2 churches and 20 dwellings. Engelville, (p. o.) near the w. line, and Beckmans Corners, near the s. line, are hamlets. Col. Calvin Rich, from New England, is said to have been the first settler.¹⁰ July 9, 1781, the tory Doxtader, with a party of 300 Indians, made a descent upon Currytown, Montgomery co.; and on his return, with his plunder and prisoners, he was overtaken by an American force, under Col. Willent. An engagement ensued, in which about 40 Indians were killed, and the remainder fled. The battle ground is about 2 mi. e. of Sharon Springs. The census reports 5 churches in town.¹¹

SUMMIT—was formed from Jefferson and Cobleskill, April 13, 1819. It is the s. w. corner town of the co., lying principally on the w. border. Its surface is a broken and hilly upland. The central ridge forms a portion of the watershed between Susquehanna and Mohawk Rivers, the highest summits being 2,000 to 2,300 ft. above tide. Charlotte River, the principal stream, flows s. w. through the w. part. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Summit, (p. v.) upon the ridge, near the center, contains 2 churches and 28 dwellings. It is 2,200 ft. above tide. Charlotteville, (p. v.) upon Charlotte River, in the s. w. part, contains a church, the N. Y. Conference Seminary and Collegiate Institute,¹² 2 sawmills, a gristmill and clothing works, and about 40

² A lot of 14 acres in Hunterfield was conveyed, Jan. 3, 1737, to Johannes Sheller, Hendrick Comadt, and Johannes Ingold, to Jonas Le-Roy and Peter Speis, for the support of the Middleburgh and Schoharie high and low Dutch churches. By an act of Feb. 5, 1793, the two congregations were empowered to divide and mutually release this lot. The census reports 4 churches; 2 Evan. Luth., M. E., and Ref. Prot. D. ³ Named in honor of Gov. Seward.

⁴ Upon the s. e. border of the town is a hill, called by the Indians Gogny-tan-ge; and S. of Seward Valley is another, called One-on-ta-lashie. ⁵ Locally known as "Nesley's Hollow."

⁶ The first settlers were Sebastian France, Michael Merckley, Henry Hynds, and Ernest Fritz. Among the other early settlers were Cal. C. Probst, Wm. Eric -t Sponhlyer, and Conrad Brown, who located near the Luth. church; and Wm. Rippsmah, Henry France, Henry Hanes, Geronimus Chrysler, and John, Peter, and Martin, sons of Rev. Peter Nicholas Sommer, the first Schoharie pastor. The first German school was taught by — Pkonhwer; the first inn was kept by Thos. Almy; the first store by Wm. E. Sponhlyer. Wm. Hynds built the first sawmill, and Henry Hanes the first gristmill. The first birth was that of a son of — France.

Sulphuretted hydrogen gas,—1 cubic inch.

The waters flowing over vegetable substances imbue them with white and fluorescent sulphur. The gas from the sulphur spring quickly tarnishes silver, even in the pocket. In the neighborhood is a chalybeate spring. The vicinity derives interest from caves containing stalactites and beautiful crystals of sulphate of lime. A quarter of a mile below the spring is a fine cascade. A copious spring of common water gushes from the rocks a short distance above, in volume sufficient to turn a mill.—God. Ist. Dict., p. 89; Berk's Mineralogy of N. Y., p. 143; Sommer's Schoharie, p. 64-5.

¹⁰ Col. Rich was afterward at Sackets Harbor as a Col. of drafted militia in Gen. Richard Boddie's brigade. Calvin Pike, William Vanderwerker, Conrad Fritche, Abraham and John Meanness, John Mahck, and Peter Combert were early settlers, and were obliged to flee to Schoharie or Fort Hunter for safety during the war. Wm. Beckman kept the first store; John Hart built the first sawmill, Omero Laczarize the first gristmill, John Hart the first clothing works, and Frederick & Cronk the first tannery. The town comprised a part of Frederick Young's Patent of 2,000 acres, granted Sept. 25, 1761; a tract granted to Beulah & Livingstone, of 8,000 acres; a part of Johan B. East, and others, of 7,000 acres, Aug. 14, 1761; and a small part of the New Dorlach Patent. The first owners of N. w. Dorlach Patent were: Michael, Johannes, Johannes Just, and Jacob B. East, Johan Brann, Wm. Rauch, Michael Holtzman, Henry Hanes, Johannes Sheller, Johannes and Jacob Lawyer, Christian Z. H. Mathias, Louman, Lambert Sternberg, Peter Keyser, and Peter Nicholas Sommer. The patent provides that any differences that might arise were to be settled by arbitration.

WRIGHT³—was formed from Schoharie, April 4, 1846. It is the s. town on the e. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland. The highest summits, along the s. line, are 600 to 800 ft. above the valleys. The principal stream is Foxes Creek, flowing s. w. through the center. The soil is a clay and gravelly loam. Gallupville, (p. v.,) near the center, contains 3 churches, a sawmill, tannery, carding machine, and 40 houses. Shutters Corners, (p. o.,) in the w. part, contains a sawmill, gristmill, and 10 houses. Waldenville is a p. o., near the e. line. The town comprises the whole of several patents and parts of several others, principally granted from 1760 to 1770. The first settlement was made by Jacob Zimmer, near Gallupville, several years prior to the Revolution.⁴ A stone house built by Johannes Becker, an early settler, was used as a fort during the war.⁵ There are 5 churches in town.⁶

SCHUYLER COUNTY.

This county¹ was formed from Steuben, Chemung, and Tompkins, April 17, 1851. It lies upon both sides of the s. extremity of Seneca Lake; is centrally distant 160 mi. from Albany, and contains 352 sq. mi. Its surface is mostly an undulating and hilly upland, divided into two distinct ridges by the deep valley of Seneca Lake and its inlet. The highest summits are 600 to 1,000 ft. above Seneca Lake and 1,200 to 1,600 ft. above tide. A bluff 100 to 300 ft. high extends along the shores of the lake, too steep for profitable cultivation; but farther inland the hills are bordered by long and gradual slopes and are generally arable to their very summits. The extreme s. part of the co. assumes a more hilly and broken character. Catharines Creek, flowing into the head of Seneca Lake, is the principal stream. Its course is through a deep, narrow, and winding valley bordered by steep hillsides 400 to 600 ft. high. Upon it are numerous falls, affording abundance of water-power; and near its mouth is a marshy region of considerable extent. Meads Creek, a tributary of Chemung River, drains the s. w. corner, and Cayuta Creek the s. e. corner. The other streams are small creeks and brooks, mostly discharging their waters into Seneca Lake. A few streams take their rise along the s. e. border and flow into Cayuga Lake. Little and Mud Lakes, two smaller sheets of water along the w. border, discharge their waters through Mud Creek into Conhocton River. Cayuta Lake is a fine sheet of water, in the e. part of the co. Hector Falls, upon a small stream flowing into Seneca Lake from the e., is one of the finest cascades in the State. The rocks of this co. mostly belong to the Portage and Chemung groups,—the former occupying the n. and the latter the s. part of the co. In the deep valley along the shore of Seneca Lake, in the extreme n. part of the co., are found outcrops of Genesee slate. The only good building stone in the co. is the thin-bedded sandstone separating the thick beds of shale. In many places these rocks are covered deeply with drift deposits. The soil upon the highlands is clayey and gravelly, principally derived from the disintegration of the shales; and in many places this is underlaid by hardpan. In the valleys the soil is a gravelly loam intermixed with alluvium.

Agriculture forms the leading and almost the sole occupation of the people. Spring grains are extensively grown, and stock and wool growing and dairying are largely carried on. The climate and soil are both better adapted to pasturage than to tillage. Fruit is becoming an important article of culture, and all kinds adapted to the climate succeed well. A limited amount of manufacturing is carried on at Watkins and Havana.

In 1854, commissioners appointed to locate the co. buildings fixed upon Havana as the county seat.² The action of the commissioners was resisted by the Board of Supervisors, and by them the county seat was located at Watkins, at the head of Seneca Lake. A courthouse was erected at each village; but subsequently the courts decided in favor of the action of the commissioners, and, April 13, 1857, an act was passed by the legislature confirming the location of the county seat at Havana. This act was confirmed by the Supreme Court, April, 1859. The Board of Supervisors soon after changed the location to Watkins, and at this place the co. offices are at present located. The buildings erected at each place for a courthouse, and for a clerk's office and jail at Havana, are fine buildings, embodying nearly all modern improvements. The buildings at Havana were erected at a cost of $30,000. No poorhouse has yet been established.

The public works in the co. are the Chemung Canal, extending from the head of Seneca Lake s. through the valley of Catharines Creek, uniting with Chemung River at Elmira; the Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R., extending along the w. shore of Seneca Lake to Watkins; and the Chemung R. R., extending s. from Watkins along Catharines Creek to Elmira. These roads are both leased to the N. Y. & E. R. R. Co.

In 1779, Sullivan's army marched through the defiles along Catharines Creek, closely pursuing the Indians, who were flying from the fatal battle of "Narctowa," (now Elmira.) So great was the terror of the Indians that they neglected to defend the passes, and the American army marched unmolested through the only place where successful resistance was practicable. Upon the conclusion of peace, many of the soldiers belonging to the army returned to this region and located upon land which had been first brought to their notice during their march against the Indians. The first settlements in the co. were made on Catharines Creek, near the present site of Havana, in 1788, and on the shores of Seneca Lake, in 1790. The town of Hector belonged to the Military Tract; the towns of Catharines, Dix, and Reading, to the Watkins and Flint Purchase; and Tyrone and Orange, to the Phelps and Gorham Purchase.

² These commissioners were De-las De Wolf, of Oswego, Edward Dodd, of Washington, and Vivus W. Smith, of Oneida.

Two weekly newspapers are now published in the co.¹

CATHARINES²—was formed from "Newtown," (now Elmira, Chemung co.,) March 15, 1798. Catlin and Veteran (Chemung co.) were taken off in 1823. A part of Newfield (Tompkins co.) was annexed June 4, 1853, and a part was added to Cayuta, April 17, 1854. It lies upon the s. border of the co., E. of the center. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep valleys of the streams. Catharines Creek, along the w. border, flows in a deep ravine 300 to 700 feet below the summits of the hills. Cayuta Lake lies in the s. e. part; and its outlet, Cayuta Creek, flows s. into the Susquehanna. The soil is principally a gravelly loam mixed with clay. Havana, (p. v.,) upon Catharines Creek, on the line of Dix, 3 mi. from Seneca Lake, was incorp. May 13, 1836. It contains a courthouse, jail, clerk's office, the People's College,³ 3 churches, a newspaper office, 3 flouring mills, and several manufacturing establishments.⁴ It is a canal village and a station upon the Chemung R. R. Pop. 1,290. Odessa, (p. v.,) near the center of the town, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, several sawmills, and 40 dwellings; and Catharines, (p. v.,) in the s. part, 2 churches and 25 dwellings. Alpine, (p. v.,) on the s. e. border, is partly in this town. The first settlement in town was made at Havana, in 1788, by Silas Wolcott and — Wilson.⁵ The first religious meeting was held at the house of Mr. P. Bowers, by a Presbyterian minister, in 1794.⁶

CAYUTA—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.,) March 20, 1824. Parts of Catharine and Erin (Chemung co.) were annexed in 1854. The town was transferred from Tioga to Tompkins co. March 22, 1822. It is the s. e. corner town in the co. Its surface is a hilly upland. Cayuta Creek flows s. e. through the town, in a narrow valley bordered by steep hillsides 300 to 600 ft. high. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Cayuta (West Cayuta p. o.) contains 15 dwellings; Alpine, (p. v.,) on the n. line of the town, a flouring mill, sawmill, chair factory, and 25 dwellings. The first settlement was made in the valley of the Cayuta, near West Cayuta, in 1801, by Capt. Gabriel Ogden, Rev. David Janes, and Jos. Thomas,—the first two from Tioga co., and the last from Athens, Penn.⁷ The first religious services were held by Rev. Mr. Janes, (Bap.,) at his own house, in 1802. No churches are reported.

¹ The Tioga Patriot was started at Havana in June, 1828, by L. B. and S. Butler, and was continued a short time.

The Havana Observer was started in 1839 by F. W. Ritter, and was soon discontinued.

The Havana Republican was commenced in 1835 by Nelson Colgrove. It was issued successively by G. Barlow Nye, T. I. Taylor, and W. H. Ongly until 1849, when it was changed to Life in The Country and Havana Republican. It was discontinued in 1850.

The Chemung Democrat was removed from Horsesheds to Havana in 1840, and to "Jefferson" (now Watkins) in 1842. Its name was soon after changed to

The Democratic Citizen, and it was issued by J. I. Hendrix until 1850.

The Independent Freeman was started at Watkins, June 15, 1850, by W. B. Slawson & Co.; in 1851 it was changed to

The Jefferson Eagle, and was continued a few months.

The Canaan Borealis, a literary paper, was published at "Jefferson" about the same time.

The Havana Journal was commenced April 16, 1853, by John B. Cook, and its publication is still continued.

The Watkins Republican was established in June, 1844, by S. M. Taylor. It passed into the hands of J. K. Averill, and afterward into those of M. Ellis, by whom it is still published.

The Schuyler County Democrat, commenced at Havana, April 25, 1855, by Averill & Baxter, was soon after discontinued.

² Named from Catharine Montour, a French woman who married an Indian, was adopted into the Seneca tribe, and exerted a controlling influence among the Indians. She received a small salary from the English Colonial Government, for many years, on account of her influence among the Indians. She resided on the present site of Havana, and was known as Queen Catharine. This town as first formed embraced the s. part of Tps.

1 and 4 and all of Tps. 2 and 3 of John W. Watkins's Tract.

³ This institution was incorp. April 13, 1854, and was located at Havana Jan. 8, 1857. The college edifice—the erection of which has been commenced—is to be 320 by 52 feet, 4 stories high, with a basement. At either end is a wing, 206 by 52 ft., 4 stories high; and a wing will project rearward from the center, 68 by 64 ft., 3 stories high. Above the basement the walls are to be erected of brick; the whole at an estimated cost of $175,000. The institution is to afford instruction in some departments of mechanics and manufactures, and students are to be paid for their services. The trustees have resolved to establish 19 professorships.

⁵ Geo. Mills, Wm. McClure, Phineas Bowers, John King, and 2 families by the name of Stevens, settled in the valley at and near Havana in 1789-90. Anthony Broderick kept the first school, in a house owned by Phineas Bowers, in 1792-93. Silas Wolcott kept the first inn, soon after his settlement, and Isaac Baldwin and George Mills the first store, in 1805, at Havana. Phineas Bowers erected the first grist and saw mills, at or near the village.

⁶ The census reports 7 churches; 2 Prot. E., 2 Presb., 2 M. E., and Bap.

DIX—was formed from Catlin, (Chemung co.) April 17, 1835. It lies upon the w. side of Catharines Creek, and extends from the head of Seneca Lake to the s. bounds of the co. The surface is mostly a rolling and hilly upland, the summits being 400 to 700 ft. above the lake. It is drained by Catharines Creek and several smaller streams. The soil is principally a fine quality of gravelly loam. A little s. w. from the head of the lake is a deep glen in the hills, bordered by perpendicular rocks 200 ft. high. A small stream runs through it, forming a series of beautiful cascades. Watkins,² (p. v.) upon the line of Reading, at the head of Seneca Lake, was incorp., as "J. Jefferson," April 11, 1842, and its name was changed April 8, 1852. It contains a courthouse, 5 churches, a newspaper office, and several manufacturing establishments. It is a lake, canal, and r. r. station; a daily steamboat plies upon Seneca Lake between this place and Geneva. Pop. 1,984. Beaver Dams, (p. v.) in the s. w. corner, contains 2 churches, several manufactories, and 28 dwellings; Townsend, (p. v.) near the w. line, contains 1 church, several mills, and 36 dwellings; Crawford Settlement, (Moreland p. o.) near the s. line, contains 2 churches and 26 dwellings. The first settlements were made near the head of the lake and along the valley of Catharines Creek, about the commencement of the present century.³ The first church edifice (Bap.) was erected in 1833, at Townsend.⁴

HECTOR—was formed from Ovid, (Seneca co.) March 30, 1802. It is the s. w. corner township of the Military Tract and the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, its highest summits being 500 to 700 ft. above Seneca Lake. The bluffs bordering upon the lake are 100 to 300 ft. high, and nearly perpendicular. It is drained by a large number of small creeks flowing into Seneca and Cayuga Lakes. Hector Falls, upon a small creek in the s. w. part of the town, is a cascade made by the stream flowing down the bluff which borders upon the lake. The soil is a clay, sandy, and gravelly loam, in some places underlaid by hardpan. Perry City, (p. v.) upon the e. line of the town, contains a Friends' meeting house and 120 inhabitants; Mecklenburgh, (p. v.) situated 2 mi. s. w. of Perry City, contains 3 churches, 2 sawmills, a flouring mill, and 338 inhabitants; Reynoldsville, (p. v.) near the center of the town, contains a church and 117 inhabitants; Bennetsburgh, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains a church, 4 saw and shingle mills, 1 gristmill, tannery, and 25 dwellings; Burdett, (p. v.) in the s. w. part, contains 3 churches, a woolen factory, agricultural implement factory, iron foundry, gristmill, sawmill, tannery, and 360 inhabitants; Peach Orchard, (Hector p. o.) in the s. w. part, contains 3 churches and 34 dwellings; Polkville, (p. v.) in the s. w. part, contains a church and 16 dwellings; Scarsburgh (p. o.) contains 2 churches and 10 dwellings. North Hector and Cayutaville are p. offices; and Steamburgh is a hamlet. John Livingston and Wm. Wickham settled in 1791, in the s. w. part of the town, on the bank of the lake.⁵ The first church (Presb.) was formed by Rev. Mr. Stewart, at Peach Orchard, in 1809.⁶

ORANGE—was formed from Wayne, (Steuben co.) Feb. 12, 1813, as "Jersey." Its name was changed Feb. 20, 1836. A part of Hornby (Steuben co.) was annexed April 11, 1842, and a part of Bradford, (Steuben co.) April 17, 1851. It is the s. w. corner town in the co., and is bounded on the e. by the pre-emption line. Its surface is a rolling and hilly upland, broken by the deep and irregular valleys of the streams. Meads Creek, flowing s. w., forms the principal drainage. The soil is chiefly a gravelly loam. Monterey (Orange p. o.) contains 3 churches, a gristmill, and 301 inhabitants. Sugar Hill is a p. o. in the s. e. part. The first settlements were made in 1799, by Abraham Rozenback and Samuel Scomp, s. e. of Monterey.⁷ The first church (M. E.) was formed by Rev. Peregrine Hallett, the first preacher.⁸

⁴ The census reports 10 churches; 3 Bap., 3 M. E., 2 Presb., Prot. E., and Univ.

⁵ Reuben Smith and his sons Reuben, Jabez, Sam'l, Harvey, Caleb and Chancy W., from Canaan, Conn., settled on Military Lots 20 and 21, in 1794; Richard Ely and Grover Smith, a little s. of Peach Orchard, and Daniel Everts, s. of the same place, in 1795,—all from Salisbury, Conn. The first child born was Polly Everts; the first marriage, that of Stephen Pratt and Betsy Livingston; and the first death, that of Wm. Wickham. The first school was taught at Peach Orchard, by John Livingston. Wm. Wickham kept the first inn, near Peach Orchard, and John B. Seeley the first store, at Hector Falls. The first gristmill and carding machine were put in operation at the same place, by Sam'l B. Seeley.

⁶ The census reports 20 churches in town; 7 M. E., 3 Presb., 3 Bap., 2 Wes. Meth., 2 Friends, O. S. Bap., Prot. E., and Chris. Cong.

⁷ Henry Switzer, from N. J., settled on Switzer Hill, in 1802, and D. Hewitt, from Rensselaer co., N. Y., was the first settler at Monterey, in 1811. Abner and Thos. Hurd, and Brigham Young, the Mormon leader, were early settlers in the s. e. part of the town. — Chapman, Wm. Wilkins, Wm. De Witt, Andrew Foot, Danl. Curtis, and Jedidah Miller settled on Meads-Creek in 1811. Elise Switzer was the first child born. The first school was taught by Dan'l M. Donnell, in 1819, near Monterey. Thos. Hurd kept the first inn, in 1816, at Monterey, and Walter Hurd the first store, s. w. of the same place.

⁸ The census reports 4 churches in town; 2 Bap., Presb., and M. E.

READING—was formed from "Frederickstown," (now Wayne, Steuben co.,) Feb. 17, 1806. It lies upon the w. bank of Seneca Lake, and is the central town upon the s. border of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland 400 to 500 ft. above the lake. The bluffs upon the shore are very steep and in many places precipitous. Its streams are small brooks and creeks. The soil is mostly a clay loam. Reading Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 24 dwellings; Irelandville (Reading p. o.) contains 11 dwellings. North Reading is a p. o. The Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R. traverses the town upon the w. shore of the lake. A settlement was made at Reading Center, by Judge John Dow, from Conn., in 1790.¹ The first church (Bap.) was formed by Elder John Goff, in 1810, at Reading Center.²

TYRONE—was formed from Wayne, (Steuben co.,) April 16, 1822. It is the s. w. corner town in the co. Its surface is an elevated upland divided into several ridges by the valleys of streams. Its principal stream is Mud Creek, flowing s. w. Little Lake, upon the w. border, is 3 mi. long and about 1 wide; and Mud Lake, in the s. w. corner, is 1½ mi. long and about one-half mi. wide. These lakes lie in deep valleys, and are bordered by nearly precipitous hills which rise 300 to 400 ft. above them. The soil is a clay loam. Tyrone, (p. v.,) a little e. of Mud Lake, contains 2 churches, 1 gristmill, 2 sawmills, 2 tanneries, several manufactories, and 160 inhabitants; Weston, (p. v.,) ¾ mi. s. w. of Tyrone, contains 2 churches and 177 inhabitants; Allay, (p. v.,) a little e. of the center, contains a church, tannery, 2 sawmills, a steam flouring mill, and 144 inhabitants; Pine Grove (p. o.) contains a church and 6 houses. The first settlement was made in 1800, by Gen. Wm. Kernan, on a tract of 4,000 acres, purchased by Thos. O'Conner.³ The first church edifice (Union) was erected by the Presb. and Bap.; Rev. Joseph Crawford (Presb.) and Rev. Van Rensselaer Wall (Bap.) were the first preachers.⁴

² The census reports 3 churches; Bap., M. E., and R. C.

³ Mr. O'Conner was among the early settlers, and resided for a time in a log house on the shore of Little Lake. He was accompanied by a son and daughter,—the former of whom is Hon.

Charles O'Conner, the eminent New York lawyer, Abraham Fleet, sr., from N. J., and Capt. John Seaburg, were among the first settlers near Tyrone Village, in 1800; Thaddeus, Greenham, and Abraham Bemis settled about 1801. Simon Fleet was the first child born in town. The first school was taught at Tyrone Village, by Hugh Dimeson; the first inn was kept by Capt. Williams, and the first store by Thos. O'Conner, near the s. w. corner of the town. The first mill and factory were erected at Tyrone Village by Ralph Oplake.

SENECA COUNTY.

This county was formed from Cayuga, March 29, 1804. A part of Tompkins was taken off in 1817, and a part of Wayne in 1823. It lies w. of the center of the State, centrally distant 156 mi. from Albany, and contains 420 sq. mi. It occupies the greater part of the land which lies between Seneca and Cayuga Lakes, and extends several mi. s. of Seneca Lake Outlet. A high ridge enters the co. from Tompkins and occupies nearly one-fourth of its surface. The summit of the extreme s. portion of this ridge in this co. is 700 to 800 feet above Seneca Lake and 1,100 to 1,250 feet above tide. Toward the n. it gradually declines to the level of Seneca Lake. The ridge is bordered in some places by steep declivities and in others by gradual slopes, and in the s. part of the co. generally terminates in high bluffs on the shores of the lakes. At the foot of Seneca Lake the bluffs, on an average, are about 20 feet high; but toward the s. they gradually rise to an elevation of 100 to 150 feet. At the foot of Cayuga Lake the shore is low and shelving; but in Romulus a bluff shore commences, which gradually increases in height until on the s. border of the co. it attains an elevation of 150 to 200 feet. From the summits of the bluffs to the central summit of the ridge the land generally rises in beautiful, smooth, gradual slopes, broken in a few places by sharp declivities of a terrace-like formation. From Ovid toward the n. the land abruptly descends about 200 feet, and then by gradual slopes to the level of Seneca River. The region immediately n. of Seneca Lake Outlet and w. of the Cayuga Lake Outlet is level, and some of it is marshy. In the n. w. corner of the co. is a great number of alluvial ridges, composed principally of gravel. These ridges extend in a n. and s. direction and are 30 to 50 feet high. Their declivities are generally very abrupt toward the n., e., and w., but more gradual toward the s.

The geological formation of the co. is very simple. The rocks overlie each other in parallel layers slightly dipping toward the s. The lowest rocks that crop out in the co. are those of the Onondaga salt group, including both the red shales and gypsum. They are found along Seneca River, where the gypsum is extensively quarried. Next above these are heavy, compact masses of the corniferous limestone, occupying a belt of country 2 to 3 mi. wide s. of Seneca River. The intermediate waterlime and Onondaga limestone strata are developed in this co. only in very thin and scarcely noticeable layers. The corniferous limestone furnishes a building stone of great excellence and is extensively quarried. Next in order come the Marcellus and Hamilton shales, occupying a broad belt through the co. and extending nearly to the summits of the ridges; the Tully limestone, a layer of only a few feet in thickness, but valuable from the quantity and quality of lime manufactured from it; and the Genesee slate, a dark, shaly rock which crowns the summits of the southern hills. These rocks throughout the co. are covered with a deep deposit of drift, consisting of clay, sand, gravel, and hardpan, and crop out only along the shores of the lakes, the narrow ravines of the streams, and the steep declivities of the ridges. In the n. w. corner of the co. this drift is arranged in ridges with narrow valleys scooped out between them.¹

The principal stream is Seneca River, forming the outlet of Seneca Lake. It has a course of about 14 mi. between the two lakes, and in that distance falls 60 feet. The falls are principally at Waterloo and Seneca Falls, furnishing an excellent water-power at each place, but much the greater at the latter. From Cayuga Lake, Seneca River flows n. e. through a marshy region and forms a portion of the e. boundary of the co. Clyde River, a tributary of the Seneca, flows through a portion of the marshy region in the n. e. corner. The other streams are all small brooks and creeks, and for the most part are rapid torrents flowing in deep gullies worn in the shaly rocks. They are frequently interrupted by waterfalls, are nearly dry in summer, and are subject to severe freshets.

Seneca Lake, the w. border of which forms the greater part of the w. boundary of the co., is 55 mi. long and 1 to 4 mi. broad. It is 216 feet above Lake Ontario and 347 feet above tide. It occupies a deep valley between the hills, and it varies in depth from 300 to 630 feet. Its shores are generally bold; and from their summits the land slopes gently and gracefully upward to a height of 200 to 700 feet above its surface, furnishing some of the most quiet and beautiful scenery in the State. This lake is never entirely frozen over. Cayuga Lake occupies a parallel valley on the e. border of the co., and is 38 mi. long and 1 to 3½ mi. wide. It is 60 feet below Seneca, and its greatest depth is 346 feet. Near the foot the lake is very shallow, and a large extent of land, immediately adjoining and lying along the course of its outlet, is swampy.¹ Further s. the shores are bluff and the country is of the same general character as that bordering upon Seneca Lake.

The soil is generally of a very excellent quality. The sandy and gravelly loam of the drift deposits are well adapted to either grain raising or grazing. The lower portions of the ridges are enriched by the disintegration of the rocks above, making the soil very productive. The lowlands bordering upon Seneca River are clayey and in many places mixed with disintegrated gypsum and limestone. North of the river have been found extensive marl deposits of great agricultural value. North of the foot of Seneca Lake is a sandy region once considered worthless; but upon trial the soil has been found susceptible of being made productive at little expense. The marshy regions w. of Cayuga Outlet are covered with thick deposits of marl and muck. Measures have been instituted to drain these marshes; if successful a new and exceedingly fertile region will be added to the productive lands of the State.

The co. is a half-shire, the co. seats being located respectively at Ovid and Waterloo.² The courthouse and clerk's office at Ovid are brick buildings, situated in the e. part of the village. The combined courthouse and jail at Waterloo is a brick building, situated near the r. r., fronting the public square, in the w. part of the village. The co. poorhouse is located upon a farm of 126 acres, upon the line between Seneca Falls and Fayette, 4 mi. s. e. of Waterloo.³

Four weekly newspapers are now published in the co.⁴

The public works of the co. are the N. Y. Central R. R., extending through Seneca Falls and Waterloo, and the Seneca Canal, extending along Seneca River through the same towns.⁵ Above the falls at Waterloo the canal is formed by slackwater navigation upon the river.

The lands in this co. were first brought to the notice of the whites by the expedition of Sullivan, which passed along the banks of Seneca Lake in 1779. Portions of the land at that time had been cleared and were under cultivation. The Indians had a tradition that this whole region had once been occupied by a race that pursued agriculture, but which had long ago disappeared. Many of Sullivan's soldiers, attracted by the beauty and fertility of the lands, after the war settled in various parts of the co. The first settler, Job Smith, who located at Seneca Falls in 1787, and the second, Andrew Dunlap, who located at Ovid in 1789, came in by way of Chemung River. The third settler, Lawrence Van Chief, who settled at Seneca Falls in 1789, came in by way of Oneida Lake and Seneca River.⁶ After 1790 settlement progressed rapidly, and the most fertile lands

² The county seat was located at Ovid upon the creation of the co. in 1804. The courthouse was built in 1806. While a part of Tompkins co., in 1790, courts were held at the barn of Andrew Dunlap. In 1817, upon the creation of Tompkins co., the co. seat was removed to Waterloo; but in 1822 the co. was divided into two jury districts, and the courts have since then been held alternately at Ovid and Waterloo. The first co. officers were Cornelius Humphreys, First Judge; John Halsey, Clerk; William Smith, Sheriff; and Jared Sandford, Surrogate.

³ The average number of inmates is 60, supported at a weekly cost of $100 each. A school is taught 4 months in the year. The establishment seems to be pretty well arranged and managed.

⁴ The Seneca Patriot, the first paper published in the co., was started at Ovid in 1815 by Geo. Lewis. In 1816 it was changed to

The Ovid Gazette. Upon the change of the co. seat in 1817, it was removed to Waterloo and changed to

The Waterloo Gazette, and was continued several years by the original proprietor.

The Seneca Farmer was started at Waterloo in 1822 by Wm. Child. In 1832 it was removed to Seneca Falls and united with the Seneca Falls Journal.

The Waterloo Republican was issued a short time in 1822. The Waterloo Observer was started in 1824 by Charles Sentell. It was soon after issued a short time as

The Observer and Union, and was subsequently changed to The Seneca Observer, under which title it is still issued by the original proprietor.

The Wreath and Lilies' Laboratory Repository was issued from the Observer office in 1831.

The Seneca Republican was established at Ovid in 1827 by Michael Hayes. In 1829 it was changed to

The Ovid Gazette and Seneca County Register, and was issued a short time by John Dully.

The Seneca Falls Journal was commenced in 1829 by O. B. Clark. In 1834 it passed into the hands of Wm. N. Brown, and in 1832 it was united with the Seneca Farmer and changed to

The Seneca Farmer and Seneca Falls Advertiser, and was issued by Wm. Child until 1835.

The Western Times was published at Waterloo in 1830 by Ebenezer P. Mason.

The Ovid Emporium was published in 1832 by Bishop Orenshew.

The Seneca County Courier was commenced at Seneca Falls in 1835 by Isaac Fuller & Co. It was successively published by Fuller & Bloomer, Mills & Bloomer, Mills & Davis, John J. Davis, N. J. Milliken, Milliken & Fuller, Milliken & Mumford, Foster & Judd, Fuller & Judd, until 1860, when it passed into the hands of Isaac Fuller, its present publisher.

The Ovid Bee was started in 1838 by David Fairchild & Son. At the end of one year it passed into the hands of the son, Corydon Fairchild, its present publisher.

The Seneca Falls Democrat was commenced in 1839 by Josiah T. Miller, and was continued 10 years.

The Seneca Democrat, semi-wk., was issued a short time from the same office.

The Seneca Falls Register was commenced in 1835 by J. K. Brown, and was continued 2 years.

The Memorial was commenced at Seneca Falls in 1840 by Ansel Bascom, and was continued until 1846.

The Water Bucket was published at Seneca Falls by an association of Washingtonians in 1841.

The Free-Soil Union was commenced at Seneca Falls in Aug. 1848, by N. J. Milliken, and continued about 1 year.

The Lily was commenced at Seneca Falls in 1849 by Mrs. Amelia Bloomer, and was continued until 1854, when it was removed to Ohio.

The American Revueille was commenced at Seneca Falls in Jan. 1855, by Wilcoxen, Sherman & Baker. In 1856 it was purchased by G. Wilcoxen, and was continued by him until Jan. 1859, when it passed into the hands of Holly & Stowell, the present publishers.

⁵ The first locks on this river were made by the Seneca River Navigation Company, in 1815.

⁶ Mr. Van Chief was one of the 100 men dispatched by Sullivan under Col. Gansevoort, directly e. from the head of Seneca Lake, were speedily occupied. In 1791 the State Road, known as the "General Road," was built from Whitestown to Geneva; and this soon became the great highway for immigration. This co. formed the extreme w. portion of the Military Tract; and many of the early settlers were old soldiers who had drawn their portion of public land here.

COVERT—was formed from Ovid, April 7, 1817. Lodi was taken off in 1826. It lies upon the w. shore of Cayuga Lake, in the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is an upland descending from its w. border and terminating in a steep and almost precipitous bluff upon the shore of the lake. This bluff rises 100 to 200 feet above the water, and the summit of the slope is about 400 feet higher. The town is watered by Trumansburg Creek and many smaller streams, flowing into Cayuga Lake. These streams have worn ravines in the slate and shales to the depth of 20 to 40 feet, the sides being nearly precipitous. In summer they are nearly dry, but during heavy rains they become fierce mountain torrents, bounding and seething in their confined channels and leaping from high precipices to mingle with the calm and peaceful waters of the lake. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. The whole surface is arable, except the steep declivities of the lake bluffs. Farmersville, (Farmer p. o.) in the n. part, contains 3 churches, a steam sawmill, foundery, and machine shop. Pop. 350. Covert, (p. o.) in the s. e. part, Halls Corners, near the center, and Kellys Corners, in the s. w., are hamlets. Port Deposit (Trumansburg Landing p. o.) is a steamboat landing near the s. e. corner. The first settler was Phillip Tremaine, who located at Goodwins Point before 1793.¹ The first religious services were held at the house of Mr. King, by Elder Thomas; the first church (Bap.) was organized in 1805.²

FAYETTE—was formed from Romulus, as "Washington," March 14, 1800. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. Junius was taken off in 1803. It lies on the s. bank of Seneca River and extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake. Its surface is rolling and inclined toward the n. From Seneca Lake the land beautifully slopes upward, forming some of the most delightful situations for residences in the co. Upon Cayuga Lake the shores are lower and in some places are marshy. The highest point in town is about 200 feet above Seneca Lake. The streams are mostly small brooks flowing with rapid currents, and at a few places furnishing limited water-power. In some parts the coniferous limestone is extensively quarried, both for lime and for building purposes. The soil is a deep, rich loam, composed of clay, gravel, and sand. Near Canoga Village is an immense spring in a basin 14 feet in diameter, and from it flows sufficient water to form a large and valuable water-power. The spring also emits nitrogen gas. Canoga,³ (p. v.) in the n. e. part, on Cayuga Lake, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, 2 sawmills, and 197 inhabitants. South Waterloo, a suburb of Waterloo, on the s. bank of Seneca River, contains 1 church and 597 inhabitants. Bearytown, (Fayette p. o.) on the line of Variick, is partly in this town. West Fayette, in the s. w. corner, and Rose Hill, in the w. part, are p. offices. The first settlement was made by James Bennett, from Penn., who located upon the shore of Cayuga Lake in 1789.⁴ Red Jacket, the Seneca chief and orator, was born near Canoga Spring. There are 8 churches in town.⁵

JUNIUS—was formed from "Washington," (now Fayette,) Feb. 12, 1803; Wolcott (Wayne co.) was taken off in 1807, Galen (Wayne co.) in 1812, and Seneca Falls, Tyre, and Waterloo in 1829. It is the n. w. corner town of the co. In this town are numerous small, isolated gravel and clay ridges 30 to 75 ft. high, all extending in a general n. and s. direction. The numerous small streams that drain the town flow n. into Clyde River. Among the narrow valleys in the e. part is a limited amount of swamp land. The soil is a good quality of gravelly loam. Dublin, (Junius p. o.) n. w. of the center, contains 1 church and 25 dwellings. West Junius is a p. o. near the s. w. corner. Thorntons Corners is a hamlet. The first settlements were made by Thos. Bodell and Jesse, Sam'l, and David Southwick, about 1795.⁶ The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1811; three years after it was changed to a Presb. There are also 2 M. E. churches in town.

LODI—was formed from Covert, Jan. 27, 1826. It borders upon Seneca Lake, and is the s. w. to lay waste the lands of the Cayugas, Onondagas, and Oneidas that had previously escaped destruction.

² This was the first church formed in the co. The census reports 1 churches; 2 Bap., Univ., and Ret. Prot. B.

³ The name of the village, derived from that of the spring, is an Indian word said to signify "sweet water."

⁵ 2 Presb., 2 M. E., 2 Irish, and 2 Ret. Prot. B.

⁶ Among the other early settlers were families from L. Sherman, Chapman, Brownwell, Park, Moore, French, Maygood, Thorn, and Hart—mostly from New England. The first cloth was that of Mrs. Susan Southwick, wife of Samuel Southwick, in 1802. Joseph Moody kept the first store, at Dublin. He was an Irishman; and hence the name of the village.

corner town in the co. Its surface is mostly inclined toward the w. and s., a small portion only lying e. of the summit. The bluff bordering upon Seneca Lake is 150 to 250 ft. above the surface of the water; and the highest part of the central ridge is 500 ft. higher and about 1,200 ft. above tide. The principal streams are Mill Creek, flowing s. w. through near the center, and Sheldrake Creek, in the s. w. corner. Mill Creek separates the highlands into two distinct ridges, the declivities being very abrupt. Upon this stream are several fine cascades. Lodi Falls, where the creek leaps down the precipitous bluff which borders upon the lake, are 125 ft. high. The water has worn a deep and irregular channel in the shale rocks one mi. back from the face of the bluff. The soil is principally a gravelly loam mixed with the disintegrated rocks. Lodi, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, and 380 inhabitants; Townsendville, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, a church and 20 dwellings. Lodi Center (p. o.) is a hamlet. Lodi Landing is on Seneca Lake, at the mouth of Mill Creek. The first settlement was made by Geo. Faussett, from Penn., who settled in the s. w. part in 1789.¹ There are 5 churches in town.²

OVID—was formed March 5, 1794. Hector (Schuyler co.) was taken off in 1802, and Covert in 1817. It lies s. of the center of the co., and extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake. Its surface consists of an arable ridge, 600 ft. above Seneca Lake and about 1,100 ft. above tide, ascending from w. of the center toward the lakes. The bluffs upon the lakes are 20 to 50 ft. high, and nearly perpendicular. A great number of small streams flow into both Cayuga and Seneca Lakes, the principal of which are Sheldrake, Osborn, Groves, and Barnum Creeks on the e., and Sixteen Falls Creek on the w. These streams have all worn deep, ragged ravines in the yielding shales. They are frequently interrupted by cascades, and in summer are nearly dry. The soil consists principally of clay and gravel intermixed with sand and the disintegrated rocks. Ovid, (p. v.) near the s. line, contains a courthouse, co. clerk's office, 3 churches, the Ovid Academy,³ a steam mill, and ax factory, and about 650 inhabitants. Ovid Landing is just over the town line in Romulus. Sheldrake Point, (Sheldrake p. o.) a steamboat landing upon Cayuga Lake, contains a church, steam sawmill, boat yard, and 168 inhabitants. Ovid Center contains 20 houses. Kidders Ferry, (p. o.) near the s. e. corner, and Scotts Corners, near the center, are hamlets. The first settlement was made in May, 1789, by Andrew Dunlap, from Penn., who located on Lot 8, in the s. w. part of the town.⁴ The first religious services were held at the house of Abraham Covert, in 1794. The first settled preacher (Ref. Prot. D.) was John Lindley, in 1800.⁵ The New York State Agricultural College and farm are located on the s. line of this town, w. of the village.⁶ In the s. part of the town are the remains of an ancient fortification.⁷

ROMULUS—was formed March 5, 1794. Fayette was taken off in 1800, and Varick in 1830. It lies s. of the center of the co., and extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly and has a general northerly inclination. The high bluff from Ovid extends into the s. border of the town, where it drops down abruptly about 200 ft. The land slopes from the center downward to the e. and w. The streams are small and generally flow in deep channels. The surface is smooth, except along the courses of the streams, and is nearly all arable. The soil is a fertile, gravelly and clayey loam. Romulus, (p. v.) on the line of Varick, contains a church, steam sawmill, female seminary, and 36 dwellings. Hyatts Corners, in the s. e., contains 20 dwellings. Romulus Center is a p. o. Whitneys Landing is a station upon Cayuga Lake; and Cooleys and Freleighs Points and Ovid Landing are stations upon Seneca Lake. The first settlement was made by David Wisner, in 1789. There is but one church (Bap.) in town.

¹ Mr. Faussett brought in his family in 1790. Jas. Jackson, from Penn., settled in the s. w. part in 1789; Silas Halsey, from L. I., near Lodi, in 1792. The next year his sons and sons-in-law and their families, numbering 18 persons, came in. The first child born was a daughter of Geo. Faussett. Peter Smith kept the first inn, and Silas Halsey built the first gristmill, in 1794.

² 3 M. E. Bap., and Ref. Prot. D.

³ In 1855 the name of this institution was changed to the Seneca Collegiate Institute.

⁴ The first settlers, mostly from Penn and N. J., followed the trail of Sullivan's army and located in the w. part of the town. Among them were Wm. Dunlap and Joseph Wilson, from Penn., Peter Smith, from N. J., and Henry Wharton, in 1789; Abraham Covert and his son Abraham A., from N. J., in 1790; Elijah Kinn, from Dutchess co., and John Seely, from Saratoga co., in 1792; Nicholas and Richard Huff, Peter Hughes, Abraham De Witt and his son James, in 1793; and William and Edw. Dunlap, and Tennis Covert, in 1794. In the summer of 1795, Jonas C. Baldwin settled on Lot 11, where he remained until 1801, when he sold out and removed to Lysander, Onondaga co., and laid the foundation of Baldwinsville. The first child born was David, son of Andrew Dunlap, Feb. 2, 1793; and the first death was that of George Dunlap, brother of Andrew, Sept. 21, 1791. A triple marriage in 1793 was the first in town. The parties were Joseph Wilson and Anna Wyckoff; Abraham A. Covert and Catherine Covert; and Ench Stewart and Jane Covert. They were obliged to cross Seneca Lake to find a justice authorized to perform the ceremony. Benj. Minger taught the first school, in 1795; John McWhorter kept the first store, in 1797, and the first inn, in 1800; and B. Boardman erected the first mill, in 1793, on Lot 2.

⁵ There are now in town 7 churches; 2 Presb., 2 M. E., Ref. Prot. D., Bap., and R. C.

⁷ On Lot 19, within 1 mi. of the s. line of the town, and exactly on the dividing ridge between the two lakes, once existed a mound or fortification of an irregular, elliptical form, including about 3 acres, and surrounded by an embankment of earth, which in 1801 was about 3 feet in height, with a base of 8 feet in width. The present proprietor, George Robinson, with his father, removed here in 1802, and built a house within the enclosed space, where he has since resided until within a few

STATE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

SENECA FALLS—was formed from Junius, March 26, 1829. It lies upon the w. bank of Cayuga Lake, s. of the center of the co. The surface is nearly flat, and it is elevated 30 to 50 ft. above Cayuga Lake. The shores of the lake are low and shelving, and the s. portion is swampy. Seneca River flows e. and s. through the center of the town, its valley dividing the town into two distinct parts. The river flows over a series of ledges into a deep chasm apparently worn by its waters. Just e. and s. w. of the village are extensive gypsum quarries. The soil is a stiff, hard clay in the s. and e., a sandy loam in the s. w., and a heavy vegetable muck in the s. e. Seneca Falls, (p. v.)¹ upon Seneca River, near the center of the town, was incorp. April 22, 1831. It is a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. and the Seneca Canal. The total fall is 51 feet, and furnishes an abundance of water-power, which is largely improved. It contains 7 churches, the Seneca Falls Academy, a union school, 2 newspaper offices, extensive manufactories of fire engines, pumps, machinery, iron, and wooden goods, and a great variety of other articles.² Pop. about 4,000. The first settlement was made by Job Smith, from Ulster co., upon the present site of the village in 1787; he left in 1793. The first permanent settler was Lawrence Van Clief, in 1789.³ The first religious services were held by M. E. missionaries, about 1797; and the first regular minister was Rev. Matthew Stewart, (Presb.,) in 1804.⁴

TYRE—was formed from Junius, March 26, 1829. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. The e. half is a swamp, being the s. termination of the Montezuma Marshes. The w. half is occupied by peculiar drift ridges similar to those already described in Junius. These ridges are 20 to 50 feet high, and generally have very steep declivities upon all sides except the s. One of the longest of these, in the w. part of the town, extends nearly two-thirds of the distance from the s. line to the s. Its summit is nearly level; and the road which is located upon it appears as though built upon an artificial embankment. The soil is clay and muck in the e. and a gravelly loam in the w. Tyre City, (Tyre p. o.) near the center, contains 2 churches and 20 dwellings. Cruso is a p. o. on the s. line. The first settlement was made by Ezekiel Crane, from N. J., who came in 1794.⁵ The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1805. Elder Don Ralph was the first preacher.⁶

VARICK—was formed from Romulus, Feb. 6, 1830. It extends from Seneca to Cayuga Lake, across the center of the co. Its surface is slightly inclined toward the s. The slopes of the ridges are years. The work was evidently of great antiquity,—the timber on the inside being of the same size and apparent age of that in the surrounding forest. Upon the bank and in the ditch large oak trees—the growth of centuries—were standing. In the embankment were several openings a few feet in width, which were once probably used for gates or entrances. In making an excavation for a cellar, on the e. side, 6 skeletons were found at the depth of about 2 feet. This was in 1837. Several had been found previously; and, though all the softer parts of the bones had long since disappeared, the teeth and a few of the larger bones still remained. Beside of the embankment may still be found pieces of a coarse kind of pottery, ornamented pipes, &c. Dr. W. H. Clinton visited this place in 1810; and his theory is that this was one of a number of similar works of defense found occupying the most commanding positions in Western New York, and in the valleys of the Ohio and Mississippi, erected by a race more civilized than the Indians, and that they preceded the latter in the occupation of this country; their origin and end are alike a mystery; their annals defy the ken of human research, and their history will remain a sealed book perhaps forever. The Indians were never able to give any account of this fortification, as it was older than their traditions.

² Downs & Co's manufacturing establishment, commenced in 1840, has a capital, including real-estate and machinery, of about $200,000. They are largely engaged in the manufacture of pumps and a great variety of other articles, use annually 3,800 tons of iron, 1,000 tons of coal, and employ 250 hands. Their yearly sales amount to about $400,000. They also manufacture Goff's Patent Knitting Machine, and are largely engaged in the manufacture of hose, turning out 800 pairs per day; 70 persons are employed in this department. The Island Works of Sibley, Mynderse & Co., commenced in 1848, is engaged in the manufacture of steam fire engines, portable steam engines, and a variety of other machinery. It employs 150 persons, and turns out work to the amount of $200,000 per year. Gowing & Co's works commenced about 1840. The year engaged in the manufacture of fire engines, pumps, and various other articles,—employ 140 men, and turn out work yearly to the amount of $125,000. The Phoenix Wooden Mills gives employment to 90 persons, and manufactures 2000 to the amount of $150,000 per annum. Besides these, there are in the place several flouring mills having in the aggregate 32 runs of stone, 2 distilleries, a brewery, 2 planing mills, a foundry and machine shops, a sash and lock factory, a wooden factory, and several minor manufactures. About 50 tons of iron are used daily in the several manufactures.—Travels in Rochester, Seneca Falls, 1850.

³ Mr. Smith was the first white settler upon the Military Tract. Mr. Van Clief was a Revolutionary soldier, having been in the battles of White Plains, with Washington at Red Bank, and with Sullivan in his campaign against the Indians. He settled on the river, and engaged in piloting boats over the rapids until the locks were built in 1810. Among the other early settlers were James Bennett, Col. John Hart, and ——— Parker. The first child born was a daughter of Lawrence Van Clief, Nov. 29, 1790; the first marriage, that of ——— Hy and Pamela Fortkum, in 1792; the first school was taught by ——— Leonard, in 1797. Lawrence Van Clief kept the first store, in 1794; and Col. Wilhelm Mynderse kept the first store, in 1796, and built the first saw and grist mill, about the same time. In 1794, Robert Trout, Nicholas Gwynne, Stephen C. Bayard, and Abraham Watson, under the title of the Bayard Company, bought of the State 100 acres of land on the s. side of the river, embracing the greater part of the water-power on that side. In 1798 they purchased 200 acres on the s. side, and in 1800, 250 acres more on the same side; the two purchases embracing all the water-power upon that side of the river. In 1810 they bought 400 acres more on the s. side, including the purchase of the water-power. In 1796 the company sold its fifth interest in their purchase to Col. Mynderse, who transferred him their agent. In 1795 the Upper End Mills were erected under his direction; and in 1807 the s. w. end Mills were erected. The Co. refused to sell their land, and to improve the immense water-power that they owned, and in 1820 broke down, and the property was sold by auction, both for $100,000. In 1820 30 the manufacturing interests of the place began to increase. About that time paper-mills were built by Messrs. Marshall, G. V. Sackett, and Ansel P. ———, and a clock factory, by Marshall & Adams. One of the best saw-mills, in 1815, the most important business of the place, was that of transporting goods and boats around the rapids. The "dress reform" movement was commenced in this town by Mrs. Annia Bloomer, who adopted the dress known as the Bloomer Dress in 1849.

⁴ The census reports 7 churches in town, Bap., M. E., W. C. Meth., Presb. T., Presb., and R. F.

⁶ There are 4 churches in town, Disciples, Bap., M. E., and R. F. P.

so gradual that nearly every part is arable. The streams are all small. Near the center of the town is a cranberry swamp, occupying about 800 acres. The soil is a gravelly loam intermixed with clay. Bearytown, (Fayette p. o.) upon the line of Fayette, in the s. e. part, contains 3 churches, a steam sawmill, stave factory, and 128 inhabitants, of whom 51 are in this town. Romulus (p. v.) lies on the s. border. East Varick (p. o.) is a landing upon Cayuga Lake. McDuffee Town is a hamlet in the s. e. corner. Varick is a p. o. The first settlement was made by James McKnight, in 1789.¹ There are 3 churches in town; Bap., Presb., and M. E.

WATERLOO—was formed from Junius, March 26, 1829. It lies on the s. bank of Seneca River, s. w. of the center of the co. The surface is almost one unbroken flat. A marsh extends e. and w. through the town s. of the center, and another occupies the s. e. corner.² The bed of Seneca River, on the s. boundary, is almost level with the general surface. The soil is muck and clay in the s. and e., gravel along the s. border, and a sandy loam in the center and w. Waterloo, (p. v.) on Seneca River, near the e. border of the town, was incorp. April 9, 1824. It is a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. and upon the Seneca Canal. A fall of 24½ feet in Seneca River furnishes an excellent water-power, which is mostly improved. It is a half-shire of the co., and contains the courthouse, 6 churches, the Waterloo Union School, a bank, a large shawl factory,³ 3 distilleries, 2 malt houses, 3 flouring mills, 5 sawmills, 2 foundries and machine shops, 2 oil mills, and numerous other manufactories.⁴ Seneca River above the falls, being seldom frozen, is navigable throughout the year. This village is an important depôt of lumber from the s. w. cos., and of coal from the Susquehanna and Blossburg Mines. Pop. 3,950. South Waterloo, formerly called "Schoyes," is on the opposite side of Seneca River, in Fayette. Settlement was commenced by John Greene, from R. I., in 1789.⁵ The first religious services were held about 1816.⁶

¹ The first child born was a son of James M. Knight, in 1790.
² The waters of Lake Brock flow through the central swampy region are impregnated with earthy and vegetable matter, which gives to them the peculiar quality of coloring the heads of cotton bales of the mercantiles of sulphate and carbonate of lime resulting from the use of hard water.
³ The Waterloo Woolen Manufacturing Co. was organized in 1836 with a capital of $150,000; 200 to 250 hinds are employed, 200,000 lbs. of wool are used, and 1,000,000 long shawls are annually manufactured. This is, next to the Bay State Mills, the largest shawl factory in America.
⁴ Among these establishments is a plaster mill, best of kind, and drydock, Cooper, tin, and sheet iron factories, a tanning mill, and washboard factory, and 2 cabinet and furniture shops.
⁵ Among the other early settlers were Job V. Gorham, from Ballston, (saratoga co.) who located upon the present site of the village, Salmon Dushow, from Saratoga co., came in about the same time. The first child born was John Smith, in 1788; the first marriage, that of Job Smith and Miriam Gorham, in 1790; and the first deaths, those of John Gregory and James Hill, two Revolutionary soldiers, who drew lots in this town, settled upon the property both died about 1808. Isaac Gorham taught the first school in 1810; Job V. Gorham kept the first inn about 1790; Charles Swatt, the first store, in 1815; and James S. Barlett the first mill, in 1790.

STEBEN COUNTY.

This county was formed from Ontario, March 18, 1796, and named in honor of Baron Steuben. The 7th Range of Townships was annexed to Allegany co. March 11, 1808, the part in the fork of Crooked Lake to Ontario co. Feb. 25, 1814, a part of Dansville to Livingston co. Feb. 15, 1822, and a part to Schuyler co. April 7, 1851. It lies upon the s. border of the State, considerably w. of the center, is centrally distant 188 mi. from Albany, and contains 1425 sq. mi. Its surface mostly consists of ridges and high, rolling uplands, forming the northern continuation of the Alleghany Mts. The watershed between Lake Ontario and Susquehanna River extends from Allegany co. eastward across the N. part of the co. The deep valley of Crooked Lake breaks the continuity of the highlands and extends 17 mi. s. w. from the head of the lake, connecting with the Conhocton Valley at Bath, and forming one of the numerous natural passes between the southern valleys and the Basin of Lake Ontario. The highlands occupying the s. w. corner of the co. also form a portion of the watershed, being drained by branches of Canisteo River on the e. and of Genesee River on the w. The highest summits in the co. are about 2,500 feet above tide.¹

The upland region has nearly a uniform elevation, with a slight inclination toward the s. It is intersected by numerous deep valleys, which have evidently been excavated by the action of water.² The formation of the steep hillsides which border upon these valleys is such as to prove conclusively that they were once united, and that a wide, rolling plateau spread over the region now so irregular and broken. The principal of these valleys are those of Canisteo and Conhocton Rivers, extending nearly s. w. and s. e. through the co. From these valleys numerous others diverge at nearly right angles and branch off into countless deep, crooked ravines, intersecting the plateau in every direction. The hills that border upon these valleys are usually steep and 300 to 600 feet high.

Conhocton River flows s. e. through near the center of the co. In high water it was once navigable for arks 14 mi. above Bath. It receives from the s. w. Neils, Bennetts, Campbells, Stockton, Michigan, and Stephens Creeks, and from the s. e. Twelve Mile, Ten Mile, Five Mile, (or Kanona), Mud,³ and Meads Creeks. Canisteo River flows through a valleys, w. of the Conhocton and nearly parallel to it. In freshets it rises 6 to 8 feet, and is then navigable for boats and arks about 40 mi. Its chief tributaries are Canacanda, Crosby, Purdy, Bennetts, Col. Bills, and Tuscarora Creeks, all from the s. w. Tioga River rises in Penn., flows s. through a deep, wild mountain valley, and unites with the Canisteo at Erwin, and with the Conhocton at Painted Post, from the latter place the combined stream taking the name of Chemung River.⁴ Canaseraga Creek, flowing s., drains the s. w. corner of the co.; and several small streams rising in the s. w. corner form branches of Genesee River. Crooked Lake lies along the s. e. border, in a deep valley nearly surrounded by steep hills 500 to 800 feet high. Little Lake lies in a shallow valley along the e. border of the town of Wayne. It discharges its waters s. into Mud Lake, and through Mud Creek into Conhocton River. Loon Lake, in Wayland, lies in a valley which is the southern continuation of the valley of Hemlock Lake in Livingston co. Still further s., in the same valley, is Mud Lake, a small sheet of water, the outlet of which flows s. and empties into the Conhocton.

The shales and sandstones of the Portage group outcrop in all the deep ravines in the s. part of the co. and in the w. bank of Crooked Lake. Elsewhere, the Chemung group composes most of the surface rocks. Near the State Line the highest hills are capped with a coarse, silicious conglomeration, which forms the floor of the coal measures.⁵ A feeble brine spring is found at La Grange,

² These valleys must have been excavated by more powerful currents of water than now flow through them; and their formation belongs to the drift period of geology.

³ Mud Creek is the outlet of Mud Lake, in Schuyler co. At the first settlement of the co. this stream was navigable, and arks were floated from Mud Lake down the creek, and the Conhocton to the Susquehanna, and thence to the Edinboro market. Since the clearing of the forests, this stream has entirely failed for purposes of navigation, and now, in summer, it is almost dry.

⁵ The rocks of this coarse conglomerate are shaly, and not fit for use. They are of the same age as the mudstone of Bath, as a shaly fragment of the latter is found in a prominent rock near the village of Hornellsville, in W. Ball, Canisteo, and 13 mi. from the summit of the high hills above mentioned, and 13 mi. s. w. At Arkport, in Dutchess, and at Trappsburgh, are fossils of the same which belong to the same period. Geol. Rep. N. Y., pp. 48, 49.

and sulphur springs in Campbell, Jasper, and Urbana. The soil in general is composed of detritus of the adjacent rocks, and is better adapted to grazing than tillage. Upon the intervalles along the larger streams the soil is a fertile alluvium. The extensive flats upon the Chemung are among the finest agricultural lands in the State. Agriculture forms the chief occupation of the people. Grain is largely produced on the alluvial lands, and stock is extensively raised on the uplands. Stock and wool growing and dairying are the principal branches of agriculture pursued. Lumbering is still extensively carried on,—though it is gradually decreasing. The manufactures are principally confined to lumber, articles of wool, and the heavier and coarser products necessary to an agricultural region.

The co. is divided into the northern and southern Jury Districts, the co. buildings being respectively situated at Bath and Corning.¹ The courthouse at Bath is a commodious brick building, erected in 1828.² The jail is built of wood and closely surrounded by other buildings. The cells for prisoners are in the basement, and are not provided with any means of ventilation. Its arrangements show a culpable neglect and an entire disregard of the general sentiments of the co. and of the age. The co. clerk's office is permanently located at Bath. The courthouse at Corning is a fine brick edifice, erected in 1853-54 at a cost of $14,000. The jail at Corning was erected at the same time. The courts are held alternately at Bath and Corning. The co. poorhouse is located upon a farm of 214 acres about 2 mi. s. e. of Bath Village.³ The average number of inmates is 75; and they are supported at an average weekly cost of $1.00 each. The farm yields a revenue of about $2,000. No instruction is afforded: but the children of proper age are bound out.

The New York & Erie R. R. enters the co. from Chemung and extends along the valleys of the Chemung, Tioga, and Canisteo Rivers to Hornellsville, and the Canacadea to the w. border of the co. It passes through Corning, Erwin, Addison, Rathbone, Cameron, Canisteo, and Hornellsville.⁴ The Buffalo, N. Y. & E. R. R. extends s. w. from Corning up the Conhocton Valley, through Erwin, Campbell, Bath, Avoca, Conhocton, and Wayland, to the s. border of the co. This road intersects the Genesee Valley R. R. at Avon, the N. Y. Central at Batavia, the Buffalo & New York City at Attica, and the N. Y. & Erie at Corning. The Hornellsville Division of the Buffalo, New York & Erie R. R. extends s. w. up the valley of the Canisteo from Hornellsville, passing through that town and the s. w. corner of Dansville. The Blossburg & Corning R. R. extends from Corning, through Erwin and Lindley, s. along the Tioga Valley to the Blossburg coal region. Crooked Lake is navigated by steam and canal boats, and forms a link in the chain of the internal water communication of the State. It is united with the Erie Canal at Montezuma by Crooked Lake Canal, Seneca Lake, and the Cayuga and Seneca Canals. The Chemung Canal navigable feeder extends from Corning e. to Horseheads, in Chemung co. Considerable lumber is floated down the rivers and finds a market at Philadelphia and Baltimore. These various works of internal improvement afford ample facilities for the transportation of goods and passengers, and bring the farm products of the co. into close proximity to the Eastern markets.

Six newspapers are published in the co.⁵

² The first co. officers were William Kersey, First Judge; Abraham Bradley and Eleazar Lindley, Associate Judges; Geo. D. Cooper, Co. Clerk; William Dunn, Sheriff; and Stephen Ross, Surrogate.

⁴ This road was opened to Corning, Jan. 1, 1849, and to Hornellsville, Sept. 3 of the same year.

⁵ The Bath Gazette and Genesee Advertiser, the first paper published in Western New York, was established at Bath by Wm. Kersey and James Edlie in 1796, and was continued several years. In 6 months from its first issue its circulation had reached 1000 copies.

The Steuben and Allegany Patriot was started at Bath in 1815 by Benj. Smead, and was continued until 1822. It was then changed to

The Farmer's Advocate and Steuben Advertiser. In 1849 it passed into the hands of William C. Rhoades, and in 1857 into those of P. S. Donahoe, by whom it is now published as

The Steuben Farmers' Advocate.

The Farmer's Gazette was commenced at Bath in 1816 by David Runney.

The Steuben Messenger was started at Bath, April 17, 1825, by David Runney, and was published by him, Saml. M. Edlie, Wm. P. Aguel, and Chas. Adams successively until 1834, when its name was changed to

The Constitutionalist, and its publication was continued successively by R. J. Underhill, Whitmore & Van Valkenburgh, and Dowe & Richards, and by the last named firm as

The Steuben Democrat, until 1841. The paper was then suspended. In 1848 it was renewed by L. J. Beech, and in 1849 it was transferred to Geo. H. Bidwell, by whom the publication was continued until 1852.

The Steuben Wlog was published at Bath during the political campaign of 1828, by William M. Swain.

The Steuben Courier was established at Bath in 1843 by Hall & Whittemore. It is now published by H. H. Hall.

The Temperance Gem was published at Bath in 1854, by Jenny and Caroline Runney.

The Addison Record was published in Addison by Isaac D. Booth from 1840 to 1842, and in 1849 by Dryden & Peck.

The Addison Advocate was published by H. D. Dyer in 1848-49.

The Voice of the Nation was commenced at Addison by R. Denton in 1852. In 1855 the paper passed to Anthony L. Underhill, by whom it was published until 1856, when it was removed to Bath and its name changed to

The Steuben American, and its publication continued until May, 1857.

The Canisteo Express was published at Addison in 1850 by T. Messenger.

Steben co. was all included in the Phelps and Gorham Purchase. It was sold by Phelps and Gorham to Robert Morris, who conveyed it to Sir Wm. Pulteney and others, in London. The territory was surveyed into townships, at 18 and 20 cts. per acre. The first settlements were made in 1787-90, by immigrants from Wyoming, Penn., who located upon Chemung River, in the s. l. part of the co. These early settlers were originally from Conn. About 1790, settlements commenced in the w. part, adjoining Yates co. In 1792-93, Capt. Chas. Williamson, agent of the Pulteney estate, commenced a settlement at Bath. He was accompanied by a large number of Scotch and German immigrants; and under his energetic and liberal policy the settlement progressed with great rapidity. The greater part of the early settlers came from Penn. by way of Susquehanna and Chemung Rivers. Subsequently large numbers came from Eastern New York, New England, and New Jersey.² The co. was divided by the Court of General Sessions, in 1796, into 6 towns, viz.: Bath, Canisteo, Dansville, Fredericton, Middletown, and Painted Post, comprising the territory now forming 31 towns of this co. and parts of Allegany, Yates, Livingston, and Schuyler cos. In 1790 the population was 168; in 1800 it was 1,788; and in 1855, 62,965. In extent of territory and in agricultural wealth it now ranks among the first cos. in the State.³

ADDISON⁴—was formed, as “Middletown,” in March, 1796. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A part of Troupsburgh was taken off in 1808, Cameron in 1822, a part of Woodhull in 1828, and a part of Rathbone in 1856. It lies upon the s. border of the co., just n. of the center. The surface is mostly a hilly upland, broken by the valley of the Canisteo and its branches. The principal valley is about 1½ mi. wide and is bordered by steep hillsides 300 to 400 feet high. The principal streams are Canisteo River, and the Tuscarora, Elks Lick, and Goodhue Creeks. Goodhue Lake, covering an area of about 500 acres, lies in the s. w. corner of the town. The soil is principally a clay loam, with strips of gravel and alluvium upon the streams. Addison, p. v., situated on Canisteo River, contains 3 churches, a bank, several mills and manufacturing establishments. Pop. about 1,300. South Addison (p. v.) contains 18 dwellings. Addison Hill is a p. o.

The Addison Journal was started in 1851 by R. Denton, and was removed to Allegany co. in 1862.

The Adeline Democrat was commenced by Chas. J. Phelps in 1853, and was merged in The Voice of the Nation in 1854.

The Addison Advertiser, established in 1858 by E. M. Johnson & Henry Baldwin, is still published.

The Canisvond Elogsbury Advocate was commenced at Corning in 1840 by Chas. Adams. In 1841 it passed into the hands of Henry H. Hull, by whom it was merged, in 1843, in the Steben Courier, at Bath.

The Corning Journal was commenced by Thomas Messenger in May, 1847. In 1851 it passed to A. W. McDowell and G. W. Pratt, and in 1852 to Dr. Pratt, its present publisher.

The Corning Sun was started in 1853 by M. M. Pomeroy and P. C. Van Gelder. In 1854 Rev. Ira Brown became the publisher, and changed its name to

The Flour's Southern Tar Lumber and Corning Sun, and continued it until 1856.

The United States Farmer was published at Corning in the spring of 1856.

The Corning Democrat was established in 1857 by Chas. T. Houston. It is now published by Frank B. Brown.

The Painted Post Gazette was started by — Fairchild in 1846, and continued 1 year.

The Painted Post Herald was published by Hawley & Bennett from 1848 to 1850.

The Hornellsville Tribune was commenced in Nov. 1851, by Edwin Burch. It is now published by E. Hough & Son.

The National American was established at Hornellsville in 1856 by C. M. Harmon. In Nov. 1858, it was sold to Chas. A. Knepp, and its name changed to the Canisteo Valley Journal.

A paper was published for a time at Hammond-port, on Crooked Lake.

1 Capt. Williamson was a Scotchman, and an officer in the British 24th regiment of infantry during the period of the Revolution; but he did not serve in the war, in consequence of having been made a prisoner by the French while crossing the Atlantic.

2 A large proportion of the first settlers upon the Canisteo were from Penn. and had within them a gossily infusion of that boisterous spirit and love of rough play for which the free and manly sons of the backwoods are everywhere famous. On the Susquehanna frontier, before the Revolution, had arisen an athletic, scuffling, wrestling race, lovers of hard blows, sharpshooters, and runners, who delighted in nothing more than in those ancient sports by which the locks and lunds of all stout hearted youths have been tested since the days of Hercules. The eating of bears, the drinking of grog, the day and night bonny, venison, and all the invigorating diet of the hunters; the hewing down of forests, the paddling of canoes, the hunting of savages, all combined to form a generation of venison and forests daring, rife, and free. Canisteo was a sportsman in this stout stock, and on the generous river flats flourished with amazing vigor. Every thing that could eat, drink, and waste was welcome. — Turk or Tuscarora, Anak or Anthony, Logan, Blue Beard or Blunderbore. A back hold with a rifle would not have been declined, nor a drinking match with a proscriber. Since the Canisteos never has there been better sported, or a "half-bred" tribe. To many of the settlers in other parts of the country, who emigrated from the districts only to the East and South, these boisterous foreigners were objects of astonishment. When "Canisteo" went abroad, the publishers of found it out. On the Continent they were by and by, as the Six Nations, and, to the amusement and wonder of young Europeans, would sometimes visit at both being of a good disposition, and sit all day, singing, telling stories, and drinking grog, and never get drunk, nay, till. To the stud and advent they were Arabic, caraballs, Biberons, &c. In the settlements, the elements of the olden world, as it were, were only to visits of necessity; but among the children of Canisteo in hand, and gave the settlement a nationality through the land which few striking villages ever met the people of the world. It was pretty well understood over all the country that the mountains of Steuben, in the midst of the great wilderness tract of the wilderness, by a certain wing of the Canisteos had been taken possession of by some very shrewd and bold whooping Mamelukes or Tartars no one could probably ever have supposed, and obstreperous burlier would not let anybody else settle the settlement. — M. Moore, Hist. Steuben County, p. 118.

3 This co. sympathized to some extent in the feelings of the late that prevailed throughout the U. S. and England, but these feelings were not so strong as they were in some instances, but in no instance were the passions of the country so completely or abnormally excited, and armed as they were, as they were for the interest of the free men of the world. There was, however, a little interest felt by the Canisteos in this matter, and the the of reaching the great first settlement from their land, and the heavy burden of debts, interest, and other things, payments, perhaps, not always borne with patience, have been gradually discharged, until but a comparatively small amount remains.

4 Named in honor of Joseph Addison, the English author called "Tuscarora" by the early settlers.

The first settlement was made by Samuel Rice, in 1791.¹ The first church (M. E.) was organized in 1827, at East Hill.²

AVOCA³—was formed from Bath, Cohocton, Howard, and Wheeler, April 12, 1843. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. The surface is mostly a broken upland, divided into two ridges by the valley of the Cohocton. The declivities of the hills are steep, and their summits are about 400 feet above the river. The streams are Cohocton River and its tributaries Twelve Mile and Ten Mile Creeks from the s., and Bennetts and Neils Creeks from the s. w. The valley of the river is about 1½ mile wide. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Avoca, (p. v.) situated in the valley of the Cohocton, is a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. It contains 2 churches, an iron foundery, and a flouring mill. Pop. 301. Wallace (p. o.) is a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. The first settlement was made in 1800, by Michael Buchanan.⁴ There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

BATH⁵—was formed March 18, 1796. Pulteney was taken off in 1808, a part of Howard and Cohocton in 1812, a part of Wheeler in 1820, Urbana in 1822, a part of Avoca in 1843, and a part of Cohocton in 1852. A part of Urbana was annexed April 26, 1839. It lies a little s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly. The Cohocton Valley, extending s. e. through the center, divides the town into two nearly equal parts. The s. half is a hilly upland, and the s. half consists of a series of wide valleys broken by several steep and isolated hills. The streams are Cohocton River and its tributaries Five Mile and Mud Creeks from the s., and Campbells and Stocktons Creeks from the s. The Crooked Lake Valley extends s. w., and opens into the Cohocton Valley at the village of Bath, 340 feet above the lake. The soil is chiefly a gravelly and clayey loam, with a deep alluvium in the valleys. Bath, (p. v.) incorp. April 12, 1816, is situated upon the s. bank of the Cohocton. It is a half-shire of the co. It commands the trade of a rich agricultural district and has a manufacturing business of considerable importance. It contains the co. buildings, 6 churches, 2 banks, and 2 newspaper offices. Pop. 2,012. Kanona,⁶ (p. v.) s. w. of Bath, a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R., contains 2 churches and 40 houses; and Savona,⁷ (p. v.) s. e. of Bath, a station on the same r. r., contains 2 churches and 232 inhabitants; Sonora (p. v.) contains 1 church and 20 houses. The first settlement was made at Bath Village, in 1793, by Charles Williamson, land agent for the Pulteney estate, with 15 families, mostly Scotch and Germans.⁸ The first settled minister was Rev. John Niles, who moved to the town in 1807.⁹

BRADFORD¹⁰—was formed from "Jersey," (now Orange, Schuyler co.) April 20, 1836. A part was annexed to Orange, April 17, 1854. It lies near the center of the e. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the valley of Mud Creek. Mud Lake, near the e. border, in Schuyler co., is 1,100 feet above tide, and the summits of the hills are about 600 feet above the lake. The soil is generally a gravelly and clayey loam and best adapted to pasturage. Bradford, (p. v.) on the outlet of Mud Lake, in the s. e. part of the town, contains 1 church and a grist-mill and has a pop. of 260. South Bradford (p. v.) contains 1 church and 20 houses.

¹ Among the first settlers were Elisha Gilbert, Saml. and Reuben Sears, John and Isaac Martin, Wm. Wombough, Wm. R. Jones, Israel Chamney, Jesse Rowley, Amos Carr, and Amos Towley. The first birth was that of Stephen Rice; the first marriage, that of Brown Gillespie and Miss Gilbert; and the first death, that of James Martin. Wm. Wombough built the first sawmill, in 1805, and the first grist-mill, in 1806. The first store was kept by Samuel Smith, and the first inn by Reuben Sears.

² The census reports 8 churches in town; 3 M. E., Bap., F. W. Bap., Prot. E., Presb., and E. C.

³ Probably named from Tom Moore's "Sweet Vale of Avoca." The early settlers called the place "Barbours," in the "Light Mile Tract."

⁴ James Moore, Joel Collier, Asa Phillips, James McWhorter, Emily McClure, Daniel McKenzie, Abraham Towner, Jonathan Tilt, A. James Babcock, John Banble, Richard and John Van Banker, Eleazer Tucker, — Moody, Henry and Allen Smith, James DAVIS and Samuel W. Burdum were among the first settlers. Michael Buchanan 21 was born in 1809; Michael Buchanan died in 1811, and James McWhorter and widow Buchanan were married in 1812. Eleazer Tucker built the first sawmill and Jonathan Tilt the first grist-mill in 1827. Joel Collier kept the first inn, in 1808, and Abner Simmons the first store, in 1820.

⁵ Name from Lady Bath, only child and heiress of Sir Wm. Pembroke, of London. She was succeeded July 16, 1808, by Sir John L. Johnson, of Scotland, who appointed Robert Troup agent. His Indian name was Tanghmagunda.—M. Masters's Hist. Steuben, pp. 111, 112.

⁷ Formerly "Mud Creek" p. o. Dingald and Charles Cameron, Thos. McTeaf, Hector McKenzie, Andrew Smith, Geo. McClure, James McDonald, Henry McElwee, James Reese, Robert Campbell, and William Dunn settled in the town in 1793; and Wm. Kersey, John Wilson, Geo. D. Cooper, Daniel McKenzie and Gustavus and Brown Gillespie soon after. Charles Williamson Dunn born in 1795, was the first male child born in town. The first saw and grist mills were built in 1793, by Charles Williamson; and the first inn was kept the same year, by John McTeaf.

The proprietors of the Pulteney estate indulged in visions of boundless wealth to result from the settlement of their lands. They supposed that the natural system to mark out the rich "Glenose country" was down the Susquehanna, and that a city might be founded upon some of the headwaters of that stream which would command the entire trade of the West. After a survey of the region, the present site of Bath was selected as the location of the future city. Every inducement was held out to lure settlers; and for several years the markets of Bath proved a mine of wealth to the few who raised more grain than enough for their own use. Williamson erected a theater within a few years after the first settlement, in anticipation of the future metropolitan character of the place. A race course was also established, which for many years attracted sportsmen from all parts of the county. The golden visions of civic grandeur were never realized.

⁸ The census reports 9 churches in town; 3 Presb., 2 Bap., 2 M. E., Prot. E., and R. C. ⁹ Named from Gen. Bradford.

The first settlement was made in 1793, by Frederick Bartles and John Hervey, from New Jersey.¹ Rev. E. Sanford was the first preacher in town; and Rev. Mr. Lazelle, (Bap.,) who settled in town in 1816, was the first settled minister. There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

CAMERON²—was formed from Addison, April 16, 1822. Thurston was taken off in 1844, and a part of Rathbone in 1856. It lies a little s. of the center of the co. Its surface is a high, rolling upland, broken by the deep valley of Canisteo River, which flows s. e. through near the center of the town. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Camerton, (p. v.,) on the Canisteo, is a station on the Erie R. R. and contains 2 churches and 35 houses; West Camerton (p. v.,) contains 1 church and 15 houses. North Camerton is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1800, by Richard Hadley, Phineas Green, Samuel Baker, and Ira Pratt.³ Rev. Ira Bronson (M. E.) was the first settled preacher. The census reports 5 churches.⁴

CAMPBELL⁵—was formed from Hornby, April 15, 1831. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface consists of high, broken ridges, separated by the valleys of the streams. The declivities of the hills are generally steep and their summits are 300 to 500 feet above the valleys. The streams are Conhocton River, flowing s. e. through the w. part of the town, and its tributaries Wolf Run, McNutt Run, Meads Creek, Dry Run, and Stephens and Michigan Creeks. The valley of the river is about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi. wide. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam upon the highlands and a rich alluvium in the valleys. Campbelltown, (p. v.,) on the Conhocton, is a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R., and contains 1 church, 3 sawmills, a flouring mill, 2 tanneries, and about 20 houses. Curtis is a station on the same r. r. ⁴ In the summer of 1779, a party of Tories and Indians, under the command of a loyalist named McDonald, returned from an excursion into the Susquehanna settlements, bringing with them many of their number wounded. At the confluence of Tioga and Cohocton Rivers, Captain Montour, son of the famous Queen Catherine, a chief of great promise, died of his wounds. His corse was buried him by the riverside, and planted above his grave a post on which were painted various symbols and rude devices. This monument was known throughout the Genesee Forest as "The Painted Post." It was a landmark well known to all the Six Nations, and was often visited by their braves and chiefs. This account of the origin of the Painted Post was given to Benj. Patterson, the hunter, by a man named Taggart, who was carried to Fort Niagara a prisoner by McDonald's party, and was a witness of the funeral of Capt. Montour, or at least was in the encampment at the mouth of the Tioga at the time of his death. Col. Harper, of Herpersfield, the well known chief of the frontier militia of New York in the Revolution, informed Judge Knox, of Knoxville, in this co., that the Painted Post was erected over the grave of a chief who was wounded at the battle of the "Hog-Back" and brought in a canoe to the head of the Chemung, where he died. It was well understood by the early settlers that this monument was erected in memory of some distinguished warrior who had been wounded in one of the border battles of the Revolution and afterward died at this place. The post stood for many years after the settlement of the co.; and the story goes that it rotted down at the butt, and was preserved in the bar room of a tavern till about the year 1810 and then mysteriously disappeared. It is also said to have been swept away in a freshet.—McMasters's Hist. Steuben. Sinn's Hist. Scholastic, p. 233.

⁵ In 1852, 40,000 tons of Blossburg coal, brought by the Blossburg & Corning R. R., were transhipped at this place, and 50,000,000 feet of lumber were exported.

Its surface is an upland, rolling in the n. and moderately hilly in the s. It forms a portion of the watershed between Susquehanna River and Lake Ontario; and its highest summits are 1,600 to 1,800 feet above tide. The streams are small creeks and brooks. Loon and Mud Lakes are situated in a valley in the s. part of the town, and their waters flow in opposite directions. The outlet of the former is subterranean for half a mi.; and where it comes to the surface it is in sufficient volume to form a valuable mill stream. The soil in the n. is gravel and muck, and in the s. a shady loam. Wayland, (Wayland Depot p. o.) in the n. e. part of the town, contains 40 dwellings. It is a station on the B., N. Y. & E. R. R. Perkinsville, 2 mi. s. w. of Wayland, contains 2 churches and 30 dwellings. Patchins Mills is a hamlet. Loon Lake is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1806-07, by Thos. Bowles and John H. Miller.¹¹ The census reports 3 churches.¹²

¹ Amos Dickinson settled in 1814; and Joseph Flint at Benny Hill in 1817. The first settlers at Aldrich settlement were William Jack, Samuel Fisk, and Thomas Aldrich, in 1823. The first child born was Irene Smith, in 1813; the first marriage, that of Joseph Flint and Emily Dickinson, in 1818; and the first death, that of Anderson Carpenter, killed by the falling of a tree, in 1817. The first school was taught at Benny Hill, by Caroline Vining, in 1818; the first store was kept by Harlow Sears, at Merchantsville. No tavern was ever kept in the town, and no license was ever granted to sell liquor.

² The census reports 4 churches; 2 M. E., Bap., and Christian.

³ Named from Robert Troup, of N. Y., general agent of the Pulteney estate.—Turner's Phelps and Gork in Patches, p. 279.

⁴ This institution has an average attendance of about 60 pupils.

⁷ In 1867, 200 acres were devoted to vineyards; and the success of the experiment was so great that the number of acres was doubled in 1868. There are about 2,000 acres in town with the s. and e. inclination adapted to this purpose.

⁸ Samuel Baker, Eli Beal, and William Barney settled in Pleasant Valley in 1794; and Capt. Amos Stone, Capt. John Shethor, James Shethor, and Richard Daniels in 1795. These settlers were from New England, most of them from Conn. They had served through the Revolutionary War, some of them with distinction as officers; and all were united to the privations and dangers incident to pioneer settlement. The first child born was Saml. Baker, jr.; the first marriage, that of Jonathan Barney and Polly Aulls, in 1794; and the first death, that of John Phillips, in sept. of the same year. Eliphalet Norris taught the first school, in 1795, at Pleasant Valley; Caleb Chapman kept the first inn, at N. Urbana; Henry A. Townsend the first store, at Cold Spring, in 1815. John Shethor built the first sawmill, in Pleasant Valley, in 1795; and Gen. Geo. McClure the first gristmill, at Cold Spring, in 1802.

⁹ The census reports 6 churches; 2 Bap., and 1 each Presb., M. E., Prot. E., and R. C.

¹⁰ Named from Rev. Dr. Francis Wayland, of R. I.

¹¹ Among the early settlers were Adam Zimmerman, David Brown, — Ruizler, Stephen Hicks, Thos. Bigole, Solomon, James, and Eli-ha Brownson, Isaac Willie, Walter and Dr. Warren Patchin, Dennis Hess, Benj. Perkins, and Samuel Draper. The first sawmill was built by Benj. Perkins; and the first gristmill, by Dugald Cameron and Abijah Fowler, in 1816. Saml. Taggart kept the first inn, in 1827; and James L. Monier the first store, in 1830. The first school was taught by Thos. Wilbur, in 1811.

WAYNE¹—named in honor of Gen. Anthony Wayne—was formed, as The Lake Co.,² Mar. 11 18, 1796. Its name was changed April 6, 1808. Reading (Schuyler co.) was taken off in 1806; Orange (Schuyler co.) in 1813, and Barrington (Yates co.) and Tyrone (Schuyler co.) in 1822. A part was annexed to Tyrone April 17, 1854. It is situated upon Crocked Lake, on the e. border of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, 100 to 600 feet high, descending abruptly to the lake. Little Lake is a beautiful sheet of water lying along the e. border. The soil is a gravelly and slaty loam underlaid by hardpan. Wayne³ (p. o.) on the line of Tyrone (Schuyler co.) contains 3 churches and 40 houses. Wayne Four Corners is a p. o. The first settlement was made in 1791, by Zephaniah Hoff, Henry Mapes, Widow Jennings, and Solomon Wixson.⁴ Rev. Ephraim Sanford (Bap.) was one of the first settlers, and for many years the only clergyman in town. There are 2 churches in town; M. E. and Union.

WEST UNION—was formed from Greenwood, April 25, 1845. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is a broken and hilly upland, the highest summits being 2,000 to 2,400 feet above tide. A large part of the town is yet covered with forests. Bennets Creek is the principal stream. The soil is a heavy, slaty loam. Lumbering is extensively pursued. Rexville (p. o.) and Wileysville (p. o.) are hamlets. West Union is a p. o. The first settler was Abraham V. Ohnsted, who located at Rexville in 1822.⁵ The first church (M. E.) was formed at Rexville in 1831. There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

WHEELER⁶—was formed from Bath and Prattsburgh, Feb. 25, 1820. A part of Avoca was taken off in 1843, and a part of Urbona in 1839. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is a high, rolling upland, broken by the valleys of Five Mile and Ten Mile Creeks and of several small lateral streams. The soil is a shaly and clayey loam, well adapted to both grazing and tillage. Mitchellville (p. v.) contains 20 houses; and Wheeler Center (Wheeler p. o.) 1 church and 15 houses. The first settlement was made in 1799, by Capt. Silas Wheeler, from Albany co.⁷ Rev. Ephraim Eggleston (Bap.) conducted the first religious services, in 1802. There are 2 churches in town; Presb. and M. E.

WOODHULL⁸—was formed from Troupsburgh and Addison, Feb. 18, 1828. A part of Rathbone was taken off in 1856. It is the central town upon the s. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, a considerable portion of which is yet covered with forests. Tuscarora Creek, flowing e. through the northerly part of the town, is the principal stream. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Lumbering is carried on to some extent. Newville, (Woodhull p. o.), on Tuscarora Creek, contains 3 churches and several manufacturing establishments. Pop. 215; Hedgesville contains 10 houses. The first settlement was made in 1805, by Stephen Dolson, Daniel Johnson, Patrick Breakhill, Bethuel Tubbs, and Samuel B. Rice.⁹ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1830; and the Rev. Mr. Pomeroy was the first pastor. There are 4 churches in town.⁹

³ Ones, Joseph, and James Sibley, Abraham Hendricks, Joshua Smith, John Holbridge, Ephraim Reynolds, and Ephraim Teter were among the early settlers. The first birth was that of Elizabeth Wixson, Nov. 6, 1793; and the first marriage, that of Ephraim Sanford, Jr. and Julia Hoff. Jas. Sibley kept the first store, and Knos Sibley the first inn. The first school was taught by Nathaniel Frisbee, in 1795.

⁶ Nathan Rose, Wm. Holmes, and Turner Gardner settled in town in 1799. Col. Jonathan Barney and Thos. Anils in 1800; Philip Murtle in 1802; and Otto F. Marshall and others, named Bear, Erad and Rife, in 1803. William, son of Jonathan Barney, was born Nov. 1, 1801, and died Dec. 1, 1802. The first birth and death in town. Hon. Gratton H. Wheeler was a party to the first marriage. Capt. Wheeler built the first saw-mill in 1822, and Geo. W. Taylor the first grist-mill in 1806-07. Col. H. B. Rice kept the first inn, in 1820; and Cornelius Van Slyke, the first store, in 1835. The first school was taught by Fred Chapman.

⁷ Capt. Wheeler's first trip to mill is worthy of record. Here was, at the time when he had occasion to go to mill, three institutions in the neighborhood where grinding was done, at the Friends' settlement, at Bath, and at Naples. The mill-stones of both had suspended operations, there being nothing there to grind, as was reported. Capt. Wheeler made a cart, of which the wheels were sawn from the end of a log, and made a box of corresponding architecture. He started for Naples with two oxen attached to this vehicle. Two oxen went before the oxen with axes and chopped a road, and the clumsy chariot came floundering through the mud, splashing over the logs and snubbing the stumps, like a ship working through an ice field. The first day the oxen led up a little beyond the present village of Prattsburgh, a distance of six miles from their starting point, on the s. w. corner of the property at the mill at Naples.—M. Malver's Hist. Steuben Co., p. 165-196.

⁸ Named in honor of Gen. Nathaniel W. Hall, 14th Reg. Inf. N. Y.

⁹ Caleb Smith settled in the town in 1808. The first birth was that of Polly Smith, the first marriage, that of F. V. Robinson and Cynthia Tubbs, and the first death, that of Benj. Tubbs. Caleb Smith built the first saw-mill, in 1807. John Wiley kept the first inn, in 1807. In 1808 the first store, the first school was taught by A. M. C. Thomas.

* Formed since 1855.

SUFFOLK COUNTY.

This county¹ was organized Nov. 1, 1683. It occupies the e. part of Long Island, embracing about two-thirds of its area, and includes several smaller islands off the e. and s. coasts. It is centrally distant 138 mi. from Albany, and contains 1,200 sq. mi. The e. extremity of the island is divided by Great and Little Peconic and Gardners Bays into two narrow, unequal branches, between which are Gardners, Shelter, and Robins Islands. A chain of islands extends from the s. branch nearly to the Conn. shore.² A belt composed of alluvial sand and shingle, broken only by occasional hills, skirts the s. shore of the island, enclosing several large, irregular bays, the principal of which are Great South, East, Shinnecock, and Mexico Bays. This great beach is a line of spits and islands. One of the islands is about 25 mi. long, with a breadth of a few hundred yards. They are all narrow and long; and when above the reach of the surf they are covered by a labyrinth of hillocks of drifted sand, imitating almost all the variety of form which snow drifts present after a storm.³

The action of the waves and winds is gradually extending this beach. Off the s. coast the sea is very shallow; 50 mi. from the shore its depth nowhere exceeds 40 fathoms; and sandbars at a considerable distance from the beach approach so near the surface as to break the waves into a surf. The traveler along the beach is seldom out of sight of a wreck.⁴ Irregular branches project inland from Long Island Sound, in the w. part of the co., and from the bays upon the s. and e. The peninsulas and points thus formed are locally known as "necks." Upon the s. side of the island these necks generally take the name of the stream e. of them. An irregular range of hills extends e. and w. through the co., a little s. of the center. A second range, commencing in Brookhaven, extends into the s. branch of the island, terminating at Canoe Place and reappearing farther e. as the Shinnecock Hills. Along the s. border of the co. the surface is somewhat broken; but in the s. it is very level. In the e. part are several fresh water lakes, and a few in the central and w. parts, the principal of which is Lake Ronkonkoma, on the w. border of Brookhaven. The principal streams are Peconic River, in the e., and the Connecticut, in the central part. The soil is generally a light, sandy loam, moderately fertile along the coasts; but in some parts the surface consists of almost sterile plains or barren sandhills. The interior of the island, from near the foot of the hills to within one or two mi. of South Bay, is occupied by the "brush plains," which are sparsely inhabited and hardly susceptible of cultivation. Thousands of acres of these plains were burned over in 1844 and '45; and a thin growth of scruboak, 3 to 4 feet high, has since sprung up on the burned tract.⁵ Along the coast are extensive salt marshes. No native rock is found within this co.; and the whole island, except a few rocks near Hellgate, appears to belong to the drift formation or to have been formed as a strand of the sea. The waters of the sea are slowly encroaching upon the land of the e. and s. parts.

The various branches of agriculture form the leading industrial pursuits.⁶ Successful husbandry in this co. involves a large expenditure for fertilizers,⁷ which to considerable extent are obtained from the neighboring seas. Immense quantities of bony fish⁸ are caught for this pur-

² These islands appear to have been separated from the mainland and from each other by tidal currents, which flow between them with great force. — N. Y. Geological Survey, Mather.

⁴ Some of these tracts are 8 to 10 mi. long, and 2 to 4 wide. The fires destroyed not only the forest trees, but every vestige of vegetation, and thousands of cords of wood, made use of deer and other animals, perished in them. These lands are valuable only for the timber upon them; and when that is destroyed they become nearly worthless.

⁵ Corn and potatoes are the leading agricultural productions. This co. exceeds all others in the State in the amount of crops raised. Wheat is one of the principal crops.

⁷ These fish are the Clupea pholidota, or mackerels, and are usually called "bunk fish" or "skipjacks." They are caught from May to Nov., in some quantities, principally at a single haul, a few years since, 1,000,000 were taken. They are sold at an average price of $1 per 75. They are usually stowed up in the sun, as a top dressing, or plow it under, but are sometimes rotted with cut the s. end and other, and being kept in heaps, the stench of these decaying fish is extremely unpleasant and almost overpowering to strangers.

pose, and are used either alone or in connection with seaweed, stable manure, compost, guano, ashes, and other fertilizers. Oysters and clams abound in the bays and seas around the island; and the taking of these, and fishing, form the principal occupations of the inhabitants along the shore. From the first settlement of the co. considerable attention has been given to whaling. This business was originally carried on in open boats from the shore;¹ but large vessels are now sent upon long voyages to the Polar Seas.² The preparation of "fish guano," and oil from hankers,³ shipbuilding, and brickmaking are the principal manufacturing interests of the co.⁴ At Fire Island, Greenport, and Orient, and at most of the villages along the s. county road, are extensive hotels, especially fitted for the accommodation of families from New York City, great numbers of whom spend the summer months at these public houses or in private families.

The county seat is located at Riverhead.⁵ The courthouse is a fine two story brick building, situated near the depôt, and contains the usual county offices, and accommodations for the sheriff's family.⁶ The jail, situated in rear of the courthouse, is a two story stone octagonal building. The county clerk's office is a fireproof brick building. The co. has no poorhouse.⁷

The first regulation concerning public roads was adopted under authority of an act of General Assembly passed in 1721, and was kept alive by repeated enactments. Commissioners appointed by this authority about 1733 laid out 3 principal roads from w. to e. These were called the North, Middle, and South Country Roads, and upon them the principal villages and settlements are located. The project of opening a navigable communication between the bays upon the s. shore of the island was recommended by Gov. Clinton in 1825, and was subsequently authorized by law, but was never carried into effect.⁸ The Long Island R. R. affords the principal avenue of business through the island.⁹ Short stage routes connect the several villages along the n. and s. shores with the r. r.

Seven newspapers are published in the co.; 2 at Greenport, 2 at Huntington, 1 at Sag Harbor, 1 at Patchogue, and 1 at Riverhead.¹⁰

When Long Island first became known, it was inhabited by 13 tribes of Indians, of which all but two resided wholly or in part in this co.¹¹ Of these the Montauks were the most numerous

² The whaling interest of this co. received a severe check upon the discovery of gold in California. Many whaleships were fitted out for the trade with that region, and upon the reaction that followed were sold. The number of whaleships now belonging to the co. is 23; and the greatest number at any one time (in 1845-47) was 85.

⁶ This building was erected in 1844 and 55, at a cost of $17,800. The committee appointed to superintend its erection were Saml R. Spill, Wm R. Post, and Sylvester Miller. By an act passed April 9, 1813, the clerk of this co. was authorized to establish his office in two places, and to appoint a deputy to have charge of one. The records migrated between Islip and Southold, and were kept many years at Smithtown. The records of wills in this co. extend back to 1669. The records of the court of General Sessions and Common Pleas have been separately recorded since 1725.

⁷ Most of the towns have poorhouses, at which no paupers are provided for at the co. expense.

⁹ The road was opened to Farmington Oct. 15, 1811, to Yaphank June 26, 1842, and to Greenport July 23, 1841.

¹⁰ Frothingham's Long Island Herald was established at Sag Harbor May 19, 1791, by David Frothingham. In 1802 it was sold to Sellick Osborn, and changed to The Suffolk County Herald. It was sold in Feb. 1804, to Alden Spooner, and its name was changed to The Suffolk Gazette, and in Feb. 1811, it was discontinued.

The Suffolk Co. Recorder was established at Sag Harbor Oct. 19, 1816, by Saml. A. Sedbury. In 1817 it was changed to The American Eagle; 2 years afterward it was discontinued. The Corrector was started at Sag Harbor Aug. 3, 1822, by H. W. Hunt, and is now published by A. C. Hunt.

The Republican Watchman was commenced at Sag Harbor in Sept. 1825, by Saml. Phillips. In Sept. 1844, it was removed to Greenport, where it is now published by S. Phillips & Son.

The Suffolk Times was started at Greenport in Aug. 1857, by John J. Riddell, its present publisher.

The American Eagle was established at Huntington, in 1821 by Saml. A. Sedbury. In May, 1825, it was changed to

The Long Island Journal of Philosophy and Natural History, (now) published by Samuel Fleet. In 1827 it was changed to

The Patriot, and was discontinued in 1829.

The Long Islander was started at Huntington in July, 1838, by Walter Whitman, and is now published by Geo. H. Shepard.

The Suffolk Democrat was started Feb. 17, 1847, at Huntington, and is now published by Edw. and Strahan.

The Suffolk Herald was commenced at Riverhead in Aug. 1849. After 18 months it was removed to Sag Harbor. In Dec. 1854, it was brought back to Riverhead, and was soon after discontinued.

The Suffolk Herald was established at Patchogue Aug. 14, 1858, by Van Zandt & Co., its present publishers.

The Suffolk Union was started at Riverhead in 1859 by Washington Van Zandt.

These tribes were the "Catawases," occupying Kings co. and a part of Jamaica; the "Beekmantons," the country about Beekmantown and parts of Jamaica and Newtown; the "Matinecock," the w. side of the island, from Flushing to the r. line of Huntington; the "Nesquepuns," the country from the r. line of Huntington to Stony Brook; the "Sachkams," that from Stony Brook to Wading River; the "Cochepunks," all the S. branch of the Island E. of Wading River; the "Merepunks," and "Murepunks," the country upon the s. side of the w. end of Suffolk co.; the "Tahpogues," the country from the w. line of the co. to the r. part of Islip; the "Pachepunks," from the r. line of Islip to the w. part of S. Place; the "Shanepunks," the country around Green Place, and thence to Easthampton; the "Montauks," that are now included in the town of Easthampton; and the "Mashkunks," occupying Shelter Island. Of all these tribes there now remain and powerful; and the consent of Wyandance,¹ their grand sachem, was necessary to the validity of all Indian grants of that date upon the island. The earliest settlement within the co. was made in 1639, on Gardners Island, under title derived from James Parrett, agent of the Earl of Sterling, to whom a grant of the whole of Long Island had been made by the Plymouth Company.² Southold and Southampton were settled in 1640, Easthampton in 1648, Shelter Island in 1652, Huntington in 1653, Brookhaven in 1655, and Smithtown in 1668, by English immigrants from New England. These settlers were strongly imbued with Puritan doctrines and zealously devoted to their strict observance.³ They naturally sought alliance with the adjacent New England colonies, to whom they were warmly attached, and with whom they were closely united until they were brought under the government of New York. Among the first measures taken by the colonists was the establishment of religious worship and schools, which in most of the towns date from the first or second year of settlement. These were commonly supported by tax, often levied in kind, and sometimes coupled with privileges and grants that are still recognized.

The patents granted by the New York governors created corporations, with municipal powers and privileges which were liberal for that period. These have never been changed, and are still valid. The rights were of two classes,—one belonging to all who might gain a residence and citizenship within the town, and the other pertaining only to the persons named in the patents and their heirs at law. During the Revolution most of the inhabitants of the co. warmly espoused the cause of the colonists; but after the battle of Long Island the British ascendancy was complete, and few opportunities occurred for assisting in the popular movement. Several bold and successful incursions were made by partisan corps; but the armed occupation of the island was at no time interrupted.⁴ During the latter part of the War of 1812 an English fleet was stationed off the eastern coast; but few depredations were committed. The history of the co. from that day to the present is only the record of the industrial pursuits of a thriving people.

BROOKHAVEN—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, March 13, 1668, with the usual privileges of a township;⁵ and Dec. 27, 1686, the patent was confirmed by Gov. Dongan, and extended privileges were granted.⁶ It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It occupies the entire width of Long Island, near the center of the co. n. and w. It has 20 mi. of coast on Long Island Sound, 21 on South Bay, and above 30 on Fire Island, which skirts the whole s. coast. Patchogue and Bellport Bays, upon the s. coast, are branches of Great South Bay; and Old Mans Harbor and Port Jefferson, Conscience, Setauket, and Flax Pond Bays, are indentations upon the n. coast from L. I. Sound. The principal capes upon the n. coast are Cranes Neck, Old Field Point,⁷ Little Neck,⁸ Dyers Neck,⁹ Mount Misery, and Rocky Point. A range of low hills extends across the n. part of the town, but elsewhere the surface is level. The principal streams are Peconic River, in the n. part, and the Connetquot, in the central. There are several fresh water ponds of great depth and purity in the town, many of which have no outlet. The soil along the coast, both upon Long Island Sound and South Bay, is a moderately fertile, light, sandy loam, and in the interior it is generally unproductive. Along the streams near their mouths are numerous salt meadows. Port Jefferson¹⁰ (p. v.) is situated at the head of Port Jefferson Bay, on the n. coast. It has a good harbor, and shipbuilding is largely carried on.¹¹ Pop. 1,247. Setauket, (p. v.) on the bay of the same name, contains 2 churches and 4 shipyards and has a pop. of 1,136. Stony Brook,¹² (p. v.) near the line of Smithtown, contains 1 church and has a pop. (in this town) of 542. Mt. Sinai,¹³ (p. v.) on Old Mans Harbor, has a pop. of 276. Millers Place,¹⁴ (p. v.) Rocky Point, and Sweeys but a few individuals in Islip and Brookhaven, about 200 at Shinnecock, and 5 families on Montauk Point. They have lost all knowledge of their language, using only the English, and are intelligent and civilized. They have intermarried to a considerable extent with negroes, and are probably of more than half African blood.

² This grant was made in 1634, and, at the request of Charles I. Ferrett was appointed agent in 1667.—Hugh's Nantucket Paper, &c.

⁴ By the act of May 6, 1784, the sum of £10,000 was levied upon this co. as a "bail tax" for defraying expenses incurred in the wars.

⁶ This instrument provided that 7 trustees should be annually elected, in whom the royal ownership of the parts of the town should be vested.—John Fisher, Richard Woodhull, Samuel Loring, Andrew Gibb, Wm. S. Smith, Thos. Jenner, and Thos. Helme were named as the first trustees.

⁷ The Indian name of this point was Cranes Neck.

⁸ Called by the Indians "Montauk Point."

⁹ Its Indian name was "Peconic."

¹⁰ Formerly known as "Peconic Harbor" and called "Stony Brook" by the Indians.

¹¹ There are 4 shipyards upon the s. side of the harbor, and 3 upon the w.

¹² Called by the Indians "Wagon Point." The great quantities of shells found near the banks indicate that this was a favorite residence of the natives.

¹³ Called by the Indians "Nonesuch Point."

¹⁴ Named from Andrew, son of John Miller, one of the pioneers of Easthampton.

Landing are hamlets on the coast of Long Island Sound. Patchogue¹ (p. v.) is situated on Patchogue Bay, in the s. w. part of the town. It contains 4 churches, an academy, and manufactories of twine, paper, cotton, ropes, and flour. Pop. 1,562. Bellport, (p. v.) on the w. side of Bellport Bay, contains 1 church and an academy. Shipbuilding is carried on to a considerable extent. Pop. 383. Blue Point,² (p. o.) in the s. w. part, is a hamlet. Fire Place, (p. v.) on Bellport Bay, contains 1 church and about 35 houses; Moriches,³ 4 churches and 50 houses; East Moriches, (p. v.), 40 houses; and West Moriches (Moriches p. o.) and Seafuck, hamlets, are situated near the coast of East Bay. Yaphank,⁴ (p. v.), a station on the Long Island R. R., containing 3 churches and 35 houses, and South Haven, (p. v.) containing 1 church and 20 houses, are situated on Connecticut River. Mastic⁵ is a hamlet on Mastic River. Middle Island, (p. o.) containing 2 churches, Selden, (p. o.) 1 church, New Village, (p. o.) 1 church, and Coram,⁶ (Cor-am.) (p. o.) are hamlets in the central part; and Wampmissic,⁷ containing 1 church, and Manorville,⁸ (p. o.) are hamlets in the e. part. Center Moriches is a p. o. Waverly, and Medford, are hamlets and r. r. stations. The town poorhouse is located near Coram, upon a small farm purchased in 1817 at a cost of $900. The lighthouse on Old Fields Point was built in 1823; and another on Fire Island, near Fire Island Inlet, was built in 1858.⁹ The first settlement was made at Setauket,¹⁰ in 1655, by a colony of immigrants from near Boston, Mass.¹¹ The land was bought from the Setauket Indians, and the sale confirmed by a release from Wyandance, Sachem of Montauk. This settlement was received under the government of Conn. in 1661, and Richard Woodhull and Thos. Pierce were appointed magistrates by the General Court. The tract of land between Islip and Bellport, extending to the center of the island, was purchased of the natives by John Winthrop in 1666, and the title confirmed March 29, 1680.¹² Col. Wm. Smith purchased Little Neck, Oct. 22, 1686, and an extensive tract e. of Connecticut River, extending northward to the center of the co., in May, 1691.¹³ Fort St. George, a strongly fortified British post on South Bay, was surprised and taken by a party of 80 men, under Maj. Tallmadge, Nov. 21, 1780. They crossed Long Island Sound from Conn., landing at Old Mans Harbor, marched to Coram, where they destroyed a large amount of forage, and then to Fort St. George, which they captured without the loss of a man. Over 50 men were made prisoners, and a large amount of property was destroyed.¹⁴ Gen. Woodhull,¹⁵ Pres. of the Second and Third Provincial Congresses, Gen. Wm. Floyd, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, Col. Richard Floyd,¹⁶ and Maj. Wm. H. Smith, were residents, and Maj. Benj. Tallmadge was a native, of this town. In the infancy of the settlement a building was erected at Setauket, which served the double purpose of a townhall and church.¹⁷ There are now 26 churches in town.¹⁸

EAST HAMPTON—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, March 13, 1666,¹⁹ and confirmed by Gov. Dongan, Dec. 9, 1686. It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies at the e. extremity of Long Island, s. of Gardners Bay and Long Island Sound, and includes Gardners Island, lying s. of the mainland. The e. part consists of a narrow peninsula, to which the name, Montauk, is applied. Upon the s. coast are several large bays, some of them nearly landlocked. The principal of these are Northwest, Three Mile, Acabonac, and Napeague Harbors, and Fort Pond Bay. In the central and w. parts the surface is mostly level or gently undulating; but along the coast

³ An Indian name, pronounced Moriches. Great quantities of fish and wild fowl are sent from this vicinity to the New York market.

⁴ Yaphank is the Indian name of a small tributary of the Connecticut. The place was originally called "Melle-ile," and afterward "Brookfield."

⁵ This name is applied to a considerable tract of land w. of the river, formerly occupied by the Pochough Indians, a tribe subject to the Pochoughs. Parts of this tract were known as "Acabonac," "Necum-mach," "Coos-pactus," "Pochesquos," "Pochough," and "Motte-inny."

⁶ Named from an Indian chief.

⁷ This name was given by the Indians to a swamp in the vicinity.

⁸ Formerly called "St. George's Manor."

⁹ This lighthouse is 150 ft. high and 166 ft. above the sea, and is furnished with a French lashing lens apparatus of superior quality.

¹⁰ Then called "Cromwell Bay."

¹¹ The family names of these settlers were Woodhull, Hawkies, Whitehore, Jenner, Perring, Gibb, Satterly, Biggs, Tooler, Rogers, Fayer, Longbotham, Lane, Floyd, Muney, Sewall, Wade, Sauley, Smith, Avery, Dayton, Davis, Frost,

Woolley, Akerly, Combs, Waring, Mapes, Thorp, Elwino, Brewster, Poole, Sharpe, Burnett, Helme, Garlick, Meger, Pierce, and Ware. Many of these names are still common on the island.
By a vote of the inhabitants, taken July 13, 1687, the trustees of the town were directed to establish a school, and Francis Williamson was employed as a teacher, at a salary of £30 per annum. The first mill was erected at Stony Brook, in 1690.—

¹² A great part of this tract was divided into 36 prizes, and disposed of by lottery for £12,000 in June, 1758.

¹³ These purchases were confirmed Oct. 9, 1693, under the title of the "Manor of St. George," which included all the town as then founded e. of the Connecticut. A large proportion of this tract is still owned by the descendants of Col. Smith.

upon the s. is a belt of low, shifting sand ridges; and the e. part is broken by low, irregular hills, some of which attain an elevation of 100 ft. above the sea. Near the coast in the s. part of the town and upon the peninsula are several fresh water ponds. The principal of these are Great¹ Fort,² Oyster, Hook, and Georgian Ponds; and their outlets have been closed by sandbars or a beach. Upon the main portion of the peninsula the soil is fertile, but its neck is a barren, sandy waste. In the w. part the soil is a light, sandy loam and is kept highly fertile by the use of manure. Stock raising forms the leading occupation; and to that pursuit Gardners Island³ and Montauk Point are exclusively devoted. A tract of about 9000 acres, and including the entire portion of the town, is devoted wholly to pasturage. It is owned by a company, whose tenants in common, whose affairs are managed by a board of 7 trustees elected annually.⁴ Twelve trustees are chosen annually, to whom are committed the management of the town common, the meadow lands, and the waters within the bays, the privileges of which are enjoyed by all citizens. A town poor-house is located on a small farm about 2 mi. w. of East Hampton village. Lighthouses are located upon Cedar Island, at the entrance of Sag Harbor,⁵ at the s. extremity of Gardners Island, and upon Montauk Point.⁶ East Hampton, (p. v.) about 1 mi. from the beach, in the s. w. part of the town, contains 1 church,⁷ an academy,⁸ 2 windmills, and about 70 houses. Arneganset, (p. v.) a scattered village about 2 mi. e. of East Hampton, contains 1 church. Pop. 270. Springs, (p. v.) near Acabonac Harbor, and Wainscott, in the s. w. corner of the town, are hamlets. Sauk Harbor⁹ (p. v.) is partly in this town. The first settlement in this town, and the first English settlement in the State, was made on Gardners Island in 1639, by Lyon Gardiner.¹⁰ Settlement in the w. part of the town was commenced in 1648, upon lands purchased of the Montauk Indians, by a company of English families from Lynn, Mass.¹¹ The government of the colony was purely democratic. The people met in "General Court," and enacted laws, appointed civil and ministerial officers, and acted upon appeals from the decisions of their magistrates. Three magistrates,¹² a recorder, a secretary, and a constable were annually elected. Lands were allotted to individuals, and could not be alienated without the approval of the General Court. In Dec. 1653, they adopted the laws of Connecticut; and from 1657 to 1667 they were united with that colony.¹³ The inhabitants sided with the colonists in the disputes which led to the Revolution. In June, 1775, an "Association" favoring the measures of the Continental Congress was formed, and its articles were signed by every male inhabitant capable of bearing arms.¹⁴ Rev. Thomas James, the first pastor in the town, settled in 1651.¹⁵ There are now 4 churches in town.¹⁶

HUNTINGTON—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Nicoll, Nov. 30, 1666.¹⁷ The patent was renewed Aug. 2, 1688, and again Oct. 5, 1694. It was recognized as a town March 7, 1788, at which time Eatons Neck and Crab Meadow were annexed. The w. line was established Feb. 17,

² The Indian name of this pond is "Kock-shong-wauk." It lies s. of Fort Pond Bay, and nearly divides the isthmus.

³ Called by the Indians "Muncho-wauk," or "Mushong-wauk," and mentioned in early records as the "Isle of Wight." It contains 3500 acres.

⁴ This tract originally belonged to the Montauk Indians, and was conveyed by them to the colonists of East Hampton, Feb. 11, 1648, the natives reserving to themselves the right of living upon and using so much of it as they might need. Its ownership was vested in the colonists in person. The lands were represented at first by 40 shares, valued at £10 each, and were intrusted to the management of the trustees of the town. The shares are now divided into "eighths," of which 30 have been purchased by the corporation and extinguished. These eighths are now worth $500 to $400 each. The tract is divided into large enclosures, of which "Go field" is reserved for fattening stock. Every share entitles its possessor to the privilege of pasturing for "the season" 48 cattle, 14 of them to be admitted to "the field." A horse is rated as 2¹/₂ beasts, 7 cattle, and 7 sheep as one. "The season" is fixed by the trustees, and generally lasts from June 1 to Oct. 20. About 1400 cattle and 1100 sheep are annually kept within these enclosures. Five Indian families reside upon the tract, who own 9 shares and are entitled to the keeping of 50 cattle. These privileges are usually hired of them for $200 per annum.

⁵ Cedar Island Lighthouse, built in 1829, is 24 ft. high.

⁶ Montauk Lighthouse, on Turtle Hill, is 85 ft. high, and 160 feet above the level of the sea. It was built in 1796, at a cost of $22,000.

⁷ The vine upon this church bears the dates of 1649 and 1717, as those of the first settlement of the village and the erection of the church steeple.

ing the Board of Regents of the University. This academy and Parsons Hall in Flatbush, were among the smallest and among the oldest (all of organized academic institutions in the State.)

⁹ This island was purchased from Jas. Smith, Capt. of the Earl of Sterling, March 10, 1639. The first landing was upon the island S. pt. 14, 1641. It was the first habited English point born within the present limits of the State. The pirates, Kidd, visited the island in 1699 and burned a quantity of 110 silver and jewels, which were afterward recovered by a commission sent from Boston for that purpose. A portion of both the latter parties by Capt. Kidd to M. S. Gardner is still property.

¹⁰ This purchase was made by the Governor of Connecticut and New Haven for the colonists, and was conveyed to them the following year. The tract embraced an area of 10,000 acres, and the value of the articles given in exchange for it was £1000. The Indians received the right of hunting, fishing, and taking shells for wampum upon the lands, and also the right to the fins and tails of drift whales.

¹¹ The first magistrates were J. Van Manton, Robt. Bond, and Thos. Baker.

¹² The first school was taught by Chris. Barnes, who received a salary of £30 per annum. He was succeeded in 1667 by Peter Rowson.

1787, and Lloyds Neck was set off to Oyster Bay in 1788. This is the w. town of the co. It extends across the island, and has 10 mi. of coast on Long Island Sound and 6 on Great South Bay. It also includes about half of Oak Island Beach, and Cedar and several smaller islands in Great South Bay. The s. shore is deeply indented by Huntington Bay, from which Lloyds Harbor extends to the w., Huntington Harbor to the s., and Northport Bay to the e. Centerport and Northport Harbors branch off upon the s. of the latter bay, and two smaller arms upon the s. w. Great, Little, and Eatons¹ Necks are peninsulas formed by these bays and harbors. Groups of low hills extend through the center, and the surface 2 to 3 mi. from the sound is broken; but elsewhere it is comparatively level. The soil in the s. and s. e. is fertile; but in the interior it is unproductive. The industrial pursuits are various; whaling, fishing, and taking oysters and clams are some of the leading occupations. Shipbuilding and manufactures receive considerable attention. At the annual election 7 trustees are chosen, to whose care the management of the town property is committed.² The town poorhouse is located near Huntington Village. A lighthouse was built upon the point of Eatons Neck in 1798.³ Huntington, (p. v.) near the head of Huntington Harbor, contains 5 churches, a flourishing union school,⁴ 2 printing offices, and a limited number of manufacturing establishments.⁵ Pop. 1,328. Cold Spring,⁶ (Cold Spring Harbor p. o.) on the e. side of Cold Spring Harbor, contains 3 churches, 2 shipyards, a woolen factory, and other manufactures. Considerable whaling business is carried on from this port.⁷ Pop. 602. Northport⁸ (p. v.) is on the e. side of Northport Harbor. Shipbuilding is here largely carried on. Pop. 430. Centerport⁹ (p. v.) contains 1 church and 142 inhabitants; and Vernon Valley¹⁰ (p. v.) 1 church and 100 inhabitants. Babylon, (p. v.) near Great South Bay, contains 2 churches and has a pop. of 470. This is a favorite resort for hunting and fishing parties. Amityville,¹¹ (p. v.) in the s. w. part, contains 1 church and has a pop. of 304; Deer Park, (p. v.) a station on the Long Island R. R., contains 12 houses; Melville,¹² in the w. part, 1 church and 108 inhabitants; and Comack, (Comack p. o.) in the e. part, 2 churches and 121 inhabitants. West Hills, (p. o.) containing 1 church, and Dix Hills, (p. o.) are hamlets on the Smithtown turnpike. Settlement began near the s. coast, in 1653, by a company from Sandwich, Mass.¹³ In 1660 the settlement was received under the government of Conn.; and in 1663 deputies were elected to the General Court at Hartford. Upon the English conquest, in 1664, the town came reluctantly under the government of New York. During the Revolution, companies of Tories were stationed here, and many outrages were committed upon those friendly to the independence of the colonies. There are 22 churches in town.¹⁴

ISLEIP¹⁵—was first recognized as a town by the Colonial Government, Nov. 25, 1710, and by the State Legislature March 7, 1788.¹⁶ It lies w. of the center of the co., and extends from the s. coast to the middle of the island; it has a coast of about 18 mi. on Great South Bay, and includes Cap Tree, Oak, and several other islands off the s. coast. Numerous narrow inlets from Great South Bay divide the coast into distinct "necks," of which there are 35 within the limits of the town. The Connetquot River, and Sam-po-wans or Thompsons Brook, are the principal streams. The surface is level, except in the s. part, where it is hilly. The brush plains occupy all the central portion; and near the coast are extensive salt meadows. Upon a tract extending along the bay, and varying in width from one to three miles, the soil is fertile. This part of the town is thickly settled; but the remainder is almost uninhabited. The keeping of the town poor is let to the lowest bidders. Penataquit,¹⁷ (p. v.) near the coast, contains 1 church and has a pop. of 292; Islip, (p. v.) 2 mi. e. of Penataquit, contains 3 churches and about 70 houses. Midroadville, containing 40 houses, and Sayville, (p. v.) containing 2 churches and 822 inhabitants, are in the s. e. part. Lake-

³ This lighthouse is 56 ft. high and 138 ft. above tide. It was built at a cost of $3,500.

⁴ This school has an endowment of $7,400, bequeathed by Nathaniel Batten.

the line of Islip, and Nissequague, on Nissequague Neck, are hamlets. A tract of land, including the principal part of this town, was, in July, 1659, conveyed to Lyon Gardner as a free gift, by Wyandance, Sachem of the Montauks;¹ and in 1662 the grant was confirmed by the Nessequake tribe, by whom the lands were occupied. In 1663 the tract was sold to Richard Smith, and in 1665 the remaining part of the town was purchased of the Indians by him. Fort Slongo, in the s. w. part of the town, was erected by the British during the Revolution. It was captured by a body of Americans, under Col. Tallmadge, Oct. 3, 1781.² There are 6 churches in town.³

SOUTHAMPTON⁴—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Andros, Nov. 1, 1676,⁵ confirmed by Gov. Dongan, Dec. 6, 1686, and recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It occupies the greater part of the s. branch of Eastern Long Island, and has 30 mi. of seacoast. The entire s. shore is skirted by a beach which is united in a few places with the mainland, separating the enclosed waters into distinct bays, the principal of which are East, Quantue, Shinnecock, and Mecox Bays; minor bays, branching from these, divide the surrounding shores into numerous irregular "necks." The beach which separates the waters of these bays from the Atlantic is unbroken except by a single inlet into Shinnecock Bay. The outline of the s. coast is extremely tortuous; ragged and often nearly landlocked bays project inland, and irregular points of land jut out into the surrounding waters. A range of low hills extends along the s. border of the town, and the Shinnecock Hills occupy the central part; elsewhere the surface is level. The soil in the e. and s. parts consists of a light, sandy loam, and is moderately fertile; but in other parts it is of an inferior quality. A large tract, s. of Peconic River is covered with extensive pine forests. Stock raising and the other branches of agriculture form the principal industrial pursuits. The lands are enriched by the application of immense quantities of bunkers. Large tracts of meadow and pasturage lands in different parts of the town are owned by 3 companies, who, in common, elect annually a board of 12 trustees, to whose management the lands are committed.⁶ Taking clams and oysters, and whaling, form an important part of the business. The town has a small poorhouse, a short distance e. of Bridgehampton. A lighthouse has been recently erected on Ponquoque Beach.⁷ Sag Harbor, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, was incorp. as a fire district in 1803, and as a village March 12, 1819. It contains 7 churches, the Sag Harbor Institute, a newspaper office, a bank, a cotton flannel factory,⁸ 2 clock factories, and several manufactories of oil casks. This port has long been noted for the extent of its whaling business.⁹ It was made a port of entry in 1783, and by itself now constitutes a district of customs. Pop. 2,776,—2,041 in Southampton, and 735 in Easthampton. Southampton, (p. v.) midway between Shinnecock and Mecox Bays, contains 2 churches, an academy,¹⁰ and 65 houses; Bridgehampton,¹¹ (p. v.) in the e. part, contains 2 churches and about 40 houses; Shinnecock, on the e. side of Shinnecock Bay, is an Indian settlement of about 20 houses;¹² Saggs, Scuttle Hole and Watermill are hamlets, in the e. part. Flanders, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 2 churches and about 20 houses; Speonk, (p. v.) near East Bay, contains 2 churches and about 40 houses. Ketchabonec and Quogue, (p. o.) near Quantue Bay, and Goodground (p. o.) and Canoe Place, near Shinnecock Bay, are hamlets. Riverhead (p. v.) is partly in this town. The first settlement was made at Southampton, in 1640, by a company of immigrants barks, 2 brigs, and 2 schooners, with an aggregate of 5,927 tons, registered; 15 sloops, 5 s. schooners, and 1 steamer, in all, 1400 tons, enrolled; and a few small vessels, amounting to about 100 tons, licensed. The total number of vessels belonging to this port at different periods has been as follows: in 1807, 4; in 1822, 20; in 1841, 44; in 1843, 52; in 1845, 61; and in 1847, 63.

⁸ The shipping of this port in 1858 consisted of 5 ships, 11

from Lynn, Mass. A grant of the land was obtained from James Farren, agent of L. S. in 1722, in April, and a conveyance from the Indians on the 16th of Decr. 1643. Part of the first party of 47 settlers arrived.¹ In 1644 Southampton was received under the government of Conn. In 1664 1666² was represented in General Court at Hartford. Upon the Dutch invasion in 1674 it again sought a union with Conn. It was received, and, together with East Hampton in 1684, was erected into a co. Upon the re-establishment of English power, in 1714, it was again united to the government of New York. The first settlement at Sag Harbor was made in 1730, by New fishermen. On the morning of the 24th of May, 1777, Col. Meigs, with 100 men, supplied the British force stationed at Sag Harbor, destroyed 12 brigs and a sloop, besides a large amount of forage, provisions, and merchandise, and returned across the sound without the loss of a man. A body of American troops was stationed at Sag Harbor in 1813, in consequence of the presence of a British fleet in Gardner's Bay.³ The first church was erected at Southampton, in 1644, and the first church in Bridgehampton was built in 1670.⁴ There are now 17 churches in town.

SOUTHOLD—was incorp. by patent, under Gov. Andros, Oct. 30, 1676⁵; and recognized as a town March 7, 1788. Riverhead was taken off in 1792. It comprises the principal part of the northern peninsula of Eastern Long Island, and includes Robins Island in Great Peconic Bay, Plum Island, Fishers, and several smaller islands in Long Island Sound. Orient⁶ is a peninsula in the e.; and Great and Little Hog Necks are smaller peninsulas in the s. The s. shore is indented by several small, irregular bays; while the outline of the n. coast is unbroken except by 2 or 3 narrow inlets. The surface is elevated and level. The soil is a light, sandy loam, kept highly fertile by the use of manures. Plum Island,⁷ separated from the mainland by Plum Gut, contains about 800 acres. Fishers Island, about 8 mi. eastward, is 7 mi. long by 1½ wide and contains about 2000 acres.⁸ Great and Little Gull Islands are between Plum and Fishers Islands. Agriculture forms the leading industrial pursuit; potatoes, corn, and wheat are the principal crops.⁹ Considerable attention is also given to ship-building, whaling, and commerce. A limited amount of manufacturing is carried on.¹⁰ Scattered tracts of lands and benches, owned by an incorp. company, are intrusted to the management of 3 trustees, elected annually. These lands are represented by 110 shares, valued at $15 each. The town has a poorfarm of 3000 acres near Southold Village. Light-houses are located on Horton's Point, Little Gull Island,¹¹ and "The Dimpings,"—a group of rocks in Fishers Island Sound.¹² Greenport,¹³ (p. v.), on Greenport Harbor, was incorp. Meigs, with 204 men, crossed from Guildford (Conn.) to Southold, in 13 whale-boats, on the 23d of May, and transported the boats across the peninsula, reaching the s. shore 4 mi. from Sag Harbor at midnight. In the attack the British had 6 men killed and 20 were taken prisoners. The party arrived at Guildford on their return in 20 hours less in the time they left. Congress expressed its appreciation of this enterprise by presenting Col. Meigs with a sword, and then Washington, in a letter to Gen. Parsons, by whose command Col. Meigs had undertaken the expedition, congratulated him upon its successful achievement.

¹² This island was named "The Dimpings" by Capt. John of the navigation, in 1611. It was purchased in 1641, by the Whaling Co. of Conn., and was first used as a whaling station, in 1658, obtained from Gov. Sayre, in N. York, in Mar. 1658. It was used for a time, owned by Capt. N. A. Young, then by the British, and, during the late war, was used as a station for the British fleet, and another still higher. It is a very fertile island, and is situated on the coast. The soil is well adapted to the culture of wheat, corn, &c. Hay, well better, and also of the grasses, &c.

¹³ There were no other whaling stations in the town of Southold, in 1808, as in all the other parts of the town. A vessel was built in 1808, on Sag Harbor, and there were 11 whaling vessels, and a greater quantity of the produce of the whaling industry, than in any other part of the town, in 1808.

The first settlement was made about 1640, by Rev. John Youngs and others, from New Haven.³ The government of this colony, like that of several of the earlier New England settlements, was vested in the church members. None others were allowed to vote or to hold office; and the Mosaic code was adopted as their law. This exclusiveness was of short duration. All citizens were soon admitted to the right of suffrage; and in 1657 the Mosaic code was superseded by one better adapted to the circumstances of the people. Upon the union of New Haven with Conn., in 1662, Southold was united with the latter colony and was represented in General Court. In 1664 the town passed under the jurisdiction of New York. The first church was erected in 1641, in the village of Southold.⁴ There are now 17 churches in town.⁵

SULLIVAN COUNTY.

This county was erected from Ulster, March 27, 1809, and was named in honor of Maj. Gen. John Sullivan, of the Revolution. It contains an area of 1,982 sq. mi., and is centrally distant 85 miles from Albany. The surface is generally very hilly, and along the E. border mountainous. In the s. and w. it consists chiefly of ridges separated by narrow ravines; but in the middle and s. it assumes more the character of a rolling plateau. The highlands of this co. may be considered as the s. slope of the Catskills; and near the s. borders of the co. they divide the waters that flow into Hudson and Delaware Rivers. From this elevated portion numerous ridges extend toward the Delaware, giving the co. a general southerly inclination. The Delaware cuts these ridges diagonally, its valley forming the only division between the Catskills and the mountains of Eastern Penn. The highest points in the co. are the hills in the town of Rockland, which are estimated to be 2100 to 2400 feet above tide. Walnut Hill, in Liberty, has an elevation of 1980 feet. The lowest summit of the Shawangunk¹ Mt., between Bloomingburgh and Wurtzboro, is 1271 feet above tide, and the highest summit is about 500 feet higher. This range of mountains at a distance presents a striking uniformity of outline, which is due to the evenness of stratification of the rock composing it. The lowest point in the co. is upon the Delaware, at the mouth of the Mongaup, which has an elevation of 550 feet above tide. The co. line on the Rondout is elevated 773 feet.

With the exception of a small district on its E. border, through which flow the upper waters of Shawangunk Kil and Lackawack Creek, this co. is drained by the Delaware and its branches, the largest of which are Neversink² and Mongaup³ Rivers, Beaver Kil and Bashers Kil, and Callicoon (Caw-li-coon) and Ten Mile Creeks. The Neversink flows entirely across the co., having for its tributaries Bashers Kil, Wyncoop Brook, Bush Kil, Cherry-meadow Brook, and several minor streams. Most of these streams are rapid, and afford at numerous points a great amount of water power. In the valleys and forests of the co. are about 100 small lakes, which form peculiar and often picturesque and highly beautiful features in its scenery. Most of these ponds and streams abound in fish, of which trout is the most common. Pickerel have been introduced into several of them.

The geological formation of the co. is exceedingly simple. The whole surface is underlain by the red sandstone of the Catskill Group and the Shawangunk Conglomerate. These rocks extend southward into Penn., and form the floor of the coal measures. Of these rocks the latter possesses an economical value for millstones,⁴ building stones, and the manufacture of glass. The soil is mostly a reddish loam mixed with gravel, and is generally stony; in the s. e. portion is found some clay. Grass is the staple production, and the hilly character of most of the co. seems to adapt it to grazing rather than to tillage. The facility with which the products of the dairy can now reach the great markets, by means of the N. Y. & E. R. R., has within a few years given an impetus to the prosperity of the co., while the erection of tanneries, which the same thoroughfare has encouraged, has created a home market of great advantage to the farmer. In 1855 there were in the co. about 40 tanneries, producing over $2,000,000 worth of leather annually and employing about 750 laborers. The lumbering interests also employ large amounts of capital and labor. Winter wheat, formerly considered a sure and abundant crop, is found to yield smaller returns and with less certainty as the country becomes older; and other crops, less valuable but more certain, have been substituted to a great extent. The surplus wheat of Sullivan co. was formerly transported by land to the Hudson, where it found a profitable market; but, with the increase of manufactures, there is now less raised than is consumed in the co. Grass seed of a fine quality is raised in considerable quantities. The fruits are limited to apples, pears, plums, cherries, and a few peaches. The timber along the Delaware Valley is mostly hemlock, pine, oak, and chestnut; and on the highlands it is hemlock, beech, maple, birch, ash, and basswood. The climate is cool and bracing, and the co. is remarkably healthy.

² On Sautlier's Map, 1779, Mahackamack, or Never-Sink.

³ On Sautlier's Map, 1779, Mongauping, or Mongwing.

⁴ Esopus millstones, formerly in high repute, were made from the Shawangunk grit.

The co. seat¹ is located at Monticello, in the town of Thompson. The co. buildings, consisting of a courthouse and jail, are substantial stone edifices, erected in 1844 in place of the original co. buildings, which were burned.² The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 100 acres 3 mi. E. of Monticello. The average number of inmates is 56, supported at a weekly cost of 75 cts. each. The farm yields a revenue of $400. A school is kept during 3 mo. in the year. No religious instruction is afforded. The house is too small, is poorly ventilated, is not furnished with water, and will not admit of a proper classification of its inmates.

The 2 great works of internal improvement within the limits of the co. are the Delaware & Hudson Canal,³ extending through the s. e. part, and the N. Y. & E. R. R., built along the valley of the Delaware.⁴ The former opens an easy and direct communication between the Hudson at Rondout and the Penn. coal mines at Carbondale; and the latter forms one link of the great chain of western travel. Several plank roads have been constructed, as auxiliary to this great thoroughfare, greatly benefiting the sections of country through which they pass. The first newspaper in the co. was issued in 1821.⁵

Little is known of the early history of the co. Many traces exist of its occupation long anterior to that by the present race of settlers. Upon the first advent of the present settlers, a road was found to extend s. w. from Esopus, on the Hudson, along the valley N. of the Shawangunk Mts. It was known as the "Mine Road," and, according to traditional account, was built by a company of miners from Holland, before the English conquest of 1664.⁶ Two mines are said to have been wrought,—one where the mountain approaches the Delaware, near the lower point of Panquaroy Flat; and the other N. of the mountain, about halfway between the Delaware River and Esopus Creek. The Minisink Flat, on the border of Orange and Sullivan cos., is said to have been settled by Hollanders many years before the date of Penn's Charter; and the settlement, which extended 40 mi. or more along both sides of the Delaware, had in a great degree become isolated from the rest of the world. When the present settlements were begun, there was a road from the E., near the central part of the co., called the "Porter Road;" and in the N. part was another, called the "Hunter's Road."

With the exception of the vague traditions of early settlement by the Dutch along the Delaware, the first location of a permanent white inhabitant is said to have been made about the year 1700, by Don Manuel Gonzales, a Spaniard, who, having married into a Dutch family in Rochester, (Ulster co.,) removed to Mamakating Hollow, where he erected a house and raised grain. He opened a trade with the neighboring Indians, who were then friendly; and other settlers were induced to follow. Mamakating Precinct was formed in 1743, and until after the Revolution it embraced nearly all of the present co. of Sullivan. About 1750 a number of German families settled upon the w. frontiers of Ulster co. They suffered greatly from Indian hostilities. The first Indian incursion took place in 1777, when the family of Mr. Sprague, in Mamakating, was attacked. The next year the family of Mr. Brooks was attacked, some members were killed, and others taken prisoners.

On the 13th of Oct. 1778, a party of nearly a hundred Tories and Indians, under Brant, invaded the settlements, first falling upon the family of Mr. Westfall, and killing one man. They next attacked the house of Mr. Swartwout, who was at home with his sons, (the women having been previously removed to a fort,) and killed all but one, who escaped. The firing alarmed others, who fled to the forts at Gumars and De Witts, where, by a skillful display of force by Capt. Abraham Cuddeback, who commanded at the former, the enemy were deterred from making an attack.

² The first buildings, erected in accordance with an act passed March 22, 1844, were burned Jan. 13, 1844. The first court was held, and the first Board of Supervisors organized, at the house of Curtis Linsley. The county officers first appointed were Wm. A. Thompson, First Judge; Samuel F. Jones and Elnathan Sears, Associate Judges; John Conklin, Jabez Walkeman, and David Hammond, Assistant Justices; James S. Dunning, Sheriff; Uriah Lockwood, Sheriff; and John P. Jones, Clerk.

stantial benefit which the r. r. conferred upon that State, the company was subjected to an annual tax of $10,000. This road forms a direct and speedy communication with N. Y., and has been of great value to the co. in stimulating its settlement and developing its resources.

⁵ The Sullivan County Whig was started at Bloomingburgh in 1821, by John J. Tappan. It was removed to Monticello in 1828, and its name changed to

The Republican Watchman. Frederick A. Devoe and James E. Winslow were successively its editors, and since 1843 it has been published by J. E. Quimlan.

The Sullivan County Herald was commenced at Monticello in 1832, and published by M. Smith, S. Phelps, and others, about 4 years.

The Sullivan County Whig was published at Bloomingburgh in 1841, by J. S. Brown, and subsequently by John Walker, Jr. In 1845 it was changed to the Sullivan County Democratic Republican, under which title it is now published by Walker.

The Union Democrat was established at Monticello in 1854, by F. A. Devoe, and was afterward united with The Whig.

⁶ See Foster's Hist. Orange Co., p. 50, where will be found a letter from Samuel Preston giving the substance of the tradition. It is from Hazard's Register.

After firing most of the houses and barns of the settlement, the marauders retired, leaving behind them a melancholy scene of havoc and desolation at the verge of an inclement winter. The distress thus occasioned was very great. Major Phillips arrived soon after the incursion with a company of militia; but the enemy had fled beyond reach.

In 1777 or '78, Capt. Graham, with a party of 18 men, went to Chestnut Brook in pursuit of some Indians who had been committing depredations upon the settlements at Pine Bush. Having stopped to drink, Capt. Graham saw an Indian in the path, and the party fired a volley without effect. Upon this the Indians on the opposite banks returned the fire with fatal effect, and but 3 of the party escaped to tell the dismal tale. To deprive the enemy of sustenance and the means for further annoyance, the Legislature, in 1779,¹ enacted a law directing the Governor to cause the destruction of such grain and crops in the w. frontiers of Orange and Ulster cos., as could not be removed to a place of safety. In 1783² the precinct of "Mamacottling" and the township of Rochester (the district of the regiment of Col. A. Hawke Hay, and that part of the Goshen regiment on the w. side of the Minisink Mts.) were exempted from a levy then made for the defense of the s. and w. frontiers.³

Several traces of Indian occupation were found in the first settlement of the co. About 4 mi. from the Delaware, on the Flat, was found a brass or copper tomahawk, with a steel edge, and a handle perforated for smoking. Stone axes, flint arrows, &c. were frequently found. In 1793, an Indian living in Rockland, at a place called "Pocahorton," (meaning a river almost spent,) removed to Niagara. He is supposed to have been the last of his race that inhabited the co. Indian trails were found along the Delaware, the Beaver Kil, and in other sections.

The part of this co. s. of the s. bounds of Callicoon and Bethel is comprised in the Neversink Patent, conveyed to Matthew Ling and others Aug. 28, 1704; and the remainder of the co. in the great tract granted to Johannes Hardenbergh and others April 20, 1708, and known as the "Hardenbergh Patent."⁴ The Newburgh and Cohecton Turnpike (incorp. March 20, 1801) was opened across the co. in 1808, and gave the first impulse to its prosperity by making it accessible to settlers. This section continued to receive emigrants from New England and the older sections of the State until its growth was checked by the completion of the Erie Canal to the Genesee country and the great lakes, by which emigration was diverted to the new and fertile lands of the West. Real estate in consequence declined materially in value, and many of the early settlers abandoned their locations and joined the westward current. In 1819 or '20 the Orange Branch Turnpike was made, from Montgomery, (Orange co.) crossing the Shawangunk Mt. at Rosses Gap, and extending across the barrens through Wakemans Settlement to the Neversink Falls, and thence to Liberty. The charter of this road was long since given up, but the route is maintained as a district road.

BETHEL—was formed from Lumberland, March 27, 1809. Cohecton was taken off in 1828. It lies upon the high ridges which form the watershed between Delaware and Mongaup Rivers, a little s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly, and many of the declivities are steep and rocky. It is watered by a large number of small streams, mostly tributary to Mongaup River; and it has many small lakes, which form a beautiful and romantic feature of the landscape. White Lake, near the center,—named from its white sandy shores and bottom,—is noted for the beauty of its scenery.⁵ The other principal lakes are Birch Ridge Pond in the s. w., Horse Shoe and Pleasant Ponds in the s., Mallory Pond in the w., Indian Field Pond in the s., Big and Wells Ponds on the s. line, and Chestnut Ridge Pond and Black Lake and Lake Superior near the center. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, intermixed in places with clay. The settlements are comparatively new, and the people are chiefly engaged in the raising of neat cattle, dairying, lumbering, and tanning.⁶ Mongaup Valley (p.v.) contains 25 houses, and Bethel 15. Bashville and White Lake are p. offices. John Fuller was the first settler in the "Fuller Settlement,"⁷ in 1806-07.⁸ The first preacher (Presb.) was the Rev. Mr. Green.⁹

³ Incidents connected with these events, and the details of the memorable battle of Minisink in July, 1779, are given in our account of the towns in which they occurred.

⁵ This lake is noticed in one of the poems of Alfred B. Street, by the name of "Kon-ne-sung-a."

⁶ A tannery at Mongaup Valley, in 1856 manufactured 50,000

sides of leather, valued at $187,000. It consumed about 5000 cords of hemlock bark, and employed 70 men, at a cost of $12,000. There are about 102,000 sides of leather manufactured annually at different tanneries in this town.

⁷ G. and C. Hard were the first settlers at the Hard settlement; Adam and Eve Bentler near Bethel; and Patter and Mattison near White Lake. The first school at Mongaup was taught by G. P. Puro, and at Bethel by Dr. Copeland. Gillespie A. Hook kept the first store at White Lake, and J. K. Benjamin built the first saw and grist mill, on White Lake outlet. The first birth was that of Catherine Fuller, in 1807, and the first death that of a child of Stephen Northrup.

⁸ The census reports 4 churches; 2 M. E. Presb., and Ref. Presb.

CALLICOON¹—was formed from Liberty, March 30, 1842. Fremont was taken off in 1851. It lies in the w. part of the co., about the sources of the n. branch of Callicoon Creek. It is watered by numerous streams flowing into the Delaware, the valleys being mostly narrow ravines, and the hills rising in steep declivities 200 to 600 feet above them. In the s. e. are Shandler and Sand Ponds, the latter affording a pure white sand, formerly used in making glass. The soil is mostly a sandy loam, and the hillsides and summits are generally capable of a good degree of cultivation. The settlement is recent, and the people are about equally engaged in lumbering, farming, and tanning.² Jeffersonville, (p. v.) on the line of Cochecton, has a population of 433, of which 305 are in this town. Youngsville, (p. v.) North Branch, (p. v.) and Callicoon Center (Callicoon p. o.) have each about 30 houses. The first settlers were Wm. Wood and his sons, Gerrett, Edward, and David, who arrived in town May 19, 1814, and lived 15 years in the wilderness.³ Rev. Mr. McClary, pastor of the Asso. Ref. church of Bethel, was the first preacher.⁴

COCHECTON⁵—was formed from Bethel, March 25, 1828. It is situated upon the bank of the Delaware, in the w. part of the co. Ridges of hills, with narrow valleys between, cover the entire surface of the town. The principal streams are the Callicoon and its branches, and several small tributaries of the Delaware. The mouth of the Callicoon is 777 feet above tide. Pike Pond in the e., Perry Pond in the s., and Mitchells Pond and Lake Huntington in the center, are the principal sheets of water. A large part of the surface is still covered with forests. The soil is mostly a gravelly loam, and best adapted to pasturage. Lumbering and tanning form the leading objects of industry. Cochecton (p. v.) contains 269 inhabitants, Pike Pond (p. v.) 188, Callicoon Depot (p. v.) 207, and Stevensburgh (Cochecton p. o.) 209. Beech Wood and Fosterdale are p. offices. Settlements were begun on the Delaware before the Revolution, but were broken up. The pioneer settler was N. Mitchell, who located near Cochecton Village.⁶ The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1839, and the Rev. Mr. Cummings was the first pastor.⁷

FALLSBURGH—was formed from Thompson and Neversink, March 9, 1826. It derives its name from the falls in Neversink River at Fallsburgh Village. Its surface is hilly and rolling. It is drained by the Neversink and its branches. Sheldrake Pond, (named from the wild ducks that formerly frequented its waters,) Smith, Hill, and Browns Ponds in the w., and East Pond, in the e., are the principal lakes. The soil is a gravelly loam. The people are chiefly engaged in lumbering, dairying, and tanning.⁸ Woodbourne (p. v.) contains 30 houses, Neversink Falls (Fallsburgh p. o.) 25, Hasbrouck (p. v.) 25, Loch Sheldrake (p. v.) 15, and Sandburgh (p. v.) 15. It is said that settlement was commenced in this town by Germans previous to the Revolution,⁹ but the settlers were driven off during that war. Soon after the peace 3 brothers by the name of Baker located in town and commenced the first permanent settlement.¹⁰ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was built at Hasbrouck.¹¹

FORESTBURGH—was formed from Thompson and Mamakating, May 2, 1837. It lies principally upon the high ridges between Neversink and Mongaup Rivers, and has a broken surface and an average elevation of 1400 feet above tide. In this town are several small lakes, the principal of which are Ruddieks Pond in the s. w., Beaver Pond in the s., and Panther Pond in the center. The town still retains the character implied by its name. Mongaup Falls, on Mongaup River, 3 mi. above Forestburgh Village, are worthy of note. The river here falls into a chasm 70 feet deep, and the banks below the falls are more than 100 feet high. Lumbering, tan-

² There are 5 large tanneries in town, which manufacture about 125,000 skins of leather annually.

⁴ The census reports 2 churches; Luth., Asso. Ger. Meth.

⁵ Cochecton. Originally called "Cash-nantank," or low grounds.

⁶ Among the other early settlers were David Young, at Big Shand; John Ross, at Callicoon Creek; Nicholas Conklin and Tyler, at Cochecton. Job James taught the first school. Cochecton; Maj. Ebenezer Taylor kept the first tavern at Cochecton, and Mitchell Conklin built the first sawmill, at Pike Pond Brook. On Big Island, 2 mi. above Cochecton, was an extensive Indian burial place, of which traces are occasionally plowed up at the present day. There are about 900 Germans in this town.

⁷ The census reports 3 churches; M. E., Presb., and Ref. Prot. D.

⁸ At Fallsburgh is an extensive tannery, that manufactures 40,000 skins of leather annually; and another of the same size is located at Woodbourne.

⁹ Fruit trees planted by these settlers are said to be still standing.

¹⁰ Thomas Rawson came in 1787 or '88; Thomas Grant located in 1789; Samuel Thaddeus, Obadiah Brown, and James Hill settled a little s. of Fallsburgh, and James Nicoll, Peter Fardon, and Mr. Brush on the site of the village. The first sawmill was built in 1808, and the first grist mill in 1809, by Pluto Ruggles. Matthew Seeley kept the first inn, at Hasbrouck, and Golt. Reading the first store, at Fallsburgh. In 1795, the nearest mill was at Napanock, in Ulster co.; and for many years the nearest market was Newburgh. In 1786 or '87 an extraordinary and destructive flood occurred upon this valley.

¹¹ This church was burned in 1837, and was rebuilt at Woodbourne. The census reports 3 churches in town; 2 M. E., and 1 Ref. Prot. D.

ning,¹ and dairying constitute the employments of the people. Forestburgh (p.o.) contains 10 houses, Oakland 15, and Hartwood 10. Settlement commenced before the Revolution, and recommenced in 1795 on the Mongaup River. Zephaniah and Luther Drake were pioneers in the s. w. part of the town, and Elisha Smith near Oakland.² Rev. Isaac Thomas (Meth.) was the first preacher.³

FREMONT—was formed from Calliecon, Nov. 1, 1851, and named in honor of John C. Fremont. It lies in the extreme w. part of the co., upon the bank of the Delaware. Its surface is broken and hilly, the summits rising 600 to 1000 feet above the valley and 1500 to 1800 feet above tide. Its waters are Basket and Hawkins Creeks, a great number of smaller streams, and numerous small lakes, the principal of which are Long Pond, Round and Basket Ponds in the s., Lox Pond in the e., and Trout Pond near the center. A large share of the surface is still a wilderness and is too rough for tillage. Tanning and lumbering form the principal employments of the people. Fremont Center (p.v.) contains 144 inhabitants, and Obernburgh (Fremont p.o.) 20 houses. Long Eddy (p.o.) is the Basket Station on the N. Y. & E. R. R. Hankins is a station on the same r. r. The first settlers were Joseph Green, at Long Eddy, John Hankins, at Hankins Depot, Benj. Misner, at Long Pond, and Zach. Ferdon, at Round Pond.⁴

HIGHLAND—was formed from Lumberland, Dec. 17, 1853. It is an interior town, lying in the s. part of the co. It is named from the character of its surface, which consists of high ridges between Delaware and Mongaup Rivers, 600 to 1,000 feet above the canal at Barryville and 1,200 to 1,600 feet above tide. There are a great number of small lakes in town, the principal of which are Washington and Wells Ponds on the s. line, Mud and Hagan Ponds in the n., York Pond in the s. w., Washington Pond, used as a canal feeder, and Blind, Little, and Montgomery Ponds near the center. The people are chiefly engaged in lumbering and the rudiments of farming. Barryville, (p.v.) a canal village, contains 25 houses, and Lumberland (p.v.) 15. The first settler was John Barnes, who located at Narrow Falls.⁵ Rev. Isaac Sargent (Cong.) was the first preacher, about 1797.⁶ The battle of Neversink, in the Revolution, took place within the limits of this town.⁷

LIBERTY—was formed from Lumberland, March 13, 1807, and Calliecon and a part of Thompson were taken off in 1842. It lies s. of the center of the co., upon the watershed between the Mongaup and Beaver Kill. Its surface is rough and broken. Walnut Hill, s. of Liberty, is 2,000, and Libertyville 1,467, feet above tide. The s. and w. parts of the town are still covered with forests. The principal sheets of water are Lillie Pond in the s., and Broadhead Pond near the center. The soil is good, but stony; and the people are chiefly engaged in lumbering, dairying, and tanning.⁸ Liberty (p.v.) contains 364 inhabitants, Parksville (p.v.) 40 houses, and Liberty Falls (p.v.) 25. Robertsonville and Stevensville are p. offices. The Liberty Normal Institute, at Liberty, is a flourishing academic institution.⁹ Stephen Russell (from Conn.) settled near Liberty, in 1793 or '94.¹⁰ Rev. Wm. Randall (Bap.) was the first preacher.¹¹

LUMBERLAND—was formed from Mamakating, March 16, 1798, embracing all the co. w. of Mongaup River and s. of the present s. lines of Liberty and Calliecon. From it were erected Liberty in 1807, Bethel in 1809, and Highland and Tusten in 1853. Its surface is rugged and

³ There are no church buildings in town.

⁴ Sarah Phillips taught the first school; John Rankison kept the first inn, and John Hawkins kept the first store and built the first sawmill. About one-third of the population are Germans. The census reports by Hunter, R. C.

⁵ Among the other first settlers were John Carpenter, Wm. Sadler, N. Patterson, and Wm. Randall, at Beaver Brook; and Ray Hays, at Handsome Eddy. John Carpenter employed Nathl Wheeler to teach the first school, before the public schools were organized. R. Ferguson kept the first inn, in 1820, and Thomas Beay the first store, in 1828. N. Patterson built the first sawmill, on Beaver Brook.

⁶ The census reports by Phelps; Cong., M. F., Froon.

⁷ This battle took place on the N. side of Beaver Brook, on Oct. 17, of the 7th day of the Neversink Patent. The scene of the action is the top of a hill 3 miles from Barryville and half a mile s. w. on Dry Brook. The battle took place between a party of Tories and Indians, and Brant—who was regretting, after having destroyed the settlement of Neversink—and a party of American militia, who pursued them. The battle was lost, and 10 body, and resulted in the retreat of the Americans, with the loss of 41 killed. In 1822 the ruins of the stone walls, erected and inhabited by an Abenaki nation, at G. L. Co. line, were destroyed and buried in the woods, in the town of Bathery, who had taken a leading part in the engagement.

⁸ About 100,000 sides of leather are annually manufactured in this town.

⁹ Inaug. by law, April 12, 1848, the Rev. John D. Watkins, the founder, being principal of it.

¹⁰ Among the other first settlers were Nathaniel Pinnex, Jacob Whipple, and Nathan Stanton, who came from Preston, Conn., in the spring of 1790, at Handsome Eddy; John Groot and Edw. Swann, who settled on lot 5, Handsome Eddy, on lot 4, Isaac Whipple, on lot 6, and other known as the 1000 acre lot, and Stephen Barton, who located at Round Eddy. Aver Whipple taught the first school, at Blue Mountain Settlement; Lewis E. Essell kept the first inn, Stephen Russell the first store, and Chas. Broadhead built the first, on the s. w. side, in the neighborhood, in 1797. The first of 111 families was settled in 1797, the first marriage, that of David, brother of Isaac Whipple, in 1797; and the first of the first of S. L. Stanton's grant, near William Ala., in 1798. The first towns were settled on both ends of what the People call now stands, M. T. C. D. B. T. Smith's store, and covered with broken, and much of it is yet a wilderness. The name of the town still suggests the leading pursuit of the people. A large number of small lakes, with their outlets, form the principal waters. The principal of these lakes are Lebanon Pond in the n., Round, Sand, and Hogais Ponds in the w., and Long Pond in the center. Metanques Pond, in the e., lies about 2 mi. w. of the Mongaup, and 300 feet above it. On its outlet is a beautiful cascade. Mongaup and Pond Eddy are p. offices. There is but one church, (M. E.) The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends through the town along the course of the river. It is supposed that settlement was commenced before the Revolution; but the names of the first settlers are not preserved.¹ In the survey of the Minisink Patent by Charles Webb in 1762, mention is made of "Reeve's Sawmill."²

MAMAKATING,³ said to have been named in honor of an Indian chief, was erected into a precinct by the General Assembly, Dec. 17, 1743, and embraced all the present territory of Sullivan co. and a portion of Orange. It continued as a precinct until organized as a town, March 7, 1788. It was reduced to its present limits by the erection of Deerpark (Orange co.) and Lumberland in 1798, Thompson in 1803, and a part of Forestburgh in 1837. It lies upon the highlands between Neversink and Shawangunk Creeks. Two parallel ridges, separated by the valley of Bashes Kil, extend through the town in a n. e. and s. w. direction. The eastern of these ridges is known as Shawangunk Mt. The declivities of this mountain are gentle upon the e., but abrupt and broken on the w. It attains an elevation of 1100 feet above the summit level of the canal, and about 1700 feet above tide. In the n. w. part of the town is a mountain of nearly equal elevation, known as Panther Hill. The principal streams are Shawangunk, Bashes, and Pine Kils, the last of which is the outlet of a small lake in the w. part of the town, known as Yankee Pond. The summit level of the Delaware & Hudson Canal, 17 mi. long and 525 feet above tide, is constructed through the valley of Bashes Kil. Masten Pond, in the w. part, is used as a reservoir. About 2 mi. n. of Wurtzboro a vein of lead was discovered several years since, and was worked to a considerable extent. After an abandonment of several years, preparations are again being made to work it. The soil is a sand and gravel loam, in some places intermixed with clay, and best adapted to pasturage. The census of 1855 shows that this town is second only to Thompson in the amount of dairy products. Bloomburgh⁴ (p. v.) contains 365 inhabitants, and Wurtzboro⁵ (p. v.) 491, Summitville (Mamakating p. o.) 20 houses, and Phillipsport (p. o.) 10; the three last named lie upon the canal. Burlingham (p. v.) contains 130 inhabitants. West Brookville (p. o.) is a hamlet, and Homowack is a p. o. The early settlement of this town has already been noticed,⁶ but most of the details have been lost. On the approach of the Revolution the Indians became hostile, and several blockhouses were erected on the frontiers of Ulster co., one of which was at Wurtzboro. On account of the distressed condition of the people by reason of Indian hostilities, they were favored by the supervisors in the apportionment of taxes. Many persons in those days accounted wealthy were reduced to poverty, and but little that could be destroyed remained on the return of peace. Gonzales, the pioneer settler, is said to have built the first sawmill, at Wurtzboro. In 1792 this town contained 182 taxable persons, of whom 34 were in the present towns of Lumberland, Tusten, and Highland. In 1794, Capt. David Dorrance removed from Windham, Conn., and purchased 1000 acres immediately s. of the site of Wurtzboro.⁷ John Dorrance, with Elijah Perry, also from Conn., erected the first bark mill in Sullivan co. Rev. Mr. Freleigh was the first pastor of the Ref. Prot. D. Church, built in 1793.⁸

NEVERSINK⁹—was formed from Rochester, (Ulster co.) March 16, 1798. Rockland was taken off in 1809, and a part of Fallsburgh in 1826. The whole town is elevated, and the surface

² Mr. Webb lived at Otisville, (Orange co.) and died at an advanced age in 1814.

³ Written Mamakating, Mamakotink, &c. in early records.

⁴ This village was settled by J. Newkirk, about 1780, and was incorp. April 26, 1833. It contains 3 churches, 4 hotels, and 5 stores.

⁵ Named from Maurice Durtz, grantee of a canal privilege in Penn.; afterward merged in Del. and Hudson Canal Co.

⁷ A road was constructed at an early day, by Ananias Sacket, from Mamakating westward, passing about three-fourths of a mi. s. of Lords Pond, and continuing to Nathan Kinne's Flats, from which place Capt. Dorrance made a road to Cochecton for £5 per mi. This road opened a communication from the Hollow to the Delaware River, a distance of about 33 mi. A portion of it is still in use, but the greater part was taken up by the Newburgh & Cochecton Turnpike. The village of Wurtzboro was built upon a tract of 1000 acres bought by Johannes Masten, who cleared the land and erected a sawmill. Westbrockville (formerly "Beshlansville") was settled about the same time, and the first house was built of stone and used as a fort to shelter the settlers. Mr. Eilton was a pioneer near Burlingham, and J. Newkirk at Bloomburgh. The early town records have been lost. The first school was kept at Bloomburgh in 1784, by Mr. Campbell. Wm. Harlow kept the first inn, 2 mi. s. of Bloomburgh; Wm. Wighton opened the first store, 1 mi. s. of the same place; and H. Newkirk built the first gristmill on the Shawangunk, within this town.

⁹ This name, first applied to the river, is said by some to be derived from the Indian "Ne-was-sink," or Mad River, and by is very hilly and to a considerable degree covered with forests. It is watered by the Neversink and its branches, and by the Lackawack, or w. branch of the Rondout, which flows to the Hudson. Donnan Hill, 3300 feet, and Thunder Hill, 2500, above tide, are the principal elevations: the latter received its name from the fact that one of the early settlers was frightened away from the place by loud thunder. The soil is generally a gravelly loam, and best adapted to pasturage. The people are chiefly engaged in lumbering, tanning,¹ and dairying. Grahamsville (p. v.) contains 40 houses, Neversink Flats (Neversink p. o.) 35, and Claryville (p. v.) 30. The first settlement was commenced on the Lackawack, 2 mi. below Grahamsville, by the Hornbecks, Clines, Clearwaters, and Lowes, who obtained an Indian title in 1743, and were driven off during the Revolution. Mr. Larrabee, on Thunder Hill, and Benj. Gillett, John Hall, and Wm. Parks, on the 1000-acre lot, were the pioneer settlers after the war.² The first church (Meth.) was located at Grahamsville; and the first preacher was Rev. Samuel M. Knapp.³

ROCKLAND—was formed from Neversink, March 29, 1809. It lies upon the headwaters of the Popacton, or e. branch of the Delaware, in the extreme s. part of the co. It is a rough, wild region, very hilly, and mostly covered with forests. Its principal streams are Beaver Kill and Williwemack Creek. A chain of small lakes extends through the town, the principal of which are Upper, Mongaup, and Dodge Ponds in the e., Big and North Ponds in the s. e., Shaw Pond in the s., Burnt Hill and Jenkins Ponds in the w., and Sand, Mud, and Knapp Ponds in the center. Lumbering, farming, and tanning⁴ are the principal pursuits of the people. Westfield Flats (Rockland p. o.) contains 28 houses, and Morsston (p. v.) about 12. Beaver Kill, Purvis, and Shin Creek are p. offices. Settlement was begun in 1789, by two families named Stewart and West, from Middletown, Conn.; they located near the middle of the Big Beaver Kill Flat,⁵ Rev. Mr. Conkey (Meth.) was the first preacher.⁷

THOMPSON—was formed from Mamakating, March 9, 1803, and named in honor of Wm. A. Thompson, first judge of the co. A part of Fallsburgh was taken off in 1826, and a part of Forestburgh in 1837. It lies principally upon the highlands between Neversink and Mongaup Rivers, and is less hilly than most of the towns of the co. The hills rise 100 to 300 feet above Monticello. Neversink and Mongaup Rivers, with several small lakes and streams, constitute the waters of the town. Kiamasha, or "Clearwater," better known as Pleasant Pond, is a beautiful little lake near Monticello. The other principal ponds are Dutch in the s. e., Lords and Mud in the e., Wolf in the s. e., and Sackett (named from Anandis Sacket, an early settler near it) in the s. w. The quiet scenery of these lakes is becoming appreciated by the lovers of nature and those seeking a retreat from the heat and dust of cities in summer. The soil is a reddish loam. The people are principally engaged in stock raising, lumbering, and tanning.⁸ Monticello,⁹ (p. v.) the principal village, was incorp. April 20, 1830. Pop. 629. It is beautifully situated upon a ridge of highlands 1387 feet above tide, and is surrounded by hills. It is finely laid out, the main street being 1 mi. long and 8 rods wide, with flagged walks and ornamented with shade trees. It contains a courthouse, jail, co. clerk's and surrogate offices, and a banking house, all of stone; 3 churches, the Monticello Academy, 3 hotels, 10 stores, 3 printing offices, and an iron foundery. Thompsonville (p. v.) and Bridgeville (p. v.) each contain about a dozen houses. Gales and Glen Wild are p. offices. The first settlers were Wm. A. Thompson, John Knapp, and Timothy Childs, at Thompsonville,¹⁰ Rev. John Boyd (Presb.) was the first preacher.¹¹ others to be so named because the stream is less affected by drought than others.

¹ About 25,000 sides of leather are manufactured each year.

² Named in honor of Lieut. Graham, who was killed in a skirmish with the Indians near the present site of the village.

⁴ The census reports 5 churches; 3 M. E., 2 Ref. Prot. D.

⁵ One of the most extensive tanneries in the State is in the w. part of the town. About 150,000 sides of leather are manufactured each year in town.

⁶ Another account says the first settlers were Robert Cochran, Jehud and Luther Stewart. In the following year, Peter Wilkins and Cornelius Cochtin came in from Mass. Mr. Bascom settled 1 mi. w. of Purvis p. office, and Thomas Sott and James Overton 1 mi. s. of the same. The first child born was Susan Thorne; the first marriage was that of Flenoyer White and Clarissa Field; and the first death was that of Sylvanus Stewart.

Sylvanus Bascom taught the first school, at Westfield Flats. Jehud Stewart kept the first inn, Mr. Loveland the first store, and Luther Stewart built the first mill at Westfield Flats. The settlers are said to have obtained their first stock from the Indians on the Susquehanna Flats, and this stock has long continued till the present time. The lumber trade began in 1788.

⁸ About 3,000 sides of leather are manufactured annually.

⁹ Named by J. P. Jones, from the village of Thos. Jones in N. York. The first settlement of this village was made in 1804, by Samuel F. and John P. Jones, from New Lebanon, a brother-in-law who located at this place in anticipation of its being among the sites of a new co. to be erected from Ulster. J. P. Jones was the first house, in 1804, and opened the first store. Curtis Hensley kept the first inn.

¹⁰ A Sackett and A. D. Knapp were the first settlers in the w. part of the town, and J. B. Wetzel, W. and John Snider on the Neversink. Asa Hall kept the first store at Bridgeville. Judge Thompson built the first mill and factory at Thompsonville.

¹¹ The census reports 4 churches, M. E., Presb., Prot. E., and Union.

Benjamin Tusten, who was killed in the battle of Minisink, in 1779.¹ This town lies upon the n. bank of Delaware River. The w. and s. parts are very hilly, and the e. portions belong to the plateau of rolling lands which comprises the greater part of Tusten, Highland, and Lumberland. The average height of this region is about 750 feet above the Delaware, or 1400 feet above tide. The principal streams are Ten Mile River and its branches: Half Moon and Mill Ponds in the e., and Mill, Davis, and Canfield Ponds in the center, are the principal sheets of water. The soil is a gravelly loam, and best adapted to pasturage. The people are generally engaged in farming and lumbering. Narrowsburgh, (p. v.) containing about 35 houses, is the only village. It derives its name from the fact that the Delaware is here compressed by two points of rock into a deep, narrow channel. Over this is a wooden bridge, with a single span of 184 feet.² The place is known to lumbermen by the name of "Big Eddy." Below the narrows the river expands into a wide basin, which in time of a freshet exhibits a stirring scene. Delaware Bridge and Beaver Brook are p. offices. John Moore kept the first inn and store, and R. Moore built the first mill. The Baptist is the only church in town.

TIOGA COUNTY.

This county was formed from Montgomery, Feb. 16, 1791. A part of Chenango was taken off in 1798; Broome in 1806; a part of Tompkins in 1822; and Chemung in 1836. It lies near the center of the s. border of the State, centrally distant 135 mi. from Albany, and contains 542 sq. mi. Its surface is broken by a series of ridges extending northerly through the co. from the Penn. line and forming a northerly continuation of the Alleghany Mts. The summits of these ridges have a nearly uniform elevation of 1,200 to 1,400 ft. above tide. The valley of the Susquehanna cuts them diagonally and breaks the continuity of the general system of highlands. Numerous lateral valleys extend in a general s. and s. direction from the river, separating the ridges and giving a great variety to the surface. These valleys vary in width from a few rods to a mile and sometimes more, and are generally bordered by steep declivities which rise 250 to 400 ft. above them. The summits of the hills are generally broad and rolling, and in some places are broken and rocky.

The rocks of this co. belong to the Chemung and Catskill groups. The former occupies all the surface s. of the river and forms the underlying rock of the hills s., and the latter crowns all the summits s. of the river. The sandstone of the Chemung group is quarried for lagging; and some of the red sandstone is sufficiently compact to make good building stone. Limestone, from which lime is manufactured, is found along the Penn. border. There are no other minerals of importance. The river valleys, and many of the hills adjoining, are covered deep with drift, consisting of sand, clay, and gravel. This deposit near Factoryville is 80 ft. thick, and a wide belt of it seems to extend northerly in an almost unbroken line from the latter place to Cayuga Lake. The principal streams are Susquehanna River, and Owego, Catatunk, Cayuta, Pipe, and Apalachin Creeks and their branches. These creeks have generally rapid currents, though few waterfalls; and they furnish all necessary water-power for local purposes. Their valleys are usually narrow and rocky in their upper courses, but toward the Susquehanna they expand into broad and beautiful level intervals. The valleys of the Susquehanna and several of its tributaries are celebrated for their beauty.

The soil along the valleys is a rich, deep, gravelly loam, with an occasional intermixture of clay and sand. The intervalles along the Susquehanna are especially noted for their fertility. The uplands are gravelly and sandy and moderately fertile. Upon the summits the soil is hard and unproductive, and in many places the rocks are entirely bare. A considerable portion of the uplands is still covered with forests.

The prominent interest of the co. is agricultural, and its various branches are successfully pursued. Winter and spring grains, corn, and the root crops, are mostly cultivated on the lowlands or river bottoms, and the uplands are devoted to stock and wool growing and dairying. Considerable commercial interest has grown up in connection with the rail roads, and manufactures have also been established to a limited extent.¹

The county seat is located at Owego, upon the Susquehanna.² The courthouse, a well-shelved structure, was erected about 40 years since, at a cost of $8,000. It is in a good state of preservation. The jail, jailor's house, and barn, all of brick, were built in 1851, at a cost of about $6,000. The jail contains 8 double cells. The clerk's office is a fireproof brick building, erected in 1858, at a cost of $2,200. The courthouse, clerk's office, jail, jailor's house, and barn occupy a square in the center of the village.

¹ A large lumber and tanning business was formerly carried on; but it has declined, from the scarcity of material.

² By the organic act of 1791, Tioga was formed a half-shire county. It provided that the courts should be held alternately, at "Chenango," in the town of Union, and at "Newtown Parish," in the town of Chemung, the former now Binghamton, Broome co., and the latter Elmira, Chemung co. The half-shire was abolished upon the organization of Broome co. in 1806; Feb. 17, 1810. Nathaniel Locke, Asa or Cary, and Samuel Campbell were appointed commissioners to locate the courthouse site, and Joshua Ferris, Isaac Swartwout, and Samuel Westbrook to superintend the erection of the building; and in 1811-12 the county seat was removed from Elmira to Spencer Village. June, 1812, the co. was divided into 2 Jury Districts, and the courts were held at Elmira and Spencer. The first Jury District embraced the towns of Tioga, Spencer, Banty, Cayuta, Catatunk, Berkshire, and Owego; and the West, the towns of Catatunk, Catherine's, Chemung, and Elmira. The courthouse at Spencer was burned in 1821, and by an act of 1822 the location of the county seat was established at Owego, and Elmira declared the half-shire towns. Upon the organization of Chemung co. in 1836, Elmira became its county seat, and Owego the county seat of Tioga. The last county officers were: Abram May, Dist. Justice; Wm. Street, Dist. Attorney; Thomas Nelson, County Clerk; James M. Masterson, Sheriff; and J. H. Merwin, Surrogate.

The county poorhouse, a stone building, is located near Owego, upon a farm of 62 acres, which yields an annual income of $600. The average number of inmates is 62, and the whole number of rooms for their accommodation is 15. No school is connected with the establishment, and no means are provided for religious instruction.

The principal works of internal improvement are the N. Y. & E. R. R., extending along the river valley through Owego, Tioga, and Barton; and the Cayuga & Susquehanna R. R., extending from Owego northward through Tioga and Candor to Ithaca.¹ These roads furnish ample facilities for transportation, and bring the products of the county into close proximity to the Eastern markets.

Three weekly newspapers are now published in the co.²

The first settlement in this county was made upon the Susquehanna intervalles, soon after the Revolution, by emigrants from the Wyoming Valley in Penn. These settlers originally came from Conn. and Mass., and left Wyoming in consequence of troubles growing out of the Indian hostilities and of controversies in regard to title. They located here before the Indian title to the lands was extinguished. The greater part of the present territory was comprised in the Boston Ten Towns. The title of this tract, comprising 230,400 acres between Chenango River and Owego Creek, was vested in the State of Mass. in 1786, and in 1787 it was sold to a company of 60 persons, mostly residents of that State. The greater part of the proprietors immediately took possession of these lands; and thus it happened that the county was filled up with a New England population while the fertile region of Western New York was yet an unbroken wilderness.

BARTON—was formed from Tioga, March 23, 1824. It lies w. of the Susquehanna, in the s. w. corner of the co. Its surface is generally hilly. A small portion of level land lies along the s. border. The highlands on the w. rise abruptly from the valley of Cayuta Creek, and are divided into two ridges by the valley of Ellis Creek. Their summits are broad and rolling and generally covered with forests. The highest points are 400 to 600 ft. above the river. The soil is a rich alluvium in the valleys and a sandy or gravelly loam upon the hills. A sulphur spring is found on Ellis Creek, near the center of the town. Waverly, (p. v.), situated upon the Erie R. R., in the s. w. part of the town, was incorp. in 1854. It contains the Waverly Academy, 5 churches, and several manufactories. Pop. 1,067. Factoryville, (p. v.), on Cayuta Creek, 1½ mi. n. of Waverly, contains 180 inhabitants; and Barton, (p. v.) near the n. e. corner, on the Susquehanna, 30 dwellings. North Barton is a p. o. Halsey Valley (p. o.) is a hamlet in the n. e. part, on the line of Tioga. The first settlement was begun by Ebenezer Ellis and Stephen Mills, who located near the mouth of Ellis Creek in 1791.³ There are 9 churches in town.⁴

BERKSHIRE—was formed from Tioga, Feb. 12, 1808. Newark was taken off in 1823, and Richford in 1831. It lies upon the e. border of the co., n. of the center. Its surface is mostly a hilly and broken upland, with a mean elevation of 1,200 to 1,400 ft. above tide. A high hill, with steep declivities, lies e. of the center of the town. The streams are the East and West Branches of Owego Creek and their tributaries. The soil in the valleys is a sandy and gravelly loam, and upon the hills it is a tough clay and hardpan. Berkshire (p. v.) contains 3 churches and 34 dwellings. East Berkshire and Wilson Creek are p. offices. The pioneer settlers of the town were Daniel Ball and Isaac Brown, who came in 1791.⁵ Rev. Seth Williston conducted the first religious services in town.⁶

² The American Farmer was commenced at Owego in 1810 by Stephen Mack. In 1833 it was sold to Stephen B. Leonard, who changed its name to

The Owego Gazette, and continued it until 1835, when he sold to J. B. Shurtell. In 1841 the office was burned, and the paper was discontinued a short time; but soon after it was resuscitated by E. P. Marble, and in 1843 it was sold to Thomas Woods. In 1844 it was changed to

The Tioga Freeman, John Dow, publisher, and in a few years was discontinued. A local party dispute having arisen, another paper, called

The Owego Gazette, was started in 1844 by H. A. Beebe, and the two papers were published under the same name for several months. In 1845 Thomas Peasall became proprietor, and in 1846 the paper was sold to David Walter and son. In 1848 it again passed into the hands of H. A. Beebe, by whom it is still published.

The Republican was published 1 year at Owego in 1833 by — Chatterton.

The Owego Advertiser was commenced in 1836 by Andrew H. Calhoun, and was continued by him until 1852, when he sold to Powell & Barnes, who changed its name to

The Southern Tier Times. In 1854 Wm. Smyth purchased the establishment and changed the name of the paper to

The Owego Times, under which title he still continues its publication.

The Waverly Advocate was commenced at Waverly Village in 1832 by F. H. Baldwin. It is now published by Baldwin & Polley.

The St. Nicholas, a monthly literary magazine, was published about 1 year in 1833.

³ Among the other early settlers were — Aikens, Ezekiel Williams, John Hanna, Wm. Bensley, Luke Summers, James Swaitwood, Charles Bingham, Layton Newell, Lyon C. Hodges, Philip Crans, Justice Lyon, John Manhart. — Reed, and Silas Wolcott. A number of these were from the Wyoming Valley, and some of them from the adjoining towns of this co. George W. Buttison erected the first sawmill, at Barton Village.

⁴ 3 M. E., 2 Bap., Prot. E., and R. C.

⁵ Among the first settlers were Stephen and Samuel Ball, Peter Wilson, and Josiah Ball, from Stockbridge, Mass., in 1792-93; John Brown, Capt. Asa Loomard, Eben. Cook, Daniel Carpenter, Consider Lawrence, David Williams, Joseph Waldo, Nathaniel Ford, Abel, Azel, and Nathaniel Hovey, Jeremiah Campbell, and Samuel Collins—all from Berkshire co., Mass.—came in soon after. W. H. Moore kept the first inn and store; David Williams erected the first mill; and Miss T. Moore taught the first school.

⁶ The census reports 4 churches; 2 M. E., Cong., and Bap.

CANDOR—was formed from Spencer, Feb. 22, 1811. It is a large town, extending from the center to the n. border of the co. Its surface consists of high, broad, rolling uplands, separated into ridges by the narrow valleys of streams flowing in a southerly direction. Their declivities are generally abrupt, and their summits are mostly covered with forests. Catatunk Creek flows through the center of the town, and the West Branch of Owego Creek forms the e. boundary. A western branch of Catatunk Creek enters the town near the center of its w. border and flows n., its valley completely dividing the western ridge into two parts. The soil is a gravelly loam, very fertile in the valleys and moderately so upon the hills. The settlements are mostly confined to the valleys. Candor (p. v.) is situated on Catatunk Creek, near the center of the town. It is a station on the C. & S. R. R., and contains 4 churches, a woolen factory, flouring mill, 2 sawmills, and about 70 dwellings. Candor Center, $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. w. of Candor, contains 1 church, a flouring mill, 2 sawmills, and 20 dwellings. Willseyville, (p. v.), a station on the C. & S. R. R., on the s. w. part of the town, contains 20 dwellings. South Candor, on Catatunk Creek, near the s. border of the town, contains a church and about 20 dwellings. Welltonville (p. o.) is a hamlet at the mouth of Doolittle Creek. East Candor is a p. o. The first settlers were Thos. Hallister, Job Judd, — Laddington, and — Jordan, from Conn., who came into town in 1793.¹ Rev. Daniel Loring was the first preacher. The census reports 10 churches.²

NEWARK—was formed from Berkshire, as "W. Steville," April 12, 1823. Its name was changed March 24, 1824. It lies upon the center of the e. border of the co. Its surface is mostly a hilly, upland region, with a mean elevation of about 1,200 ft. above tide. Its streams are the West Branch of Owego Creek, forming the w. boundary, and the East Branch, flowing s. w. through near the center of the town. The soil in the valleys is a fine, gravelly loam, but upon the hills it is an unproductive hardpan. The greater part of the uplands are yet unsettled. Newark Valley, (p. v.), located in the valley of East Owego Creek, contains 2 churches, mills, an extensive tannery, and 75 dwellings. Ketchumville, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner of the town, 7 mi. s. e. of Newark Valley, contains a church, sawmill, and 26 dwellings. West Newark is a p. o. The settlement of the town was commenced in 1791, by emigrants from Berkshire co., Mass.³ The first religious association (Cong.) was formed in 1798, by Rev. Seth Williston, a missionary from Conn.; Rev. Jeremiah Osborn was the first settled preacher, in 1803.⁴

NICHOLS—was formed from Tioga, March 23, 1824. It lies upon the s. bank of the Susquehanna, near the center of the s. boundary of the co. Its surface is mostly upland, terminating in steep declivities upon the river, and broken by the narrow valleys of small streams. The summits of the hills are broad and 300 to 500 ft. above the river. Many of them are still covered with forests. The soil in the valleys is a gravelly loam and very productive; upon the hills it is a moderately fertile, gravelly and clayey loam, underlaid by red sandstone. Nichols, (p. o.), Hoopers Valley, (p. o.), and Cainfields Corners (p. o.) are hamlets upon the Susquehanna. The first settlement was made by Ebenezer Ellis, Pelatiah Pierce, Stephen Mills, and James Cole, in 1787. There are 2 churches in town: M. E. and Union.⁵

OWEGO⁶—was organized Feb. 16, 1791. Spencer was taken off in 1806. It is a large town, occupying the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is mostly upland, separated into two distinct parts by Susquehanna River and broken by the narrow valleys of small creeks. The summits of the ridges are broad and rolling, and 300 to 500 ft. above the river. The intervals along the river in some places is an unbroken flat more than a mile in width. Owego Creek, flowing through a broad and beautiful valley, forms the w. boundary of the town s. of the Susquehanna. The other streams are Nauticoke Creek, from the n., and Apalachin Creek, from the s., and a great number of smaller brooks and creeks. The declivities bordering upon these streams are generally very steep. The soil is a deep, rich, gravelly loam in the valleys, and a less productive, gravelly loam, ¹ They were followed in 1791 by Joel and Elijah Smith, Israel Mead, and his son Israel,—the former two from Conn. and the latter from Vt. Families named Callous, Sheldon, Marsh, Bates, and Ellis were also among the early settlers. The first inn was kept by Thos. Hallister; the first store by Philip Case; and the first gristmill was erected by Eliph. Hart.

² 5 Bap., 2 M. E., Prot. E., Cong., and Union.

³ Among the settlers in 1791 were Eliza Wilson, living upon the place of her original settlement in 1785, at the age of 87; Daniel Ball, Isaac and Abram Brown, — Dean, and — Norton—all from Shelburne, Mass.—most of them settling in the valley of Owego Creek. The first birth was that of Wm. Ball, Miss E. Moore taught the first school; Enoch Stovous kept the first store and inn; and E. Wilson built the first mill.

⁴ The census reports 5 churches, 3 M. E. Cong., and 1 Presb.

⁵ Among those who settled later were Judge Francis Perry, H. Isiah Jones, — Bass, and — Linnis, from E. Mass., and at the same time Caleb Wright, on the site of Nichols Valley, and Stephen Doble, a short distance below. In 1790 Jonathan Platt and his son Jonathan, of Richd. L. S. set. by a s. w. way, and Miles Fortune—all from Westchester—settled in the valley. Major John Smyth and his sons John G. G. G. and Nathan, from Mont. Co., Penn.; Benjamin, James, and Ziba Evans, Jonathan Hunt, Richard S. S. S., Andrew, Richard, Jonathan, Peppers, Joseph and John Arnold, Joseph M. A. and Dan'l Briggs, were among the pioneer settlers. The first birth was that of Daniel Peck, in 1787.

underlaid by hardpan, on the hills. A considerable portion of the hilly regions is yet covered with forests. Manufactures, and commerce to a limited extent, engage the attention of the people. Owego, (p. v.,) the co. seat, was incorp. April 4, 1827. It is finely situated upon the Susquehanna, near the mouth of Owego Creek.¹ It is the commercial center of a large agricultural and lumbering district; and since its first settlement it has been one of the most important villages in the southern tier of counties.² It contains a the Owego Academy, a female seminary, 7 churches, 2 banks, 2 newspaper offices, and several manufacturing establishments.³ A bridge 80 rods in length here crosses the Susquehanna. Pop. 3,041. Apalachin, (p. v.,) on the s. bank of the Susquehanna, 8 mi. above Owego, contains 1 church and 200 inhabitants. Campville, (p. v.,) on the n. bank of the river, 7 mi. above Owego, contains 1 church and 20 dwellings. It is a station on the Erie R. R. Menningville (p. o.) is a hamlet in the n. w. part of the town, on Owego Creek; Willsboro, a p. o. on Nanticoke Creek; and South Owego, a p. o. near the Penn. line. Amos Draper, an Indian agent and trader, from the Wyoming Valley, erected the first house in town, at Owego Village, in 1786, and moved in his family in 1787.⁴ The first religious services were conducted by Rev. Seth Williston. The first religious association (Presb.) was formed in 1810, and a church was organized in 1817; Rev. Horatio L. Lombard was the first settled minister, in 1818. There are 13 churches in town.⁵

RICHFORD—was formed from Berkshire, as "Arlington," April 18, 1831. Its name was changed April 9, 1832. It is the n. e. corner town in the co. Its surface is mostly upland, broken by a few narrow valleys. It contains the highest land in the co., estimated to be 1,400 to 1,600 ft. above tide. Its streams are the head branches of Owego Creek. Its soil is a moderately fertile, gravelly loam. About one third of the surface is yet covered with forests. Leather and lumber are manufactured to some extent. Richford, (p. v.,) s. of the center of the town, contains a church and about 60 dwellings. West Richford is a p. o. The first settlements, made at a later period than those in Berkshire, from which the town was taken, were since the commencement of the present century;⁶ but the exact date could not be ascertained. There is a Presb. church in town.

SPENCER—was formed from Owego, Feb. 28, 1806. Candor, Caroline, Danby, and Newfield (the last three now in Tompkins co.) were taken off Feb. 22, 1811, and Cayuta, March 20, 1824. It is the n. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is an upland, broken by the valleys of small streams. The n. w. portion forms the watershed between Susquehanna River and Cayuga Lake. The ridges have a general n. and s. direction. Their declivities are generally steep and their summits broad and broken. Catatunk Creek, flowing e., breaks through these ridges at nearly right angles, forming a deep and narrow valley. The soil in the valleys is a gravelly loam, and upon the hills it is a hard, shaly loam. Spencer,⁷ (p. v.,) on Catatunk Creek, w. of the center of the town, contains 3 churches, 2 tanneries, a flouring mill, sawmill, and 75 dwellings. The first settlement was commenced in 1795, by Benj. Drake and Joseph and John Barker.⁸ The first religious meeting was held by P. Spaulding, at his own house; and the first religious association (Bap.) was formed by Elder David Jayne.⁹

TIOGA—was formed from Union, (Broome co.,) March 14, 1800. Berkshire was taken off in 1808, a part of Union in 1810, and Barton and Nichols in 1824. It lies on the Susquehanna, s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is principally upland, terminating in bluffs along the river intervals. The streams are Catatunk and Pipe Creeks and numerous smaller creeks and brooks.

¹ Glen Mary, for several years the residence of N. P. Willis, is situated on Owego Creek, near the w. bounds of the village. It was here that his expository Rural Letters were written.

² For many years the p. o. here was one of the four distributing offices of the State. From this place also were shipped salt, plaster, lumber, and wheat for the Penn. and Md. markets. Sept. 7, 1849, a destructive fire occurred, burning 75 buildings.

³ The principal of these are manufactories of steam engines and boilers in machinery, castings, sash and blinds, silverware, lumber, leather flour, and plaster.

⁵ M. E., 2 Presb., Prot. E., Bap., Cong., Wes. Meth., R. C. and Union.

⁶ Among the early settlers were Evan Harris, Samuel Smith, Samuel Gleason, Nathaniel Johnson, — Stevens, Jeremiah Campbell, Beriah Wells, Caleb and Jesse Gleason, Ezekiel Rich, and William Dunham,—many of them from the adjoining town of Berkshire.

⁷ This village was the co. seat of Tioga co., then including Chemung, from 1812 to 1821.

⁸ Among the early settlers at Spencer Village were Joshua Ferris, Henry Miller, Edmund and Rodney Hobart, from Conn., Andrew Purdy, Thos. Mosher, from Westchester co., and George Fisher. The first birth was that of Deborah, daughter of Benjamin Drake; the first marriage, that of John B. Underwood and Polly Spaulding; and the first death, that of Prescott Hobart. The first school was taught by Joseph Barker, in his own house, at Spencer Village; the first firm was kept by Andrew Purdy; the first store by Samuel Doddittle; and the first gristmill was built by Benj. Drake.

⁹ The census reports 3 churches in town; Cong., Bap., and M. E.

The soil is a fine, dark loam in the valleys and a gravelly loam upon the hills. Most of the summits are still covered with forests. Tioga Center, (p. v.) at the mouth of Pipe Creek, contains a church, several mills, and 60 dwellings. It is a station on the N. Y. & E. R. R. Smithsboro, (p. v.) on the N. Y. & E. R. R., contains 250 inhabitants. Halsey Valley (p. o.) is a hamlet, in the s. w. corner of the town, on the line of Barton. Straights Corners is a p. o. on the s. border. Jenksville (p. o.) is a hamlet, near the mouth of Canadock Creek. The first settlement was made on Pipe Creek, in 1785, by Samuel and Wm. Rutson, — Primer, and Andrew Allen, from Wyoming, Penn. Col. David Pixley, from Mass., and Abner Turner, from N. H., made the first settlement on the river, in 1791.¹ There are two churches in town: M. E. and Union.

TOMPKINS COUNTY.

This county was formed from Cayuga and Seneca, April 17, 1817. Three towns were annexed from Tioga, March 22, 1822, and a part of Schuyler co. was taken off in 1854. It lies around the head of Cayuga Lake, s. w. of the center of the State, is centrally distant 141 mi. from Albany, and contains 506 sq. mi. Its surface consists principally of an upland, broken by a series of ridges extending n. and s. The watershed between Cayuga Lake and Tioughnioga River occupies the e. border of the co., and that between the same lake and Susquehanna River the s. border. The deep valley of Cayuga Lake, 700 ft. below the summits of the ridges, separates the n. portions of the co. into two distinct parts. The e. portion, declining toward the n., gradually loses its hilly character and spreads out into the beautifully rolling lands so common in Central N. Y. West of the lake the land does not lessen in height within the limits of the co.; but the rough, broken hills change into smooth ridges, with long, gradual slopes.

The deep valley of Cayuga Lake affords a fine opportunity to examine the geological structure of this region. Upon the shore in the extreme n. part are found the Hamilton shales, the lowest rock in the co. Next above them on the shore appear the Tully limestone, Genesee slate, and Portage or Ithaca shales and sandstones.¹ The summits of all the hills are formed of the rocks belonging to the Chemung group, usually covered deep with drift deposits. The streams, in their course from the table lands to the lake, have worn deep channels into the rocks, and waterfalls which once were, probably, at the face of the bluffs, have receded one to two miles, forming below deep, rocky chasms bordered by perpendicular walls. As the rocks are composed of strata of different degrees of hardness, the water has worn them irregularly,—the soft and yielding shales generally forming a declining surface, while the hard and compact limestone retains its perpendicular forms.²

The streams are Salmon, Fall, Cascadilla, Six Mile, and Taughanick Creeks and Cayuga Inlet and their branches, flowing into the lake, and several branches of Owego Creek and other small streams, flowing s. The cascades upon these streams form one of the most peculiar and interesting features of the landscape.

The soil in the n. part is generally a gravelly or clayey loam, formed by the drift deposits; and that in the s. is a gravelly or slaty loam, derived from disintegration. It is all best adapted to grazing. In the n. part the people are generally engaged in grain raising, wheat forming the staple production. In the s. towns the principal branches of agriculture pursued are stock raising and dairying. Considerable manufacturing is carried on at Ithaca and other places.

The co. seat is located at the village of Ithaca. The courthouse is a brick edifice, built upon a fine lot near the center of the village.³ The jail, contiguous to the courthouse, is a well built stone edifice, with ample accommodations for the health of the prisoners. The cells are clean and well ventilated. The co. clerk's office is a fireproof building, fronting upon Tioga St. The poor-house is situated upon a farm of 100 acres in Ulysses, 6 mi. n. w. of Ithaca. The average number of inmates is 53, and the revenue derived from the farm is about $1,500. No school is provided for the children, and they are not admitted to the public schools. The house is in bad repair, destitute of ventilation, and entirely unfit for the residence of so many human beings.

The Cayuga & Susquehanna R. R. extends from Ithaca to Owego, connecting with the Erie R. R. at the latter place. Cayuga Lake is navigable and connects with the Erie Canal at Monte-

¹ The Tully limestone furnishes an abundance of lime; huge fragments of this rock are found scattered over the land several hundred feet above the regular veins of the rock, showing that some great force had been in operation here at some former period. The Genesee slate is about 100 ft. thick, and the Portage is up 500 ft.

² The Taughanick Falls, below Tompansburgh, have receded some thing more than a mile from the lake. "In its passage, the stream first produced a series of falls and rapids, but finally receded 1200 ft. to form but a single fall. This is caused by the higher strata being so much harder than those below that a firm table is formed of these, while those below are undermined." About 1 mi. n. of these falls is a cascade, where, from the absence of a resisting stratum at the surface, the rock has been worn down in a continuous slope.—Geol. W. Dist., p. 578, 579.

zuma. A daily line of steamers plies between Ithaca and Cayuga Bridge, on the N. Y. C. R. R., touching at all the landings on the lake. The railroad and canal and lake constitute one of the principal routes for supplying the West with the anthracite coal of E. Penn.

Four weekly newspapers are now published in the co.¹

The three s. towns of this co. were included in the Watkins and Flint's Purchase, and the remainder in the Military Tract. A public road was built from Oxford, on Chenango River, directly through to Ithaca, by Joseph Chaplin, in 1791-92-93, and this became the great highway for immigration in the s. part of the State for many years. As a consequence, the co. immediately bordering upon the road was rapidly settled. The first immigrants were mostly from New England. At the place where Ithaca now stands were found cleared fields which had previously been cultivated by the Indians; and these lands were among the first occupied in the co. The next settlements were made in Ulysses, on the w. bank of the lake, and along Chaplin's road in Dryden. The opening of the rich lands of the Genesee country to settlers diverted immigration from this region, and the co. for many years did not increase in population with the same rapidity as the regions further w. The growth of the co., however, has been gradual and continuous; and now in every element of real prosperity it is fully on an average with the other cos. in the State.

CAROLINE—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.,) Feb. 22, 1811, and was transferred to this co. March 22, 1822. A part was annexed to Danby in 1839. It is the s. r. corner town of this co. Its surface is an upland, broken by a series of ridges extending n. w. and s. e. 500 to 700 ft. above the valleys and 1,500 to 1,700 ft. above tide. The summits of the hills are usually rounded and rolling and their declivities steep. The streams are Owego Creek, forming the e. boundary, and Six Mile Creek and their branches. These streams flow in deep, narrow valleys bordered by steep hillsides. The soil is generally a gravelly loam, and is well adapted to grazing. Caroline Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches and 14 houses; Motts Corners, (p. v.) on Six Mile Creek, in the n. w. corner of the town, 1 church, several manufacturing establishments,² and 40 houses; Speedville, (p. v.) upon Boyer Creek, in the s. e. corner, contains 3 churches and 30 houses; and Staterville, (p. v.) near the n. border, 1 church and 30 houses. Pugsleys Depot (p. o.) is a station on the C. & S. R. R. Caroline (p. o.) is a hamlet in the s. e. corner of the town. Rawson Hollow, on the e. line, is a p. o. The first settlement was begun by Chap-

¹ The Sweet Republic, the first paper published in the co., was started at Ithaca, July 4, 1815, by Jonathan Ingalls. In 1816 it was changed to

The Ithaca Journal, and in 1817 Mack & Shepard became proprietors. It was successively issued by Mack & Seering, Ebenezer Mack, and Mack & Morgan, until 1834, when Wm. Andrus became partner, and the paper was issued by Mack & Andrus. In 1827 the name was changed to

Ithaca Journal, Literary Gazette, and General Advertiser, and about a year afterward a portion of the title was dropped, and it was issued as

The Ithaca Journal and Advertiser. In Dec. 1823, Mack & Andrus sold to Nathan Randall; in 1837 Randall sold to Mattison & Barnaby, and in 1839 A. E. Barnaby became sole proprietor. In 1841 Barnaby sold to Alfred Wells, and 1 year after Wells sold to J. H. S. Barrag, the present publisher.

The Republic in Chronole was started at Ithaca in June, 1820, by Spencer & Spurlin. In 1823 David D. Spencer became sole proprietor. In 1826 S. S. Chatterton bought an interest, and in 1828 he became sole proprietor, and soon after changed the name to

The Ithaca Republican. In 1831 or '32 he again changed the name to

The Tompkins American, and in 1834 the paper was discontinued.

The Weekly Messenger was started at Ithaca in 1826 by A. P. Seering, and was continued about 2 years.

The Philadelphia Tea Universalist paper, was started at Ithaca in 1831 by O. A. Bowman, and was continued about 1 year.

The Ithaca Chronicle was started by D. D. & V. Spencer in Feb. 1828, and was continued by them until 1833, when Anson Spencer became sole proprietor. In 1855 it was changed to

The American Citizen, published by A. E. Barnaby & Co. It is now published by Anson Spencer, who has become one of the proprietors from the commencement of the paper in 1828.

The Lolo World was started at Trumansburgh in 1827 by Wm. W. Phelps, and was continued about 2 years.

The Trumansburgh Advertiser was published a short time in 1833 by D. Fairchild.

The Jeffersonian and Tompkins Times was started at Ithaca by C. Robbins. He soon after sold to G. G. French, who changed the name to

The Ithaca Herald. In 1827 Nathan Randall became proprietor, and merged the paper in the Ithaca Journal and Advertiser.

The Christian, National Advocate, and Spectator was first started at Motts Corners in 1817, under the auspices of the 7th Day Baptist denomination, and was continued several years.

The Tompkins Advocate was started at Ithaca by H. C. O'Brien in 1841. He soon after sold to J. Hartman, in 1843; the title was then changed to

The Tompkins Democrat, and after a short time the paper was removed to Greene, Chenango co.

The Trumansburgh Gazette was published a short time in 1811 by J. H. Hawes.

The Friend of the Union was started at Ithaca in 1818 by J. B. Gosman. In 1820 it was merged in the Ithaca Journal and Advertiser.

The Temple and Wellbourn was started at Ithaca in 1818 by Orlando Lund. It afterwards merged into the Ithaca Journal and Advertiser, and was continued a short time.

Ramsey's Companion was started at Dryden in 1830 by H. B. Lumsy. It was continued about 11 years.

The Practical American was published a few months in 1818 at Ithaca. In 1817 it was sold to G. Z. House, and discontinued.

The New York Chronicle was discontinued in 1858, and was soon after discontinued.

The Dryden News, by Asahel Clapp, by whom it is still published.

The Tompkins County Democrat was started at Ithaca in Oct. 1847, by J. H. McCoy, by whom it is still published.

² Two flouring mills were situated at Ithaca, and were in a factory one mile below the valley of the Cayuga, and in a flour mill manufacturing mill at Ithaca, and with the exception of the latter, one in the State. It was established at Westerlo, Cayuga co., by Abel F. Sargent, one of the present proprietors of this co., and thence it was removed to Ithaca, near Ithaca, thence to Owego, and thence to its present location.

David Rich, who came from Vt. in 1795 and located near Willow Bridge; Widow Earsley, with four sons and four daughters, from N. J., came in the next year; and for several years these were the only families in town.¹ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed at an early period; the first pastor was Rev. Garritt Mandeville. The census reports 10 churches in town.²

DANBY—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.) Feb. 22, 1811, and was transferred to this co. March 22, 1822. Part of Caroline was annexed April 29, 1839, and a part was annexed to Dryden in 1856. It lies near the center of the s. border of the co. Its surface is broken by ranges of hills extending n. and s. 300 to 400 ft. above the valleys. Their summits are rounded and their declivities generally steep. The valleys are mere ravines. The principal streams are Cayuga Inlet, flowing n., and numerous small streams, the latter being tributaries either to this or to Owego Creek. The soil is a mixed gravelly and shaly loam, with occasional patches of clay, and is well adapted to grazing. Danby, (p. v.) in the n. part, contains 3 churches and 50 houses; Beers Settlement, (South Danby p. o.) near the center, about a dozen houses. West Danby is a p. o., near the w. border. The first settlers were Jacob Yapple, Dr. Lewis Beers, Jabez Beers, and Joseph Judson, who located at Beers Settlement in 1797.³ The first church (Cong.) was formed in 1807; Rev. Daniel Loring was the first pastor. There are 8 churches in town.⁴

DRYDEN⁵—was formed from Ulysses, Feb. 22, 1803. A part of Danby was annexed in 1856. It is a large town, occupying the central portion of the e. border of the co. The surface of the n. half is rolling or moderately hilly, and that of the s. half hilly and broken. The e. border forms the watershed between Tioughnioga River and Cayuga Lake. The highest ridge, in the s. e. part, is 1,700 to 1,800 ft. above tide. The principal stream is Fall Creek, flowing s. w. through near the center of the town, on its course affording several millsites. Several small streams, tributaries to Owego Creek, take their rise in the s. part. Dryden Lake is a small sheet of water 1 mi. long and about $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. wide, lying in an elevated valley near the e. border and 1,500 ft. above tide. A mineral spring, strongly impregnated with sulphur, magnesia, and iron, is situated one mi. w. of Dryden Village, and has a local notoriety for medicinal virtues. In the s. e. part are two swamps, each covering an area of several hundred acres. Dryden, (p. v.) on the s. branch of Fall Creek, in the e. part of the town, is a flourishing inland village. It contains 2 churches, a large gristmill, and several manufacturing establishments. Pop. 522. Etna, (p. v.) on Fall Creek, near the center, contains 2 churches, a grist and saw mill, an iron foundry, and machine shop. Pop. 239. West Dryden, (p. v.) in the n. w. part, contains 93 inhabitants; Varna, (p. v.) on Fall Creek, near the w. border, 170 inhabitants; Malloryville, Preville, and California are hamlets. The first settlement was commenced in 1797, by Amos Sweet, on the present site of Dryden Village.⁶ Joseph Chaplin built a road from Oxford, Chenango co., to Ithaca, passing through this town, in 1792-93-94. There are 9 churches in town.⁷

ENFIELD⁸—was formed from Ulysses, March 15, 1821. It lies upon the center of the w. border of the co. Its surface is rolling, and it has a mean elevation of 500 to 700 ft. above Cayuga Lake. The principal streams are Ten Mile Creek and the s. branch of Taughanick Creek. Upon the former, in the s. e. tract of the town, is one of the finest of the beautiful cascades so common in this co. It is in a deep gorge, and has a total fall of 230 ft. The soil is principally a gravelly loam. Enfield Center (p. v.) contains 2 churches and about 40 dwellings; Enfield (p. v.) 25 dwellings. Enfield Falls is a hamlet. Among the first settlers were — Geltner, John Whitlock, Jas. Rumsey, Lewis Owen, and Isaac and John Beech.⁹ There are 5 churches in town.¹⁰

¹ Among the other early settlers were Tho. Tracy and Sam'l Yates, from Mass.; Joseph Chambers, Richard Bush, and Harmon Earnest, from Ulster co., in 1798; Levi Slater, formerly of Saratoga, Charles and John Milks, John Contine (first settler at Motts Corners), and Joseph Bishop, all from Ulster, and John Bonnevillie, from Mass., in 1801. The first child born was Harriet Bonnevillie. The first school was taught by John Robinson. Richard Bush kept the first inn, Isaac Miller the first store, and Gen. Contine built the first gristmill, in 1800.

² 4 M. E., Prot. E., Cong., Bap., Ref. Prot. D., F. W. Bap., and Unit.

³ The first settlers of West Danby were Wm. Hogg and Moses Barker. The first death was an infant son of Lewis Peckshy. Joseph Judson taught the first school, Dr. Beers kept the first inn and store, and Peter Yapple built the first gristmill.

⁴ 3 M. E., 2 Bap., Cong., Prot. E., and Swedishborgian.

⁵ Named in honor of John Dryden, the English poet.

⁶ The next settlers were Ezekiel Snodgrass, David Fort, and J.

Ebenezer Chausen, who located at Willow Grove in 1798. A single yoke of oxen, at one load, brought these three families, consisting of 14 persons, and all their household goods, from the Chenango River. Capt. Geo. Robertson, sometimes called the "father of the town," came in the same year, and settled on Lot 53. Among the other early settlers were Lyman Hurd, from Vt., Dr. Sheldon, Dr. Wolf, Irene Peck, Wm. Dabry, Jos. Hall, and Jos. Wood. The first child born was Robert Robertson; and the first death was that of the mother of Amos Sweet. Daniel Lacey taught the first school, in 1804. Amos Lewis kept the first inn, Joel Hull the first store, and Col. Hopkins, from Homer, built the first mill, in 1806.

GROTON—was formed from Locke, (Cayuga co.), as "Division," April 7, 1817, and its name was changed March 13, 1818. It is the s. e. corner town in the co. Its surface is rolling or moderately hilly. From the valleys the land rises by long and gradual slopes to a height of 100 to 300 ft. The highest point in town is about 1,500 ft. above tide. The principal streams are Owaseo Inlet and Fall Creek. Bear Swamp, in the e. part, contains an area of several hundred acres. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam, underlaid by slate. Groton, (p. v.) on Owaseo Inlet, near the center of the town, contains 3 churches, the Groton Academy, and several manufacturing establishments.² Pop. 587. McLean, (p. v.) on Fall Creek, in the s. e., contains 5 churches, several factories,³ and 40 houses. Peraville, (p. v.) near the s. border, contains 2 churches, a saw and grist mill, pail factory, and 30 houses. Groton City, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, and West Groton, (p. v.) in the s. w., contain about 11 houses each. Beacons Corners is a hamlet, in the s. w. corner. Among the first settlers were Saml. Hogg, at West Groton; Ichabod Bowen, John Guthrie, and ——— Perrin, at Groton; and J. Williams, J. Houghtaling, and W. S. Clark, at East Groton. The census reports 11 churches.⁴

ITHACA⁵—was formed from Olysses, March 16, 1821. It is the central town in the co., lying at the head of Cayuga Lake. A tract of land 2 mi. long and $1\frac{1}{2}$ broad, low and nearly level, extends s. from the lake shore; and from this the valley of Cayuga Inlet opens to the s. w. and that of Six Mile Creek to the s. e. Ridges 400 to 700 ft. high, with steep declivities, separate these valleys and surround the low land and the head of the lake. From the summits the surface spreads out into a rolling upland. A marsh $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. wide borders immediately on the lake. The streams are Fall, Cascadilla, Six Mile, Buttermilk, and Ten Mile Creeks, and Cayuga Inlet. In their course from the uplands each of these streams plunges down the wall-like precipices which surround the lake, forming series of cascades which for beauty and variety are scarcely equalled elsewhere.⁶ The soil is a fertile, gravelly loam upon the uplands, and a deep, rich alluvium in the valleys. Ithaca, (p. v.) $1\frac{1}{2}$ mi. s. of the head of Cayuga Lake, is the co. seat, and the commercial center of the co. It is beautifully situated upon a fine alluvial plain, bordered on 3 sides by lofty hills, and on the fourth by the lake, with which it is connected by a navigable inlet. It contains the Ithaca Academy, 9 churches,⁷ 2 banks, 4 printing offices, and a large number of manufacturing establishments.⁸ The commercial interests of the place are extensive and important. A daily line of steamboats on the lake running between this place and Cayuga Bridge, in connection with the C. & S. R. R., serves to connect the Erie R. R. on the s. with the N. Y. Central on the N.⁹ The lake is also a link in the great chain of the internal water navigation of the State, and upon it a large amount of canal commerce, centering at Ithaca, is carried on. The transshipment of Scranton and Lackawanna coal brought by the C. & S. R. R. forms an important and constantly growing branch of business. A large proportion of the anthracite coal for the Northern and Western markets is supplied through this avenue.¹⁰ The public schools of the village are graded, and are in a flourishing condition. The annual attendance is about 1,200.¹¹ The village was incorp. April 2, 1821. Pop. 4,908. The first settlement of the town was made by Jacob Yaple, Isaac

⁶ Upon Fall Creek, within the space of 1 mi., are 7 falls, varying in height from 41 to 125 ft. The descent through which the stream flows is bordered by perpendicular cliffs. A tunnel 200 ft. long, 10 to 12 ft. wide, and 13 ft. high, was excavated through the creek for hydraulic purposes in 1832, by J. S. Budge. Upon Cascadilla, Six Mile, and Buttermilk Creeks are also numerous fine cascades, within the limits of the town. At Buttermilk Falls the water rushes down at an angle of about 45 degrees in a sheet of perfectly white foam, the appearance of the water furnishing a name to both the cascades and the stream.

¹⁰ The Ithaca & Owego R. R.—the S. E. R. R.—built in this State—was incorp. in 1828, and opened for the service on April 2, 1829, being 2 mi. long, and had 200 lbs. of freight capacity per ton of coal. The first was 1,737 ft. long, with a rise of 12 ft. to the summit, and 2,225 ft. long, with a rise of 130 ft. to the summit. The second was 8 mi. long, 62 ft.—which was 902 ft. of water for 17 miles of Ithaca. A station upon a narrow gauge, 1 ft. 6 in. in height, was completed 12,000 tons of freight and 2,000 passengers per day, and having a ton upon the road, the capacity of the line, in connection on the 20th of May, 1841, was 5,000 tons of freight, 2,000 passengers, and others. For 24 ft. it was put in operation on the 20th of the Cayuga & Susquehanna R. R. The number of passengers subsequently changed to a unit, and the line was subsequently operated by the latter road. This road was built by the latter, Lackawanna & West Hill R. R., which extends to Ithaca for the transportation of coal.

¹¹ During the past few years the total enrollment averaged 100,000 tons per annum. This, it is well known, has increased, with the increased facilities for connection, and the increased capacity of the line.

Dumond, and Peter Hinepaw, who located on the present site of Ithaca Village in 1789. The land that they occupied had previously been partially cultivated by the Indians.¹ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1804-05, with seven members.

LAUSING—was formed from Genoa, (Cayuga co.) April 7, 1817. It lies upon the e. bank of Cayuga Lake, in the s. part of the co. The surface is principally a rolling upland, 500 ft. above the lake, bordered by steep declivities. Salmon Creek, the principal stream, flows s. through near the center of the town. Its valley is narrow and bordered by steep hillsides. Swartz, Townly, and Helden Creeks are its principal tributaries. The soil is generally a fertile, gravelly loam. Ludlowville, (p. v.) on Salmon Creek, about 1 mi. from its mouth, contains 3 churches, several factories,² and about 50 dwellings. Lansingville, (p. v.) on the ridge w. of Salmon Creek, in the s. part of the town, contains 1 church and 25 dwellings. North Lansing, (p. o.) in the s. e. corner, Lake Ridge, (p. o.) on the bluff above the lake, in the s. w. corner, and Libertyville (South Lansing p. o.) are hamlets of about a dozen houses each. East Lansing and Forest City are p. offices. Forest City Water Cure is finely situated on the bluff overlooking the lake, in the s. part of the town. The first settlement was begun in 1792, by emigrants from N. J.³ The census reports 7 churches in town.⁴

NEWFIELD—was formed from Spencer, (Tioga co.) as "Caputa," Feb. 22, 1811. Its name was changed March 29, 1822, and a part was annexed to Catharines (Schuyler co.) in 1853. It is the s. w. corner town in the co. The surface is high and hilly, the ridges being 400 to 600 ft. above the valleys and 1,500 to 1,700 ft. above tide. The streams are Cayuga Inlet and Ten Mile Creek and their branches. The valleys of these streams are usually narrow and bordered by steep hillsides. A portion of the w. part of the town is yet uncultivated. The soil is a shaly and clayey loam, best adapted to grazing. Newfield, (p. v.) in the s. e. part of the town, contains 3 churches, 2 flouring mills, 2 carriage shops, a woolen factory, an oilcloth factory, and about 80 dwellings. Trumbulls Corners, (p. v.) on the n. border, contains 1 church and 20 dwellings. Poney Hollow (p. o.) is a hamlet in the s. w. part. The first settler was — Thomas, who located at Poney Hollow.⁵ The census reports 3 churches in town.⁶

ULYSSES—was formed March 5, 1799. Dryden was taken off in 1803, and Ithaca and Enfield in 1821. It lies upon the w. bank of Cayuga Lake, on the s. border of the co. A range of bluffs 600 ft. high, with steep declivities, borders upon the lake; and from their summits the surface spreads out in an undulating upland. The only considerable stream is Taughanick (Ti-kaw-nik) Creek, which crosses the town from the w. In its descent from the plateau to the lake this stream forms a series of cascades, the principal of which is known as Taughanick Falls. These falls have receded about 1 mi. from the shore of the lake, and have worn a deep gorge in the yielding shales, with banks 380 ft. high. The stream now falls, in an unbroken sheet, over a limestone terrace 210 ft. in height. About 1 mi. farther up the gorge is another fall, of 80 ft. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam. Trumansburgh,⁷ (p. v.) near the n. border of the town, is the second village in the co. in amount of business and population. It contains 4 churches, the Trumansburgh Academy, and several manufacturing establishments.⁸ Pop. 1,052. Jack-sonville, (p. v.) near the center of the town, contains 1 church and 50 houses. Water-burgh, near the w. border, contains 1 church, mills, and 40 dwellings. Halseyville⁹ is a hamlet. The first settlements were commenced by Samuel Weyburn, at the mouth of Taughanick Creek, and by Abner and Philip Tremaine, on the site of Trumansburgh, in 1792.¹⁰ The first church (Presb.) was formed by Jedediah Chapman, in 1803. There are now 6 churches in town.¹¹

¹ Among the other early settlers were families named McDowell, Davenport, Bloom, King, Patchin, Star, Conrad, Markle, Sayers, and B. B. Kirk. The first child born was a daughter of John Dumond, Sept. 1789. The first death was that of Rachel Allen, in 1790. A man named Lightfoot brought a head load of goods up the lake in 1792, and he continued a kind of itinerating trade for several years. David Quigg opened the first regular store; — Hartshorn kept the first inn; and Jacob Yapple built the first mill in 1799. Dr. Freshew was the first physician, and — Howe the first teacher. The first families were a month in getting from Kingston (Clister co. to Oswego), and 19 days from thence to their destination.

² Grist and saw mills and an axle-hole factory.

³ Among the early settlers were Wm. Goodwin, Silas Ludlow, Abram Bloom, and families named Bardsley, Deany, Muner, Allen, Atwater, and Boyker, who came in 1791; Sam'l Gibbs, and — H. Jones, in 1792; and Abram Van Wagner, in 1797. The first marriage was that of Henry Bloom and Miss Goodwin, and the first death, that of the wife of Henry Bloom, in 1798. Wm. Boyse kept the first inn, at Libertyville. The first night of his stay in the house a rattlesnake crept into the bed and slept with his children. — Tooker kept the first store; Silas Ludlow, of Ludlowville, built the first mill, in 1798.

⁴ M. E., 2 Bap., and Presb.

⁶ Bap., M. E., and Presb.

⁷ Name derived and corrupted from Tremaine, the first family of settlers.

⁸ 3 flouring mills and 2 furnaces and machine shops.

⁹ Named from Neeble Halsey, the first settler.

¹⁰ John McAllen, a young man, accompanied the Tremaines in the capacity of carrier. The first child born was Calvin Tremaine, in 1791; and the first marriage, that of John McAllen and Mary King, Dec. 12, 1793. John McAllen kept the first inn, — Henshaw the first store; Abner Tremaine built the first mill; and Stephen Woodworth taught the first school, all at Trumansburgh. — M. E., Bap., Presb., and R. C.

ULSTER COUNTY.

This county was formed Nov. 1, 1683,¹ and included the country between the Hudson and the Delaware, bounded n. and s. by due E. and W. lines passing through the mouths of Sawyers and Murderers Creeks. A part of Delaware was taken off in 1797, a part of Greene in 1800, and Sullivan in 1809. A portion was annexed to Orange in 1798, and the town of Catskill was annexed from Albany co. the same year. It lies on the W. bank of the Hudson, centrally distant 68 mi. from Albany, and contains 1,204 sq. mi. Its surface is mostly a hilly and mountainous upland. The Catskill Mts. occupy the N. W. part; and the Shawangunk Mts. extend N. E. from the S. W. corner nearly through the co. The mountain region consists of irregular ridges and isolated peaks with rocky sides and summits too steep and rough for cultivation. The summits are 1,500 to 2,000 ft. above the Hudson. The remaining parts of the co. are generally broken and hilly. Esopus Creek flows in a tortuous course through the N. part and discharges its waters into the Hudson. It receives Platte Kil from the N. Rondout Creek enters the S. W. corner of the co. and flows N. E. along the W. declivity of the Shawangunk Mts. and enters the Hudson at Rondout. It receives as tributaries Sandburgh Creek in the S. W. part of the co., and Wall Kil near its mouth. The latter stream flows along the E. foot of the Shawangunk Mts. The remaining streams are small brooks and creeks.

The rocks of the co. are composed of the Portage and Chemung shales, in the E. part, and the Shawangunk grit or Oneida conglomerate, in the W. part. Drift deposits are found in nearly every part. Lead ore is found to some extent among the Shawangunk Mts.²

At an early period the Esopus grit was largely quarried and manufactured into millstones.³ Water-limestone of an excellent quality is found and largely quarried.⁴ The Ulster co. Cement has an excellent reputation throughout the United States, and is used in immense quantities on fortifications and other Government works requiring solidity. It was used on Croton, Brooklyn, Cochituate, Albany, Washington, and other water-works. It finds a ready market in every port on the seaboard from New Brunswick to Texas. It has been exported to California and South America, and is largely used in and around New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, upon public and private buildings. The cement rocks are quarried usually on the hillsides, and these openings often extend in galleries under the overlying rock. The rock outcrops in a belt running N. E. and S. W., first appearing on the Hudson a few miles N. of Kingston Point, and extending 20 to 25 mi. to the town of Rochester, but is lost from view at the surface in several places between these points. In the section occupied by the Portage group of rocks are found extensive outcrops of thin bedded sandstone, yielding a fine quality of flagging, which is largely quarried and exported.⁵ The soil is generally a good quality of sandy and gravelly loam, in some places intermixed with clay. Most of the valleys are covered with a deep, rich alluvium.

Most of the land is best adapted to grazing. Dairying is extensively pursued, and spring grain

² A mine was opened near Ellenville more than 40 years ago. It was never worked to profit, and is now abandoned. The Ulster Mine, near Sullivan co. line, was opened in 1857. It is 600 or 700 feet above the valley. The galena in these mines is associated with blende, iron and copper pyrites, calcite, and quartz. There are indications and vague traditions that these mines were worked at a much earlier period and yielded profits beyond computation.

³ In Smith's History, written in 1732, this co. is said to be noted for fine flour, beer, and a good breed of draft horses. The millstones—then quarried about 10 mi. from the river—had acquired celebrity, and were said to far exceed those from Cogen, in Europe, formerly imported at £80 the pair, while Esopus stones did not cost a fourth part of that sum. Small millstones for family use are still made for the Southern market; but the business has lost much of its former importance. A finer quality of these grits, when colored and crushed, furnishes the silic used in the glass manufacture at Ellenville.

⁴ Water-limestone was accidentally discovered on the line of the Erie Canal, by Cuvvas White, an engineer, in 1818. In 1820 he obtained a patent, and subsequently obtained judgment against one or more of the contractors for using it. The first water lime or cement made in Ulster co. was about the time the Delaware & Hudson Canal was commenced. Its manufacture has now become a leading and profitable pursuit, employing about $1,000,000 of capital and 1,000 men. In March, 1859, there were 15 establishments in the co., owned by individuals and companies.

is raised to some extent. Fruit growing is becoming an important branch of business. Manufactures of sole leather and lumber, are located in the western towns,¹ and water-lime in the eastern. The commerce, carried on by means of the river and canal, is large, and is constantly increasing.

The co. seat is located at Kingston.² The courthouse is a fine stone edifice, situated upon Wall St.³ The jail is a stone building in rear of the courthouse. It is well arranged and furnished and is kept in good order.⁴ The clerk's office is in a fireproof one-story building on the corner of Fair and Main Sts.⁵ The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 140 acres, on the s. line of New Paltz, 16 mi. s. w. of Kingston. It is poorly constructed, not ventilated at all, and is entirely unfit for the purposes for which it is used. The average number of inmates is 175, supported at a weekly cost of $1.25 each. A school is taught 6 months in the year.⁶ The farm yields a revenue of $500. The Delaware & Hudson Canal is the only important work of internal improvement in the co. It extends from Rondout, on the Hudson, up Rondout and Sandburgh Creeks, through Kingston, Rosendale, Marbletown, Rochester, and Wawarsing. It opens a direct communication between the coal mines of Penn. and the Hudson. The Delaware & Hudson Canal Co. was incorp. April 23, 1823, and the canal was finished in 1828.⁷

One daily and 7 weekly newspapers are now published in the co.⁸

The Dutch established a trading post upon the present site of Rondout in 1611, and probably a few Dutch families settled in the immediate vicinity soon after. This early settlement was broken up by Indian hostilities, and a new one was commenced between 1630 and '40. This was again attacked by the Indians, and in 1655 was abandoned. Before 1660, settlers had again located at Kingston and vicinity. In 1660 a treaty had been concluded with the Indians; and the people were so unsuspecting of danger that they left open the gates to their fort both day and night. In June, 1663, the Indians came into the fort at Wiltwyck in great numbers, apparently to trade, while the greater part of the people were engaged in their usual avocations out of doors. At a given signal the Indians commenced the work of destruction. Recovering from their first panic, the whites rallied, under the leadership of Thomas Chambers, and finally drove the Indians out of the fort; 18 whites were killed, and 42 were carried away prisoners. The out settlements were all destroyed. A destructive war ensued, in which the Ulster Indians were nearly exterminated. During this war the valley of the Wall Kil was discovered, and soon after the peace of 1663 it was occupied by a colony of French Huguenots.⁹ The settlements gradually extended along the valleys of Esopus,

³ The first county officers and r. state government were Levi Pauling, First Judge; Egbert Diamond, Sheriff; and Joseph Gaslerie, Sarropole.

⁶ The Senate Committee of 1857 report that they found 12 cells for inmates in an old dilapidated building so open that it was scarcely possible to keep the inmates from perishing.

⁷ See page 63. The Canal Company owns a line over the mountain from Rosendale to Carbondale, Penn., and the coal mines at the latter place. It formerly owned most of the boats on the canal, and leased them to boatmen. About 1850 the Penn. Coal Company made an arrangement, by which upon payment of toll they were allowed to transport coal in their own boats from Hawley to Port Jervis.

The People's Press is published at Kingston by Daniel Galtman.

⁹ After the peace of 1660 the Director General of New Netherlands shipped 11 Indian prisoners to Curaçoa to be sold as slaves. This contributed to the attack made in 1663, and the bloody war that followed. Nine days after the retreat of the Indians from the attack upon Wiltwyck, in June, 1663, a com-

Rondout, and Wall Kil Creeks and their tributaries. Besides the manorial grant of Fox Hall,¹ the English made township grants of Kingston, New Paltz, Marbletown, Rochester, Hurley, Shawangunk, and Marlborough. During the Revolution the frontier settlements were exposed to Indian hostilities, and before the close of the war were all destroyed or abandoned. The river towns were taken by the British in 1777, and most of them were pillaged and burned. The Provincial Congress and State Legislature held several sessions at Kingston during the war and soon after. The people were nearly all ardent patriots; and there were probably fewer Tories in this co. than in any other section of the State. Since the Revolution the co. has steadily progressed in wealth and population. The completion of the Delaware & Hudson Canal was a marked era in the history of the industry of the co.; and the commencement of the cement manufacture and stone quarrying have greatly added to its permanent prosperity.

DENNING²—was formed from Shandaken, March 6, 1849. A part of Hardenburgh was taken off in 1859. It lies in the s. w. part of the co., upon the border of Sullivan. Its surface is a broken and mountainous upland. A spur of the Catskill Mts. extends through the town, with a mean elevation of 1,500 to 2,000 ft. Its streams are head branches of Rondout Creek and Never-sink River. The valleys are narrow ravines bordered by steep and rocky hillsides. The soil upon the uplands is a gravelly loam, and in the valleys a sandy loam. The settlements are chiefly confined to the valleys. Denning is a p. o. near the center. Dewittsville is a hamlet near the s. line. This town, though large, has the least population of any town in the co. Its chief wealth consists in its heavy growth of hemlock and hard wood. Settlements were made at a comparatively recent period.³

ESOPUS—was formed from "Kingston," April 5, 1811. A part was set off to Kingston, and a part of Hurley was annexed, in 1818, and a part of New Paltz was annexed April 12, 1812. It lies upon the Hudson, and is the central town upon the e. border of the co. Its surface is rolling in the e. and moderately hilly in the w. A range of hills extends s. and s. through near the center of the town, the highest peak being 1,632 ft. above tide. Hussey Hill, s. of Rondout, is 1,000 ft. high. Wall Kil forms the w. and s. boundaries, and Swarte Kil and Black Creek flow through the s. part.⁴ The soil is a light, clay loam. Fruit growing is becoming an important branch of business. Cement is largely manufactured, and an extensive commerce is carried on by means of the river and Delaware & Hudson Canal.⁵ Port Ewen, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, s. of the mouth of Rondout Creek, is a village built up by the Penn. Coal Co. A large part of the coal brought forward by the canal is here shipped upon barges for the Northern market. Pop. 1,300.⁶ Arnoldton, (p. v.) upon Rondout Creek, in the s. part of the town, contains a church, woolen factory, cotton factory, and 150 inhabitants. South Rondout, upon Rondout Creek, in the s. part, contains an extensive cement and lime factory, a lager beer brewery, a brickyard, several boatyards, and 568 inhabitants. Dashville, upon Rondout Creek, in the s. part, contains a cement factory and 20 houses. Sleightsburg, upon the Hudson, at the mouth of Rondout Creek, contains an extensive shipyard and 40 houses. Elmores Cove, (Esopus p. o.) upon the Hudson, contains a church and 40 houses. Amesville (p. o.) and Atkarton are hamlets. Freeville, in the n. part, contains a gristmill and 20 houses. Settlements were made by the Dutch, soon after their first occupation of the co.⁷ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) of which there is any record was formed in 1751; Rev. G. W. Mancius was the first preacher.⁸

GARDINER⁹—was formed from Rochester, New Paltz, and Shawangunk, April 2, 1853. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the co. The surface is rolling in the e. and hilly in the

1. A party of 19 men, under Ensign Mynse, arrived, and reached the fort. Capt. Rydziger, with a company and a force of 210 men, pursued the Indians to their forts and destroyed their grain. In Sept. another expedition surprised an Indian fort 36 mi. s. w. of Wadswick, killed the chief and 20 others, and restored 22 captives. The Indians were effectually broken and scattered, and late in the fall they sued for peace and restored all the remaining prisoners except 3.

2. Thomas Chambers, the original proprietor of this patent, embraced by will to end it in his family; but it passed to strangers before the Revolution.

3. Named in honor of Wm. H. Denning, former proprietor of a large part of the town.

4. The first sawmill was built in 1827, and the first tannery in 1850, at Dewittsville, by De Witt & Reynolds.

5. Sesopus was known by the Dutch, included both Kingston and the present s. of the Rondout. Their descendants still designate Kingston as "Sesopus," and the corporate town above named as "Klein Sesopus," or Little Sesopus. The word is of Indian origin. The Esopus Indians—who lived in this region when first known to the whites—were of the Algonquin stock, and were allied to the Mohican and the other river tribes.

6. Along the bluffs that overlook the Hudson are several fine country residences. Two lighthouses are built in the river opposite this town.

7. Named from John Ewen, President of the Penn. Coal Company. The village was laid out in 1851; nearly all of the inhabitants are more or less interested in the coal trade.

8. Johannes Egan was born in 1681; Baltus Terpinck and Tyntje Van Vliet were married in 1682. These, so far as is known, were the first birth and marriage in town. Wm. Hinman taught a school at the Hook, in 1763. A mill was built on Black Creek prior to 1800. A cotton factory was built at Dashville in 1828, and the one now at Arnoldton in 1830; the former is standing idle.

9. There are 6 churches in town; 3 Ref. Prot. D., M. E., Prot. E., and Friends.

center and w. The Shawangunk Mts. extend along the w. border.¹ The Wall Kil flows s. e. 1/2 m. n. g. h. near the center and receives Shawangunk Kil from the s. w. The soil is principally a gray loam, with clay and alluvium along the streams. Lumber and leather are made and a tannery is situated at Tutthilltown, (Tutthill p. o.) upon Shawangunk Kil, near its mouth, contains 20 dwellings.² Libertyville, (p. o.) on the s. line, and Jenkinstown (see Lakes), are hamlets. The first settlement was made at an early period, by a colony of French Huguenots. The first church was formed in 1833; Rev. Wm. Brush was the first preacher.

HARBENBERGH³—was formed from Denning and Shandaken, April 15, 1859. It lies in the extreme w. corner of the co. Its surface is a broken and mountainous upland, the highest summits being 2,000 ft. above tide. It occupies a portion of the watershed between the Hudson and Delaware. Beaver Kil, Mill Brook, and Dry Brook take their rise in the town. Dry Brook (West Shandaken p. o.) is a hamlet.

HURLEY⁴—was granted by patent Oct. 19, 1708.⁵ A part of the Harburgh Patent was released by Margaret Livingston, and was annexed March 3, 1789; and a part of New Paris was taken off in 1809, a part of Esopus in 1818, a part of Olive in 1823, a part of Rosendale in 1844, and a part of Woodstock in 1853. It is an interior town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. The surface is a rolling and moderately hilly upland, the highest summits being about 700 ft. above tide. Esopus Creek flows s. e. through the s. part. Along its course are extensive farms and flats. The soil is a sandy loam, a considerable portion lying s. of the creek being unfit for cultivation. Stone quarrying is extensively carried on.⁶ Hurley, (p. v.) on Esopus Creek, contains a church and 160 inhabitants;⁷ and West Hurley, (p. v.) in the s. part, 2 churches and 25 dwellings. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, about 1680.⁸ This town became the refuge of the inhabitants of Kingston when the latter place was taken by the British in 1777. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1800; Rev. Thos. G. Smith was the first pastor.⁹

KINGSTON—was incorp. by patent May 19, 1667, and was recognized as a town May 1, 1702.¹⁰ Fox Hall Patent was annexed March 12, 1787.¹¹ Esopus and Saugerties were taken off in 1811; a part of Esopus was annexed in 1818, and a part was annexed to Saugerties in 1822. It lies upon the Hudson, s. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly, the highest summit being Kuykuyt or Lookout Mt., about 600 ft. above tide. Esopus Creek flows s. e. through near the center, receiving Saw Kil from the w. as tributary. Rondout Creek forms the s. boundary. The soil is principally a clayey loam. A large business in coal, ice, and stone is carried on by the canal and river. Kingston, (p. v.) upon Rondout Creek, 2 mi. w. of the Hudson, was incorp. April 6, 1805. Besides the co. buildings, it contains 8 churches, the Kingston Academy, several private seminaries,¹² 3 banks, 1 savings bank, 4 newspaper offices, and several small manufactories.¹³ It is the center of an extensive trade upon the river and canal.¹⁴ P. p. 3,974. Rondout,¹⁵ (p. v.) upon the Hudson, at the mouth of Rondout Creek, was incorp. April 1, 1849.

² A wooden factory was built at this place at an early period.

⁴ Named from Gov. Lovelace's family, who were Lord's heirs in Ireland—Beaumont's Memoir, p. 40. In early times it was called "Hilly Conemaug."

⁵ The patentees of this tract were Corn. Ius. Kieft, Adm. Gerritse, Matthew Ten Eyck, Jacobus Du Bois, Johannes S. Hoopes, Roeloff Swartwout, Cornelius Lammeuse, Peter P. Peters, Lawrence Oosthout and Francis A. Newark. The successors of the original trustees attached to April 30, 1668, for the benefit of the corporation. An Act of April 18, 1668, appointed John A. de Witt, Levi J. Huston, and a third person to be chosen by the freeholders to sell these lands and make a partition among the owners.

⁶ The stone obtained from these quarries is used for building and for paving. The business gives employment to several hundred men.

⁷ Some of the buildings at this place are nearly 200 years old. A very suspension bridge 260 ft. long here crosses the Esopus.

⁸ Among the early settlers were Dutchmen named Oropel, Du Bois, Gode, Newark, S. Hoopes, Ten Eyck, Wyck, de Elmstedt, Breda, Veenstabel, Tenck, Ten Eyck, and others, mostly from Holland and Belgium. In 1719 the 11 living persons held the office of trustees of the corporation. Corporators: Koel, Adriaen Gerritsen, Ja. de Hut, B. S. Fardoes, Swartwout, Jacob Pater, Ne. Ten Boese and Charles Wyle. The first year of which there is authentic knowledge was kept about 1700, by Charles de Witt, at Hut's Village. Two christenings were recorded soon after the first settlement.

¹⁰ Called by the Indians "Wandowag," said to signify smooth land. It was more commonly called Esopus, from the fact that the Dutch who inhabited it, six days out of a year, from May 15, 1661, under the name of Witwou, lived and worked and believed it from dependence upon Fort Orange. If affairs were to be managed by a sheriff and his lieges, the Fort Saugerties went was appointed first sheriff, and Levit P. S. Co. many Raabertsen, Sleight, and Libert H. de Boers, being the first successors. Appeals from their decisions might be made to the Director General and Council in New Netherlands. The sheriff and commissioners were to take the oath of office before the, except in harvest time, unless a reasonable quantity of other goods were required. All criminal cases were to be referred to the Director General and Council, except the cases of petty as quadrants, injuries, saddleing, kidnapping, and other crimes, which drawing a knife or sword, without cause, and other offenses, which might be prosecuted in the w. s. c. c.

¹¹ Fox Hall Patent was sold by the Dutchess County, May 21, 1667, with manorial privileges. On the 15th of August, 1667, the tract was occupied by the settlers, and a council was held there. The land was divided by the public prosecutor of the county, and sold and divided among several persons, and the land was divided into 10 lots. The district of the tract was divided into 10 lots.

¹² The Dutch Hill Seminary and the Dutchess County Seminary, two privately organized schools, were founded at this place in 1818. The Newark Institute of Mary, the first of the kind in N. Y., and a manufacturing co. of Newark, both of which are founded, N. Y., producing in the year 1852, 2,750,000 yards of muslin.

¹⁴ This city is called "New York" by the Dutch, and "Kingston" by the English. When the city was founded, it was named "Beacon" from the flag which floated on the canal company's boat, and the name was adopted soon after. It is the Dutch name for Beacon. It was,

It contains 8 churches, a bank, and newspaper office. The people are principally engaged in the coal trade; and a large number of steamers, barges, and sailing vessels are constantly engaged in freighting coal, stone, and cement from this place.¹ The Newark Lime and Cement Manufacturing Co. manufacture a larger amount of waterlime and cement annually than is produced at any similar establishment in the country. Pop. 5,978. Eddyville, upon Rondout Creek, 2½ mi. from its mouth, contains a cement factory² and about 50 dwellings. It is the s. terminus of the D. & H. Canal. Wilbur, (p. v.) on the Rondout, below Eddyville, contains about 100 houses. It is the center of an immense trade in flagging stones.³ Fly Mountain is a p. o. Dutch Settlement is a hamlet in the n. part. Flatbush contains a cement factory.⁴ The Dutch built a trading and military post here as early as 1614; but every thing was swept away in the wars of 1644-45. Another settlement was commenced in 1652, and abandoned in 1655. The first permanent settlers came in soon after, but suffered much from Indian hostilities for several years.⁵ Feb. 19, 1777, the first State Convention adjourned from Fishkill to Kingston. On the 9th of September following, the State Legislature convened here, but dispersed upon the approach of a British force under Sir Henry Clinton on the 7th of Oct. At that time the public records were hastily removed to the back settlements, and the place was burned.⁶ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed May 30, 1658. There are 18 churches in town.⁷

LLOYD—was formed from New Paltz, April 15, 1845. It lies upon the Hudson, s. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly a rolling and hilly upland, terminating in a bluff upon the river; and the average height of the surface above tide is about 200 ft. Swarte Kil flows n. along its w. boundary and Black Brook s. through the center. The soil is generally a clay and gravelly loam. The bluffs along the river are principally occupied by fine country seats. New Paltz Landing, (p. v.) upon the river, contains 2 churches and 50 houses;⁸ Centerville (Lloyd p. o.) a church and 17 houses. Lewisburgh is a hamlet on the river, s. of New Paltz Landing. Riverside is a p. o. in the s. e. part. The date of first settlement in this town is quite ancient; but most of the details of the first years are lost. It was originally named "Paltz." The first church (M. E.) was formed in 1787. There are 3 churches in town; 2 M. E. and Presb.

MARBLETOWN—was formed by patent June 25, 1703.⁹ It was first recognized as a town March 7, 1788. A part of Olive was taken off in 1823, and a part of Rosendale in 1844. It is near the geographical center of the co. The surface is a hilly upland, broken by the valleys of the streams. Stone Ridge, near the center, the highest summit, is about 400 ft. above tide. Esopus Creek flows through the n. part, and Rondout Creek through the s. e. corner. The soil is chiefly a clay and sandy loam. A quarry of Shawangunk grit has been opened, and a sulphur spring has been found near the line of Rosendale. Stone Ridge, (p. v.) s. e. of the center, contains 2 churches and 80 houses; Kripplebush, (p. v.) in the s. part, a church and 12 houses. High Falls¹⁰ is a hamlet upon the canal. Marbletown is a p. o. Bruceville (High Falls p. o.) is a small canal village on the line of Rosendale, in the s. e. corner. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1738.¹¹

MARLBOROUGH—was formed as a precinct, from Newburgh Precinct, March 12, 1772, at an early period of its growth, a maze of crooked lanes, bordered by rude shanties and inhabited by a floating population of Irish laborers. The village still contains a large proportion of Irish, and has a large and increasing number of German inhabitants. Its appearance has much improved within a few years.

¹ About 20 steamers are engaged in the freighting business of this place. Lines of steamers also run regularly to Albany, New York, and intermediate places. A steam ferry connects the place with Blinbrook, on the e. bank of the Hudson.

² The Lawrence Cement Co. manufacture 30,000 barrels of cement annually.

³ The aggregate amount of this trade is more than $250,000 per annum.

⁴ The Kingston and Rosendale Cement Co. manufacture 70,000 barrels of cement annually.

⁵ The site of the first Dutch fort is said to be upon a plateau in the w. bounds of Esopus. The locality is still called by its Indian name, Ponkhookie, and to signify "Canoë Harbor." On the 7th of June, 1663, as most of the people were at work in the fields, the Indians made a sudden attack upon the fort, which was carelessly left open, killed 18 and carried away 42 as prisoners. Capt. Chambers rallied the men, drove out the Indians, and commenced a war in which the captives were mostly reclaimed and the Indians nearly exterminated. The first marriage on the church record was that of Jan Jansse Timmermans and Catharine Mattysen, Oct. 3, 1660.

⁶ The British force under Gen. Vaughan, consisting of 3,600 men, was sent up the river to cooperate with Burgoyne. For 10 days after passing the barriers at the Highlands they amused themselves by burning and plundering the places along the river. They took possession of Kingston Oct. 17, and after plundering it several hours, they burned every house but one. The houses were mostly of stone, and the woodwork was easily rescued after the retreat of the British. Several of the early meetings of the Legislature were held at this place; and the first State Constitution was formed here.

⁹ This patent was granted to Col. Henry Beckman, Capt. Thos. Gaston, and Capt. Chas. Brodhead, in trust for the inhabitants. Trustees continued to be annually elected until 1808. The records of 1703 contain the names of the following petitioners for grants of land:—Mossy Du Puy, Thomas Vandemarke, Leonard Kool, Richard Wilson, Jeremy Kettell, Jr., Gysbert Roosa, Wm. Nottingham, John Cock, sen., and Capt. Richard Brodhead.

¹⁰ The cement works of DeLafield & Baxter, at High Falls, employ about 50 men, and produce about 40,000 barrels annually. The falls on the Rondout are here about 50 feet high, affording a great amount of water-power.

¹¹ The census reports 5 churches in town; 3 Ref. Prot. D. and 2 M. E. Rev. Derick Romeyn and Rev. J. R. Hardenburgh (afterward Pres. of Rutgers College) were both pastors of the Ref. Prot. D. church at Stone Ridge.

and as a town, March 7, 1788. Plattekill was taken off in 1800. It lies upon the Hudson, in the s. e. corner of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly. Marlborough Mt., a rocky ridge along the w. border, is about 1,000 ft. above the river. The streams are principally small brooks flowing directly into the Hudson. The soil is a slaty loam. Milton, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, in the s. part, contains 3 churches and about 75 dwellings. Marlborough,¹ (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 2 churches, several manufactories,² and about 50 dwellings. Lattingtown is a hamlet. The date and statistics of the early settlement have not been ascertained. The first church (Presb.) was formed Jan. 1, 1761.³

NEW PALTZ⁴—was granted by patent by Gov. Andros, Sept. 20, 1677.⁵ Its bounds were enlarged April 1, 1775, and a part of Hurley was annexed Feb. 2, 1809. A part of Esopus was taken off in 1842, a part of Rosendale in 1844, Lloyd in 1845, and a part of Gardiner in 1854. It is an interior town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly a hilly upland. The Shawangunk Mts. extend along the w. border. Paltz Point, the highest summit, is 700 ft. above tide. Wall Kil flows s. e. through near the center; it is bordered by wide, fertile flats. The soil is generally a fine quality of sandy loam. Hay is one of the principal products and exports. New Paltz, (p. v.) upon Wall Kil, near the center, contains the New Paltz Academy, 2 churches, and 45 dwellings. Butterville, Ohioville, and Springtown are hamlets. The first settlements were made by a colony of French Huguenots, a few years before the date of the patent.⁶ The oldest church record is in French, and bears date of 1683. There are 3 churches in town; Ref. Prot. D., M. E., and Friends.

OLIVE—was formed from Shandaken, Marlborough, and Hurley, April 15, 1823. A part was annexed to Woodstock, and a part of Woodstock was annexed, in 1853. It is an interior town, lying a little s. w. of the center of the co. The surface is mountainous in the s. and w. and hilly in the s. and e.⁷ A considerable portion of the mountainous region is too rough for profitable cultivation. Esopus Creek flows s. e. through the town, a little s. of the center. The soil is a sandy, gravelly, and clayey loam. Lumbering and tanning⁸ are largely carried on. Shokan,⁹ (p. v.) upon the creek, s. of the center, contains 2 churches and 20 houses; Samsonville,¹⁰ (p. v.) on the s. line, a church, tannery, and 30 houses; Olive, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, a church and 25 houses; and Olive City, (Olive Bridge p. o.) on the creek, near the center, a tannery and 20 houses. The first settlements were made in the Esopus Valley, in 1740.¹¹ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed at Shokan, in 1800.¹²

PLATTEKILL¹³—was formed from Marlborough, March 21, 1800. A part of Shawangunk was annexed April 3, 1846, but was restored March 28, 1848. It lies upon the s. border of the co., near the s. e. corner. Its surface is broken by a series of ridges of an average elevation of 500 ft. above the valleys. Its streams are small brooks and creeks. The soil is a fine quality of sandy and gravelly loam. Plattekill, (p. v.) near the s. line, contains a church and 25 dwellings; Clintondale, (p. v.) in the s. part, on the line of Lloyd, a church and 20 dwellings; Hiut, (New Hurley p. o.) in the s. w. corner, on the line of Shawangunk, a church and 15 dwellings, and Modena, (p. v.) near the s. w. corner, 16 dwellings. The first settlements were made about

² About 15,000 wheelbarrows and $40,000 worth of agricultural implements are manufactured annually.

³ The census reports 9 churches in town; 2 Presb., 2 M. E., 2 Friends, Prot. E., Kap., and Christian.

⁴ Pronounced New Paltz, and named from Paltz, the German name of the Palatinate.

⁵ The patentees of this tract were Lewis Du Bois, Christian Devo, Abraham Hasbrouck, Andros Le Fevre, Jean Boop, Pierre Devo, Laurens Bevers, Anthony Grosdel, Abraham Du Bois, Hugo Feyer, Isaac Du Bois, and Simon Le Fevre.

⁶ The valley of Wall Kil was discovered by one of the parties engaged in pursuing the destroyers of Wiltwyck, in the summer of 1693. The persecuted exiles from France, who first sought refuge in Germany, and thence emigrated to America, doubled upon settling here. They bought the land of the Indians May 29, 1677, and soon after they settled in their new homes. In 1728 the owners of the patent entrusted its care to 12 trustees, known as "The Twelve Men." These trustees were elected annually, until the organization of the town under the State Government. The Twelve Men in 1785 were Simon Du Bois, Johannes Hasbrouck, Johannes Iron, Jacob Hasbrouck, jr., Abraham Donaldson, Abraham Eltinge, Petrus Hasbrouck, Simon Devo, Benjamin Devo, Isaac L. Fevre, Matthew Le Fevre, and Abraham Kim. By act of March 31, 1785, the settlements made by the Twelve Men were confirmed. Their opinion on Boek⁷ was to be retained by the State. One of the acts of a convention at that time, and then it was by the State, was to appoint a clerk of Ulster co. to be held by prescription. His records are deemed authentic evidence in court.

⁷ The towns of Olive, Marlborough, and Paltz are situated on a hill which is about 2,700 ft. above sea level. Shokan, Paltz is about 3,000 feet high; and the average elevation of the other lands is 800 feet above sea level.

⁹ Pronounced Shokan.

¹⁰ Named in honor of Henry A. Samson.

¹¹ Gov. Milledoler (1741-1749), Simon Devo (1742), William Nottingham, in 1745, all in Olive; Boop, Le Fevre, and Grosdel, in 1747, a little of Shokan; Hasbrouck, Grosdel, and Shokan, in 1760; John Coe, in 1775; and John Devo, in 1778, all of Olive City. The first saw-mill, at Olive, was built by Isaac Du Bois, and the first saw-mill, at Shokan, by Leonard Winchell, of Woodstock, in 1748. The first saw-mill, at Olive, which was carried off by the Indians in 1758, was built by Henry of this town, in 1741, with that of Marlborough, in 1742.

the commencement of the last century. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1770; Rev. Stephen Goetschius was the first pastor.¹

ROCHESTER²—was incorp. by patent June 25, 1703,³ and organized as a town March 7, 1788. A part of Middletown (Delaware co.) was taken off in 1789, Neversink (Sullivan co.) in 1798, Wawarsing in 1806, and a part of Gardiner in 1853. A part of Wawarsing was annexed March 21, 1823. It is an interior town, lying a little s. w. of the center of the co. Ranges of mountains extend along the e. and w. borders, and a rolling upland occupies the central portions. Rondout Creek flows n. e. through the s. part, and receives as tributaries Sander Kil, Peters Kil, and several other streams. Vernoy Creek flows s. through the w. part. The soil upon the uplands is a gravelly loam, and in the valleys a sandy loam mixed with clay. The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends along the valley of Rondout Creek. Esopus millstones are largely quarried in this town. An extensive cave near Kysenike has been explored about half a mile. Alligerville and Port Jackson are small villages upon the canal. Accord and Kyserike are p. offices. The first settlements were made about 1700, by the Dutch.⁴ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed soon after the first settlement. There are now 2 churches in town; Ref. Prot. D. and M. E.

ROSENDALE—was formed from Marblatown, New Paltz, and Hurley, April 26, 1844. It is an interior town, lying e. of the center of the co. Its surface is a rolling and broken upland, the highest summits being 200 to 500 ft. above the valleys. Rondout Creek flows n. e. through near the center, and receives Koxing Kil from the s. and Kettle Kil from the n. The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends along the valley of the Rondout. The soil is principally a sandy loam. The manufacture of cement has become one of the most important branches of business.⁵ There is an extensive paper mill in town. Rosendale, (p. v.) upon the creek and canal, contains 2 churches and 450 inhabitants; Lawrenceville, 1 mi. w., 40 houses; Bruceville, (High Falls p. o.) upon the line of Marblatown, about 30 houses. Green Locks, a canal village, on the e. border, and Whiteport, in the n. part, each contain about 20 houses. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, about 1700.⁶ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1797; Rev. Thos. G. Smith was the first preacher.⁷

SAUGERTIES⁸—was formed from Kingston, April 5, 1811. An error in the boundary was corrected June 8, 1812, and a part of Kingston was annexed April 2, 1832. It lies upon the Hudson, in the n. e. corner of the co. The surface is rolling in the e. and hilly in the center and w. The hills upon the river and extending 2 mi. back are underlaid by limestone, from which quicklime and cement are manufactured. Farther w. are quarries of fine flagging stone. Platte Kil flows through the town in a tortuous course and forms the principal drainage. Kaaters Kil flows along the n. border. The soil along the river is a clayey loam, and upon the uplands a sandy and gravelly loam. Quarrying is extensively carried on.⁹ Saugerties, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, at the mouth of Esopus Kil, was incorp. April 26, 1831, as "Ulster." Its name was changed April 10, 1855. It contains the Saugerties Academy, 7 churches, a newspaper office, and several extensive manufactories. Pop. 3,334. Malden, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, 2 mi. n. of Saugerties, is the seat of an extensive stone trade. Pop. 350. Glasco, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, 3 mi. s. of Saugerties, is the seat of an extensive brick manufactory and stone trade. Pop.

¹ There are 7 churches in town; 3 M. E., Wes. Meth., Ref. Prot. D., Presb., and Friends.

² Named in honor of the Earl of Rochester. The Indian name is said to be Mombacensis.

³ The first trustees under the patent were Col. Henry Beckman, Jochem Schoonmaker, and Moses Du Puy.

⁴ In 1703 the following persons resided in town:—Van Gerritse Becken, Ledewyck Hornbeck, Leonard Koolse, Anthony Hornbeck, Wm. De La Montaigne, Teunis Oosterhout, Jan Cartwright, Gysbert Van Garde, Andries Davies, and David Du Bois. Teunis Oosterhout had a "corn mill" on Mombacensis Kil, in 1743.

⁵ More than one-half of the cement made in the co. is manufactured in this town. The water-limestone quarries may be said to constitute the wealth of the town. The cement manufactories are as follows:—

	Barrels.
Newark and Rosendale Lime and Cement Co., at Whiteport, manufactures annually.....	125,000
Rosendale Cement Co., Rosendale, manufactures annually.....	40,000
Charwater & Martin, " " " ".....	40,000
David S. Ogden, " " " ".....	28,000
Luther Hoffman, " " " ".....	8,000

In 1826 Henry Boreday, of N. Y., purchased the present site of the village, and the water-power. He built a dam and constructed a race which made a fall of 37 feet. He soon after built a rolling mill, paper mill, and cotton factory. The last named has since been changed to a white lead factory. The Ulster Iron Works employs 300 hands night and day, and manufactures 6,000 tons of bar and hoop iron annually. The paper mill employs 125 hands, and turns out 600 tons of paper annually. The White Lead Works employs 40 men, and manufactures 1,500 tons of paint annually. A steam mill for dressing stone turns out 1½ tons daily. The village is also largely engaged in commerce. About 30 sail-vessels are employed in exporting stone and brick. A steam ferry plies between this place and Tivoli station on the Hudson River R. R., and a daily steamer runs to New York.

⁹ It is estimated that 2,000 persons are employed in quarrying, dressing, drawing, and shipping stone from this town. The varieties are chiefly flagging and curb stone; but cut stone for many uses is also sold. About a half million of dollars' worth of stone is shipped annually from Saugerties, Malden, and Glasco.

about 300. West Camp, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, in the s. part, contains a church and 15 houses. Quarryville, (p. v.) in the s. part, and Unionville, near the center, each contain about 300 inhabitants, who are mostly engaged in getting out stone from the neighboring quarries. Glencarie, upon the s. line, Van Alens Mills, near the center, and Ashbury, are small villages. The first settlements were made by the Dutch, at an early period; but the largest immigration was that of the German Palatinates,¹ a colony of whom located at West Camp in 1710. The first church (Luth.) was organized at West Camp, in 1711. There are now 15 churches in town.²

SHANDAKEN³—was formed from Woodstock, April 9, 1804. A part was annexed from Neversink (Sullivan co.) in 1809. A part of Olive was taken off in 1823, Denning in 1839, and a part of Hardenburgh in 1859. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is mostly a mountainous upland, broken by deep ravines. The declivities are steep and rocky, and a large share of the surface is too rough for profitable cultivation. The town is not inhabited except along the valleys, the mountain region being left to wild beasts and hunters. The soil in the valleys is a clay and sandy loam. The principal branches of business pursued are lumbering, shingle making, and tanning. Shandaken,⁴ (p. v.) in the s. part, contains a church, a large tannery, a sawmill, gristmill, and 20 houses; Pine Hill, (p. v.) in the s. w. part, a sawmill, gristmill, tannery, and 15 houses. Ladew's Corners, (The Corner p. o.), in the extreme e. angle of the town; Phœnicia, (p. o.) in the s. e. corner; and Woodland, (p. o.) s. e. of the center, are hamlets. At each of these places, and at several other points in town, are extensive tanneries.⁵ The first settlements were made before the Revolution.⁶ There are 2 churches in town; Ref. Prot. D. and M. E.

SHAWANGUNK⁷—was formed as a precinct Dec. 17, 1743, and as a town March 7, 1788. A part of Gardiner was taken off in 1853, a part was annexed to Plattekill in 1846 and restored in 1848. It is the central town upon the s. border of the co. The surface is a hilly and broken upland. The Shawangunk Mts., extending along the w. border, are about 2,000 ft. above tide. The Shawangunk River forms about $\frac{1}{2}$ of the s. boundary, and flows s. e. through near the center, receiving Dwaars Kil⁸ from the w. Wall Kil flows s. e. through the e. part, receiving Muddy Kil from the e. and Dwaars Kil from the w. The soil is generally a gravelly loam. Shawangunk, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, contains a gristmill, sawmill, spoke factory, and 20 houses; Ulsterville, (p. o.) in the s. w. part, 10 houses; and Galeville Mills, (p. o.), on Wall Kil, a church, sawmill, gristmill, and 10 houses. Dwaars Kil, near the center, is a p. o. Brunswick, (p. o.) on the n. line, contains a church and 10 houses; Jamesburgh, (p. v.) near the extreme w. angle, a church and 12 houses. New Hurley (p. o.) is a hamlet, on the line of Plattekill. The first settlements were made along the valley of Shawangunk River, by the Dutch, between 1680 and 1700.⁹ New Fort is a locality where two Indian battles were fought in 1663. The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed Oct. 10, 1753; Rev. V. Vrooman was the first pastor.¹⁰

WAWARISING¹¹—was formed from Rochester, March 14, 1806. A part was re-annexed to Rochester in 1823. It is the s. w. corner town in the co. Its surface is mostly a mountainous upland, broken by several deep valleys. The Shawangunk Mts. extend along the e. border; and spurs of the Catskills occupy the central and w. parts. The highest peaks are 2,000 to 3,000 ft. above tide. The mountainous portions in the e. and s. w. corners are rocky and precipitous and ¹ Stephen Myers and brothers settled at a place called "Church-land" just w. of Saugerties Village. Martin Snyder settled at the same place, and G. W. Delrick at West Camp, Avon New York and Felte Fiero in the same vicinity, all in 1700. Delrick, Marriestock settled at "Kantshout" in 1728. Peter Winger, Edward Woods, Myndert Mynderse, B. Barham, Jacobus Pierson, Myndert Schutt, Godfrey Donnell, and others, were early settlers. On the 18th of May, 1711, there were 14 Palatinates at "Elizabethtown," 111 at "Glasgowtown," and 4, 21 at "New Village," in this town. The settlers afterward mostly removed to the valleys of the Schoharie and Mohawk.

³ Said to signify "Rapid Water."

⁵ 20,000 sales of leather are annually manufactured in this town.

⁶ John Learyear, Cornelius Furbergh, Jacob Brink, Conrad Wisner, and Frederick Muckle, all settled before the war. — Witherspoon taught school at The Corner at an early period.

⁸ The Dutch applied the term Dwaars to streams that flowed sometimes in one direction and sometimes in another. This phenomenon is true of waters at the mouth only of the stream.

⁹ Among the early settlers were Jacobus Bruyn, Cornelius Schoonmaker, Abram Schutt, Zachariah Bohnke, Benjamin Smiles, Jaeds Decker, John Terwilliger, and Johannes Decker. Along Wall Kil, Robert Kam, Robert Graham, David Davis, Daniel Wintzell, Hendrick Van Wazer, and James Poncek settled from 1719 to '30. A school was taught near Bruynswek p. o., between 1733 and '39. The first mill was probably at the junction of Wall and Dwaars Kil, 1 mi. below Shawangunk Village.

¹⁰ There are 4 churches in town; 2 Ref. Prot. D. and 2 M. E.

¹¹ Finally abbreviated to "War-suk." It is an Indian word, and said to signify "Black bird's nest."

too rough for cultivation. The s. w. portion is a hilly upland. Rondout Creek flows in a deep valley from the w. border s. e. to near the center; thence it turns at nearly right angles and flows s. e. to the e. border. It receives from the s. Sandburgh Creek, a stream which drains the w. declivities of the Shawangunk Mts., Beer Creek, and the outlet of Cape Pond, which flows through near the center and empties into Sandburgh Creek. The Delaware & Hudson Canal extends along the valleys of Rondout and Sandburgh Creeks, at the w. foot of the Shawangunk Mts. The soil in the valleys is principally a sandy loam. Lumber,¹ leather, glass, earthenware, iron, and axes are extensively manufactured in different parts of the town. Ellenville, (p. v.,) upon Sandburgh Creek, at the mouth of Beer Kil, was incorp. in Sept. 1858. It is an important canal village, and contains several churches, a high school,² newspaper office, and an extensive glass factory.³ Pop. 1,700. Napanock, (p. v.,) upon the Rondout, above its junction with the Sandburgh, contains several churches and manufactories,⁴ and a population of about 700. Homo-wack, (p. v.,) a canal village, upon the line of Sullivan co., contains a church, glass factory, woolen factory, and 20 houses. Kerhonkson, (p. v.,) a canal village, on the line of Rochester, contains a church and 30 houses. Lackawack, (p. v.,) upon the Rondout, in the w. part, contains a church, an extensive tannery, and about 20 houses. Greenfield, (p. v.,) in the s. w. part, contains 2 churches, a gristmill, sawmill, tannery, and about 25 houses. Wawarsing, (p. v.,) in the s. e., contains a gristmill, sawmill, tannery, and about 25 houses. Port Benjamin, a canal village, s. of the Wawarsing, contains about 25 houses. Port Nixon, a village upon Rondout Creek and the canal, in the s. e. part, contains a church and about 25 houses. The first settlements were made about the commencement of the last century, principally by the Dutch.⁵ During the Revolution the inhabitants were killed, captured, or driven off by the Tories and Indians.⁶ The first church (Ref. Prot. D.) was formed in 1745; Rev. J. Frynmoet was the first preacher.⁷

WOODSTOCK—was formed April 11, 1787, from the settlements of Great and Little Shandaken, which had been attached to Hurley. A part of Middletown (Delaware co.) was taken off in 1789, Windham (Greene co.) in 1798, and Shandaken in 1804. A part of Olive was taken off, and parts of Olive and Hurley were annexed, Nov. 25, 1853. It lies upon the s. border of the co., e. of the center. Its surface is mostly a mountainous upland, too rough for profitable cultivation. Several fine valleys extend through the town, separating the upland into several distinct ridges and peaks. Overlook Mt., in the s. e. corner, is 3,500 ft. above tide. Near its summit is Shues Lake, a beautiful sheet of clear water. The scenery in this vicinity is among the finest in Eastern N. Y. Saw Kil and Beaver Kil are the principal streams. The soil is a clay and slaty loam upon the uplands and a gravelly loam in the valleys. Woodstock, (p. v.,) in the s. e. part, contains 2 churches, a tannery, and 20 houses; Bearsville, (p. o.,) 2 mi. w. of Woodstock, is a hamlet; Lake Hill is a p. o., near the center. The first settlements were made just before the commencement of the Revolution.⁸ The first church (Luth.) was formed in 1806.⁹

² The Ellenville High School, established in 1853. It is a boarding and day school.

³ The Ellenville Glass Co., incorp. in 1836, turns out more than $100,000 worth of demijohns, bottles, &c. annually. It employs 200 hands.

⁴ The Napanock Ax Factory employs about 100 men, and manufactures 150,000 axes annually. The Napanock Iron Works employs 50 or 60 men, and manufactures pig and wrought iron and n. e. car axles.

⁵ The first settlers were Abram Bevier, John Bevier, from New Paltz, in 1708, Egbert De Witt, Wm. Nottingham, and Andries De Witt. An inn was kept by Johannes Bevier before the Revolution. The first store at Wawarsing was kept by Abram Verwoey; the first gristmill was built by Cornelius Verwoey.

⁶ On the 12th of Aug. 1781, a large party of Tories and Indians, under one Caldwell, appeared in this town. They had formed the design of falling upon Napanock, but, being informed that that place was defended by a cannon, they came to Wawarsing before the inhabitants were up in the morning. At this place was a stone fort on the site of B. C. Hornbeck's house. Two men and a young woman discovered the enemy before they reached the fort, and the young woman succeeded in closing the door just in time to prevent it from being burst open by the savages. The latter, finding further attack dangerous, dispersed for burning and plundering the out settlements. Some 5 or 6 dwellings, 7 barns, and a gristmill were burned, and on the next day the enemy withdrew, laden with spoils. Several lives were lost on both sides, and much property was destroyed.—The Indians; or Narratives of Massacres and Depredations on the Frontiers of Wawarsing and Vicinity, p. 21.

⁷ The census reports 11 churches in town; 4 M. E., 3 Ref. Prot. D., 2 R. C., Bap., and Friends.

⁸ Philip Bonesteel, first innkeeper, settled in 1770; Edward Short, in 1776; Peter Short, in 1784; Jacobus Du Bois, Ephraim Van Keuren, Philip Shultis, and Henry Shultis, sen., in 1788; Jno. Hutchens, in 1790; Wm. Elling, in 1786; Mathew Keip, in 1787; and Jacob Montrose at an early day. Robert Livingston built the first sawmill, and J. Montrose the first gristmill. These settlements were much harassed by the Indians during the war.

⁹ There are 6 churches in town; 3 M. E., Luth., Bap., and Friends.

WARREN COUNTY.

This county was formed from Washington, March 12, 1813, and was named in honor of Gen. Joseph Warren, of the Revolution. It lies s. and w. of Lake George, near the E. border of the State. It is centrally distant 65 miles from Albany, and contains 968 sq. mi. The surface is very broken and mountainous, less than one-half being susceptible of cultivation. The mountain ranges are continuations of the great mountain masses which culminate in Essex co. The characteristic features of Essex are somewhat softened and subdued in this co. The mountains are broader, less pointed, and generally less precipitous: the valleys are wider and more connected; and there are larger expanses of comparatively level land. With all these modifications, however, a great part of the surface is wild and rugged. High, serrated ridges traverse the entire extent of the co., often rising thousands of feet above the valleys. These mountains, being principally composed of primary rocks, which strongly resist the action of the elements, have a steepness of declivity and sharpness of outline in marked contrast with the gradual slopes and beautifully rounded summits of the highlands of the slate and limestone regions. The soil formed by the exceedingly slow process of disintegration is either washed directly into the valleys, or in the course of ages it collects in thin layers upon the hillsides, giving nutrition to a scanty vegetation. Three of the five mountain ranges n. of the Mohawk Valley extend through this co. The Palmertown Range enters the extreme E. part of Queensbury from Washington co. French Mt., a spur of this range, at the s. E. extremity of Lake George, rises almost precipitously from the lake and attains an elevation of 2,500 to 3,000 ft. above tide. Another spur of this range forms the Luzerne Mts., which extend through the s. part of Luzerne and the E. part of Caldwell,—a n. branch extending n. and forming the whole series of high bluffs which border the w. shore of Lake George. The second or Kayaderosseras Range extends n. E. through Stony Creek, Thurman, Chester, and Horicon, sending spurs both n. and s. Crane Mt., in the s. E. corner of Johnsburgh, the highest peak of this range, has an elevation of 3,000 ft. above the surrounding valleys. The third or Schroon Range occupies the central and northerly part of Johnsburgh and the n. w. angle of Chester. It consists of a great number of rocky peaks rising to a height of 2,500 to 3,000 ft. above tide; most of these have never yet been named. The rocks that compose these great mountain masses are principally gneiss. Granite, white crystalline, limestone, and serpentine are found in considerable quantities in the form of injected veins. A belt of this limestone extends along the course of the Kayaderosseras Mts., and from it a good quality of lime is manufactured. In the valleys and in the s. part of the co. are found layers of Potsdam sandstone, black marble of the Black River limestone strata, Trenton limestone, and Utica slate. Many of these rocks are useful for building materials; and the limestone furnishes an abundance of excellent lime. At the foot of a granite ledge upon Crane Mt. is found a bed of very pure porcelain clay, supposed to have been formed by the slow disintegration of the felspathic rock. Graphite and magnetic iron ore have also been discovered, but not in sufficient quantities to be profitably worked.

The drainage of the co. is mostly through the Hudson River. This stream enters the co. from Essex, in two branches about 10 mi. apart, and these, after flowing through nearly parallel valleys for about 30 mi., unite in one stream. The E. branch is the outlet of Schroon Lake, and the w. forms the drainage of the Adirondack Mts.¹ This river has a very rapid course; and upon it are several rapids and falls, two of which are worthy of especial note.² Lake George³ is

² The High Falls are situated just below the great easterly bend of the river in the s. w. corner of Luzerne. The water flows in a series of rapids for three-fourths of a mi. over a declivity rocky bottom, and is then compressed into a narrow gorge for 80 rods, at the bottom of which it shoots down a nearly perpendicular descent of 60 ft. The gneiss ledge over which it falls is convex in form, and the water is broken into perfect sheets of snow white foam. A few rods above the last leap of the water, and where it is rushing with the greatest velocity, the river is spanned by a single plank 13 ft. in length. At Glens Falls the river flows over a shelving rock with a total descent of 50 ft. The fall is broken into three channels by natural piers of black limestone standing upon the brow of the precipice over which the water flows.

³ Called by the Indians Can-ia-gé-ré-oi-t, the fall of the lake. The name "Horicon" has been applied by some modern writers to Lake George, and it is said to be an Indian word meaning "The Lake of Silver Water." However poetic and appropriate this designation may appear, or however euphonious it may sound, it may be questioned whether a term suggested by fancy alone, and never used by the aborigines, will ever find place among the geographical names of the State as one of Indian origin.

situated upon the e. border, and receives the drainage of the e. part of the co. It is 36 mi. long and 1 to 3 mi. wide.¹

The soil of this co. is mostly a thin, sandy loam. The level lands s. of Glens Falls are very sandy, and are known as "pine plains." The declivities of the mountains have a very thin soil, and usually a scanty vegetation. In the valleys is some clay mixed with the sand and disintegrated primitive rocks, forming a deep and excellent soil. Farming and the manufacture of lumber and leather form the leading pursuits of the people. Farming is mostly confined to stock raising and dairying. Immense quantities of logs are floated down the Hudson and manufactured into lumber, shingles, hoops, staves, and heading, at Glens Falls and other places. Black marble is quarried at Glens Falls, and feldspar and kaolin for the manufacture of porcelain, graphite and serpentine are also found in different places. Peat exists in abundance; but it has never been extensively used.

Caldwell, at the head of Lake George, is the county seat.² The courthouse was built in 1816-17, with the jail in the basement. The poorhouse is located on a farm of 200 acres in Warrensburgh.³

The works of internal improvement are the Glens Falls Navigable Feeder, 7 mi. in length, feeding the summit level of the Champlain Canal, and the improvement in the log navigation of the Hudson. There is no r. r. in the co.⁴ Three newspapers are now published in the co.⁵

This co. was the scene of some of the sanguinary battles between the French and English long anterior to its settlement. In 1755, a provincial army of 5,000 men, under Sir, Wm. Johnson, designed to act against the French posts on Lake Champlain, assembled at Albany early in June, and were there joined by a large number of Mohawks under King Hendrick. Forts Lyman (afterward Fort Edward) and Miller were built, and a road was opened to Lake George. The news of Braddock's defeat was received before this army left Albany. The expedition set out on the 8th of Aug., by way of Lake George, for Ticonderoga, with the design of erecting a fort there. Learning that the French had anticipated them and had already fortified Ticonderoga, they encamped near the head of Lake George. About the 1st of Sept., Baron Dieskau, the French commander, with a force of 200 grenadiers, 800 Canadian militia, and 300 Indians, passed up South Bay and across the rocky peninsula, with a view of falling upon the rear of the English and of cutting off their supplies from Fort Lyman. On the 8th, a force of 1000 troops under Col. Ephraim Williams, and of 200 Indians under King Hendrick, were sent out to meet them; but, falling into an ambuscade, the greater part of the troops and the two commanders were killed. The survivors fled, and were immediately followed by the French. The firing alarmed the camp, and a breastwork of logs was immediately thrown up, and 300 men, under Col. Cole, were dispatched to cover the retreat of the flying fugitives of the first party. Flushed with victory, the French assailed the English camp with great fury, and a sanguinary conflict ensued, which lasted

¹ This lake has long been celebrated for its wild and picturesque beauty. It is almost completely surrounded by precipitous and rocky mountains, and is studded with little, green islands. Its winding course is marked by a panorama of beautiful and distinct views. At some points high rocky bluffs rise precipitously from the very edge of the water, and at others a little basin seems scooped out among the hills. Most of the mountain declivities are covered with verdure; but a few of them are masses of naked rocks. This whole region is full of historic interest. Each mountain, precipice, and cape has its own tales and reminiscences of the olden time. Some of the fiercest conflicts of the last long wars between the French and English colonists took place upon its shores, and the pure and peaceful waters of this beautiful lake were often ensanguined with the blood of fierce combatants. Again during the Revolution war held high carnival here; but since that period its visitors have been principally the lovers of the wild and beautiful in nature. Sabbath-Day Point and Lord Howes Point are two low beaches upon the w. shore, near the foot of the lake; and Rogers Slide is a precipice upon the w. shore, 200 feet high, rising at an angle of about 25 degrees. Tongue Mt., forming a promontory upon the w. shore, Anthony's Nose, upon the e. shore, and French Mt., near the head of the lake, have each an elevation of more than 2,000 feet.

² The first courts were held at the "Lake George Coffee House." The clerk's office was located by law within 1 mi. of this place; and this was made the point from which the sheriff's mileage was reckoned. By an act passed March 31, 1815, three commissioners were to be appointed by the governor to locate the site of the courthouse and jail, and to superintend its erection. The first co. officers were Wm. Richards, First Judge; Henry Spencer, Sheriff; John Beebe, Clerk; Robert Wilkinson, Sheriff's; Archibald McMurphy, Wm. Stover, Richard Cameron, and Jirah Skinner, Assessors. The present co. clerk, has held the office without interruption since Feb. 1821.

³ The poorhouse is a two-story wooden building. It is 50 years old and in a very dilapidated condition. The annual revenue from the farm is about $800. The average number of inmates is 54, who are supported at a weekly expense of 300 cts. each.

⁵ The Warren Co. Patriot, commenced at Glens Falls about 1812 by John Cunningham, was the first paper in the co.

A newspaper was begun at Caldwell in 1817 or '18 by Timothy Haskins, which in four or five years was changed to The Guardian. It was a few years after sold to ——— Broadwell, its name again changed, and in two years after it was removed to Glens Falls.

The Glens Falls Observer was started in 1828 by E. G. Sidney. In about two years it passed into the hands of Abiel Smith, who changed its name to

The Glens Falls Express, and afterward to The Warren Co. Messenger and Glens Falls Advertiser, by which name it was continued until 1840, when it appeared as

The Glens Falls Gazette, and in two years after as

The Glens Falls Chron. In 1840 it passed into the hands of Zabius Ellis, its present publisher, by whom its name was changed to

The Glens Falls Free Press.

The Glens Falls Spectator was published in 1849 by D. Ellis. The Warren Co. Whig was started by James A. Kellogg, and continued one year.

The Glens Falls Messenger was established by A. D. Milne, and is still continued.

The Glens Falls Republican was established in 1842 by M. & T. J. Strong, who conducted it until 1851. It has passed through several hands, and is now published by H. M. Harris.

The Reclamate and Temperance Ingh., semi mo., was commenced in 1846 by M. & T. J. Strong, and continued six or seven months.

The Star of Destiny was published in 1855 by A. D. Milne.

from 12 M. to 4 P.M. and resulted in the total defeat of the French.¹ Col. Blanchard, who commanded at Fort Lyman, learning the result of the first engagement in the morning, sent a party of about 300 N. H. and N. Y. militia to the scene of the conflict. This party surprised the French camp, and, after dispersing the troops left to guard it, they hastened on to the English camp and arrived in season to assist materially in gaining the victory. This engagement was the only one fought during the campaign of 1755 that reflected the slightest credit upon the British army.

The remainder of the season was spent in erecting Fort Wm. Henry,² on the site of the English camp. A projected attack upon Ticonderoga during the winter was prevented by the uncommon severity of the season. In the summer of 1756 a provincial force of 6,000 men assembled here, but too late to effect their purpose.³ On the 17th of March, (St. Patrick's day.) 1757, the French, under Longee, a famous partisan officer, attempted to surprise the fort, but were successful only in burning a few buildings and several vessels on the lake.⁴ Soon after, a party of 400 English, under Col. Parker, marched to attack Ticonderoga; but, falling into an ambuscade, only 72 escaped. Early in the summer of 1757, Montcalm, the French commander, made extensive preparations to capture Fort Wm. Henry. On the last day of July, Maj. Putnam discovered a large body of the enemy encamped on an island about 18 mi. down the lake. Gen. Webb, who had immediate command, upon being apprized of the matter, enjoined Putnam to keep the intelligence secret and to prepare to escort him (Webb) back to Fort Edward, leaving Col. Munro in command at Fort Wm. Henry. The enemy soon landed in force and proceeded to invest the fort. The garrison consisted of 2,500 men, and the attacking force amounted to nearly 9,000. Gen. Webb had a force of 4,000 regulars at Fort Edward, only 9 mi. distant, and the militia were rapidly collecting to afford further aid. Col. Munro sent pressing and repeated messages for relief; but Gen. Webb paid no attention to the request, and appeared totally indifferent to every thing but his own personal safety. At length, upon the ninth day of the siege, he allowed Gen. Johnson to march with a body of volunteers to the relief of the garrison; but before the party had proceeded 3 mi. they were recalled, and Gen. Webb sent a letter to Col. Munro advising him to surrender on the best terms he could obtain. This letter was intercepted and given to Col. Munro by Montcalm in person. Thus cut off from hope, and assured by Montcalm that the garrison should march out with the honors of war, with their arms, and one of the four cannon of the fort, with their baggage and baggage wagons, and an escort of 500 men to Fort Edward, he surrendered. The Indians soon began to pillage the baggage, and, not being checked, fell upon the sick and wounded, whom they killed and scalped. Excited by carnage, they next surrounded and attacked the disarmed and defenseless troops; and, although Montcalm was implored to furnish a guard, as promised, the massacre was allowed to proceed until a large number were killed or hurried away prisoners for more deliberate torture.⁵

In the summer of 1758 an army of 7,000 regulars and 10,000 provincials, under Gen. Aber-

² Named in honor of the Duke of Cumberland, brother of the heir apparent, afterward George III.

³ Several incidents worthy of note occurred during this expedition. At Halfway Brook a party of teamsters were surprised and captured by 600 of the enemy, who immediately retreated down South Bay. A hundred men, under Capts. Israel Putnam and Robert Rogers, set out from Fort Wm. Henry, crossed over to Lake Champlain, and from an ambuscade poured a destructive fire upon the enemy as they passed. A number were killed, and the English immediately retreated across to Lake George. The next morning they embarked on the lake, and at Sabbath-Day Point they were met by a force of French and Indians three times their own number. The English dashed forward to the attack, and, by reserving their fire until they came into close quarters, they threw the enemy into confusion, and succeeded in escaping, with the loss of one killed and two wounded. In the winter of 1754-57, Maj. Rogers, with 74 men, went down Lake George, and crossed over to Lake Champlain, where he captured a small party of French. On his return he was met on the summit of the hill by a party of 200 French; and a desperate conflict ensued. Maj. Rogers was wounded, and the command devolved upon Capt. Stark, (afterward Gen. Stark of the Revolution.) The combat continued until midnight, when the French retreated, leaving half of their number dead upon the field. Of the rangers, 48 remained unscathed; and the company pushed forward through deep snows and reached the lake in the morning. They were now quite exhausted; and Stark, with two others, pushed on to Fort Wm. Henry, arriving in the evening. He procured shots and returned to his suffering comrades, whom he reached the next morning. The party finally reached the fort, after extreme suffering.—Rogers's Jour., p. 36.

crombie, proceeded against Ticonderoga by way of Lake George. On the 5th of July the army embarked on board of 900 bateaux and 135 boats, and passed down the lake with all the pomp and pageantry of war; and four days after they returned, shattered and broken, with a loss of nearly 2,000 in killed and wounded. Such of the latter as admitted of removal were sent to Fort Edward; and the main army lay inactive in camp at the head of the lake during the remainder of the season. In June, 1759, Maj. Gen. Amherst, with an army of 12,000 men, advanced to Lake George, and, while waiting to complete his arrangements, he commenced building Fort George, about half a mile E. from Fort Wm. Henry.¹ As Gen. Amherst advanced to Ticonderoga, the French withdrew to Crown Point, and soon after to the Isle Aux-Noix. Quebec fell soon after, and the conquest of Canada was completed the following year, rendering the vast military works at Fort George, Ticonderoga, and Crown Point of no further utility, and allowing the hardy pioneers of civilization to advance and occupy the fertile valleys which as provincial soldiers they had previously traversed.

BOLTON—was formed from Thurman, March 25, 1799. Hague was taken off in 1807, a part of Caldwell in 1810, and a part of Hericon in 1838. It lies E. of the center of the co., between Schroon River and Lake George. The E. shore of the lake constitutes the E. line, so that more than one-half of the lake is within the limits of this town. The surface is principally occupied by the high mountainous ridges which lie between the lake and Hudson River. There are 3 principal peaks belonging to this range within the limits of the town,—Tongue Mt.,² on the peninsula between the lake and North West Bay, 2,000 ft. above tide; Pole Hill, in the N. part, 2,500 ft. high; and Cat Head, in the center, 1,500 to 1,800 ft. above tide. The mountains generally rise precipitously from the lake; but toward the W. the surface assumes the character of a high, rolling upland. High up among the hills are numerous little crystal lakes, the principal of which are Trout Lake, Marsh Pond, and Edgcomb Pond. Trout Lake is 1,000 ft. above Lake George. Not more than one-half of the town is susceptible of cultivation. The soil is a thin, sandy loam.³ Bolton, (p. o.), situated on Lake George, opposite Green Island,⁴ is a small village. The settlement of the town was commenced in 1792, principally by New England people.⁵ The improvements are confined mostly to the vicinity of Lake George. The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1804; the Rev. — Armstrong was the first settled minister. There are 2 churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

CALDWELL⁶—(Col'-well) was formed from Queensbury, Bolton, and Thurman, March 2, 1810. It lies around the S. extremity of Lake George. A range of mountains occupies the extreme W. part. The central portion is a high, hilly region, descending abruptly to the lake. Prospect Hill, W. of the S. extremity of the lake, has an elevation of 2,000 ft. above tide. South of this hill a low valley extends S. W., through Caldwell and Luzerne, to the valley of the Hudson near the mouth of Sacandaga River. This depression seems to be a continuation of the valley in which Lake George is situated, and shows that a change of a few feet in the elevation would cause the waters of the lake to flow into the Hudson. In this valley is a chain of small lakes. A narrow strip of low land lies immediately upon the border of the lake. The soil is a sandy loam among the hills, and a dark, rich, sandy and clayey loam on the lowlands. Caldwell, (p. v.) the county seat, is situated near the head of Lake George. It contains 2 churches, several hotels, and about 50 dwellings. This place is the annual resort of great numbers of tourists and pleasure seekers, who are attracted hither by the beautiful scenery of the lake and the surrounding region. During the summer the steamer Minnehaha plies daily between Caldwell and the foot of the lake. Fort William Henry and Fort George were situated near Caldwell, at the head of Lake George and Bloody Pond, in the S. part. Settlement commenced at the head of Lake George, soon after the conquest of Canada; but its progress was arrested by the Revolution. Soon after the close of the war, settlement was recommenced.⁷ There are 2 churches in town; Presb. and Union.

² Indian name, At-si'-pa'-sa, a sliding place.

⁴ During the Revolution this island was fortified, and Gen. Burgoyne, when he advanced to the Hudson, left upon it a large amount of public property, guarded by two companies of the 47th regiment, commanded by Capt. Aubrey. After the partial success which attended the attempt upon Ticonderoga in 1777, Cois. Warren and Brown, on the 24th of Sept., made an attack upon this place with the embarks they had captured. They were repulsed with loss, and retreated to the E. shore. The enemy being in pursuit, they burned then to be destroyed the mountains to Lake Champlain, and returned to Gen. Lincoln's camp at Pawlet, Vt.

⁵ Among the first settlers were James Ware, Joseph Tuttle, Rufus Randall, Benj. Ferris, David and Reuben Smith, Ebenezer Goodman, Daniel Nims, Frederick Miller. — Boylston, Wright, and Thomas Motter. The first birth was that of Lydia Ware; and the first death, that of Mrs. John Ferris. Sally Boyd taught the first school.

⁶ Named from Gen. James Caldwell, a merchant of Albany, who became a patentee of 1,500 acres, in 4 parcels by grant dated Sept. 18-24, 1787.

⁷ Among the early settlers were Daniel Shaw, Benoni Burtch,

CHESTER—was formed from Thurman, March 25, 1799. It lies upon the n. border of the co., between Hudson and Schroon Rivers. The surface is broken. The Kayaderosseras Mts. extend through the s. part, and the Schroon Range occupies the n. w. portion. A continuation of the valley of Schroon Lake, extending in a s. w. direction to the w. branch of the Hudson and separating the mountain ranges, contains a chain of small lakes. Loon Lake is the principal one in this valley; and s. of it, among the hills, is another sheet of water, called Friends Lake. Schroon Lake is about 1,000 feet above tide, and the hills that surround it are 500 to 800 feet above its surface. The soil is generally light and sandy. A cave in Moxons Mt. is quite a curiosity, and has some local notoriety. Near the n. border of the town, upon Stone Bridge Creek, is a natural bridge.¹ Feldspar has been quarried to a considerable extent and exported for the manufacture of porcelain. Chestertown (p. v.) contains the Chester Academy and 246 inhabitants; and Pottersville (p. v.) 126. The settlement of this town commenced toward the close of the last century.² The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1796; and the Rev. Jehiel Fox was the first pastor. There are now 6 churches in town.³

HAGUE—was formed from Bolton, Feb. 28, 1807, as "Rochester." Its name was changed April 6, 1808, and a part of Horicon was taken off in 1838. It lies upon the shore of Lake George, in the n. e. corner of the co. The surface is very mountainous, not above one-fourth being susceptible of cultivation. The mountains along the lake generally descend abruptly to the very edge of the water. The narrow valleys of Trout and North West Bay Brooks form the line of separation between the two mountain ranges. Ash Grove Hill, upon the w. border, is 2,000 to 2,500 feet above tide; and upon the shore of the lake, in the n. e. corner, is another mountain peak of nearly the same elevation. Rogers Rock is on the lake shore, in the n. e. corner. It rises from the water's edge at an angle of about 45° and attains an elevation of 300 feet.⁴ Sabbath-Day Point is a headland projecting into the lake near the s. border.⁵ The soil is a light, sandy loam. Iron ore has been found near Seventh Pond; and mines have been worked to some extent, but they are now abandoned. The beauty of the lake and the solitary grandeur of the mountain scenery of this town render it a favorite resort for hunting and fishing parties and the lovers of the beautiful in nature.⁶ Hague, (p. o.) on McDonalds Bay, and Wardboro (p. o.) are hamlets. The principal improvements are along the lake. The first settlement was made about 1796.⁷ There is a union church in the town.

HORICON—was formed from Bolton and Hague, March 29, 1838. It lies upon the n. border of the co., e. of Schroon Lake. The greater part of its surface is occupied by the two branches of the Kayaderosseras Mts., which are here divided by the valley of Brant Lake. In the n. and e. these ranges rise, in numerous sharp, rocky peaks, 1,600 to 2,000 feet above tide; but in the s. and w. they sink into a hilly plateau region. About one-half of the surface is arable. Among the hills are great numbers of small lakes, laying with their crystal waters the base of the huge, rocky masses which tower above them. Brant Lake, the principal of them, is 10 mi. long and is everywhere surrounded by precipitous hills. The soil is a sandy loam. Horicon, (p. v.) situated on Schroon River, in the s. w. part of the town, contains about 20 houses; and Mill Brook, (p. v.) on Schroon Lake, 15 houses. Aaron Harris, Joseph Gregory, Bishop Carpenter, and Timothy Bennett were some of the earliest settlers.⁸ The first church (Wes. Meth.) was formed in 1820; Nathaniel Streeter was the first minister. There are 4 churches in town; 2 Bap., M. E., and Wes. Meth.

JOINSBURGH⁹—was formed from Thurman, April 6, 1805. It lies upon the bank of the —Tiereo, Andrew Edmonds, Reed Willour, Obadiah Hunt, Thaddeus Bradley, Elias Prosser, Nathan Burdick, Geo. Van Dusen, — Butler, and Christopher Potter. The first inn and gristmill were erected by Gen. Caldwell.

¹ The stream, after falling into a basin, enters a passage in two branches under a natural arch 40 feet high and about 80 broad, and emerges in a single stream from under a precipice 54 feet high, 247 feet from its entrance. This bridge is described in Morse's Geography (1796) as follows:—"In the county of Montgomery is a small, rapid stream emptying into Schroon Lake, west of Lake George; it runs under a hill, the base of which is 60 or 70 yards in diameter, forming a most curious and beautiful arch in the rock, as white as snow. The fury of the water and the roughness of the bottom, added to the terrific noise within, have hitherto prevented any person from passing through the chasm."—Am. Univ. Geog., 508.

² The first settlers were Titus, Jabez, Levi, Gideon, Eros, Jonathan, Daniel, and Caleb Mead, — Beman, Isaac Bennett, John Haskins, Obadiah and Benj. Knapp, Noel Wightman, James Storbuck, — Steward, and D. and J. Punderson. The first birth was that of a son of Caleb Mead; and the first death, that of Martin Wightman.

³ M. E., Bap., Presb., and Prot. E.

⁷ Among the first settlers were Abel Rising, Abner Briggs, Elijah Bailey, Samuel Cook, Ellis Denton, Samuel Patchin, John Holman, Isaac and Uriah Balcom, and Uri Waiste.

⁸ Howard Waters, Nathan, Benj., and James Hayes, Benj. Hayes 2d, John Robbins, James Frazier, and Benj. Wright were also early settlers. Hannah Reynolds taught the first school.

⁹ Named from John Thurman, an early settler.

Hudson, and is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is very broken, and the Schron Range occupies the s. and central parts; and a spur of the Knappton Range extends into the s. Crane Mt.,¹ the highest peak of the latter, is about 3,500 feet above tide. The greater part of the town is too rough and broken for cultivation. The arable land is confined to the narrow valleys. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Kaolin, serpentine, iron ore, and other minerals are found. There are 3 large tanneries in town. Johnsburgh, (p. v.) on Mill Creek, contains 20 houses; Nobles Corners, on the same stream, 25; North Creek, (p. v.) on the Hudson, at the mouth of North Creek, 15; and The Glen, (p. v.) on the Hudson, on the s. e. corner of the town, 7. The first settlement was made soon after the close of the Revolutionary War, by John Thurman, the proprietor of extensive tracts in this part of the State.² The first church, Baptist, was organized in 1793. There are 4 churches in town.³

LUZERNE—was formed from Queensbury, April 10, 1792, as "Palmyra."⁴ Its name was changed April 6, 1808. A strip of territory 1 mi. wide was set off from Queensbury, March 20, 1802. It lies upon the e. bank of Hudson River, in the s. extremity of the co. Two branches of the Luzerne Mts. extend through the town, respectively occupying the s. and s. e. parts. They are separated by the valley which extends s. w. from the s. end of Lake George. A chain of small lakes lies along its course; and in them two streams take rise, one of which flows to Lake George and the other to the Hudson.⁵ About one-half of the surface bordering upon the river is a high, hilly region, but arable. Kettle Bottom, in the s. part, and several peaks of the ridge which extends along the e. border, are 2,000 to 2,500 feet above tide. The soil is a light, sandy loam. Luzerne (p. v.) is situated on the Hudson, above its confluence with Saenodaga River. Pop. 280. The first settlements were made about 1770, along the Hudson. Most of the early settlers occupied lands leased from Ebenezer Jessup, the patentee. There are 3 churches in town.⁶

QUEENSBURY—was incorporated by patent⁷ as a township, May 20, 1792, and recognized as a town, March 13, 1796. Luzerne was taken off in 1792, and a part of Chateaufort in 1810. A strip of territory 1 mi. wide was taken from Luzerne and added to this town in 1802. It lies between Lake George and the Hudson, and is the s. e. corner town of the co. The w. part is occupied by the Luzerne Mts., and the extreme s. part by French Mt., a high, rocky bluff which rises precipitously from the surface of Lake George to a height of 2,500 to 3,000 feet above tide. The central and s. parts are rolling, gradually declining toward the s. The soil is a light, sandy loam in the interior, and a deep, tough clay upon the river. The fall in the Hudson at Glens Falls is about 50 feet high, and affords valuable mill privileges. Below the fall is a small island, through which is a cave extending from one channel to the other. The manufacture of lumber is largely carried on.⁸ Glens Falls,⁹ (p. v.) incorp. April 12, 1839, is situated on the Hudson, in the s. part. It contains 9 churches, the Glens Falls Academy, 3 newspaper offices, 2 banks, and several manufactories.¹⁰ Pop. 3,420. West Glens Falls, on the Hudson, contains 25 houses; and Queensbury, (p. v.) in the e. part 20. French Mountain (p. v.) is a hamlet. The summit level of the Champlain Canal is 60 feet through the Glens Falls, navigable for water taken from the Hudson above the falls. The settlement was commenced in 1760; but its progress was very slow until after the close of the Revolution.¹¹ The first house of worship was erected by the Society of Friends, in 1786. There are now 11 churches in town.¹²

STONY CREEK—was formed from "Palmyra,"¹³ Nov. 3, 1852. It lies upon the w. bank of Hudson River, and is the s. w. corner town of the co. Nearly the whole town is still a wilderness. Through the center of the town extend mountain ranges, several peaks of which attain an elevation of more than 2,000 feet. The valleys of n. and w. Stony Creek are narrow ravines, forming a natural pass between the valleys of the Hudson and Saenodaga. The soil is a light, sandy loam.

² Among the early settlers were Rev. W. D. H. Gray, Hudson, John Wilkinson, Keenbun, and Calvin Washburn, and Samuel Sissonville. The first birth was that of Polly Washburn, the first marriage, that of Calvin Washburn and Betsey Washburn; and the first death, that of Enos Grever. The first mills were erected in 1780 or '85, by Mr. Thurman. He opened a store and built a distillery; and in 1795 he erected a woolen factory. This was soon after changed to a cotton factory, and was early as 1797 he erected a saw-planing works, the first, it is believed, in America.

⁵ Bapt. M. E. and Union.

⁶ The patent only dated 1792, but the incorporation was written in 1796. The name of the town was changed from Palmyra to Luzerne, the present name, by the Legislature of the State, in 1808. The first F. W. church was organized in 1793, and the first Baptist church, in 1793.

⁷ The first settlement upon the site of the present Queensbury, under the name of Palmyra, was made by Rev. Alexander Sisson, in 1760. The first settlement upon the site of the present Luzerne, was made by Rev. John Sisson, in 1760.

⁸ The present manufacturing establishments are situated at Glens Falls, West Glens Falls, and Queensbury.

⁹ Among the first settlers were Obediah West, Paul F. Jones, Asaph and John C. Platt, and the A. C. Church, John C. Merritt, and Charles West. The first settlement upon the site of West Glens Falls, was made by Thomas Platt, West Glens Falls, David Brown, James H. Smith, and John Brown, and the first settlement upon the site of the town.

Creek Center (p. o.) and Stony Creek, (p. o.) both upon Stony Creek, are hamlets. The first settlement was made about 1795.¹ The first preacher was Jonathan Paul, a Christian Indian. The first church (Presb.) was formed about 1800.²

THURMAN³—was formed April 10, 1792. Bolton and Chester were taken off in 1799, Johnsburgh in 1805, and a part of Caldwell in 1810. The town was divided into "Athol" and Warrensburgh Feb. 12, 1813; and "Athol" was divided into Thurman and Stony Creek, Nov. 13, 1832. It lies upon the w. bank of the Hudson, s. w. of the center of the co. The w. part is a high, broken upland, almost unknown except to hunters. The e. portion, along the Hudson, is a hilly plateau, with several peaks rising 1,000 feet above the valley. Among the hills are numerous small lakes. The soil is a light, sandy loam. Athol (p. o.) and Thurman, (p. o.) both in the e. part, are hamlets. Settlement was commenced in the latter part of the last century.⁴ A Bap. church was first formed; Elder Jehiel Fox was the first preacher. There are now 4 churches in town.⁵

WARRENSBURGH—was formed from Thurman, Feb. 12, 1813. It lies between the two branches of the Hudson, near the center of the co., and upon the ridges s. of the junction. The peninsular portion is a rolling plateau 600 to 1,000 feet above the river. The s. w. part is occupied by an immense mountain mass with several summits 2,400 to 3,000 feet above tide. Nearly two-thirds of the land in town is arable. The soil is a light, sandy loam among the hills, and upon the river it is nearly the same, mixed with some clay. Warrensburgh (p. v.) is on Schroon River, 3 mi. from its junction with the Hudson. Pop. 700. Across the Hudson, below the mouth of Schroon River, is a long bridge connecting this town with Thurman. The first settlement was made a few years after the close of the Revolution.⁶ A M. E. church, the first in town, was organized in 1796; and the Rev. Henry Ryan was the first minister. There are 4 churches in town.⁷

WASHINGTON COUNTY.

This county¹ was formed from Albany as "Charlotte County,"² March 12, 1772. Its name was changed April 2, 1784; Clinton co. was taken off in 1788; the n. portion was ceded to Vermont in 1790;³ a strip along its s. border was annexed from Albany Feb. 7, 1791; and Warren co. was taken off in 1813. It lies on the n. border of the State, is centrally distant from Albany 45 miles, and contains an area of 850 sq. mi. The surface consists principally of a series of ridges extending s. e. and s. w., and the valleys between them. The remarkable depression which extends southerly from the s. extremity of Lake Champlain divides these ridges into two distinct groups,—the n. belonging to the Palmertown Mt. Range, and the s. constituting one of the connecting links between the highlands of Southern New York and those of Western Vermont. The s. group is subdivided into three principal ranges, which are all related and of the same general character. The most southerly of these ranges is a northerly continuation of the Taghkanick Range of Rensselaer co., occupying the greater part of White Creek and the e. part of Jackson. The declivities are usually steep, and the summits broad, broken, and rocky. The second—sometimes described as a continuation of the Petersburgh Mts. of Rensselaer—constitutes the highlands of Cambridge, Jackson, Salem, and the e. part of Hebron and Granville. In Salem it spreads out like a fan between the streams. The third comprises the highlands of Easton, Greenwich, Argyle, Hartford, Granville, Hampton, and the e. part of Whitehall. It might with propriety be called Cossayuna Range, from the principal lake which it encloses. The declivities of these ranges are usually steep, and, except where broken by ledges, are arable to their summits. They gradually rise toward the n., reaching their culminating point near the e. border of the co. The highest summits are 1000 to 1200 feet above tide. These three ranges belong to one general group and are of the same geological formation. They are composed of slate rock, ledges of which crop out along their whole extent. Many of these ledges in Granville and Hebron are quarried, and furnish stone much valued for roofing, building, and ornamental purposes. Among the slate quarries are found numerous veins of injected quartz, intersecting the slate strata in every direction, varying from the thickness of paper to several inches. They often present cavities and surfaces beautifully studded with transparent crystals of quartz. The edges of the slate are sometimes bent and distorted by the quartz dikes, showing the extreme heat and great force of the injected veins. The soil in this system of highlands consists chiefly of disintegrated slate, and is very fertile.

The second group of highlands, belonging to the Palmertown Mt. Range, occupy the towns of Fort Ann, Dresden, Putnam, and the e. part of Whitehall. They belong to the primary formation, their rocks consisting principally of gneiss, granite, sandstone, and impure limestone. Their sides are very precipitous and broken, and their summits are wild irregular masses of naked, barren rocks. The valleys between them are narrow and rocky, often bordered by precipices many hundred feet in height. The soil is cold and unproductive, like that of all regions of a similar geological formation. A narrow valley extending s. w. from the s. extremity of South Bay divides the group into two ranges. Noble Mt., overlooking South Bay and 1000 ft. above tide, is the highest peak in the s. range; and Black Mt., 2878 ft. above tide, is the highest peak in the n. range. Diameter Rock, on the n. shore of South Bay, is 1300 ft. above tide.⁴

sioners were Smith Thompson, Simon De Witt, and Geo. Tiltbitts. See Notes to N. Y. Session Laws, April 1, 1814.

The Hudson River forms the s. half of the w. border of the co. A rich intervale, from half a mi. to a mi. in width, bordered by a series of clay bluffs 20 to 60 ft. high, extends along its course. Most of the other streams of the co. are tributaries of the Hudson, and among them are the Hoosick, Batten Kil, Moses and Fort Edward Creeks, and many smaller streams. Wood Creek¹ is a deep, sluggish stream, flowing into Lake Champlain and draining the valley, which here extends from the lake to the Hudson. The soil along the valley is mostly a hard, stiff clay. The Mettewee, or Pawlet, and the Poultney Rivers, from Vt., are tributaries of Wood Creek. In the co. are several other streams important as mill streams.² Lake Champlain s. of Ticonderoga is scarcely more than a ship canal through a roedy marsh bordered by rocky cliffs. Lake George lies along the n. w. border of the co. Among the hills in the interior are several small lakes, the principal of which is Cossayuna Lake, in Argyle.³

The various branches of agriculture form the leading pursuits of the people. The principal grains raised are rye, spring wheat, oats, buckwheat, and corn. Peas, beans, flax, and potatoes are also extensively cultivated. Stock raising, dairying, and wool growing are also extensively pursued. The manufactures of the co. are principally along the Hudson and Batten Kil.

The county officers are divided among several towns. The courts are held alternately at Salem and Sandy Hill, and the clerk's office and co. poorhouse are located at Argyle.⁴ The jail is connected with the courthouse at Salem, and all prisoners sentenced for more than two months are sent to the penitentiary at Albany.

The principal public works in the co. are the Champlain Canal,⁵ extending in and along Wood Creek and the Hudson to Greenwich; the Saratoga & Whitehall R. R., extending through Fort Edward, Kingsbury, Fort Ann, and Whitehall, with a branch to Lake Station and another to Castleton, Vt.; and the Rutland & Washington R. R., extending from Eagle Bridge, through White Creek, Jackson, and Salem, to the State line.

The first newspaper in this co. was established at Salem, in 1788.⁶

Upon the advent of the whites, few Indians were found within the limits of this co.; but Indian trails and implements of Indian art frequently found show that it had been inhabited at a former period. The s. portion of the co., lying in the natural channel of communication between Hudson River and Lake Champlain,¹ became the great highway of hostile parties passing between the Five Nations and the Canada Indians, and at a later day by the more formidable armies of disciplined troops in the struggles which ended in the conquest of Canada. The French made incursions upon the English and Five Nations in 1665, 1688, and 1693; and these were returned by attacks upon the French and Indians in Canada in 1691 and 1692. For several years after, the passage of small hostile parties was of frequent occurrence. In 1700, Forts Ann and Nichols on were erected by the English and garrisoned for the protection of the northern frontier; but upon the return of peace they were abandoned.² Frequent incursions of small parties were made in the War of 1748, and many persons were murdered,—though no regular engagement took place. Again, during the French War of 1755, forts were built at Ft. Ann, Ft. Edward, and the whole region around the head of Lakes George and Champlain became the theater of stirring military events. The armies that attacked Ticonderoga, and those that finally effected the conquest of all the French posts upon the lakes, marched through this region; and it formed a portion of the great battle-ground between the armies of two nations contending for the sovereignty of a continent. In the summer and fall of 1777, upon the advance of Burgoyne, war again, for a brief space, spread terror and desolation over the whole region. "Skenesborough" was burned and abandoned on the 7th of July, Fort Ann was taken on the 8th, Fort Edward on the 28th, and the country was overrun by the enemy soon after. On the 13th and 14th of Sept. the British army crossed the Hudson into Saratoga co.; and about the 10th of Oct. Fort Edward was re-taken by the Americans, thus effectually cutting off the retreat of the army, already disheartened by their defeat at Bemis Heights. The surrender of Burgoyne put an end to the war in this section; and the subsequent history of the co. is but the record of the continued and progressive triumphs of peaceful industry.

At Fort Edward a dam 27 ft. high and 900 feet long was built by the State in 1821, as a feeder to the canal, but the Glens Falls feeder superseding it, it was sold to a company in 1840 and cut down to 16 ft. The Saratoga Dam (where the Champlain Canal crosses the Hudson into Saratoga co.) is 1390 feet long. Batten Kil is crossed by 9 dams. White Creek furnishes a large number of mill sites, once improved, but now mostly abandoned. Black Creek has several valuable and improved mill sites. Mettewee or Pawlet River has also several valuable mill sites.

ARGYLE³—was granted by patent, May 21, 1761,⁴ and formed as a town, March 23, 1786. Greenwich was taken off in 1803, and Fort Edward in 1818. It lies near the center of the co. Its surface is rolling in the s. and w. and broken and hilly in the s. and e. The highlands are divided into broad ridges with abrupt declivities. In the s. part Tamerack Swamp covers several hundred acres. The principal stream is the Moses Kil,⁵ which flows in a s. w. direction through near the center of the town. The other streams are small brooks, which flow into the Hudson, Batten Kil, and Wood Creek. Cossayuna Lake⁶ is a beautiful sheet of water, 3 mi. long, situated in a narrow valley in the s. e. part of the town. It is everywhere surrounded by steep hill slopes, and contains several beautiful green islands. To the s. e. of this lake, high up among the hills, is Argyle Lake,⁷ a small sheet of water, half a mile in circumference. The soil of the town is generally a productive, slaty or gravelly loam. A mineral spring, 1 mi. s. w. from South Argyle, is said to resemble those at Saratoga. Argyle (p. v.) was incorp. March 27, 1838. It is the seat of the Argyle Academy. Pop. 375. North Argyle and South Argyle (p. offices) each contains about 20 houses, and The Hook 10. Argyle was conveyed to 83 families, and in 1765 the first settlement commenced.⁸ The family of John Allen, a tory living on Lot 25, was murdered by Indians belonging to Burgoyne's army, July 26, 1777.⁹ The first church (Asso. Ref. Presb.) was formed in 1793;¹⁰ Rev. Geo. Mairs was the first preacher.

³ Named in honor of the Scotch Duke of Argyle.

⁴ This patent was granted to Scotch militia (who came over under Loughlin Campbell in 1758-60) and to their descendents. It embraced 47,400 acres, and granted township privileges. Duncan Reid, Neal Shaw, Alexander McNaughton, (McNaughton) and Neal Gillespie were appointed trustees. A stately avenue, called "The Street," 7 mi. in length, and 24 rods in width, was laid out (on paper) and surveyed p. and w. through the center of the township, and lots were laid out on each side. In the rear town lots were laid out, thus admitting accommodations for proprietors and tenants. In the summer of 1764 this tract was surveyed and divided into 141 lots, in accordance with this plan, by Arch. Campbell, of N. J., and Chris. Yates, of Schenectady. The natural impediments in the way, however, precluded the possibility of building the street or in any way realizing the plan.

⁷ Summit Lake is a picturesque sheet of water in the s. upon the very summit of the central range of hills. Two sawmills are supplied by its outlet.

⁹ This family had been assumed by Burgoyne. Their number, together with that of Jno. McCrea, had the tendency to convey to many persons who had hitherto been taken into active participation in the American cause.

CAMBRIDGE—was incorp. by patent,¹ July 21, 1761. It was formed as a town² in Albany co. March 7, 1788, and annexed to Washington co. Feb. 7, 1791. White Creek and Jackson were taken off in 1815. The surface of the town is hilly in the n. and rolling in the s. The summits of the hills are 200 to 300 ft. above the valleys. The e. part embraces a portion of the valley of Owl Kil, which is celebrated for the beauty of its scenery. Upon the w. of this valley are high undulating hills, the broad sweeps of which show alternate patches of green woodland and cultivated farms; and upon the e. rise the Taghkanick Mts., rough and broken, while the valley itself is very smooth and level. The other streams are Wampeack Creek, Whiteside Brook, and several other small brooks. The soil is generally a gravelly and sandy loam. Flax is extensively cultivated. Cambridge (p. v.) contains 100 houses and the Cambridge Washington Academy; Center Cambridge (p. v.) 13 houses; North Cambridge (p. o.) 10; and Huskirks Bridge³ (p. v.) 15. The first settlers consisted of 30 families, who located in 1761, '62, and '63 and who each received 100 acres of land as a gift from the proprietors.⁴ Phineas Whiteside,⁵ from Penn., settled 8 mi. w. of the Colerain Colony, in 1766. The expedition against Bennington, under Baum, passed through the town Aug. 13, 1777; and the remnant of the fugitives returned on the night of the 16th. The first church (Asso. Presb.) was organized in 1789; Rev. Thos. Beverly was the first pastor.⁶

DRESDEN—was formed from Putnam, as "South Bay," March 15, 1822; its present name was adopted April 17, 1822. It lies between Lake George and the s. extremity of Lake Champlain. Nearly its entire surface is covered by steep mountain ridges, several peaks of which are 1500 ft. above the lake. The declivities of the mountains are steep, sometimes forming perpendicular precipices several hundred feet high. Upon the side of Lake George the mountains rise abruptly from the very edge of the water; but upon the borders of Lake Champlain is a narrow strip of arable land. The principal mountain peaks are Black⁷ and Sugar Leaf Mts. and Diameter Precipice. Pike Brook and the head branches of Mill Brook take their rise in these mountains. All of the surface in the interior is covered with forests or naked rocky peaks. The soil is hard and sterile, and is unfit for agricultural purposes. The town was principally conveyed to non-commissioned officers and privates of the Colonial British army; and settlement was begun about 1784, by Jos. Phippeny, at the foot of South Bay. Ebenezer Chapman, — Boggs, and Daniel Ruff came soon after, and settled along the bay and lake. Lumbering has formed a prominent pursuit. In several localities iron and other ores have been noticed, but none worked to any extent. The town is without a p. o. A bridge was built, at the expense of the State, across South Bay, near its outlet, in 1856.

EASTON—was formed from Stillwater and Saratoga, March 3, 1789, while a part of Albany co., and so named from being the e. town in the Saratoga Patent. It was annexed to Washington co. Feb. 7, 1791. It lies upon the e. bank of the Hudson. A broad intervale⁸ extends along the course of the river, which is succeeded by a plateau region, embracing the central and s. portions of the town. The e. part is broken by several lofty hills. The principal highlands are Willards Mt.⁹ and Harrington Hill. The streams are Hudson River and Batten Kil,⁹ forming the w. and s. boundaries of the town, Kidney and Vly Creeks, and a few minor streams. Upon the e. borders of the town is an extensive swamp known as "The Vly,"¹⁰ The Di-on-on-dah-o-wa Falls,¹¹ upon ¹ This patent embraced 31,500 acres, and was nominally conveyed to 60 persons, most of whom resided in Helton, Conn. The real owners were but 6 in number, and of these 3 only were mentioned in the charter, viz.: Isaac Sawyer and Edward Wells, of Conn., and Jacob Lansing, founder of Lansingburgh. The other three owners—Alex. Colburn, Wm. Smith, and Geo. Banyar—were connected with the Colonial Government.

³ Named from Martin Van Burskirk, who built the first bridge.

⁴ The patent was conditional to the settlement of 30 families within 3 years; and to meet this requirement the most inviting portion was surveyed, and 100 acres offered as a gift to each family that would remove thither. These lots lay in a double row, on both sides of Owl Kil, from below the "Chickered House" into the present town of Jackson. They embrace the several village precincts from Davis Corners to near Stephens Corners. Among the settlers were Jas. and Robt. sons of Ephraim Cowan, Jas. and John Cowden, John McClung, Samuel Bell, Col. Blair, Geo. Gilmore, Gen. Dumain, David Harrow, Wm. Clark, John Scott, and Thos. Morrison. A son of the last was the first child born of civilized parents in town. Hugh Kelso, a son of Col. Blair, was the first person who died in town. It is recorded that of these 30 families who were for a time the most thrifty in town all but two lost their property and died in poverty, mainly from intemperance. They were mostly from Colerain, Conn.

⁵ William Whiteside acquired the title to 3 lots, of 400 acres each, of the finest land, and settled his sons (John, Peter, Thomas, William, and James) upon large farms near him. These estates are all owned by his descendants at the present day. The remaining lands were mostly leased by the six proprietors at an annual rent of one shilling per acre; but, they being generally willing to sell at a sum equal to the present worth of the perpetual rent, most of the settlers have gradually acquired the fee simple of their farms. The first inn was of logs, on the site of the "Chickered House," and kept by Jas. Cowden. Philip Van Ness built the first sawmill and gristmill on Gordons Brook, near Huskirks Bridge. This neighborhood was called by the Indians "Tyosshute," and by them a field of 12 acres had been cleared there for a corn. Other early settlers on the Huskirk Patent were Col. Lewis Van Wort and John Quackenbush.

⁶ The census reports 4 churches; 3 M. E., 1 Asso. Presb.

⁷ Black Mt., the highest, is 2,879 ft. above tide.

⁸ Willards Mt. is said to have derived its name from a Mr. Willard, who from its summit, with a spyglass, reconnoitered the position of Burgoyne's army at Saratoga.

⁹ Judge Benson, in his work upon the names of places, states that this stream was named from the Christian name of Bartholomew Van Hegeboom, first settler above Stillwater. Bart. is the abbreviation of Bartholomew, and hence Barts Kil, or Batten Kil.

¹⁰ A term used to denote a marsh overgrown with bog moss and low bushes.

¹¹ Pronounced Di-on-on-dah-o-wa. On a map of Saratoga Patent published in 1709 it is written Di-on-on-de-be-we.

Batten Kil, below Galesville, are 60 ft. high, and well worthy of note. The soil is an excellent quality of sandy and gravelly loam. Limestone of an excellent quality abounds in this town. Machinery, agricultural implements, and woollen goods are manufactured at Galesville. Easton Corners (North Easton p.o.) contains 30 houses; Easton (p.v.) 17; South Easton (p.v.) 15; and Crandalls Corners 8. Parts of Union Village and Galesville are in this town. The date of the first settlement is unknown, but it was probably several years after the Saratoga Patent was issued. In 1709 a fort³ was built on the hill to p. 1 mi. s. of Galesville, and a few families settled under its shelter; but the dread of Indian depredations prevented the settlement from spreading. On the 30th of Nov. 1745, the enemy made a descent upon the place, killed 30 persons, and took 60 prisoners, including a portion of the garrison, who were destroyed from the fort by the Indians feigning to be wounded. The remaining part of the garrison burned the fort and unfinished blockhouses and withdrew, leaving the frontier unprotected. Settlers did not return until 1760.⁴ At Schuylerville is a bridge across the Hudson 800 ft. long. The first religious meeting (Quaker) was held in 1778. A Ref. Prot. D. church was formed in 1805; Rev. Philip Duryea was the first preacher.⁵

FORT ANN—was formed, as "Westfield," March 23, 1786. Hartford was taken off in 1793, and Putnam in 1806. It received its present name, April 6, 1808, from the old fort erected here in 1709. It lies s. of the southern extremity of Lake Champlain, and s. e. of Lake George. Its central and w. parts are occupied by the high and rocky peaks of the Palmertown⁶ Mts., here divided into three distinct ranges,—Palmertown Mt., in the w. part, Mt. Putnam, in the center, and Fort Ann Mts., in the e. The extreme e. edge of the town is occupied by uplands belonging to the Cossayuna Range. Diameter Rock and Buck Mt., on the line of Dresden, are the highest peaks, and are 1300 to 2500 ft. above tide. The valleys separating the ranges of the Palmertown Mts. are known as "Furnace" and "Wichs Hollow." The principal streams are Wood Creek, Halfway Creek, Furnace Hollow Creek, and Podunk Brook. The principal bodies of water are Orchel, Sly, Copeland, Hadlock, and Trout Ponds. The soil in the mountain region is hard and sterile, scarcely strong enough to support the natural growth of forest trees; but in the valleys it is a gravelly loam alternating with a stiff clay.⁷ Iron⁸ and woollen goods are manufactured to some extent. Fort Ann⁹ (p.v.) has 608 inhabitants; Griswolds Mills (p.v.) about 11 houses. West Fort Ann, (p.o.) South Bay, Canes Falls, and Comstocks Landing (p.o.) are small villages. Fort Ann was one of a chain of military works erected in 1709, to facilitate the extensive operations then in progress against Canada.¹⁰ It stood upon the w. side of Wood Creek, about half a mile from the present village of Fort Ann, the Champlain Canal passing partly across the spot which it enclosed. It was built at the joint expense of England and the Colonies. Artillery Patent, covering the e. part of this town, was granted Oct. 21, 1764, to Jos. Walton and 23 other Provincial officers, in equal shares, irrespective of grade. Settlement was not generally begun until after the Revolution. An engagement occurred here, July 8, 1777, between the rear guard of the retreating American army, under Col. Lang, and the advanced guard of the British, under Col. Hill.¹¹ In Oct. 1780, a blockhouse in this town was burned by the enemy. The first church (Bap.) was formed in 1789;¹² Rev. Sherman Babcock was the first pastor.

FORT EDWARD—was formed from Argyle, April 10, 1818. It lies upon the e. bank of the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the co. A wide intervalle extends along the

² This patent was granted Nov. 4, 1684, and renewed Oct. 9, 1708. The part e. of the Hudson was 12 mi. long and 6 mi. broad.

³ This fort was built of thick posts driven into the ground close to each other, in the manner of palisades, forming a square, the length of whose sides was within the reach of a musket shot. At each corner were houses for officers; and within the palisades were barracks of timbers.—Kalin's Travels.

⁴ Among the first settlers of about this period were Pat. Becker, Elijah Freeman, Thos. and Michael Beadle, William Thompson, Nathan Potter, John Swan, and William Coffin. A school was taught near Union Village as early as 1787. Gerrit Linsinch kept the first store, in 1794; and John Gale built the first mill, at Galesville, in 1810. The first woollen factory was built in the summer of 1840, by Gale, Rodgers & Reynolds.

⁵ There are 5 churches in town; 2 M. E., 2 Ref. Prot. D., and 1 Friends.

⁶ Said to be named from a small remnant of Indians, who were driven from Canaan and settled here.

⁷ Near Wood Creek, 50 feet above the present surface of the stream, are found jet holes worn by water, evidently by an ancient current flowing southward.

⁸ A blast furnace was built at Mt. Hope in 1826, which makes

5 tons of pig iron daily. A forge was built at West Fort Ann in 1828, for making anchors and chain cables.

⁹ Inorp. March 7, 1820.

¹⁰ While this fort was in process of erection, a force of 1000 French and Indians were sent to destroy it; but it is reported that Col. Nicholson was posted here with a superior force, and returned. While the English were awaiting the arrival of the opening of a road and the construction of batteries on Lake Champlain, and all sickness broke out in the camp, and 1000 men died, as it is supposed, of typhoid fever. Col. Nicholson returned with his crippled troops to Albany, 4000 soldiers returned that this sickness was produced by the treachery of the Indians, who threw the skins of their game into the swamp, and the camp. It is more probable that it was a malignant disease, caused by the malarial of the swamps and the extremity of the river, but toward the E. the surface rises to a height of 200 to 300 ft. and spreads out into a beautifully undulating upland. The Hudson, Moses Kil and Dead Creek are the principal streams. The soil upon the river is a mixture of heavy clay and alluvium, but farther E. it is a sandy or gravelly loam. In town are several extensive manufacturing establishments.¹ Fort Edward² (p. v.) is finely situated on the Hudson. Pop. in 1858, 1,565. The Washington Co. Seminary and Female Collegiate Institute,³ one of the largest academic institutions in the State, is located at this village. Fort Miller (p. v.) is situated on the Hudson, about 7 mi. below Fort Edward. Pop. 225. Fort Edward Center is a p. o., and Durkeetown is a hamlet. The first family that located in the town or co. was that of Col. Lydius, son of Rev. John Lydius, who, having acquired the title to DeLieu's discarded patent, built a house, and engaged in trade with the Indians at what is now Fort Edward Village.⁴ His daughter, Catherine, was born here, and was the first white child born in the co. Fort Nicholson was built in 1709, but was soon after abandoned. As a part of the plan of military operations against Canada, about 600 men, under Gen. Lyman, were sent forward, in June, 1755, to build a fort where Fort Nicholson had formerly stood, at the great carrying place to Lake Champlain.⁵ Fort Edward was a very important dépôt for arms and rendezvous for armies in the great expeditions against Canada; and it served as a vast hospital for the sick and wounded until 1760, when it was allowed to go to decay. During the Revolution it was again occupied by both British and Americans. Fort Miller is named from the fort built, about 1755, in the bend of the river opposite the village.⁶ After the peace this town settled rapidly. Wm. Duer,⁷ son-in-law to Lord Sterling, was the pioneer of Ft. Miller, where he built a large house and sawmill. There are 6 churches in town.⁸

GRANVILLE—was formed March 23, 1786. It is situated upon the E. border of the co., N. of the center. Its surface is undulating and hilly. The ridges generally slope gradually to their summits, which are elevated 300 to 500 ft. above the valleys. Quarries of excellent roofing slate have been opened in different parts of the town.⁹ Wide intervals of excellent land extend along the course of Mottowee, or Pawlet,¹⁰ and Indian Rivers. The soil is a slaty and gravelly loam, and is particularly adapted to potatoes, large quantities of which are exported. A limited amount of manufactures¹¹ is carried on in town. Granville¹² (p. v.) contains an academy and 450 inhabitants; North Granville (p. v.) a female seminary and 220 inhabitants; Middle Granville (p. v.) 439 inhabitants; and South Granville (p. v.) 111. The land in this town is embraced in several grants made to about 30 captains and lieutenants who had served in the French War.¹³ Barnaby Byrnes Patent, of 2000 acres, in the S. E. corner, was sold to Kenneth McKennith, a merchant of New York, who again sold it to Donald Fisher, a tailor of that city. Fisher induced several relatives of his to remove from Scotland and settle upon his tract. In the Revolution he withdrew to Canada, and his lands were confiscated and sold; but, owing to some informality, the

⁴ His house was burned by the Indians in 1749, and his son taken prisoner.

⁵ It was named Fort Lyman; but a few years after, the name was changed to Ft. Edward, in honor of Edward, Duke of York, grandson of Geo. II., and brother of Geo. III. It stood on the bank of the river, N. of the creek, and within the present village limits. It was 4 sided, with bastions on 3 angles, the fourth being protected by the river. Its ramparts of earth and timber, 16 ft. high and 22 thick, were mounted with cannon and enclosed several large buildings. Storehouses and barracks were built on Monroes Island, opposite. A band of savages attempted to surprise it in Aug. 1750, but were repulsed by Maj. Israel Putnam and his rangers. In the winter following, Putnam saved the fort from destruction by a characteristic exercise of cool intrepidity and daring. The fort accidentally took fire, and the flames spread with great rapidity in the immediate vicinity of the powder magazine. Putnam placed himself in the path of the flames, and fought desperately until the fire was subdued; and when he retired from his post his arms, face, and hands were entirely skinned, and the frail covering of the magazine was completely charred.

The murder of Jane McCrea took place July 27, 1777, near a spring, and beside a venerable pine tree a little E. of the village. This tragedy was at once reported throughout the country, and acted greatly to weaken the influence of the British, while it aroused the patriots to more desperate efforts in resisting the invaders. The old pine tree died in 1849; and in 1853 it was cut down and made into canes and boxes as mementos of the event. The remains of Miss McCrea are interred in the Union Cemetery.

⁷ He was the first State Senator from this co. Among the first settlers were Noah Payne, from Warren co., Conn., in 1766, Timothy Buel, and the Crocker families. Nath'l Gage was living at Ft. Miller when these families arrived. The Durkee, Saunders, and Bell families settled in the upper part of the town. The first one of these consisted of a father and 5 sons, from R. I. These settlers first took out titles under Lydius, but, finding them invalid, they bought of the Schuyler proprietors. There is no tradition of loss to the settlers from this cause;—whence it is inferred that Col. Lydius refunded whatever he may have received. Hugh Monroe, (owner of Monroes Island.) Patrick Smith, and Dr. Jas. Smith settled at Fort Edward about 1764. The house of Patrick Smith—still standing, $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. S. of Canal Aqueduct—was the headquarters of Burgoyne and Gen. Schuyler at different times during the Revolution; and it was the co. courthouse.

GREENWICH—was formed from Argyle, March 4, 1803. It lies on the e. border of the co., in the s. angle formed by the junction of the Hudson and Batten Kil. Ranges of hills, 200 to 300 ft. above the valleys, extend through the central and eastern parts of the town. Bald Mt., near Batten Kil, is the principal peak. The declivities of the hills are so gradual that the surface appears to be rolling rather than hilly. Upon Batten Kil are two considerable falls, one of which is 75 ft. in height. The other principal streams are the Cossayuna, Rogers, and Stony Creeks and Livingston Brook. Cossayuna Lake extends into the s. e. corner of the town. The soil is a silty and gravelly loam interspersed with patches of clay. The town is more extensively engaged in manufactures than any other in the co.⁴ Union Village,⁵ (Greenwich p. o.) on the line of Easton, contains an academy and 1,173 inhabitants, 888 of whom are in Greenwich; Bald Mountain⁶ (p. v.) 225 inhabitants; East Greenwich (p. v.) and Center Falls each about 100 houses; and North Greenwich (p. v.) 70. Galesville (p. v.) is a manufacturing village of about 30 houses, on the line of Easton. Battenville, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner, contains about 200 inhabitants. Lakeville (Lake p. o.) is a hamlet. It is supposed that the first settlement was made by the Dutch, previous to the French War, a few families of them remaining at the time of the Revolution.⁷ About 1733 a large number of Scotch emigrants had come over under the promise of grants of land from Government,—which promise was not fulfilled. Jan. 5, 1763, three of these emigrants—Duncan, George, and Jas. Campbell, sons of Laughlin Campbell—petitioned for 100,000 acres; and on the 11th of Nov. following a patent of 10,000 acres was issued to the 3 brothers, their 3 sisters, (Rose Graham, Margaret Estuace, and Lily Murray,) and 4 other persons. This grant embraced about one-third of the town of Greenwich. The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1774; Rev. Leonard Bowers was the first preacher.⁸

HAMPTON—was formed March 3, 1786. It lies upon the e. border of the co., s. of the center. A range of hills, about 500 ft. above the valleys and for the most part covered with forests, extends through the central and eastern parts of the town. Poulney River, separating the town from Vt., is the principal stream. Along its course is a wide interval of fine land. The soil is a gravelly loam interspersed with clay. The interval is alike fertilized and watered by the frequent overflows of the stream. Hampton Corners (Hampton p. o.) contains 20 houses, and Low Hampton⁹ (p. o.) 5. The greater part of this town was included in patents granted to Provincial officers. The s. part embraces about 20000 acres of Skenes Little Point.¹⁰ The first settlement was made some little time before the Revolution,¹¹ by Capt. Brooks, C. E. Gideon Warner, and — Webster. The first church (Prot. E.) was built at a very early date;¹² Rev. Stephen Jeweth, from N. J., was the first preacher.

HARTFORD—was formed from "Westfield," (now Fort Ann,) March 12, 1793. It lies near the center of the co. The s. e. section is broken and hilly, and the center and s. w. level or gently undulating. The summits of the highest hills are 500 to 700 ft. above the level of the Champlain Canal. The principal streams are East Creek and its branches. Slate and Fine-grained limestone of an excellent quality are found among the hills.¹³ The soil in the s. e. is a rich, clay loam, and that in the s. w. a heavy clay. There are several chalybeate springs, the principal of which is ¹ Capt. David Curtis, from New Lebanon, N. Y., came into town about 1780; Capt. Ebenezer Gould, from Killbuck, Conn., Nath'l Sprague, Asaph Cook, Tim. Allen, F. S. Hedge, Ebenezer Walker, and Daniel Deane, settled before or about the time of the Revolution. — Baker kept an inn at North Granville, about 1760, and — Jenks kept a store as early as 1766. Nath'l Spring erected a grist-mill at Granville, about 1787. A school was taught by Jas. Richards, in 1784, at South Granville.

The Deason-dale falls are not improved. There are a woollen factory, grist, saw, and plaster mill, at East Greenwich, a manufactory of seamless bags, at Battenville, a woollen factory, grist, saw, and plaster mill, at Center Falls, and mills near the mouth of the stream.

⁵ The first settlement in this village was made in 1781, by John Whipple, and it was first called "Whipple City." It was incorp. March 26, 1809. The first cotton-factory in the State was erected here in 1804, by Wm. Mowry, who had received his instruction at the pioneer establishment of Samuel S. May, Pawtucket, R. I. In this village are several mills, iron, and shoe shops, and a large carriage factory.

⁶ This village is entirely of pine and spruce, the principal of fine wood known as the Bald Mt. pine. At the head of the W. Lowber 60,000 bushels are annually made for the State.

HEBRON⁴—was formed March 23, 1786, and named from Hebron, Conn. It lies near the center of the e. border of the co. A broad mountain range extends through the center, occupying nearly one-half of its entire surface, and a series of high hills extends through the e. and w. sections. The summits of the highlands are 300 to 500 ft. above the valleys and are mostly crowned with forests. The ranges of hills are separated by the valleys of Black Creek and its principal w. branch. The soil is a sandy and slaty loam, of a light, porous nature, easy of cultivation, and well adapted to resist the extremes of wet and drouth. In the hilly regions is considerable rocky waste land. In the s. and e. are extensive and valuable quarries of slate. North Hebron⁵ (p. v.) contains the North Hebron Institute and 12 houses; East Hebron (Hebron p. o.) 12 houses; West Hebron (p. v.) the West Hebron Classical School and 25 houses; Belcher⁶ (p. v.) 20 houses; and Slateville (p. o.) 8. This town was embraced in patents granted to officers and privates who had served in the French War,—mostly to Scotch Highlanders belonging to the 77th Regt. of Foot. These grants were made so long after the war that those who were entitled to them never appeared to claim them. The first settlements appear to have been made before the Revolution. There are two academic institutions in town. The first church (Asso. Ref. Presb.) was organized in 1780;⁷ Rev. Dr. Gray was the first pastor.

JACKSON—was formed from Cambridge, April 17, 1815. It lies on the e. border of the co., s. of the center. The s. branch of the Taghkanick Range occupies the e. portion of the town, and several parallel ranges extend through the central and w. portions, rendering the entire surface very hilly. The summits of the hills are 300 to 800 ft. above the valleys and are generally crowned with forests. The declivities are often steep and rocky. The principal streams are Batten Kil and a branch of Owl Creek. In the valley between the hills that border immediately upon Batten Kil and those farther w. are several small lakes, known as Long, Big, Dead, and Little Ponds. These lakes are beautiful sheets of water, surrounded by hills, forests, and fine cultivated farms. The soil is a slaty loam and very productive. Jackson Center (Jackson p. o.) contains 16 houses; Coila, (p. v.) on the line of Cambridge, about 30 houses; and Anaquassacook 12. Portions of this town and White Creek were embraced in the Anaquassacook Patent of 10,000 acres, granted May 11, 1762.⁸ The first settlers were James Irvine, Peter Magill, and John Miller, all of whom located in the s. part of the town.⁹ The only church (Ref. Prot. D.) in town was organized Dec. 31, 1833; Rev. Jas. W. Stewart was the first pastor. Geo. Law, one of the projectors and proprietors of the California line of steamships, was a native of this town.

KINGSBURY—was incorp. by patent May 11, 1762, and recognized as a town by the State Government March 23, 1786. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Nearly all of its surface is level or gently undulating. A range of hills, rising about 150 ft. above the valleys, occupies the extreme e. edge of the town. The principal streams are the Hudson, in the s. w. corner; Wood Creek, upon the e. border; Halfway Brook, in the s. w. corner, and Moss Brook. At Bakers Falls,¹⁰ upon the Hudson, the river shoots down a steep descent of ledges, in all 76 ft. in 60 rods, forming a scene of great beauty, and affording an extensive water-power. The soil along the valley of Wood Creek is a hard, stiff clay; in the other parts of the town, a sandy or gravelly loam. There are extensive quarries of limestone in town, furnishing an excellent building material; from these quarries was obtained the stone for the locks on the Champlain & Hudson

² Col. John Buck, Manning Bull, Stephen and Asa Bump, John and Edward Ingalls, and Nathan and Samuel Uxley were among the first settlers. Aaron and Eber Ingold-lee, from Roxlston, Mass., came in 1782, and Timothy Stocking, Ebenezer Smith, and John Paine in 1784. A school was taught in 1790, at North Hartford, by Thos. Paine, from Conn. A gristmill was built of logs at an early date.

³ The census reports 4 churches in town: M. E., Bap., Cong., and Union. Rev. Wm. Miller, originator of the belief that the second advent of Christ would take place in 1843, resided in this town.

⁴ During the Revolution, and for some time after, the place was known as "Black Creek."

⁵ Locally known as "Munros Meadows."

⁶ Locally known as "Bellam."

⁷ The census reports 7 churches; 2 M. E., 2 Sec. Advent, Bap., Asso. Presb., and Asso. Ref. Prosl.

⁸ This patent was granted to Ryer, Jacob, Freeman, and W. M. Schermerhorn, Johannes, Nicholas, and Peter Quackenbloss, Thos. and John Smith, and Joseph Hansen, all of Schenectady.

¹⁰ Named from Albert Baker, the second settler in town.

Canal. Manufacturing is carried on to a considerable extent.¹ Sandy Hill (p.v.) has a population of 1,260; Moss Street contains 25 houses; Kingsbury (p.v.) 25; Pattens Mills (p.v.) 20; Dunhams Basin 10; Vaughns Corners 12; Adamsville (p.o.) 12; Langdons Corners 5; and Smiths Basin (p.o.) 8. Kingsbury Patent, containing 26,000 acres, was granted to Jas. Bradshaw and 22 others, from Conn., May 11, 1762. The first settlers were James Bradshaw, Albert Baker, and his sons Albert and Charles, from New York City.² A sawmill was built at Bakers Falls before the Revolution, and a gristmill in 1807. The town was the scene of many an adventure during the French War,³ and the settlement was entirely broken up during the Revolution. Traces of a road cut by Burgoyne's army are still visible near Moss Street. The first minister was Francis Baylor, a Moravian, about 1776. Meetings were held by the Prot. E. and the Bap. in 1795.⁴ Several noted men have been residents of this town.⁶

PITNAM⁷—was formed from "Westfield," (now Fort Ann) Feb. 28, 1806. Dresden was set off in 1822. This town lies in the extreme s. end of the co., upon the mountainous peninsula between Lakes George and Champlain. The mountains are divided into two separate ranges by the valleys of Mill and Charter Brooks. The w. range of mountains rises abruptly from the surface of Lake George, and in the s. part of the town attains an elevation of 900 to 1,000 ft. above the surface of the lake. The greater part of the surface is rocky, broken, and unfit for cultivation; but sections of arable land extend along the valleys of the small streams and the borders of Lake Champlain. The soil is generally a hard, gravelly loam. Graphite of a fine quality is found in abundance. A small pond lies among the mountains, on the w. side of the town, 300 feet above Lake George. Putnam Corners, (Putnam p.o.) containing about 10 houses, is the only village. The tillable lands were mostly granted to privates of the N. Y. Provincial regiments, and feeble settlements had probably commenced before the Revolution.⁸ The first church (Assn. Presb.) was built in 1801;⁹ Rev. James Miller, from Scotland, was the first pastor. A private academy at Putnam Corners was established in 1854.

SALEM—was formed by patent Aug. 7, 1761, and was recognized by statute March 23, 1786. It lies on the E. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface consists of moderately elevated ridges, separated by narrow valleys, all extending in a s. e. and s. w. direction. The hills are usually bordered by gradual slopes and their summits are crowned with forests. There is very little waste land in town. Batten Kil, forming the s. boundary, and Black, White, and Trout Creeks, are the principal streams. Littles Pond, in the s. part of the town, is a beautiful sheet of water lying in a basin among the hills and surrounded by forests. The soil is a rich, slaty or gravelly loam. Salem, (p.v.) incorp. April 4, 1803, has 832 inhabitants; Shushan (p.v.) about 25 houses; and Eagleville, (East Salem p.o.), Clapps Mills, and Pitches Point have each 40 to 50 inhabitants. James Turner and Joshua Conkey, from Pelham, Mass., were the first settlers, in 1761. They were joined, the next year, by Hamilton McCollister. In 1764 a patent of 25,000 acres was obtained,—one-half owned by a company of New England settlers and the other by Oliver De Lancey and Peter Du Bois, two Government officials.¹⁰ These last sold their share to Rev. Thos. Clark and his company of Irish and Scotch immigrants at a perpetual rent of one shilling per acre.¹¹ The Camden Tract, on the n. part of the town, was granted to captains

¹ The dam at Sandy Hill, across the Hudson, 1,200 ft. long and 10 ft. high, furnishes water power for several mills and a woolen factory. At Bakers Falls there are a paper mill and 2 gristmills. The lumber business of the town is very extensive and important, the sawmills being supplied with logs floated down from the Upper Hudson. There are also in town establishments for the manufacture of planes, steam engines, portable sawmills, &c.

² This village has been a half-shire town since 1807. It was incorp. March 9, 1810.

³ Among the other first settlers were Michael Hoffnagle, Solomon King, Oliver Colvin, and Nehemiah Seely.

⁴ At one time 17 soldiers were taken prisoners by the Indians and carried to the present site of Sandy Hill Village. They were seated on a log, in a row, when their captors deliberately began to tomahawk them, taking them in order from one end of the log. When all were killed but one, John Quakenbush, of Albany, a squaw claimed him, and his life was spared. He returned after a few years of captivity, and resided near Hoosick, in Cambridge. In Aug. 1758, Majs. Putnam and Rogers encountered a party of French and Indians in this town, during which engagement Putnam was made prisoner. The enemy were finally compelled to withdraw, with a loss of 90 men.

⁵ The census reports 9 churches; 3 Bap., 3 M. E., Presb., Prot. L., and R. C.

⁶ Gov. Wright received his legal education at the office of Henry C. Martindale, of Sandy Hill. Lem. Gov. Pit her, for some time Acting Governor, was a citizen of this town. H. S. Wm. P. Lee, late Chief Justice, and Chancellor of the Sandwich Islands, was a native of Sandy Hill.

⁷ Named in honor of Gen. Israel Putnam, who, in this vicinity, as major in the colonial army, participated in his first daring exploits.

⁸ The first sawmill was erected by R. D. Cunningham, in 1762, on Mill Creek, 1 m. from Lake Champlain. The first child born was James Jennings, in 1767; the first death was that of Anne Thompson, in 1764. R. D. Putnam kept the first school, in 1801. Many of the first settlers were Scotch and English; they were Oliver White, Robert Cunningham, John Blair, Wm. Hutton, George Easton, Elizabeth English, John Edgett, H. and Josiah Clark.

⁹ There are 2 churches; Assn. Presb., and F. W. Ep.

and lieutenants in the Provincial army. Rev. Thomas Clark was the first minister.¹ The Salem Washington Academy was incorp. Feb. 15, 1791.²

WHITE CREEK³—was formed from Cambridge, April 17, 1815. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. The surface of the s. portion is gently rolling, and the central and n. portions are occupied by the Taghkanick Mts. The summits of these mountains are rocky and broken and covered with forests, and their sides are bounded by abrupt declivities and perpendicular ledges. The principal streams are Hoosick River, Owl Kil, Pumpkin Hook,⁴ Center, White, and Little White Creeks. The upper course of Owl Kil is through a deep and narrow valley abounding with picturesque views. A small vein of lead has been discovered three-fourths of a mi. e. of Posts Corners. The soil is a fine quality of gravelly loam. More sheep are raised in this town than in any other in the co. Garden seeds and flax are largely cultivated. North White Creek (p. v.) adjoins Cambridge. White Creek, (p. o.) Posts Corners, Center White Creek, (p. o.) Ash Grove, Dorris Corners, Pumpkin Hook, and Martindale Corners are hamlets. The Walloomsae Patent, lying partly in this town, on the s., was settled by the Dutch. Among the other grants were the Bain, Embury, Grant and Campbell, and Lake and Van Cuyler, Patents. A colony of Irish Methodists settled near Ash Grove about 1770; and here was organized the second M. E. church in America,⁵ by Thos. Ashton (from whom the locality was named) and Rev. Philip Embury. James and Thos. Morrison made the first settlement, near White Creek.⁶

WHITEHALL⁷—was incorp. by patent Nov. 12, 1763, as "Skenesborough."⁸ Its name was changed March 23, 1786. It lies at the s. extremity of Lake Champlain. Its surface is mountainous in the w. and level and undulating in the center and e. Saddle Mt., upon the w. border, is nearly 900 ft. above the surface of the lake. The principal streams are Wood Creek, Mettowee (or Pawlet) and Poutney Rivers. Upon Wood Creek, near its mouth, is a fall which furnishes a valuable water-power. The soil of the greater part of the town is a hard, stiff clay and is best adapted to grazing. Considerable manufacturing is carried on in town.⁹ Whitehall (p. v.) is situated near the mouth of Wood Creek, on Lake Champlain. The r. r., canal, and lake trade give this place commercial importance. The Whitehall Academy is in the e. part of the village. Pop. 3,225. This town was the scene of stirring military events during the French War.¹⁰ The first settler was Maj. Skene, who located here, with 30 families, in 1761. Nominally associating 24 others with himself, he obtained a patent of 25,000 acres, March 13, 1765; and a patent of 9,000 acres in the town of Hampton and Whitehall, July 6, 1771, known as Skene's Little Patent. About 1770 he built a massive stone house and barn, a forge, and one or two sawmills. He also built a sloop upon the lake, and a road, known as "Skenes Road," 30 mi. through the wilderness toward Salem. He appears to have been a man of great energy of character, and he endeavored to secure solid and permanent advantages to the infant settlement.¹¹ Upon the approach of the Revolution, Maj. Skene espoused the royalist cause, and his house was taken by the Americans in May, 1775.¹² In 1776 an American garrison was stationed here, and a small fleet was fitted

¹ Rev. Thos. Clark (Asso. Presb.) was the first minister; and his church, formed in Ireland, was transplanted without reorganization. In 1769 a Presb. society was formed, Rev. John Hartford first pastor. Their church, then unincorpoated, was fortified by Capt. Jos. McCracken in 1777, and soon after was burned by the enemy. There are now 7 churches in town; 2 M. E., Asso. Presb., Asso. Ref. Presb., F. W. Bap., Presb., and Morav.

² For a great number of years this school was one of the most noted in Eastern New York. Among the distinguished persons who have received a portion of their education here were Hon. Samuel Nelson, of the U. S. Supreme Court, Hon. John Savage, formerly Chief Justice of N. Y., and Rev. Dr. B. Thome, of Brooklyn. ³ The creek from which the town was named received its name from the white quartz pebbles that form its bed.

⁴ Said to be a corruption of the Indian Pam-pa-nuck, the name of a tribe of Indians who removed thither from Conn.

⁶ Among the other early settlers were Buel Beede, Maj. John Porter, Ephraim James, and Edm. Cowan, David Blair, Sam'l Clark, John McClung, Gov. Dumont, Robt. and George Gilmore, Wm. Eager, Wm. Selfrage, Sam'l Ball, and John Scott. The early settlers on the e. part of the town were Thos. Ashton, Edmund Wells, John and Eleazer Allen, David Sprague, Seth Clues, John Harrison, Thos. McCad, John Woods, Simeon Fowler, John Young, Josiah De way, and John Corey. John Rhodes built the first clothing works, at Pumpkin Hook.

⁷ Called by the Indians "Katschoquah-m," the place where dep. f. h.

⁸ Named from Maj. Philip Skene, a British half-pay officer, its founder and patentee.

⁹ The manufactures consist of lumber, machinery, vessels, boats, carpets, and sash and blinds. An extensive lumber trade is carried on with Canada and with ports on the Hudson, through Lake Champlain and the Champlain Canal.

¹² He was very popular with the settlers, and hence he was an object of both fear and dislike to the patriots. His place was captured by a party of volunteers under Capt. Herrick, and out in the harbor and put under the command of Benedict Arnold. Upon the approach of Burgoyne's army, in 1777, the fort was blown up and the houses, mills, &c. were all burned.¹ During the War of 1812 this place became an important depot of military stores. The first steam boat on the lake was launched here, in 1809. The Champlain Canal was constructed to this point from Fort Edward in 1819, and finished to Troy in 1821.² In 1806 Gen. Williams made arrangements for building a church, but died before he could carry them into effect. His son (Col. John Williams) and his widow carried out the design, and presented the building to the Assn. Presb. S. It was rebuilt in 1826.³

Maj. Skene the younger, 50 Germans, and 12 negroes were taken prisoners. The sheep was sent down the lake to Col. Ethan Allen at Shoredam, Vt. In the cellar of the house was found the body of the wife of the old Skene, which had been preserved many years to secure to the husband an annuity devised to her "while she remained above ground." The Americans buried the body in the rear of the house.

² A company, under the name of the "Valley Forge and Aqueduct Company," had previously been formed for the purpose of uniting the waters of Lake Champlain with those of the Hudson. After expending large sums of money, the project was abandoned.

WAYNE COUNTY.

This county¹ was formed from Ontario and Seneca, April 11, 1823. It lies upon Lake Ontario, w. of the center of the State; is centrally distant 171 mi. from Albany, and contains 624 sq. mi. A series of bluffs 25 to 75 ft. high extends along the lake shore; and from their summits the surface rises in gradual slopes to the lake ridge, a distance of 4 to 5 mi. This ridge is 50 to 200 ft. wide on the top, and about 200 ft. above the lake. It declines toward the e., and upon the e. border of the co. it can scarcely be traced. The declivity of the ridge upon the s. is 8 to 20 ft.; and from its foot the surface gradually slopes upward to the surface of the limestone ridge, which extends e. and w. through the co. a little n. of the center and forms the watershed between Lake Ontario and Clyde River. The summit of this ridge is 140 feet above the lake ridge, 340 feet above the lake, and is about 3 mi. wide. It is highest upon the w. border of the co., and gradually declines toward the e.² From its southern edge the surface gradually declines to Clyde River and slopes upward from the river to the s. line of the co. South of the limestone ridge are numerous drift ridges extending n. and s. and from one-fourth to one and a half miles in length. The declivities are usually very steep, and the summits 40 to 100 ft. above the surrounding surface. They usually end in an abrupt declivity toward the n., but gradually decline toward the s. They are composed of clay, sand, and gravel, and seem to be deposits from great currents of water. Considerable marshy land extends along Clyde and Seneca Rivers, and also through the co. n. of the lake ridge.

Ganargwa, or Mud Creek, enters the s. w. corner of the co. from Ontario, flows in an irregular but generally easterly course to Lyons, where it unites with the Canandaigua Outlet and forms Clyde River,³ which continues eastward to the e. bounds of the co., where it discharges its waters into Seneca River. These streams receive from the n. West Red Creek, East Red Creek, and Black Creek, and from the s. numerous small brooks. The streams flowing into Lake Ontario are Bear, Deer, Davis, Salmon, Thomas, Wolcott, and Big and Little Red Creeks; First, Second, and Third Creeks flow into Great Sodus Bay. The principal indentations upon Lake Ontario are Great Sodus, East, Port, and Blind Sodus Bays. Great Sodus Bay forms an excellent harbor. Crusoe Lake, in the s. e. corner, is the only considerable body of water. The streams, in their course through the drift deposits and lake ridge, have usually worn deep ravines.

The lowest rock in the co. is the Medina sandstone,⁴ appearing upon the lake and in the ravines near it. It occupies a strip with an average width of 2 mi., widest at the w. Next above this is the Clinton group of limestone and shales, extending to the foot of the limestone ridge. Next above is the Niagara limestone, forming the summit ridge and occupying a strip about 3 mi. in width. South of this is the Onondaga salt group of red and green shales and gypsum, extending to the s. border and occupying nearly one-half of the co. The rocks are mostly covered by thick deposits of drift, and are only exposed in the ravines of the streams. Shells, marl, and muck are found in large quantities in the marshy regions. Weak brine and sulphur springs are found in various localities in the Medina sandstone and the red shales of the Onondaga salt group.

The soil derived from the drift deposits is generally a sandy or gravelly loam, with an occasional intermixture of clay. The soil along the lake shore, principally derived from the disintegration of Medina sandstone, is a reddish, sandy loam. At the foot of the mountain ridge, both n. and s., is a strip of very productive clay loam. In the valley of Clyde River the soil is principally a gravelly loam and alluvium. The marsh lands, when drained, are covered deep with a rich vegetable mold, which develops into the most fertile soil in the co.

Agriculture forms the leading pursuit. The branches, in the order of importance, are grain raising, stock growing, dairying, and wool growing. Fruit is extensively cultivated, and is rapidly

² This peculiar formation is accounted for by the theory that the low regions through the s. and central parts of the co. were once covered by the waters of the lake, and that the limestone ridge was a long bar or point extending into the lake from the w.

³ Named by Wm. McNab, a Scotchman. At an early day it was navigable as far as Lyons, and was a link in the great chain of Western travel.

⁴ This stone is extensively quarried for building stone. It is soft when first taken from the quarry, but hardens upon exposure to the atmosphere.

becoming one of the most important agricultural products. Few counties in the State surpass this in the quality or quantity of apples and peaches annually produced. A strip of land bordering upon Lake Ontario, and extending from Niagara River to the Oswego, seems peculiarly adapted to the cultivation of apples and peaches, and is rapidly becoming one of the most important fruit-growing regions in the State. In Wayne co. $25,000 worth of dried fruit is annually prepared. Peppermint and tobacco are raised along the valley of Mud Creek.

The county seat is located at the village of Lyons, near the center of the co. The courthouse is a fine cut stone building, fronting Church St. It has an Ionic portico, and is surmounted by a large dome.¹ The jail is a commodious stone building, in the w. part of the village. It contains rooms for the jailer's residence, and is one of the best arranged and conducted establishments of the kind in the State. The county clerk's office is a fireproof building, fronting Pearl St., a little s. of the courthouse. The poorhouse is situated upon a farm of 139 acres $\frac{1}{2}$ mi. w. of the courthouse. The average number of inmates is 67, supported at a weekly cost of \$1.55 each. A school is taught throughout the year. The farm yields a revenue of \$1,400. The buildings are insufficient for the accommodation of the inmates; but the institution seems to be well arranged and well kept.

Six weekly newspapers are now published in the co.²

The Erie Canal extends through the s. tier of towns; and along its course are the most populous and thriving villages of the co.³ The direct branch of the N. Y. Central R. R. between Syracuse and Rochester extends, along the course of the canal, through Savannah, Galen, Lyons, ¹ The first courthouse was a brick edifice, erected soon after the organization of the co. It was superseded, in 1844-5, by the present structure, built of Lockport limestone. The building committee of the present court-house were John Adams, Stephen Marshall, and F. B. Cornwell. The first officers of the co. were John S. Talmaidge, First Judge; Hugh Jameson, Sheriff; Wm. H. Adams, Deputy Attorney; Isaac J. Richardson, Tax Clerk; and John S. Talmaidge, Sheriff.

² The Palmyra Register, the first paper published in the co., was commenced Nov. 26, 1817, by Timothy C. Strong. It was continued under various titles until 1825, when it was published as

The Western Farmer and Canal Advocate, and passed into the hands of Tomerow Tucker, who changed its name to

The Wayne Sentinel, under which title it is now published by Wm. N. Cole.

The Lyons Republican was commenced Aug. 3, 1821, by Geo. Lewis. It was discontinued in Feb. 1822.

The Lyons Advocate was commenced May 31, 1822, by Hiram T. Day. It underwent various changes in name and publishers. It was published as

The Wayne County Gazette, by Ephraim J. Whitney; as

The Lyons Argus, by E. J. & W. W. Whitney;

The Lyons Gazette, by Parker & Chapman;

The Wayne Co. Patriot, and as

The Western Argus, by Chapman & Chapin and Ashley & Co.; and as

The Western Argus, by Charles Poncher. In 1841 it was changed to

The Lyons Gazette, and was published by — Russell from 1849 to 1853, when it was sold to Wm Van Camp, and in 1855 of '56 it was merged in The Wayne Democratic Press.

The Palmyra Freeman was commenced March 11, 1825, by D. B. Stephenson. It soon after passed into the hands of J. A. Hadley, who removed the press to Lyons and changed the name to

The Courier. Myron Holley became connected with it as associate editor. In 1831 it was suspended for a time, and afterward resumed as

The Lyons Advocate, by Myron Holley. In 1825 it was published by Wm. H. Childs. In 1836 it was removed to Clyde and published as

The Clyde Gazette, by Dennis Ford, until 1838.

The Reflector, mo., was commenced at Palmyra in 1825 by O. Dogberry, jr. It was discontinued in 1829.

The Newark Republican was commenced at Newark in Nov. 1829, by Jeremiah O. Babch. It was discontinued in 1831.

The Clyde Standard was published about 6 mo. in 1830 by E. P. Moon.

The Western Spectator and Wayne Advertiser was commenced at Palmyra Jan. 9, 1830, by Luther Howard and Erastus Shepard. In 1831 its name was changed to

The Spectator and Anti-Nassau Star. It was removed to Rochester the same year and merged in The Anti-Nassau Enquirer.

The Palmyra Whip was commenced in Feb. 1838, by Wm. N. and Sam'l Cole. It was removed to Lyons by Wm. N. Cole, and its name changed to

The Wayne County Whip. In the fall of 1850 it passed into the hands of Williams & Gavitt. In the spring of 1852 they sold it to Silas A. Andrews, who continued it a few months and sold it to Wm. Van Carter; and in

Nov. of the same year it passed into the hands of Rodney I. Adams. In Sept. 1856 its name was changed to

The Lyons Republican; and April 30, 1859, Mr. Adams sold it to W. E. Tinsley & Co., its present publishers.

The Wayne Standard was commenced at Newark in June, 1838, by David M. Keebler. In Aug. 1839, it was sold to Gen. Barney T. Partridge, J. P. Bartley, and S. Culver, who changed its name to

The New Argus, Stephen Culver, editor. In Jan. 1840 it was sold to — Norton, and discontinued in May following.

In July following it was revived as

The Wayne Standard, by D. M. Keebler and published until 1843, when it passed into the hands of H. L. Winans, and in about 1 year was discontinued. It was revived soon after as

The Newark Courier, by David Fairbairn. It was successively published by Wm. K. Creague and R. F. Jones & Co.

The Newark Journal, and in 1861 by G. D. A. Bridgman, who changed its name to

The Newark Whip. In Sept. 1856, it passed into the hands of C. F. White, who changed its name to

The Newark Weekly Courier, and still continues its publication.

The Palmyra Courier was commenced May 28, 1843, by George Morley. It passed into the hands of J. C. Bennett, who changed its name to

The Palmyra Democrat. It was published again as

The Palmyra Democrat, by — Bonfield, from about 1846 to '54. Mr. Bonfield sold it to — Beebe, and in a short time afterward it passed into the hands of A. L. Ayerell, who changed its name to

The Palmyra Democrat, and subsequently again to

The Palmyra Courier, under which name Mr. Ayerell still continues its publication.

The Clyde Eagle was commenced in 1841 by R. Frazer. It was successively published by — Dwyer, Stephen S. Salisbury, and in 1847 by Rev. Chas. G. Auld, and William Tompkins, who changed its name to

The Clyde Telegraph. It afterward passed into the hands of Rev. W. W. Stouffer, and soon after to Wm. R. I. Cole, and in a short time it was discontinued.

The Clyde Industrial Times was commenced in Feb. 1879, by Bayn & Smith. It soon passed into the hands of J. S. A. Payne. Its name was changed in 1884 to

The Clyde Weekly Times, under which title it is now published, by Joseph V. Payne.

The Northern Methodist Advocate was published by an association at Clyde in 1849. Rev. Wm. Stouffer, editor.

The Wayne Banner was published at Waterloo in 1840, by John McIntyre, and was removed to Clyde, and merged in The Industrial Times on the next issue of the latter paper.

The Errand Messenger was commenced at Lyons in July, 1843, by R. L. Adams & Co., and was published 11 years.

The Wayne Democratic Press was discontinued at Palmyra in 1850. It was revived at Lyons the same year, and is now published by Wm. Van Camp.

Arcadia, Palmyra, and Macedon. A ship canal¹ route and a r. r. route² have been surveyed, connecting the Erie Canal and Central R. R. with Lake Ontario.

The western 9 towns in this co. belonged to the Pulteney Estate; the e. part, including Savannah, Galen, and portions of Wolcott and Butler, constituted a portion of the Military Tract. The intermediate portion, except the s. 3 tiers of lots in Rose, were compensation lands granted to the Pulteney Estate for the gore between the old and new pre-emption lines. The earliest white inhabitants were hunters and trappers. The first permanent settlements were made in 1789, at Palmyra, under the auspices of General John Swift, agent of a company of settlers from Conn.; and at Lyons, under Charles Williamson, agent for the Pulteney Estate.³ From 1790 to 1794, colonies came in from R. I., Long Island, and Maryland.⁴ The settlements did not progress with great rapidity for several years, owing to the diseases which prevailed. The fear of Indian hostilities and of British invasion during the War of 1812 greatly retarded settlement. On the return of peace, settlers began to arrive in considerable numbers, principally from New England and Eastern N. Y. The completion of the Erie Canal gave a new impulse to immigration; and in a few years the flourishing villages of Lyons, Clyde, Palmyra, and Newark were built up along its course. The N. Y. Central R. R., built through the co. in 1852-53, greatly benefited the co. and enhanced the value of the lands.

The most notable of the later incidents in the co. have been the rise of Mormonism in Palmyra,⁵ and the commencement of spiritual rappings in Arcadia.⁶

ARCADIA—was formed from Lyons, Feb. 15, 1825. It lies on the s. border of the co., a little w. of the center. Its surface is a rolling region, broken by drift ridges. Mud Creek flows e. through the town, n. of the center, and receives several small streams as tributaries. The soil is a sandy, gravelly loam, mixed with clay on the hills. Gypsum is found in the s. w., and marl in the center. Newark, (p. v.) including Arcadia, (p. v.) in the s. part, on the canal, was incorp. July 21, 1853, as Newark. It contains 7 churches, a bank, flouring mill, tannery, 3 furnaces, and several manufactories. It is a flourishing canal village and a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R. Pop. 2,042. Fairville, (p. v.) about 5 mi. n., contains 1 church, a tannery, a limited amount of manufactures, and 159 inhabitants. Marbletown, near the s. e. corner, contains a church and 10 houses. Jessups Corners and Hydeville are hamlets. Settlement was commenced in 1794, by Joseph Winters and B. Franklin.⁷ The first church (M. E.) was organized in 1805. J. Wesley Benton was the first settled minister, in 1806.⁸ A family named Fox, residing at Hydesville, in Arcadia, first heard the mysterious sounds known as the "rappings" on the night of March 31, 1849. Investigations were made in regard to the origin of the raps, but nothing definite was settled upon. The family soon after removed to Rochester, the "raps" accompanying them; and hence the name "Rochester Rappings." A series of investigations was instituted, and the matter became public, some claiming for it a spiritual origin, but the great majority pronouncing it a humbug or delusion. From this source modern spiritualism originated.

BUTLER—was formed from Wolcott, Feb. 26, 1826. It is the center town on the e. border of the co. Its surface is diversified, level in the s. e. and rising into ridges in the n. w. The highest point is Armstrong Hill. The principal stream is Wolcott Creek, which rises in the n. e. and, flowing in a circuitous course, leaves the town near the n. w. corner. The soil in the valleys is a gravelly loam, and on the hills it is generally clay, with a tenacious subsoil. Lime is manufactured in the n. part to a limited extent. South Butler, (p. v.) on the s. line, contains 5 churches, a classical school, several manufactories, and about 400 inhabitants. West Butler (p. o.) contains 10 houses; Westbury, (p. v.) in the n. e. corner, partly in the town of Victory, ¹ In 1827, a charter was obtained for building a ship canal from the Erie Canal, at Montezuma, to Great Solus Bay. Surveys were made, but no work was ever done. A new charter was obtained by John Greig, of Canandaigua, in 1836; and another by Gen. Wm. H. Adams, in 1851. The route named in the last charter is from Solus Bay to the Erie Canal, a little w. of Clyde. Some work has been done on parts of this route.

² The Solus Point & Southern R. R. was incorp. in April, 1852. The road was to extend from Solus Bay to Newark. The route has been surveyed, but no work has been done. A survey has also been made for a r. r. from Clyde to Solus Bay.

³ Mr. Williamson built roads from Palmyra and Lyons to Solus Point; upon these the early settlers mostly located. He also laid out a city upon Solus Bay, which has not yet been built.

⁴ The Maryland settlers brought with them several slaves; 4 out of it was soon found that slave labor was unprofitable.

⁵ See p. 693.

⁶ See Arcadia.

⁷ Gilbert Howell and Paul Reese came in in 1795; Samuel Soverhill in 1798; Humphrey Sherman, Reuben Starks, and John Miller, from Long Island, in 1800; and Ebenezer Smith soon after. The Lusk came in from Columbia co. in 1806. Jacob, Philip, and Isaac Lusk purchased 1 sq. mi., which is now occupied by the village of Newark. Caleb Tibbets, Stephen Aldridge, Henry Crouse, and George Palmer settled in 1807; and Dr. A. Hyde, in 1810. The first death was that of a child of B. Franklin, in 1792; the first marriage, that of ——— West and Amy Tibbets, in 1798. Stephen Aldridge kept the first inn, and J. P. Bartlett the first store.

⁸ There are 10 churches in town: 2 Meth. Prot., M. E., Presb., Prot. E., Union, Ref. Prot. D., Bap., R. C., and Christian.

(Cayuga co.) 1 church and 20 houses. Butler Center is a hamlet. The first settlement was commenced in 1802.¹ The first settled minister was — Mills.² Rev. Antoinette L. Brown, the first woman ever regularly ordained in the State, was settled for several years over the Cong. Church at South Butler.

GALEN³—was formed from Junius, (Seneca co.) Feb. 11, 1842. Sixty-nine was taken off in 1824. It lies on the s. border of the co., e. of the center. Its surface is hilly in the r., but more level in the w. In the s. w. is a large tract of swamp land. Clyde River⁴ flows through the town from w. to e. in a circuitous course. The soil is a rich, sandy and gravelly loam. Clyde, (p. v.) near the center, on Clyde River, was incorp. May 2, 1835. The canal passes through the village; it is also a station on the N. Y. C. R. R. It contains 6 churches, a high school,⁵ 2 banks, a news-paper office, a glass factory, and several other manufactories.⁷ Pop. 1,856. Marengo, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains a church and 20 houses; Lock Berlin, (p. v.) in the w. part, on the canal, a church and 30 houses. Angell's Corners, in the s. e., and Meadville, in the e., are hamlets. The first settlement was commenced by Laoni Bedell, in 1800.⁸ The first church (Presb.) was organized July 8, 1814.⁹ Borings for salt water in the vicinity of Clyde have been made, but without success. One of the wells emitted inflammable gas; the well was soon filled up.

HURON—was formed from Wolcott, as "Port Bay," Feb. 25, 1826. Its name was changed March 17, 1834. It lies on Lake Ontario, e. of the center of the co. A part of Great Solus Bay lies in the s. w. corner. East Bay, in the s., and a part of Port Bay, in the s. e., extend into the town. Its surface is rolling, with a general northern inclination. In the w. and s. w., near Great Solus Bay, are several tracts of swamp lands. The lake shore rises in a series of bluffs, the highest of which—Chimney Bluff—is 175 ft. above the lake, and Bay Bluff 120 ft. Several small streams flow n. through the town, the principal of which is Mudge Creek, which empties into East Bay. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, intermixed with clay in the s. North Huron (p. v.) contains 2 churches, a saw and grist mill, and 40 houses; South Huron (Huron p. v.) 1 church, a townhouse, and 20 houses. Port Glasgow (p. v.) is a hamlet, at the head of sloop navigation on Great Solus Bay. The first settlement was commenced by Persgrine Fitzhugh and Wm. Helms, and some other families from Md., in 1796.¹⁰ The first church (Presb.) was organized in 1813.¹¹

LYONS—was formed from Solus, March 1, 1811. Arcadia was taken off in 1825. It lies on the s. border of the co., a little e. of the center. Its surface is a moderately rolling region, broken by sand ridges. The Canandaigua Outlet from the s., and Mud Creek from the w., join in the s. part and form Clyde River. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, with marl up on the creek bottom lands. Lyons, (p. v.) on the canal, at the junction of Canandaigua Outlet and Mud Creek, was incorp. April 18, 1854. It contains the co. buildings, 7 churches, 2 banks, 2 newspaper offices, a union school,¹² and several manufactories;¹³ and it is an important r. r. station. Pop. 3,221. Alloway, (p. v.) in the s. part, on Canandaigua Outlet, contains a church, a grist-mill, and 30 houses. The first settlement was commenced in 1789, by Nicholas and Wm. Stansell and John Featherly.¹⁴ They settled, with their families, (12 persons in all,) a half mile s. of the ¹ John Granby and — Wellman settled near the center, as early as 1803; Ernest Hubbard and Abijah Moore, in 1805; Capt. Willis, Wm. Hildett, Henry Bunnell, Aaron Hoppin, Mrs. Bance, and Morris Crow, previous to 1807; and Seth Crow and Roger Olmsted, in 1808. The first birth was a child of — Wiggins; the first death was that of Jedediah Wheeler, in April, 1811. — Violes built the first saw-mill, at the center.

² There are 7 churches in town; 2 M. E., 2 Christian, Bap. Cong., and 2d Adv.

³ This was Township No. 27 of the Military Tract, and received its name from having been appropriated to the Medical Department.

⁴ Named by Wm. McNab, agent of the Hornby Estate, Gen. v.

⁵ This location was originally called "Black House," from a black-house built here by Indian traders at an early day. It was used during the Revolution by forces as a "station" in smuggling goods from Canandaigua to Solus Bay. It was burned previous to 1800. The village was first called "Favorville," from Henrietta Laura, Countess of Bath, daughter and heiress of Sir Wm. Pulteney. Its name was changed to Clyde in 1818.

⁶ It is a union school, formed from Districts 11 and 17. Inorp. April 24, 1834, with special privileges. This was one of the earliest union schools in Western New York. The school employs 6 teachers.

⁷ 2 large distilleries, 2 steam flouring mills, 2 steam sawmills, 2 furnaces, and shops for manufacturing agricultural implements, a large coverage, 1 brewery, 2 malt houses, and a tannery.

⁸ Among the other early settlers were Nicholas King, David Godfrey, and Isaac Mills, with their families, from Orange co., N. Y., on lot 70, in the s. w. part of the town, in 1801; — Cragher, from Md., Elias Austin, — Payne, and Capt. John Sherman, in 1804. The first birth was that of Isaac Godfrey, in Feb. 1802; the first death, that of David Godfrey, a young boy, killed, Oct. 13, 1801. The first marriage was that of J. J. Reynolds and Polly Mills, in 1800; James B. West kept the first store; Maj. Fred. A. De Zeng built the first saw and grist mill, in 1818.

⁹ There are 9 churches in town; 2 M. E., 2 Bap., Presb., P. E. C., Germ. Meth., Friends, and U. C.

¹⁰ Among the other early settlers were Dr. Zenos Hyde, — Kin v. and several families from Mass. and Conn., in 1787; Josiah Upton, in 1805, and Norman Sheldon in 1810. The first birth was that of a child of Dr. Hyde; and the first death, that of Mrs. Hale, in 1800. Gardner Mudge taught the first school, in 1812; Norman Sheldon kept the first store, in 1813; James Mudge kept the first store; and Eldon Spencer built the first saw and grist mill, in 1819.

¹¹ There are 3 churches in town; M. E., Meth. Prot., and Presb.

¹² The Lyons Union School was among the first of the kind established in the State. It employs 12 teachers and has 891,500 pupils.

¹⁴ John Buzs, Richard Jones, Geo. Carr, Wm. Giddens, and John Perrine were early settlers. The first marriage was that of Jas.

present village of Lyons. They were piloted up the Mohawk, (where they had previously settled,) and by the usual water route, by Wemple, an Indian trader. Charles Williamson, agent of the Pulteney Estate, commenced a settlement at Lyons Village in 1794, through Charles Cameron, his local agent. Jas. Otto came in 1796. In 1798, Judge Evert Van Winkle and 40 others came in, from N. J. and Md.; and in 1801, Judge Daniel Dorsey and family, from Md. Judge Dorsey had previously purchased of Mr. Williamson nearly 1,000 acres in the immediate vicinity of the village. Rev. John Cole (Meth.) was the first local preacher.¹

MACEDON—was formed from Palmyra, Jan. 29, 1823. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is rolling and irregular. The valley of Mud Creek extends e. through the s. part. It is drained by Mud and Red Creeks and their tributaries. The soil is a clay and gravelly loam upon a limestone formation. Macedon, (p. v.), a canal village, was incorp. Nov. 1856. It contains 2 churches, a saw and grist mill, furnace, and machine shop, and about 500 inhabitants. Macedon Center (p. v.) is incorp., and contains 3 churches, the Macedon Academy, and 20 houses. The first settlement was made as early as 1789, by Webb Harwood and Ebenezer Reed.² The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1800.³

MARION—was formed from Williamson, as "Winchester," April 18, 1825. Its name was changed April 15, 1826. It is an interior town, lying w. of the center of the co. Its surface is broken by sandy hills and gravelly ridges; the Niagara limestone crops out in the s. part. It is drained by East Red Creek, which flows s. into Mud Creek. The soil is a gravelly, calcareous loam, and drift. Limestone is quarried in the s. part, for building purposes and public works. Near Marion Village is a sulphur spring. Marion, (p. v.) in the s. part, contains 4 churches, the Marion Collegiate Institute, a furnace and machine shop, a fanning mill factory, and 390 inhabitants. The first settlement was commenced in 1796, by Daniel Lovell.⁴ The first church (Presb.) was organized Nov. 1, 1808.⁵

ONTARIO—was formed from Williamson, as "Freetown," March 27, 1807. Its name was changed Feb. 12, 1808. Walworth was taken off in 1829. It is the n. w. corner town of the co., Lake Ontario forming its n. boundary. Its surface is mostly level, with a general inclination toward the lake. It is drained by several streams running n. to the lake, the principal of which are Bear, Deer, and Davis Creeks. The soil is a sandy, gravelly loam, with drift and muck n. of the ridge. Between the lake shore and the ridge road are extensive marshes, heavily timbered. Iron ore, in the form of red oxide, is found in large quantities in the Clinton group, extending e. and w. through the center of the town. Salt was formerly manufactured to some extent. Ontario, (p. v.) in the s. e. part, contains a church, steam sawmill, furnace, and 25 houses; Ontario Center, 2 mi. w., a church and 20 houses; Furnace Village, near the center, a furnace⁶ and 16 houses. New Boston, on the lake shore, is a hamlet. The first settlement was commenced by Freeman Hopkins, from Mass., in 1806.⁷ The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1811,⁸ by Elder Lyon.

The first settlement was made by John Swift, in 1789 or '90.² In the winter of 1788-89, John Swift and Col. John Jenkins purchased Tp. 12, R. 2, now Palmyra, and commenced the survey of it in March. During the summer, John Swift moved into the town, and erected a log house and storehouse a little s. of the lower end of Main St., Palmyra. Before the close of the year 1789, Webb Harwood and family, Noah Porter, Jonathan Warner, and Bennett Bates, from Mass., came in. Mr. Harwood settled a little w. of the village. David White and family came in in 1790. The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1797; Rev. Eleazar Fairbanks was the first pastor.³ Joseph Smith, the father of the prophet, settled a little s. of Palmyra Village in 1819. The plates of the Mormon Bible were said to have been dug up on a hillside in Manchester, Ontario co., a little s. of the Palmyra line. The Smiths were money diggers, and had previously been digging in this locality for gold. The book was printed at the office of the Wayne Sentinel, Martin Harris, a convert, mortgaging his farm to defray the expense.

ROSE⁴—was formed from Wolecott, Feb. 5, 1826. It lies in the interior, of the co., e. of the center. Its surface is mostly undulating or level, with drift ridges in the s. e. Several small tracts of swamp land lie in different parts of the town. The streams are small; Mudge, Sherman, and Thomas Creeks are the principal. The soil is a gravelly loam, intermixed with clay on the elevations and with muck on the lowlands. The highest point is 140 ft. above Lake Ontario. Limestone approaches the surface in the s. part, and has been quarried to some extent for lime and for building purposes. Rose Valley, (Rose p. o.) near the center, contains 3 churches, a steam sawmill, and tannery. Pop. 218. Wayne Center, in the w. part, contains 20 houses; Glenmark Falls,⁵ in the s. part, contains 2 gristmills, 2 sawmills, and 10 dwellings. The first settlement was made in 1805, by Caleb Melvin and Alphens Harman.⁶ The first church (M. E.) was organized in 1824.

SAVANNAH⁷—was formed from Galen, Nov. 21, 1821. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is broken by drift ridges in the s., and is low and marshy in the s.; about one-third of the s. part is a woodland marsh, known as Crusoe Island. Seneca River forms the s. part of the e. boundary. Crusoe Lake is a small, shallow body of water near the center; its outlet, Crusoe Creek, flows into Seneca River. The soil in the s. is a sandy and gravelly loam, and in the s. it is principally composed of muck and shell marl.⁹ A tract of about 1,900 acres in the s. e. part is an open marsh, producing coarse grass. Savannah, (p. v.) near the center, is a station upon the N. Y. C. R. R., and contains 20 houses. The first settlement was made by Elias Converse and Joseph Mozier, in 1812.¹⁰ The first preacher was Rev. — Wiers, (Bap.) There is no church in town.

SODUS¹¹—was formed in Jan. 1789. Williamson was taken off in 1802, and Lyons in 1811. It is the central town on the s. border of the co., and is bounded s. by Lake Ontario. A part of Great Sodus Bay lies in the s. e. corner. Its surface in the s. part is mostly level, with a gentle inclination toward the lake. A ridge 140 to 190 ft. higher than the surface of the lake passes through near the center; and s. of this the surface is broken by several ridges extending s. and s. e. The lake shore varies in height from a low swamp to bluffs 70 ft. high. Second and Salmon Creeks are the principal streams. The soil in the s. part is a clay and sandy loam, and in the s. gravelly loam. The manufacture of lime is extensively carried on in the s. part; and red sandstone is quarried in the s. w. Red oxid of iron (argillaceous ore) is found 2 mi. w. of Sodus Point. Salt was manufactured in 1831 and '32. Sodus (p. v.) contains 3 churches, the Sodus Academy, and about 300 inhabitants. Sodus Point, (p. v.), on the lake, w. of the entrance to the bay, is a U. S. port of entry in the Genesee District. It has a lighthouse, a church, a steam sawmill, and about 200 inhabitants. Sodus Center (p. v.) contains a church, foundery, carding mill, grist and saw mill, and 40 houses: Afton (p. v.) a church and 30 houses: South Sodus (p. v.) a church and 30 houses; and Joy (p. v.) a church, shingle factory, and 30 houses. The first settlement was made in 1794, under the auspices of Charles Williamson, agent of the Pulteney Estate.¹ Mr. Williamson caused a road to be cut through from Palmyra to Sodus Point in the spring of 1794. During the summer the town was surveyed, an extensive city plan laid out between Salmon Creek and the Point, and within two years mills were erected on Salmon Creek. A tavern was built at an expense of $5,000, a pleasure yacht was placed upon the bay; and in roads, surveys, buildings, &c., over $20,000 was expended. Thos. Little and — Moffat were the local agents of Mr. Williamson. Of all those connected with these premature improvements, but few remained after they were completed. Elijah Brown was an early settler, 4 mi. w. of the Point, and Amos Richards, 7 mi. w. Ammi Ellsworth came from Conn. in 1801, and settled near the Point. Dr. Wm. Nixon Loomis settled at the Point. He built mills and a forge. A daughter of his is Mrs. Elizabeth Ellet, author of the "Women of the Revolution," and "Domestic History of the Revolution." Col. Peregrine Fitzhugh came from Md. in 1803, with his family and slaves,—over 40 persons in all. Dr. Thos. G. Lawson, an Englishman, settled 1 mi. from the Point, in 1803. After expending considerable money in attempting to form a settlement, he abandoned the enterprise in 1805. In 1799, besides those already mentioned, there were 25 families in town on roads leading to Palmyra and Lyons. The first church (Bap.) was organized in 1805; Elder Seba Norton was the first settled minister.²

WALWORTH³—was formed from Ontario, April 20, 1829. It is the central town on the w. border of the co. Its surface is a high, rolling upland, the ridges being the most elevated land in the co. The Niagara limestone crops out in the n. part, marking its course by a hard, stony surface some rods in width. It is drained s. by several small streams, and s. e. by tributaries of Red Creek. The soil is a rich, sandy loam. Walworth, (p. v.) near the s. e. corner, contains 3 churches, the Walworth Academy, and 230 inhabitants. In the immediate vicinity is an extensive nursery.⁴ West Walworth, (p. v.), in the s. w. part, contains a church and 115 inhabitants. The first settlement was begun about 1800.⁵ The first church (M. E.) was organized previous to 1809.⁶

WILLIAMSON⁷—was formed from Sodus, Feb. 20, 1802. Ontario was taken off in 1807, and Marion in 1825. It lies on the n. border of the co., w. of the center, Lake Ontario forming its n. boundary. Its surface is level in the n., with a gentle inclination toward the lake. In the s. it rises into low ridges. It is drained by a few small streams that flow n. into Lake Ontario. The soil is a sandy, gravelly loam, mixed with clay near the lake shore. Pultneyville,⁸ (p. v.) on the lake shore, a U. S. port of entry in the Genesee District, contains a church, gristmills, a steam sawmill, and about 450 inhabitants: Williamson, (p. v.) s. of the center, contains 2 churches, a steam flouring mill, and about 300 inhabitants; East Williamson contains 2 churches and 20 houses. The first settlement was made in 1803, by Wm. Waters.⁹ The census reports 8 churches in town.¹⁰

WOLCOTT¹¹—was formed from Junius, (Seneca co.,) March 24, 1807. Butler, Huron, and Rose were taken off in 1826. It is the n. e. corner town of the co., Lake Ontario forming its n.

¹ Moses and James Still kept the first inn, at Sodus Point, in the building erected for that purpose by Mr. Williamson. On the evening of June 13, 1813, a party of about 100 English landed at Sodus Point in boats, from the fleet of Sir Jas. Yeo, for the purpose of seizing and destroying what public stores they could find. They were opposed by about 40 Americans, under Capt. Hull, of Lyons. After the first fire the Americans retreated. The enemy burned 5 houses, and the old Williamson Hotel, owned by Capt. Wm. Wickham. The public flour had been secreted in a ravine, and remained undiscovered. The next day a gundart proceeded up the lake to Nicholas Point and burned a war-house. The British had 2 killed, and the Americans 1 killed and 1 mortally wounded. The total amount of property destroyed amounted to about $25,000.

² The census reports 11 churches in town; 4 M. E., 2 Prot. E., 2 Presb., Bap., Christian, Cong.

³ Named from Chancellor Walworth.

⁴ This nursery—established in 1840—occupies 75 acres, and produces annually 200,000 trees, mostly sent to New England, N. J., Md., and Va.

⁵ Among the other early settlers were George Millet, in 1802, Daniel Douglass and George Randolph, at West Walworth, Dr. Hurlbut Cuttenden, in 1804, Deacon Gleason Hassett, James and Jonathan Hill, Capt. Gilbert, — Huckleby, and John and Marshall Chamberlain. The first death was that of — Green, killed by the fall of a tree, in 1806. The first store was kept by Thomas F. Kempshall.

⁶ There are 5 churches in town; 2 Bap., M. E., Cong., and F. W. Bap.

⁷ Named from Charles Williamson, the first agent of the Pulteney Estate.

⁸ Named from Sir Wm. Pulteney. On the morning of June 13, 1813, Gen. Sir James Yeo, with a British force, made a descent upon this place. Gen. J. Swift, who commanded the Americans, surrendered, with the stipulation that private property and persons should be respected. Most of the U. S. stores had been previously removed to a place of safety. The British had 2 killed and 3 wounded.

⁹ Capt. Sam'l Throop, Jeremiah Selby, John Holmes, and Alpheus Curtis, came in 1806, Maj. Wm. Rogers in 1807, and Dan'l Poppins, Timothy Smith. — Denning, Andrew Connell, Sam'l LeYard, and Jacob W. Hallert, soon after. The first child born was H. N. Throop, in Nov. 1807. Major Rogers kept the first inn, in 1807; Jos. Colt, the first store. Capt. Sam'l Throop and Jeremiah Selby built the first saw and grist mill.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

This county, constituting one of the original divisions of the State under the English rule, soon after the first conquest, was organized Nov. 1, 1683, with its present limits. It lies upon the E. bank of the Hudson, in the s. e. part of the State, and is bounded on the E. by Conn. and on the s. by Long Island Sound. It is centrally distant 105 mi. from Albany, and contains 525 sq. mi. The surface consists of several ridges of hills parallel to the river and separated by wide valleys. The hills are in two general ranges, the first extending along the river and the second along the Conn. line. They are subdivided into a great number of minor ridges and hills, all extending N. and S. The highest summits are 600 to 1,000 ft. above tide. The valleys, extending N. and S., are continuous, affording ample opportunity for the construction of roads and railroads; and they are generally bordered by gradually sloping hillsides.¹ In some localities the hills are abrupt and rocky. The principal streams are Peekskill Creek, Farnace Brook, Croton, Pocantico, and Neperhan Rivers, and Tibbetts Brook, tributaries of the Hudson; Bronx River, Westchester and Hutchinsons Creeks, Mamaroneck and Byram Rivers, flowing into Long Island Sound; Maharness and Stamford Mill Rivers, flowing E. into Conn.; and Musecot Creek, Plum Brook, and Tificus, Cross, and Kisko Rivers, tributaries of the Croton. The lakes are small bodies of water scattered through the hilly portions. The s. e. portion of the co., along the Sound, is deeply indented with bays and estuaries, which in some places are bordered by extensive marshes. Most of the streams which flow into the Sound afford, by the reflux of the tide, an intermitting hydraulic power, which is employed in several places.

The rocks of the co. consist principally of granite and gneiss, of many dissimilar varieties, and of white crystalline limestone. These rocks crop out upon the declivities and summits of most of the hills, affording an abundance of the best kind of building stone. The marble quarries at Sing Sing and other places are extensively wrought, their products affording one of the most valuable exports of the co. Traces of various kinds of ore have been discovered; but all search for profitable metallic veins has proved unsuccessful. Several mineral springs are found in different sections, the principal of which is the Chappaqua Spring, 3 mi. E. of Sing Sing. It emits sulphuretted hydrogen and is said to possess useful medicinal properties. The soil, derived principally from the disintegration of the primitive rocks, is light, sandy, and, naturally, only moderately productive; but, by a continued process of scientific culture, it has been rendered very fertile. Upon the Hudson and the Sound and in various other localities are drift deposits and alluvium, furnishing a much more productive soil. The people are principally engaged in gardening and fruit raising, fattening cattle, and supplying milk for the New York market. Bricks in immense quantities are manufactured along the Hudson for exportation. Other manufactures are largely carried on in the villages adjacent to New York.

This co. is distinguished for beautiful and picturesque scenery, noticeable in nearly every part. The highlands that border upon the Hudson afford an extended view of that river, the Palisades, and of the hilly country of Rockland and Orange. Along the s. e. border fine views are obtained of the Sound, the numerous green islands along the coast, and the adjacent shores of Long Island. In the interior the landscape is agreeably diversified by hills, dales, and clear, running streams. Many wealthy inhabitants of New York have erected beautiful villas and country residences upon the finest sites; and the hills of the co. are now studded with these splendid specimens of architectural art.

In the vicinity of New York are numerous small villages inhabited by mechanics and working men doing business in the city. These people go back and forth daily on the lines of railroad, or by steamboat, living in the country for the sake of economy. A considerable amount of manufactures is carried on at these suburban villages. A large transient population, mostly from New York, make this co. their residence during the summer months.

¹ The roads that cross the co. E. and W. are a constant succession of ascents and descents, while those extending N. and S. through the valleys are nearly level.

The co. is a half-shire, the co. buildings being located respectively at Bedford and White Plains.¹ The courthouse at Bedford is a wooden structure; and attached to it is a jail for the temporary confinement of prisoners. The co. buildings at White Plains are of granite, and are the most commodious and costly buildings of the kind in the State.²

The poorhouse is located upon a farm of 173 acres in Mount Pleasant, 5 mi. s. of White Plains. The average number of inmates is 225, supported at a weekly cost of 68½ cts. each. The farm yields a revenue of $2,500. A school is kept throughout the year. The buildings are of stone; and the whole establishment seems to be well arranged.

The Hudson River R. R. extends along the river banks through Yonkers, Greenburgh, Mount Pleasant, Ossining, and Cortlandt. The Harlem R. R. extends s. through the central part of the co., extending through Morrisania, West Farms, Yonkers, East Chester, Searsville, Crotonburgh, White Plains, Mount Pleasant, New Castle, Bedford, Lewisboro, and North Salem. The New York & New Haven R. R. extends from the Harlem R. R. at East Chester r. th. to South Plainfield, New Rochelle, Mamaroneck, Harrison, and Rye. A branch road extends from the Harlem R. R. at Morrisania s. e. about 2 mi. to Port Morris. The other principal public work in the co. is the Croton dam and the great aqueduct which supplies the city of New York with water. Lines of steamers ply between New York and the various ports along the Hudson and East Rivers, affording cheap and easy means of communication with the great city.

Five newspapers are now published in the co.³

When first known to the whites, this co. was occupied by the Mohegans, who were divided into several bands or clans with distinctive names.⁴ They paid tribute to the Five Nations, and were known in early documents as "River Indians."

¹ At the organization of the co. in 1783, the courts were established at Westchester, and were continued there until 1796. A court of sessions was held at East Chester for some time. By an act of Dec. 16, 1788, the justices and supervisors were directed to select a new site for a courthouse, which was located at White Plains; and in that year, 1790, and 1792, 42,000 were voted to erect and finish it. It was used until 1776, when it was burned. By an act of May 1, 1789, $1,800 were appropriated for the erection of a courthouse at White Plains, and another at Bedford, under the superintendence of Stephen Ward, Ebenezer Lockwood, Jonathan G. Tompkins, Ebenezer Purdy, Thos. Thomas, Richard Hurdell, and Richard Sacket, jr. Prisoners had previously been confined in the New York jail, and courts held at a time been held in the Protestant church at Bedford. Both buildings thus erected are still standing, and owned by the co. A clerk's office was built at White Plains, in 1820, adjacent to the courthouse, in the old part of the village. The Provincial Convention held its sessions a few days in July, 1776, at the courthouse in White Plains; and in front of it the Declaration of Independence was publicly read upon its receipt by that body. The building, and what remained of the village, were wantonly burned by a New England major on the night of Nov. 5, 1776.

² An act passed March 30, 1856, authorized the county treasurer to loan $2,000 for the erection of a new county seat, jail, clerk's office, and surrogate's office, upon a site in White Plains, to be selected by the supervisors, and under a committee to be appointed by them. The present buildings were erected in 1856-57, under the superintendence of Abraham Hurdell, States Barton, Wm. Marshall, Jr., David Hunt, and Geo. C. Lamb, at a cost of $120,000. They are built of granite quarried near the village, and contain buildings connected by corridors. The front part is devoted to the records of the clerk and surrogate, is fireproof throughout, and its spacious rooms are furnished with iron cases for books and papers. The records have been recently bound, and put in ample order for preservation. The middle portion is devoted to court and jury rooms, sheriff's office and residence, and the rear building is the jail, connected with the court room only by a vestibule. Prisoners may be brought into court without liability to rescue by a crowd. The cells, 36 in number, are built in 2 to 3 in a central block.

⁴ The Seneca Museum was published by Milton F. Cushing in 1810.

The Westchester Gazette was published at Peekskill by Robert Cramb (about 1810). It was afterward changed to

The White and Putnam Gazette. Several changes of proprietors and perhaps of names occurred when in 1822 it became

The Westchester and Putnam Standard, and was published a short time by Dr. Brewer. It was afterward published about 2 years by Samuel Marks, as

The Standard. It then passed into the hands of Samuel Marks, who continued it as

The Westchester and Putnam Republican. In 1844 it was sold to Wm. Richards, who changed its name to

The Peekskill Republican. In 1842-43, J. J. Chambers became proprietor, and in 1857 the paper was removed to Sing Sing, where it is now published as Settlement began under the Dutch authority, in the southern part, and before the Revolution nearly every part of the co. had been occupied. A large part was embraced by the Cortlandt, Philipsburgh, Pelham, Searsdale, and Fordham Manors.¹ Of these the first sent a representative to the General Assembly, and the second was forfeited by the attainder of its proprietor in the Revolution. The borough of Westchester, including the present towns of Westchester, West Farms, and Morrisania, was also represented by a member, and had a mayor's court. This co. was the scene of many events of great importance in the Revolution, and, from its occupying the middle ground between the opposing armies, was alternately overrun and pillaged by the refugees of both.² The southern part was taxed £2,000, May 6, 1784, to repay Revolutionary expenses.

BEDFORD³—was first formed under Connecticut, in May, 1697. Its rights were confirmed by New York in April, 1704; and it was fully organized as a town March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, lying N. E. of the center of the co. Its surface is elevated and broken by small hills and valleys, and is almost entirely available for agricultural purposes. Croton River forms part of the N. boundary; Mahaness River flows through a small portion of the S. part; and Cross River flows through the N. E. corner. Byram Lake lies on the S. border. The soil is generally a good quality of sandy and gravelly loam, but stony on the hills. Bedford, (p. v.), S. E. of the center, is surrounded by hills, one of which on the N. retains its Indian name of "Aspetong." The village is a half-shire, and contains a courthouse,⁴ 2 churches, the Bedford Academy, a Female Institute, and 30 houses. Bedford Station, (p. o.), on the Harlem R. R., contains 10 houses. Katonah, (p. v.), on Cross River, near its junction with the Croton, contains 30 houses. Mount Kiska, (p. v.), a station on the Harlem R. R., on the W. border of the town, contains 200 inhabitants. Whitlockville is a station on the Harlem R. R. near the N. border. The town was mostly included in a purchase made July 1, 1640, by Nathan Turner, for New Haven, and sold the same year by the latter to Andrew Ward, Robert Coe, and 20 others, for £23. Other Indian purchases were made, the last of which was July 24, 1703.⁵ There are 8 churches in town.⁶

CORTLANDT⁷—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies upon the Hudson, in the N. W. corner of the co. Its surface is broken and hilly. The ranges of hills generally extend N. and S. and are separated by narrow valleys. The declivities are often steep and nearly precipitous. Anthony's Nose,⁸ on the N. line, 1,228 ft. above the river, is the highest land in the co. Although very broken, the surface generally is susceptible of cultivation. The principal streams are Croton River, flowing across the S. part, Furnace Brook, Peekskill Hollow Creek, and Gregory's Brook. The soil is generally a sandy and gravelly loam, with a strip of clay along the river. Among the mountains are found a variety of interesting minerals.⁹ Brick is extensively manufactured.¹⁰

Cortlandt Patent was granted June 17, 1697, to Stophanus Van Cortlandt, with an annual quitrent of 40 shillings. It included the present towns of Cortlandt, Yorktown, Somers, and North Salem.

Philipsburgh Patent was granted June 12, 1703, to Frederick Philips, at an annual quitrent of £4 12s. It included the present towns of Greenburgh, Mount Pleasant, and Ossining.

Pelham Patent was granted Oct. 25, 1687, to John Pell, and included the present town of Pelham and a part of New Rochelle.

Fordham Patent was granted in 1671 to John Archer, and included 1,253 acres in the present town of West Farms.

Searsdale Patent was granted March 21, 1701, to Caleb Heathcote, subject to an annual quitrent of £5. It included the present towns of Searsdale, New Castle, North Castle, and a part of White Plains.

² Two classes of brigands, equally destitute of principle, but possessing attachment to opposite interests, infested the co., committing atrocious crimes without punishment, and often preying upon their nominal friends with as little mercy as upon their avowed enemies. Of these, the "Cowboys" professed Tory sentiments, while the "Skinners" were ostensibly attached to the American cause. The two parties often operated in concert, the Cowboys bringing contraband goods from New York to exchange for the property plundered by the Skinners; and, when a pretext was necessary, a skirmish would occur, and the goods from the enemy would be quietly borne away, as if lawfully captured.—Hydon's Westchester, I, p. 211.

³ Named from Bedfordshire, England, whence many of the early settlers came. It formed part of the territory known as Ripponwains. Privilege of plantation was granted under the present name by a court of election held at Hartford, Conn., May 11, 1682. In 1697 a patent was granted by Conn. to the town. In 1700 the royal approval was obtained to the survey of 1683 and '84, by which Bedford and Rye were included in New York; and in April, 1704, a patent with town privileges was granted by that colony. In 1690 there were 31 proprietors residing in town.

⁴ County courts are held alternately here and at White Plains. The village was burned in the Revolution by a party of British light horse, on their route to Fairfield, Conn. By an act passed April 11, 1785, courts were ordered to be held in the Prest. church until the courthouse should be rebuilt, or till the further order of the Legislature.

⁵ The title to 5,116 acres of land in this town became invested in Jacobus Van Cortlandt at an early period. This estate was divided in 1743, Frederick Van Cortlandt receiving 1,424, Abram De Peyster 1,410, John Chambers 1,282, and Peter Jay 1,269 acres. Gov. John Jay, a son of Peter Jay, became invested with a large portion of the last mentioned allotment. The estate is still owned by his descendants. On a tract known as "the Hop Ground" are still living many families of the same name as the first purchasers. Among these are families named Green, Miller, Holme, Roberts, Amler, Clark, Ayers, Westcott, Simpkin, Mead, Webb, Clason, and Higgins. Tradition locates in this town the scene of a bloody engagement fought in Feb. 1644, between the Dutch and Indians, in which 500 of the latter perished.

⁹ Among these minerals are epidote, sphene, and sulphate of barytes. In opening the r. r. tunnel through Anthony's Nose, beautiful but hexagonal crystals of calcite were found.

¹⁰ There were in Aug. 1858, 24 establishments worked as separate yards, 11 of which used steam power and 9 made pressed brick. This business began here about 1812-15, and was most thriving from 1847 to 1854. Large quantities of these brick were used on the Croton Aqueduct. The business gives employ-

Peekskill,¹ (p. v.) upon Peekskill Bay, in the s. w. part of the town, was laid out by Act of 1718. It is situated in an elevated valley surrounded by heights which afford extensive views of the river. It contains 19 churches, the Peekskill Academy, 3 boarding schools, a bank, newspaper office, and several manufactories.² It is connected by a steam ferry with Caldwell's Landing, and by a daily steamer and line of sloops with New York. It is a station upon the H. R. R. R. (p. 3, 538. Verplancks Point, (Verplanck p. o.) upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the town, was laid out in 1836. It contains a church, steamboat landing, several important brick manufactories, and 1,456 inhabitants.³ Croton⁴ (Croton Landing p. o.) is a r. r. station, in the s. part of the town. It contains 4 churches, a rolling mill, wire mill, several brick-yards, and 400 inhabitants. Crugers' (p. o.) is a landing and r. r. station, 1 mi. s. of Peekskill. Amsville, a small village on Peekskill Creek, contains a church and wire mill.⁵ Oregon, on the line of Putnam co., contains a rolling mill and a wire mill. Mount Airy, r. of Croton, is a hamlet. Croton Point⁷ is a peninsula in the s. part of the town, devoted chiefly to vineyards. Montroses Point is a peninsula s. of Verplancks and separated from it by McLaugh Creek. The first settlement was made at Peekskill, in 1764, by Daniel Birdsall, Nathaniel Bowers, Joseph Travis, and Capt. Isaac Conklin.⁸ There are 18 churches in town.⁹

EAST CHESTER¹⁰—was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, lying in the s. part of the co. Its surface is broken by ridges extending s. and s. e. and separated by narrow valleys. Bronx River,¹¹ forming the s. boundary, and Hutchinsons or East Chester Creek,¹² forming a portion of the e. boundary, are the principal streams. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam, with some alluvium along the river intervals. Marble is extensively quarried along the w. border.¹³ The Harlem R. R. extends along the valley of the Bronx, and the N. Y. & N. H. R. R. crosses the s. part of the town at nearly right angles to the hills, requiring heavy cuttings and embankments. A portion of the territory of the town is public land, under the management of 3 trustees. East Chester, (p. v.) at the head of sloop navigation on Hutchinsons Creek, contains 2 churches and 551 inhabitants. Mount Vernon, (p. v.) a station at the junction of the Harlem and N. H. R. R. s, was incorp. Dec. 13, 1833. It contains 4 churches, several private schools, and 1,161 inhabitants. West Mount Vernon contains 630 inhabitants; East Mount Vernon 275 inhabitants; and Waverly and Washingtonville are suburban villages, inhabited principally by mechanics and men doing business in New York. Bronxville, (p. v.) on the line of Yonkers, is a r. r. station, and contains a manufactory of carriage axles. Tuckahoe (p. v.) is a r. r. station, near the marble quarries. Burpos Corners is a small settlement on the s. border. Fleetward and Jacksonville are places projected ment to 1,350 men, and turns out 800,000 to 1,000,000 of bricks annually. The pressed brick made here are known in market as "Croton front" and sell at from 58 to 82 per M. There is a small brick-making manufactory at Peekskill, using clay from N. J.

² Among the manufactories are iron foundries, chiefly engaged in the manufacture of stoves and plows, and giving employment to 200 men; 2 machine shops, 2 tobacco factories, a pistol and gun factory, tannery, and gin distillery.

³ Named from the family of Verplancks, former owners. This point lies opposite Stony Point, and upon it Fort La Fayette was erected during the Revolution. Kings Ferry, a part of an important military route, was between the two points. The fort was captured by the enemy, under Sir Henry Clinton in person, June 1, 1779, but was abandoned Oct. 21 of that year. Col. Livingston held command of this place in 1780 at the time of Arnold's treason; and the headquarters of Gen. Washington were located here for some time. This locality was called by the Indians "Me-nigant," and was sold to Stephen Van Cortlandt in 1683, with the lands he called "Appomacough." A small creek is called "Tanomocous." The purchase was confirmed by patent, with a grant of 2 bushels of wheat. About 1734 it was held by John Bent, at an annual rent of one pepper-corn.—Batson's Hist. l. 94. The population mentioned in the text is much less in winter.

⁷ By the Indians called Samsqua Neck and Long Known as "Tellers Point," from Wm. Teller and Sarah his wife, first owners. The ship Vulture, in honor of which this point Sept. 21, 1789, with Andre's mission.

⁸ The first settlement was laid by Daniel Birdsall in the vicinity of the Mill Brook. Capt. Swain's and P. Harvey's first boat-land sloop from Plymouth, Mass. in 1756.—Beck's Hist. l. 102. Many stirring events of the Revolution occurred in the vicinity, and the country suffered much from the enemy's incursions. In March, 1777, Col. Bird landed with 20 men, and the few American state and foreign soldiers stationed here. On Oct. 4, 16, Sept. 1777, the whole village was sacked and burned. Deborah Palmer, a boy's spy, was found on hollow-hill, 2 mi. N. of the village; and Daniel Strong, another spy, in the enemy's camp, was executed on a tree near the present academy building, one of the captives of Andre, was a native of this village, and received from the State a grant in this town. His remains repose in the Episcopal graveyard 2 mi. S. of the village, where a neat monument is erected at the expense of the corporation of New York, in 1827, and the work was completed with imposing ceremonies Nov. 22 of that year. Gen. Peter Van Cortlandt's family resided 2 mi. S. of Peekskill, and at this place Gen. McDougall posted his soldiers in 1777, when the enemy took possession of Peckskill on May 16, 1777. Fort of the Van Cortlandt mansion stands on Peckskill Church, a well-improved building erected in 1767. The name of the place is St. Peter's, and St. Philip's were sold with by Col. Peter Van Cortlandt, and the title was exchanged Mar. 27, 1793. The property has been sold by order of the court of Chancery, and the title is equally divided between the two owners.

by building associations. This town appears to have been a favorite residence of the natives; and when first settled by the whites it contained traces of former occupation. The Indian title was acquired in 1651 and confirmed in 1654, 1666, and 1700. Thos. Pell, the purchaser, granted it to James Eustis and Philip Pinkney, of Fairfield, Conn., and their associates. In 1665, 26 persons signed a covenant for the security of their mutual rights.¹ The settlers were incorp. by patent, March 9, 1666,² and for many years were engaged in a controversy with Westchester concerning the bounds of their grant. A house was fortified in Oct. 1675, as a place of refuge from Indians. The first schoolhouse was agreed upon in 1683; and the site has ever since been occupied for this purpose. A townhouse was voted in 1685. East Chester was celebrated for the interest it took in behalf of Leisler.³ The Cong. church of this town was formed in 1665; and a place of worship was built about 1700.⁴ The town suffered greatly in the Revolution, from its being the middle ground between the opposing armies. A farm of 252½ acres was granted in this town to David Williams, one of the captors of André, June 16, 1783. He afterward removed to Schoharie co., where he died.

GREENBURGH⁵—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is much broken by hills parallel to the Hudson, and separated by narrow valleys, through which flow several streams, the principal of which is Neperhan or Sawmill Creek. Hudson River forms the w. boundary, and Bronx River the e. The soil is clay and sandy loam. Several marble quarries are worked near the Hudson. Hastings, (Hastings upon Hudson p. o.) near the s. w. corner, a station on the H. R. R. R. and a steamboat landing, contains 2 churches, steam marble works, linckilms, and a limited number of manufactories. Pop. 1,135. Dobbs Ferry,⁶ (p. v.,) a station on the H. R. R. R. and a landing on the river, contains 3 churches and 1,040 inhabitants. Irvington,⁷ (p. v.,) a station on the H. R. R. R. and a landing on the river, contains 2 churches and 599 inhabitants. Tarrytown,⁸ (p. v.,) on the n. border, a steamboat landing and a station on the H. R. R. R., contains 6 churches, the Irving Institute, the Tarrytown Institute, and about 3,000 inhabitants. Harts Corners, (Moringville p. o.,) a station on the Harlem R. R., is a hamlet; Middletown is a settlement below Tarrytown; Halls Corners,⁹ a neighborhood in the n. part; Ashford, a settlement 3 mi. below; Abbotsville, a locality near Dobbs Ferry; and Greenville, a neighborhood in the s. part. The first Indian purchase was made in 1649. In 1662 Connecticut bought all the Indian lands w. to the North River, and in 1681-82-84 Frederick Philipse bought the lands now included in this and other towns which, by Patent of 1693, were formed into the Philipsburgh Manor. In 1779 they were forfeited by the attainder of Col. F. Philipse and sold for small sums to the former tenants,¹⁰ under a pre-emption clause in the general act of May 12, 1784, for the sale of confiscated estates. The census reports 6 churches in town.¹¹

HARRISON¹²—was formed March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, near the e. border, s. of the center of the co., its n. e. corner touching the line of Conn. Its surface is generally level. Blind

⁶ In the Dutch "Greenburgh," literally "Grain town?" In some early deeds it is called "Lawrence's Plantation;" and by the Indians, Wickquascock, Wickquosqueck, Wicquoshook,—in pure Algonquin, Wele-quos-queck, the place of the bark kettle.—Bolton's Hist. W. Westchester Co., I, p. 163. This town was inhabited by a powerful tribe of Indians known as the Wickquosquecks, called by the English Wickers Crocks; and until the middle of the last century the natives were numerous. A cold blooded murder of an Indian was avenged 20 years afterward by his nephew, in Sept. 1691. The Dutch attempted to retaliate, but without success. In Feb. 1641, the Mohawks made a descent upon these Indians, who fled to the Dutch for protection. The soldiers of the fort by night crossed to New Jersey, where the Indians had assembled, and wantonly butchered nearly 100; and 30 were murdered at Corlears Hook. This had a ruinous effect on 11 tribes to vindictive war, in which the Dutch settlements around Fort Amsterdam were laid waste. A peace was agreed upon April 23, 1643, but was not fully established for many years.

⁷ Named from Washington Irving, whose quaint Dutch homestead, "Sunny Side," is a short distance above. The village was formerly called "Deurmans," or "Deurmans Landing."

⁸ From "Tarry," wheat; and, by the natives, Aliponcek, or Place of Elms. By an act of May 1, 1786, a tract of 2 acres for a burial place, 100 acres for a glebe to the Ref. Prot. D. church, and 17 acres to the Prot. E. church, were confirmed. The village is pleasantly situated opposite the widest part of the Tappan Zee. The site of André's capture, marked by a handsome monument, dedicated Oct. 7, 1853, is about three-fourths of a mi. s. e. from the station.

⁹ Near the Presb. church is the monument to Isaac Van Wart, one of the capturers of Major André,—erected by the citizens of the co., June, 1829.

¹⁰ Among these were families named Van Tassel, Van Wart, Odell, Lawrence, Post, Archer, Hart, Acker, Byckman, and Regua.

Brook¹ forms a part of the e. boundary, and Mamaroneck Creek a part of the w. Rye Pond² lies on the s. border, and St. Mary's Pond on the w. The soil is a fertile, gravelly loam. Peter's House, (Harrison p. o.) in the s. part, is a hamlet, containing 2 Friends' meeting houses. The first settlement commenced at an early period. The census reports 2 Friends' meeting houses³ in town.

LEWISBORO⁴—was formed March 7, 1788, as "Salem." Its name was changed to "South Salem" April 6, 1806, and to its present name Feb. 13, 1840. A part of North Salem was annexed April 26, 1841. It lies on the e. border, near the s. e. corner, and forms the eastern angle of the co. Its surface is much broken and in places mountainous. Croton River forms its w. boundary. Cross River flows through a small portion of the central southern part. Waccaback Lake⁵ and North and South Ponds are in the s. part, and Cross Pond is on the line of Poundridge. The soil is a clayey and sandy loam. South Salem, (p. v.) in the e. part, is a scattered village, containing a church and 15 houses. Cross River, (p. v.) in the s. corner, contains 2 churches, several manufactories, and 20 houses. Goldens Bridge (p. o.) is a station on the Harlem R. R. Vista, (p. o.) in the s. e. corner, is a small settlement. Lewisboro (p. o.) is in the s. part. Settlement was commenced under the authority of Connecticut, at an early period. This region was the scene of several Revolutionary incidents.⁶ There are 7 churches in town.⁷

MAMARONECK⁸—was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies upon L. I. Sound, in the s. e. part of the co. Its surface is broken by low ridges of gneiss, generally extending s. and s. w. Mamaroneck Creek, forming the e. boundary, and its tributary, Sheldrake Creek, are the principal streams. The coast is deeply indented by several bays, which divide it into numerous peninsulas and headlands. Mamaroneck, (p. v.) near the head of Mamaroneck Bay, is partly in Rye. It contains 2 churches, (Prot. E. and M. E.) and several manufactories not at present in operation. Oriente,⁹ Washingtonville, Chatsworth,¹⁰ and Hickory Grove are village plats and prospective villages. Kelloggsville, on the line of New Rochelle, has an extensive tide mill. The Indian title was obtained in 1610 and in 1662. John Richbell received a ground brief from the Dutch, and letters patent from Gov. Lovelace, Oct. 16, 1668, to three necks of land, at a quitrent of 8 bushels of winter wheat. In 1700 Calob Hoatheste acquired title to most of the eastern neck, with other lands, which was confirmed March 21, 1791. A portion descended in marriage to James De Lancey, afterward Governor of the colony, and ancestor of the present Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Western New York. Settlement began about 1660; and the village of Mamaroneck is one of the most ancient in the co. The town records date back to 1697: they were suspended from April, 1776, to April, 1785. During this period numerous events of historical interest occurred in this town. The day before the battle of White Plains, Col. Smallwood surprised and cut off a large body of the enemy under Major Rogers, stationed upon Nelson Hill. Col. White, of the Continental army, was overtaken near this place by Lieut. Hickford, and some thirty stragglers, who had taken refuge upon the ice, were killed.

MORRISANIA¹¹—was formed from West Farms, Dec. 7, 1855. It is the s. w. corner town of the co., lying upon Harlem River, contiguous to New York. Its surface is broken by several low ridges which extend s. and s. w. Most of its surface is occupied by village plats laid out since the extension of railways, and is inhabited by persons doing business in New York. Morrisania, (p. v.) a R. R. station, in the s. e. corner, contains the St. Joseph's Ursuline Convent, an academy and free school, and 2,587 inhabitants. Moff Haven, (p. v.)¹² opposite Harlem, contains 2 neck" or "Mor-neck," in common speech. It has been variously written Mamaroneck, Mamarroneck, Merneek, and Monaroneck. It has been by some supposed to signify "the place of the 12 living stones."—Berkon's Westchester, p. 452. There was an Indian chief of this name, who resided upon the Croton.

⁹ Formerly called "Mary's neck Point," "Great Neck," and "De Lancey's Neck." The eastern part of this neck is called Semmas Point, from Giles Semmas, former owner. The natives called it Wamudineck. The modern name "Lehigh" has been applied to this place. The western part is called "King Beach Point."

¹⁰ Near this place is a rocking stone, estimated to weigh 150 tons, which in 1856 was removed by the hand.

¹¹ A town of this name was formed March 7, 1788, and annexed to Westchester Feb. 22, 1791. It was named in honor of Governor Morris, whose estate was situated in the town.

¹² Named from John E. Moff, principal founder of the works. Steel works have been erected near the railroad here. By act of March 11, 1791, it was Morris was allowed to build a trestle bridge at this place across Harlem River. He received $15,000 to John B. Cotes, who was allowed, March 24, 1790, to build a dam in Harlem river, with tolls and liability for damages, churches, an extensive iron foundry, and 843 inhabitants. Port Morris,¹ upon the Sound, has a harbor of 60 ft. depth; and it is proposed to land vessels here that draw too much water to enter New York Harbor. A branch of the Harlem R. R. 2½ mi. long connects this place with Melrose. Wilton, Old Morrisania, East Morrisania, West Morrisania, South Melrose, East Melrose, Eltona, Woodstock, Claremont, and High Bridgeville, are suburban village plats. A tract known as Broncks Land,² granted by Gov. Nicoll to Jonas Broncks, was sold to Richard Morris about 1670; and May 8, 1697, Lewis Morris obtained a patent for the township or Manor of Morrisania, with a quitrent of 6 shillings. Prior to the Revolution it formed one of the precincts of Westchester parish. Early in the war a division of the American army was stationed here; but after the disasters of Long Island it retired northward, and British troops were posted there, but not without annoyance from partisan corps. The dwellings at Morrisania were burned the same day as was the courthouse at White Plains.

MOUNT PLEASANT—was formed March 7, 1788. Ossining was taken off in 1845. It lies upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the co. Its surface is broken by high ridges, the principal of which are Buttermilk and Chappequa Hills. Bronx River forms the e. boundary; and Neperhan and Pocantico Rivers flow obliquely across the town. The soil is a clayey and sandy loam, well adapted to cultivation. There are several marble quarries in town. Pleasantville,³ (p. v.), near the n. line, contains 2 churches and 358 inhabitants. Unionville, (Neperhan p. o.) a station upon the Harlem R. R., contains 97 inhabitants. Tarrytown, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, in the s. w. corner, is mostly in Greenburgh. Beekmantown, on Pocantico River, is a suburb of Tarrytown. Sleepy Hollow, Upper Cross Roads, and Lower Cross Roads are hamlets. This town was included in the Manor of Philipsburgh, granted to Frederick Philipse; and by his will, dated Dec. 9, 1702, he granted to his son Adolph the portion of the manor n. of Dobbs Ferry, including this town. The title descended to his son Frederick, and was forfeited by the attainer of a son of the latter of the same name in 1779. One of the principal grantees under the State was Gerard G. Beekman. Many Revolutionary associations are connected with this town; and several encounters took place within its limits. The census reports 6 churches in town.⁵

NEW CASTLE⁶—was formed from North Castle, March 18, 1791. A part of Somers was annexed May 12, 1846. It is an interior town, lying n. of the center of the co. Its surface is much broken by hills having a general course a little e. of n., the principal of which are Mount Prospect and the Chappaqua Hills, terminating in Mount Kisko. The Neperhan, Bronx, and Pocantico Rivers rise in this town. Upon the borders are Chappaqua, Wampas,⁷ and Kirby Ponds, and Croton Lake. Chappaqua Sulphur Springs, 4 mi. n. e. from Sing Sing, have acquired a local notoriety. The soil is a gravelly clay and sandy loam. Mount Kisko (p. o.) is a small village and r. r. station, on the line of Bedford. New Castle (p. o.) is a small scattered village, upon Kirby Pond, near the line of Bedford. Chappaqua⁸ (p. o.) is a r. r. station, near the s. line. Sarlesville is a hamlet, near the center of the town; and here the town business is generally transacted. This town was included within Richbell's purchase of 1660, and, with other lands, was sold to Caleb Heathcote, and was patented to him and 10 associates⁹ Feb. 14, 1701. It was afterward known as the "West Patent of Northeastle," or simply "West Patent." Settlement began about 1720, or a little earlier. At the time of the Revolution it formed one of the precincts of Rye parish. It was greatly annoyed by sudden incursions of plundering parties; and St. George's church was for a long time occupied as a guardhouse and hospital by the Continental troops. The census reports 5 churches in town.¹⁰

NEW ROCHELLE—was recognized as a town March 7, 1788. It lies upon the Sound, in the s. part of the co., and extends northward in a long, narrow strip. The surface is moderately

The bridge at Harlem leading to Mott Haven is now free, the charter of its former owners having expired in 1858. The bridge formerly known as Macomb's Bridge is removed, and is about being rebuilt.

OSSENSING⁵—was formed from Mount Pleasant, May 2, 1845. It lies upon the Hudson, n. of the center of the co. Its surface is mostly a hilly upland, the ridges extending parallel to the river. Prospect Hill is a commanding eminence on the s. line of the town. Pocantico River forms its e. boundary. Marble is extensively quarried, and traces of several metals have been found.⁶ The soil is a productive, gravelly and clayey loam. Sing Sing, (p. v.) upon the Hudson, near the center of the w. border of the town, was incorp. April 2, 1813. It is beautifully situated upon ground gradually rising from the river to the height of 180 ft., and at most points affording fine views of Tappan Bay and the opposite shore of the Hudson. It contains 4 churches, the Mount Pleasant Academy, a female seminary, and several other popular female schools. Pop. 1,440. This village is chiefly noted for being the seat of one of the N. Y. State prisons. The prison was erected at this place in 1825, with a view of employing the convict labor upon the marble quarries. It receives convicts from certain southern and eastern counties, as specified by statute.⁷ Prospect Hill⁸ is a scattered settlement along the s. border. Spring Valley, e. of Sing Sing, and Sparta, s. of Sing Sing, are hamlets. This town was included in the Manor of Philipsburgh, and was settled by the Dutch previous to the commencement of the last century. ⁶ Small specimens of galena, with several ores of copper, have been obtained. Sulphuret of zinc and oxyd of manganese are occasionally found in the lime rock.

⁷ This prison was erected by the convicts themselves, 100 of whom were sent from Auburn Prison for that purpose under the charge of Capt. Elam Lynds, who had chiefly directed the building of the Auburn Prison. The novel spectacle was exhibited on the 14th of May, 1825, of the arrival of this band on the open ground which was to be the theater of operations, without a place to receive or even a wall to inclose them. * * * The first day sufficed to erect a temporary barrack for shelter at night; and ever after they continued in unimpeding labor, watched by a small number of guards, but held under perpetual government of their accustomed discipline and submission to the towers whose vigilant eye and unrelaxing hand they felt to be perpetually upon them and around them.—Introduction to N. Y. Hist., N. P., p. 186.

The Hudson River R. R. crosses the prison grounds under two large arches with an intervening walled space. The male prison is 484 by 14 ft. and 5 stories high, and has 1,000 cells. The w. yard is inclosed by 2 buildings 40 ft. wide, 2 stories high, extending from the main prison to the river, and occupied by kitchens, hospital, chapel, and shops. The yard thus formed is 592 by 412 ft., and has a range of shops 40 ft. wide, parallel to the main prison. There are also workshops on the E. The female prison, upon the same premises, but under separate management, is built of rough marble taken from the State quarries. It stands on an elevated site, E. of the R. R., with a colonnade of the Ionic order across the end fronting the river. It was built in 1835-40, and receives female convicts sent need to State prison from every co. in the State; it contains 80 cells. By an act of April 18, 1859, the Inspectors of State Prisons were directed to sell such of the premises at this place as are not required for prison purposes, at a price not less than $250 per acre, and to appropriate the moneys thus received to building and repairing such works at the prison as they may deem proper.

⁸ Formerly known as "Long Hill."
⁹ Families named Ward, Orser, Crank, Bazetic, Acker, Purdy, Merritt, McCord, Bishop, Balyeas, Storm, Jones, Millet, and Ryder, purchased under the Commissioners of Forfeiture.
¹⁰ There are 6 churches in town: 3 Prot. E., Bap., M. E., and Presb.

¹¹ Named from Thos. Pell, of Fairfield, Conn. A purchase was made of the Indians by Mr. Pell, Nov. 14, 1754; and most of this was confirmed to him by Gov. Nicoll, Oct. 6, 1666. The quitrent reserved in this grant was a lamb annually. Pelham Manor originally embraced 9,100 acres, and was confirmed by Gov. Dongan, Oct. 25, 1687, to John Pell, nephew of the first purchaser. This town is mostly owned by a few wealthy proprietors, and, except Scarsdale, is the least populous in the co. Several acres of berries are cultivated for the city market. Pelham Bridge connects the town with East Chester.

¹⁴ Formerly "Ann's Neck," from an Indian owner; and afterward "Robinsons Neck." It was a favorite place for Indian sepulture; and traces of graves are still seen. A ferry was established to Hempstead Harbor and to Matagansons Bay in 1755, by Samuel Robson.

There is 1 church (Prot. E.) in town.

POUNDRIDGE³—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies in the e. part of the co., its s. line bordering on Stamford and New Canaan, Conn. Its surface is hilly and much broken. The Stony Hills occupy the s. part and extend 3 or 4 mi. in a s. e. direction, with steep, craggy sides and rocky summits. Cross River flows through the extreme s. corner, Stamford Mill River flows s. through the e. part, and Mahaness River forms a part of the s. w. boundary. Cross Pond is on the e. line. The soil is a gravelly loam. Poundridge, (p. o.) near the center, is a small settlement with 2 churches. Barrefontevon is a hamlet, in the s. corner. The first settlement commenced near the center of the town, in 1744, by Capt. Joseph Lockwood and associates, from Stamford, Conn. There are 3 churches in town; M. E., Prot. Meth., and Presb.

RYE⁴—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies on the e. border of the s. part of the co. It is a narrow, irregular strip, bordering on the Sound and Greenwich, Conn. Its surface is broken and rocky. Byram River⁵ forms a small part of the e. boundary, and Blind Brook a part of the w. The soil is chiefly clay. There are quarries of hard, blue granite in town. Along the coast are several small islands.⁶ The mirage is frequently seen upon the coast, bringing to view the shore of Long Island with great distinctness. Rye, (p. v.) a station on the N. Y. & N. H. R. R., contains 3 churches, a private seminary, and 300 inhabitants. Milton, in the s. part, is a hamlet, with 1 church. Ryepoint is a steamboat landing, with a daily line in summer to New York. Ryebeach is a place of resort during the hot season. Port Chester, (p. v.) a station on the N. Y. & N. H. R. R., contains 5 churches, several private seminaries, extensive manufactories,⁷ and 1,695 inhabitants. It is connected with the Conn. shore by a toll bridge. Kingstreet is a fine agricultural district, extending nearly 7 miles s. of Port Chester. Greenville is a hamlet, on Byram River. The first settlement was commenced on Manners Island,⁸ The census reports 9 churches in town.⁹

SCARSDALE¹⁰—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies in the interior of the s. part of the co. Its surface is broken by ridges and hills. Bronx River forms the w. boundary, and the e. angle borders on the Mamaroneck. Hutchinson and Sheldrake Creeks rise in this town. The soil is a clayey and sandy loam. It has no villages, and is the least populous town in the co. Scarsdale, (p. o.) in the w. part, contains a church and a few houses. Scarsdale Station, on the Harlem R. R., is on the w. border of the town. In the s. corner of the town is a Friends meeting house, on a site used for that purpose long before the Revolution. Gov. Tompkins was a native of this town; and Chief Justice Morris and Maj. Wm. Popham—for many years clerk of the Court of Exchequer—resided here. The census reports 2 churches in town; Prot. E. and Friends.

SOMERS¹¹—was formed March 7, 1788, as "Stephentown." Its name was changed April 6,

² This settlement was soon after broken up by the Indians, who killed 18 persons, including the founder.

³ Named from the ancient Indian pond, or deer trap, which formerly stood at the foot of a high ridge s. of the present village—Baldwin's Westchester, II, p. 1. This town was contained in Turner's Purchase of 1691, and one-fourth part of Stamford, Conn. The Patent of Stamford, granted May 25, 1684, included a portion of this town. In the settlement of 1642, in 1734, four miles were taken from Conn. A grant was made March 2, 1701, to Robert Walters, John Chidwell, Hugh Atwood, Cornelius De Puyser, Richard Sibley, Barné Cousins, Lancaster Simes, Matthew Clarkson, Robert Larting, Peter Matthews, and Caleb Heathcote. This grant was subsequently known as the "East Patent." It was sold Aug. 7, 1766, under an act for the more effectual collecting of his Majesty's quitrents." Families named Lockwood, Amidor, Forster, Brink, Ferris, Hoyt, Holby, Brown, Sillcock, and Seoheld were purchasers under this sale. Until 1775 the town formed one of the precincts of Rye. In 1821, 900 acres were sold to satisfy the state claim to quitrents in the East Patent.

⁵ Called by the Indians "Armonk." The meadows bordering it were called "Bassos" and "Moosehessay."

⁶ Manners, called by the Indians "Munnwios," or Pine, Henhawk, Great, Middle, and Little Captains Islands.

⁷ These consist of a foundry, shovel factory, tube and small, and a cast and shoe factory.

⁸ This land was bought by the Dutch W. J. Cappyn, who sold it June 29, 1691, to John Cox, Peter Bush, and others, styled. The proprietors proposed to name the place "Rye," and issued a declaration of their title to the king, to which was annexed a description of their proposed town, containing the country between Byram River and Blind Brook. On the final annexation to New York it was named after the first town, with the privilege of holding a fair of four days, beginning on the 24 day of October. Courts of record and assizes were also held here. The purchase of the tract, and purchase of the region, in 1640 and numerous conveyances, were afterwards made. By the agreement of 1691, this town was a part of Connecticut. In 1683 it was assigned to New York. In 1691 it was again claimed by Conn.; and the present line was fully settled May 14, 1720. The charter of Five was granted Aug. 12, 1720.

¹⁰ Named from Scarsdale, in England, where the Heathcote family came. In colonial times this town bore part of the name of Scarsdale.

¹¹ Named from Capt. Richard Somers, the intrep. friend of the hero of the Tippecanoe War—See "Sketches," was named from Stephen Van Cortlandt. Prior to 1788 it was a part of the Township of Hanover, within Connecticut, and under the name of the natives it formed part of the territory of Amnawick, or Amnawick—Baldwin's Westchester, II, p. 161.

1808. A part was annexed to New Castle in 1846. It lies on the n. border of the co., near the center. Its surface is broken by ridges in the s.; in other parts it spreads out into level plains. Croton River forms the s. e. boundary. Miscoot River¹ and Plum Brook flow s. through the town into Croton River. Croton Lake, the fountain head of the Croton Water Works, lies in the n. w. corner, extending into Yorktown. The soil is a sandy and gravelly loam. Somers. (p. v.) in the n. e. part, contains 2 churches, a bank, and 20 houses.² Croton Falls. (p. v.) in the n. e. corner, on the line of North Salem, is a small village and station on the Harlem R. R. It has a good water-power. West Somers (p. o.) is a hamlet. This town, in the allotment of the manor in 1734, fell to the share of Mrs. Margaret Bayard, Philip and Stephen Van Cortlandt, Andrew Johnston, — Miller, Stephen De Lancey, and Mrs. Susannah Warren. The census reports 5 churches in town.³

WESTCHESTER⁴—was organized as a town, Nov. 7, 1788. West Farms was taken off in 1846. It lies on the Sound, in the extreme s. part of the co. It is bounded on the w. by Bronx River, and on the s. and e. by the Sound. Its surface is generally low and flat along the coast and rolling farther inland. Several bays and estuaries extend far inland and divide the land into several peninsulas and necks. The principal of the latter are Classons Point,⁵ between Bronx and Westchester Rivers; Zeregor's Point, next e.; and Throggs Neck,⁶ a long and narrow promontory extending s. e. into the Sound. About 2,500 acres along Westchester River is a salt meadow, a portion of which is held as public property and managed by 3 trustees. The soil is a good quality of sandy and gravelly loam. The people are principally engaged in gardening and fruit growing. Westchester. (p. v.) at the head of navigation on Westchester Creek, is a scattered village of about 1,000 inhabitants. Bronxdale. on the line of West Farms, has an extensive tape factory, a dye and bleach works, and about 400 inhabitants. Schuylerville. upon Throggs Neck, is a scattered village of 300 inhabitants. Connersville, Wakefield, Centerville, and Unionport are modern village plats. Fort Schuyler, upon the extremity of Throggs Neck, was begun in 1833; and in 1851 $848,013 had been expended upon it. The estimated cost of the construction and repairs was then $873,013.⁷ The first settlement on Throggs Neck was made in 1642, by John Throckmorton and 35 associates, from New England, with the consent of the Dutch. The Indian title to the land was extinguished in 1643, by the Dutch, and a land brief was granted in that year, and another in 1652. The English began a settlement at Westchester⁸ in 1642; but the Dutch, considering them intruders, arrested several of them, and in 1656 they surrendered themselves to the Dutch Government. The settlement was claimed by Conn. in 1663; but the next year it came under the government of the Duke of York. A patent was granted by Gov. Nicoll, Feb. 13, 1667, and by Gov. Dongan, Jan. 6, 1686. A market was established at Westchester, May 11, 1693, to be held weekly; and the same year an annual fair was established, to meet alternately at this place and Rye. It was made a borough town April 16, 1696, with mayor, aldermen, and common council, "according to the form of the best governed towns and corporations of the realm of England," and the right of holding a mayor's court, and a representation by one delegate in General Assembly. The De Lancey family, prominent officials under the Colonial Government, and loyalists of the Revolution, resided in this town. The first church (Cong.) was formed soon after the arrival of the first settlers.⁹

WEST FARMS—was formed from Westchester, May 13, 1846. Morrisania was taken off in 1855. It lies upon the Sound and along Harlem River, in the s. part of the co. The surface is rolling, the ridges extending n. and s. Bronx River forms its e. boundary, and Sawmill Brook flows through the center. Its soil is a gravelly and sandy loam, rendered very productive by scientific farming. West Farms. (p. v.) a large village at the head of navigation on Bronx River, ¹ This river is said to discharge 3,028,800 gallons of water per day.

² Nathaniel Bailey, of Somers, about 1815 imported the first elephant brought into the United States. "Old Bet" with other animals soon after imported was formed the first traveling menagerie in the country, with which Van Amburgh, the Lion Tamer, was afterward associated. Thaddeus and Gerard Crane, Lewis Titus, and John June, familiar to the public as enterprising showmen, were from this town and North Salem.

⁴ The Dutch called this region "Freelandt," or the land of peace, and the village "Doest D'op," or East Village.

⁵ Formerly "Cornhills Neck," and granted to Thos. Cornhill, or Cornell, in 1640.

⁷ It was built to accommodate 1,250 men and to mount 318 cannon. With the projected work upon Wilkins Point, in Flushing, Queens co., these fortresses would eternally protect New York against the approach of a hostile fleet from the Sound. The fort is built of granite from Greenwich, Conn.

⁸ The settlers at "Freelandt" at this time were Lieut. Thos. Wheeler, Thos. C. Newman, Robert Bussert, John Cies, Sherwood Davies, Wm. B. Fenfull, Richard C. Menros, Samuel Hayelt, Isaac Holbert, Robert Ross, Jas. Bill, John S. Genner, Richard Osbert, and Wm. Ward. The Dutch released Capt. R. Ponton, Wm. Elet Black, John Gray, and Roger Wheeler, who had been arrested for taking up arms at "Freelandt."—Edison's History of N. Y., p. 160. In 1662 they were allowed to nominate their own magistrates and hold their own courts; "but in dark and dubious matters—especially in witchcraft—the party aggrieved might appeal to the Governor and Council."

⁹ There are 7 churches in town; 2 Friends, Cong., Prot. E., M. E., Presb., and M. Meth.

3 mi. from the Sound, contains 4 churches, a carpet factory, a milling mill, and 1 gristmill. Fordham, (p. v.) on the R. R., in the N. part of the town, contains 4 churches and is the seat of St. John's College.¹ Tremont,² Central Morrisania,³ and Williams Bridge (p. v.) are modern village plats. The last named is a station upon the Harlem R. R. Claremont is a village plat on the line of Morrisania. The eastern part of the present town, originally known as "The West Farms," was patented April 25, 1666, to Edward Jessup and John Richardson, Indian purchasers.⁴ Fordham was bought by the Dutch in 1639, and in 1646 it was owned by Adrien Van der Donck. In 1671 John Archer, owner of 1,253 acres, obtained a patent under the title of the "Manor of Fordham." It passed to Cornelius Steenwyck, and was conveyed by his widow in 1694 to the Dutch church in New York, in whose possession it remained 60 years.⁵ The High Bridge of the Croton Aqueduct connects the s. w. corner of this town with N. Y. City and Macomb's Bridge, in the s. w. corner. Fort No. 8 was built upon the eminence s. w. of the Archer homestead in the Revolution; and its guns assisted in the capture of Fort Washington in 1776. It was demolished by the enemy Oct. 20, 1782. Fort Independence, on Tetard's Hill, was dismantled in 1833. Prince Charles Redoubt and the Negro Fort of the Revolution were on the s. side of Valentines Hill. There are 8 churches in town.⁶

WHITE PLAINS—was formed March 7, 1788. It is an interior town, lying s. of the center of the co. The surface is rolling and hilly. Mamaroneck River forms its E. boundary, and Bronx River its w. St. Marys Lake lies along its E. border. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. White Plains⁷ (p. v.) is situated near the w. line of the town. It contains the old and new co. buildings, 3 churches, and several private seminaries. It is a station upon the Harlem R. R., and contains about 1,000 inhabitants. This town was purchased Nov. 22, 1683, by the inhabitants of Rye, and was settled soon after. In 1720 it was divided among 41 proprietors;⁸ and a charter was granted March 13, 1721, with a quitrent of 2 shillings 6 pence to every 100 acres. It embraced 4,435 acres. Many important historical events occurred in this town during the Revolution. The village was wantonly burned Nov. 5, 1776, by a New England major. The battle of White Plains was fought on Chatterton Hill, in Greenburgh, opposite, and within view of the village. There are 6 churches in town.⁹

YONKERS¹⁰—was formed as a town March 7, 1788. It is the most southerly town in the co. upon the Hudson. The surface is rugged and broken by several ridges extending N. and S. Valentines Hill,¹¹ the highest point, is 400 ft. above tide. Tuckahoe Hill, in the E. part, and Huits Deer Ridge, extending into Greenburgh, are prominent points. The principal streams are Bronx River, forming the E. boundary, Spuyten Duyvil Creek, forming the S. boundary, Neperhan River, flowing through the center, and Sprain River and Tibbetts Brook.¹² The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. The people are largely engaged in manufactures.¹³ The heights along the river are studded with elegant country residences. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in busi-

¹This college, situated on Rose Hill, immediately N. of the Harlem R. R., is under the control of the R. C. denomination. It was incorporated April 04, 1846, having been opened for students June 24, 1841. It is under the direct charge of Jesuits, who, being associated for religious motives, receive no salary beyond personal support. Six other positions are employed as special instructors upon pay. In 1858 it reported to the Regents 59 undergraduates, besides which it has about 100 other pupils. Upon the premises is a large and handsome Gothic church, and St. Joseph's Theological Seminary. The main building of stone, 2 stories high, with an attic, contains the parlor, chapel and professors' apartments, and is adorned with valuable paintings. Two front wings, of brick, one forty and the other thirty rooms. Two front wings, of brick, one forty and the other thirty rooms. The refectory, kitchen, study hall for the first division, and general assembly room. A large brick building contains the study hall for the second division, sleeping, play, and wash rooms. At the end of the front wings is a 3-story brick building, for reading hall, music, drawing, and classrooms, and dormitories. A 3-story brick building, 100 by 20 feet, contains the library, museum, wardrobe, and walking hall for the senior division. The farm and property are valued at $147,000. Its library number 12,000 volumes, and it has a valuable cabinet of minerals.

²Formerly "Upper Morrisania," "South Fordham," "Admission," and "Mount Hope"—all of which are now embraced in one village under the general name of Tremont.

³A town hall was authorized to be erected April 15, 1854, and was located on E. of Fordham Avenue, in Central Morrisania. It was built at a cost of about $15,000. By the subsequent erection of Morrisania it is brought near the S. border of this town.

⁴This patent was bounded N. by Bronx River, and W. by a little brook called by the natives "Schwanbung" including a neck of land called Quinabung. The S. part of the town, or "Planting Neck," was called by the Indians Quinabung. The W. side of this neck was called the "Debatable Ground," because it was in dispute between the patentees of West Farms and Morrisania from 1666 to 1740.

⁵An act of General Assembly, Dec. 12, 1777, allowed the Dutch church to sell the Manor of Fordham, which was sold for £100,000, and the money received is now vested in the city. Three hundred acres were excepted from this sale by Mrs. Steenwyck.

⁹Prominent Yankers. It is a Dutch colony, having been founded by a country gentleman, who first resided in this place, and was first settled by Adrien Van der Donck, the patentee and first proprietor. This town of 1 Mile Square formed a township in the great Manor of Philipse, which until the Revolution. The Indians called the place "Kock's stock."

¹⁰Named in honor of the family who owned the place, the property for about 150 years.

¹¹Spuyten River was called by the natives Attenepoulet, and Tibbetts Brook, Mee-hou.

¹²There are about 200 manufactories in town, employing when in full operation 1,200 to 1,500 persons. Two of the largest employ about 200 operatives. The foundry of Spuyten Duyvil employs about 150 hands, and a paper factory on the Hudson a still larger number. The Neperhan, a stream that enters the Hudson in the lower part of Yankers Village, affords a considerable amount of water power.

Near this place are several marble quarries. Kingsbridge (p. o.) lies upon Harlem River, and is connected with New York City by a bridge. Riversdale, below Yonkers, is a group of villas and a r. r. station. South Yonkers is a p. o. The Croton Aqueduct passes through this town from n. to s. A castellated stone mansion, built by Edwin Forrest, the tragedian, on the banks of the Hudson, a mile below Yonkers, has lately been purchased for an educational institution by the Roman Catholics.⁴ The country now included in Yonkers, West Farms, and Morrisania, and containing about 24,000 acres, was granted to Adrien Van der Donck in 1646, with the right and title of Patroon. He gave to his estate the title of "Colen Donck," perfected its title by purchase from the Indians, and took measures for its improvement.⁵ There are 11 churches in town.⁶

YORKTOWN⁷—was formed March 7, 1788. It lies upon the n. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is broken and hilly. The Highlands lie along the n. border; and several points are elevated 600 to 1,000 ft. above tide. The principal stream is Croton River, flowing across the s. part. Keakatis Lake,⁸ near the center, Mohegan Lake, in the n. part, and Magrignies Lake, in the n. e. corner, are small bodies of water. Crompond, (Yorktown p. o.) near the center, Pines Bridge, (p. o.) near the e. line, Jefferson Valley, (p. o.) in the n. e. corner, and Shrub Oak, (p. o.) near the n. line, are hamlets. A rolling mill, wire factory, gristmill, and sawmill have been erected 2 mi. w. of Croton dam. This town formed a part of Cortlandt Manor, and in the division of 1734 fell to the shares of Andrew Miller, Gertrude Beeckman, Cornelia and John Schuyler, Gertrude Verplanck, Elizabeth Skinner, John Watts, Philip Verplanck, and Susannah Warren. A Presb. church built at Crompond⁹ about 1738 was burned July, 1779, and a committee in Congress in 1839 reported in favor of paying $3,500 for the loss, as the premises had been used as a storehouse by the Continental troops. Col. Green was surprised in this town May 13, 1781, by a party of refugees, in which affair Maj. Flag, 2 subalterns, and 27 men were killed, and many wounded. The census reports 7 churches in town.¹⁰

² The steamer Henry Clay was burned not far from this place, on her down trip, July 28, 1852. Of 500 persons on board, nearly 100 perished, among whom was A. J. Downing, the editor and author.

³ The Manor Hall, a short distance above the village, built about 1745, was one of the seats of the Philipse family.

⁴ An edifice of fine architectural proportions and great size was erected, in 1858, in the rear of the mansion. The premises form a branch of the institution located on the Central Park in New York, and are under the charge of Sisters of Charity.

⁵ Van der Donck subsequently took an active part in representing in Holland the interests of the colonists against the alleged tyranny of the West India Company and its servants, and finally succeeded in his efforts, notwithstanding the enmity of Gov. Stuyvesant and the influence he was able to bring to oppose him. He died in 1655, and his estate was afterward sold in detached portions by his widow. His settlement was laid waste by the Indians, Sept. 15, 1655, and probably remained unoccupied until after the English conquest. In 1652 Frederick Flysser or Philipse, with Thos. Dehavard and Thos. Lewis, bought 8,000 acres of Colen Donck, nearly all in the present town of Yonkers; and subsequently the former became sole owner to Kings Bridge. For one of these thirds he paid £539. These possessions were extended, by further purchase, to Croton and Bronx Rivers; and in June, 1693, the Lordship or Manor of Philipburgh was erected, with all the rights, honors, or privileges enjoyed by the most favored, excepting that of representation in the General Assembly. He established a drawbridge at Spuyten Duyvil Creek, built a church, still standing, in Sleepy Hollow, and made other improvements. His descendants occupied a prominent position in the colonial government; but, siding with the royal cause, he lost every thing in the Revolution. Col. F. Philipse, the last proprietor of this estate, was paid £22,975 by the British Government, as an equivalent for this loss; and his estates were sold by the State to his tenants at very moderate rates.

⁸ The Croton dam, at the head of the Croton Aqueduct, is in this town. At the top it is 166 ft. above tides and 55 ft. above the bed of the river; 61 feet wide at low water level, with openings of 90 and 180 feet for the passage of the surplus waters. Between these is a partition, forming the foundation of the gate-house and sluiceway for relieving the structure from the pressure of the lake, and for the discharge of water during repairs. The water flows over an ogee-curved apron of cut stone laid upon hewn timber, and is received in a pond, formed by a second dam, 300 ft. below. The aqueduct is taken from the lake through a tunnel on the e. side, 180 ft. long in the solid rock; and the flow of water is regulated by a double set of metal gates. The dam was destroyed while building in Jan. 1841; but the present structure promises to stand without injury, and almost without repair, to an indefinitely remote period. The surface over which the waste water flows is now much more ample than was intended before the accident in 1841. The pond has a capacity of 500,000,000 gallons.

Croton River was named Kitchewan, signifying a large and swift current. The bend west of Pines Bridge was named Kowehgetmacck. The commissioners were obliged to purchase about 200 acres of land overflowed by the dam, at an average cost of $500 per acre.

⁹ Often called "Crom Pond," the Dutch term for Croton Pond. It consists of 2 parts united. Near this pond is French Hill, where the French forces, under Rochambeau, were encamped in 1781-82. Turkey Mount is an extensive woodland tract to the s. e.

WYOMING COUNTY.

This county was formed from Genesee, May 14, 1841. Eagle, Pike, and a part of Portage were annexed from Allegany co. in 1846. It is an interior county, in the s. w. part of the State, separated from Lake Erie by Erie co., and from the Penn. line by Cattaraugus and Allegany. It is centrally distant 228 miles from Albany, and contains 590 sq. mi. Its surface is a broad, rolling upland, divided into ridges and broken by ravines worn by the streams. It has a slight inclination toward the s. The summits of the highest ridges are 1,200 to 1,500 ft. above Lake Erie and 1,700 to 2,000 ft. above tide. Several of the ravines in the s. are 1,000 ft. below the summits of the adjacent ridges. In the interior the ridges are broken, and the country begins to assume the hilly character which is more fully developed further s. Genesee River, which forms a portion of the e. boundary, is bordered by steep bluffs 200 to 400 ft. high. Near Portageville the river descends from the plateau, in a series of three falls, to a depth of more than 300 ft. within a distance of 2½ mi. The water has worn a deep and irregular ravine in the shelving rocks, and the nearly perpendicular banks at the foot of the lower falls are 350 ft. high. The deep gorge, with the rapids and falls, form one of the wildest and most picturesque scenes in Western New York.¹

The other principal streams are Cayuga, Tonawanda, Little Tonawanda, Oatka, East Coy, Wiscoy, Cattaraugus, and Buffalo Creeks. The valley of Oatka Creek, from near the s. border of Warsaw to the s. line of the co., is bordered by steep hills 400 to 1,000 ft. high. Silver Lake, in Castile, (the principal body of water,) is 3 mi. long and about ½ mi. wide. The rocks of this co. consist principally of the shales and sandstones of the Portage group. The summits of the southern hills are covered with the rocks belonging to the Chemung group. Thin layers of compact Portage sandstone are found in many parts of the co. and are extensively quarried for flagging. Upon the ridges little rounded eminences are frequently seen, appearing like drift hills; but upon examination they are found to be shale rock covered with a thin soil. Marl and muck are found in considerable quantities in the swamps. The waters of Silver Lake and of several of the streams are constantly depositing lime in the form of marl. The drift deposits in the co. are very extensive, and the soil in some parts is derived from disintegration. Upon the hills it is mostly a clay loam underlaid by hardpan, and in the valleys it is a fertile, gravelly loam and alluvium. The people are principally engaged in stock and wool growing and in dairying, for which the soil upon the hills is admirably adapted. Wheat, barley, corn, and fruits are largely cultivated in the valleys. Very little attention is paid to manufactures except such as are strictly necessary to an agricultural community.

The county seat is located at Warsaw.² The courthouse is a commodious brick edifice, situated in the s. part of the village. The co. clerk's office is a fireproof building, adjacent to the courthouse. The jail is a wood building, arranged so as to enable the keeper to classify the prisoners rocks. An isolated mass of rocks, 15 ft. in diameter and 100 ft. high, known as "Sugar Loaf," rises from the river bed at the head of the stream and receives nearly the whole force of the rushing water. It is bordered on one side by the present bed of the stream, and on the other by a deep chasm which separates it from the e. bank of the river. Within the memory of people now living, the river flowed over the precipice on the level of the rock which now forms its w. bank, and Sugar Loaf was an island. These falls are accessible only from the w. The perpendicular bank on the w. side of the river at one point is 380 ft. high.

² The commissioners named in the act to select the location were Peter R. Reed, of Onondaga, Davis Hurd, of Niagara, and John Thompson, of Steuben. The building commissioners were John A. McElwaine, Paul Richards, and Jonathan Perry. Trumble Cary, Esq., of Batavia, gave to the co. an ample public square upon which to erect the public buildings. The first courts were held at a public house at East Onondaga, in June, 1841, and the first meeting of the Board of Supervisors was at the same place. The first co. officers were Paul Richards, First Judge; James Sprague, First Patterson; Jos. Johnson, Associate Judges; W. Riley Smith, District Attorney; N. Welcott, Co. Clerk; W. K. Groger, Sheriff; and Harvey Putnam, Surrogate.

according to law.¹ The poorhouse is situated on a farm of 97 acres near the w. border of Orangeville, 9 mi. w. of Warsaw. The average number of inmates is 73, supported at a cost of 7 cts. per week each. The farm yields a revenue of about $300.²

The Buffalo, New York & Erie R. R. extends s. e. through Attica, Middlebury, Warsaw, Gainesville, Castile, and Genesee Falls, crossing the Portage Falls and connecting with the N. Y. & E. R. R. at Hornellsville. A r. r. route has been surveyed, and a road-bed graded, from Attica s. w. to the Alleghany River.³

There are 5 weekly newspapers published in the co.⁴

The eastern tier of towns in this co., with the exception of a portion of Castile, belonged to the Ogden, Silver Lake, and Corringier tracts of the Morris Reservation, and the remaining parts of the co. to the Holland Land Purchase. The Garden Tract, containing 17,927 acres on both sides of the Genesee, was reserved for Mary Jemison (the "old white woman") by the Seneca Nation in their treaty with Robert Morris in 1797.⁵ About one-half of this tract lies in the present town of Castile. Upon this tract Mary Jemison and her descendants continued to reside until 1816, when she sold all but 2 sq. mi. on the w. side of the river to Micah Brooks and Jellis Clute. The remaining 2 mi. she sold in 1831 to Henry B. Gibson and Jellis Clute, and removed to the Cattaraugus Reservation. The first white man that lived within the limits of the co. was a tory, named Ebenezer Allen, who in consequence of his crimes fled from Penn. and joined the Indians about 1780. He located upon the Genesee, and for a time lived upon the lands of Mary Jemison. He afterward built a saw and grist mill on the present site of Rochester, removed thence to Oatka Creek,⁶ and thence to Canada.⁷ The first permanent white settlers were John Tolles, Jacob Wright, Nathaniel Sprout, and Stephen Crow, in 1802. The settlements increased rapidly, and in a few years most of the best lands of the co. were taken up. Most of the early settlers were from New England; but the later immigrants have principally been Germans.

ATTICA—was formed from Sheldon, April 4, 1811. Orangeville was taken off in 1816. It

¹ The courthouse, jail, and clerk's office were erected in 1842, at a cost of $12,000.

² The poorhouse contains 22 rooms, and the inmates are provided with good, substantial food; but the house does not admit of proper accommodations for the paupers, or for classification of the insane, of which there are always a number.

³ The Alleghany Valley Railroad.

⁴ The Genesee Register, the first newspaper in the co., was established at Warsaw in 1825 by L. & W. Walker, and was continued 6 months.

The Warsaw Sentinel was commenced by Andrew W. Young in May, 1830, and continued until Dec. 1831, when it was merged in the Republican Advocate at Batavia.

The Attica Republican was commenced by David Scott in 1832-33. It was soon after changed to

The Attica Republican and Genesee Abolitionist, E. A. Cooley became its publisher, and changed it to

The Attica Balance, and subsequently to

The Attica Democrat, and continued it until 1846.

The Genesee Recorder was commenced at Perry by Geo. M. Shipper in 1833, and continued about 2 years.

The American Citizen was commenced at Warsaw in 1836 by J. A. Hadley. After 1 year, it was removed to Perry and published by Mitchell & Warren. Mr. Mitchell continued the publication until Jan. 1841, when it was removed to Rochester.

The Pike Whig was commenced by Thos. Carrier in 1838. Soon after, its name was changed to

The Pike Gazette, and it was continued for about a year.

The Watchtower, a Bp. paper, was issued in 1837 from the offices of The American Citizen. It was published 1 year by Ansel Warren.

The Register, a campaign paper, was published at Perry in 1840 by Isaac N. Stoddard and John H. Barley.

The Perry Democrat was commenced in 1841 by Pat Lawrence. In 1848 it passed to C. C. Britt, who continued it until 1853.

The Western New Yorker was commenced at Perry in Jan. 1841, by John H. Barley. In the summer of the same year it passed into the hands of Barlow & Woodward, who removed it to Warsaw. It was successively published by Barlow & Blain, Carl, Mr. Blanchard, and H. A. Dudley until April 1, 1858, when it passed into the hands of Eliza W. Andrews, and afterwards to Ansel & Harrington, by whom it is still published.

The Genesee was commenced at Perry by N. S. Woodward in 1847. It soon passed to Dan F. Galt, who changed its name to

The Industrial Countryman, and continued it until Aug. 1846, when it passed to Ansel Warren, who changed its name to

The Free Citizen, and continued it until Aug. 1847.

The Wyoming Republican was commenced at Warsaw by F. L. Fuller in 1844; it was published until March, 1847.

The Attica Telegraph was commenced by Abdon Dumont in 1841, 1846, and was published about 2 years.

The Old Eighth Whig was commenced at Attica April 1, 1848, by R. W. Biddle and W. H. Ayer. After about a year, Mr. Biddle retired, and Mr. Ayer continued the paper as

The Spirit of the Old Eighth, until 1860.

The Attica Atlas was commenced Jan. 4, 1851, by Siles Johnson, by whom it is still published.

The Central Liberator was published at the village of the Free Citizen for 1 year. Edited by Wm. C. Smith.

The Wyoming Liberator was commenced Dec. 22, 1850, and was published 1 year by Horace W. Allen.

The Wyoming Times was commenced at Perry, July 7, 1850, and ran May, 1861. It was discontinued by its publishers, and re-commenced soon after at the village of Middlebury.

The Wyoming Co. Mirror was commenced at Warsaw in 1848 by A. H. Kelly. In 1850 it passed into the hands of Biddett & Lewis, in 1852 to George Merrill, and in 1856 to H. A. Dudley, by whom it is still published.

The Arcade Enterprise was started March 10, 1856, by J. H. Gibson, and is still published.

⁵ The parents of Mary Jemison emigrated from Ireland in 1743, and Mary was born during the voyage across the ocean. The family settled upon the western frontiers of Penn., where they remained in peace until the breaking out of the French War in 1754. In 1756 a party of Indians visited their plantation and took the family prisoners, and on their return presented all but Mary, then a girl of 12 or 13 years. She was carried captive to an Indian settlement on the Ohio, and kept 12 1/2 years. Her women who had lost a brother in the war, she grew to manhood among the Indians, adopted their habits and customs, was twice married, and had 8 children, 5 sons and 3 daughters. After the Revolution she had an opportunity to return to her white friends; but she preferred to remain with her husband and children. She was greatly beloved by the Indians, and highly respected by the whites who became acquainted with her. She retained her knowledge of the English language, and to the last remembered the early instructions of her mother, and the last course which that mother gave was that she would never be a captive, and the daughters of the Indians should never be like her father and mother, lose the name of Christian. At the Cattaraugus Reservation, Sept. 19, 1823, at the age of 90, she died.

⁶ This creek is still locally known as Allen's Creek.

lies upon the n. border of the co., w. of the center. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the ravines of the streams. In the e. part are several considerable hills with long gradual slopes. Tonawanda Creek, the principal stream, flows through the n. w. corner, and receives numerous branches from the e., the largest of which is Crow Creek. The soil is a clay and gravelly loam. Attica, (p. v.,) upon Tonawanda Creek, in the n. w. part of the town, was incorp. May 2, 1837. It contains a flourishing union school, a bank, a newspaper office, a flouring mill, and 5 churches. Pop. 1,184. Attica Center (p. o.) and Vernal are hamlets. The first settlement was made in 1802, by Zera Phelps.¹ The first religious services were held Sept. 21, 1809, by Rev. Royal Phelps, at which time the first church (Cong.) was formed, with 5 members.²

BENNINGTON—was formed from Sheldon, March 6, 1818. It is the n. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the ravines of small streams. Cayuga Creek and its branches drain the central, and Murder Creek the n. part of the town. Tonawanda Creek flows through the s. e. corner. The soil is a clayey, gravelly and sandy loam. Bennington Center (Bennington p. o.) contains 3 churches and 30 dwellings; and Cowlesville, (p. v.,) in the n. w. part of the town, 2 churches and 206 inhabitants. Folsomdale (p. o.) is a hamlet, on Cayuga Creek, and has a valuable water-power. The first settlement was made near the center of the town, in 1802, by John Tolles, Jacob Wright, and William Barber, from Vt.³ The first religious services were conducted by Rev. Peter B. Root, in 1805. The first church (M. E.) was formed in 1807.⁴

CASTILE (Cas-tile)—was formed from Perry, Feb. 27, 1821. It is the central town upon the e. border of the co. Its surface is a rolling and terraced upland, broken by the deep valleys of the streams. Genesee River, forming a portion of the e. boundary, is bordered by steep banks 300 to 350 ft. above the water. In some places the faces of the bluffs are perpendicular ledges 200 ft. high. Numerous small tributaries of the river have worn deep lateral channels in these bluffs. The valley of Silver Lake occupies a wide and shallow basin in the n. part of the town.⁵ Its outlet is toward the n. Wolf Creek rises in a swamp near the head of the lake and flows s. A wide, level valley, bordered by low terraces, extends from the e. shore of the lake and opens into the valley of Wolf Creek at Castile Village. The soil is a clay and gravelly loam. Castile (p. v.) lies on Wolf Creek, in the s. w. part of the town. It is a station on the B. & N. Y. City R. R. Pop. 682. St. Helena, (p. v.,) on Genesee River, in the s. e. corner of the town, contains 20 dwellings. The first settlement was made in 1808, by Robert Whalley, from R. I., 1 mi. e. of Castile Village.⁶ The first religious services (Bap.) were held near the s. end of Silver Lake, in 1816, by Elder Benj. Luther.⁷

CHINA—was formed from Sheldon, March 6, 1818. Java was taken off in 1832. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface is a rolling or hilly upland, broken by valleys. Cattaraugus Creek flows s. w. through near the center of the town, and receives several tributaries, the principal of which is Clear Creek, from the s. From the valleys the town spreads out into a rolling region, with long gradual slopes arable to their summits. The highest point is the ridge in the n. e., which is 1,100 ft. above Lake Erie, as determined by actual survey. The soil of the upland is a clayey and in the valleys a gravelly loam. Arcade (China p. o.) is situated at the junction of Cattaraugus and Clear Creeks, in the s. w. part of the town. It has a fine

² The census reports 6 churches; Cong., Presb., F. W. Bap., Bap., M. E., and R. C.

³ Among the other early settlers were Chamney, Justin, and George Leouis, Peldstiah Case, Joseph Farnham, George Hoskins, David Tolles, Aaron Clapp, and Ezra Ludd. The first marriage was that of Aaron Whitney and Rachel Truesdale, in 1807; and the first death in town, that of a child of Wm. Barber, in 1803. The first school was taught by Rachel Truesdale, in 1807; the first inn was kept by Joseph Farnham, in 1807. Chamney Leouis erected the first sawmill, in 1808; he also kept the first store. Quantus Clapp built the first gristmill, at Cowlesville. A son of David Tolles, 8 or 9 years old, was lost in the woods in 1803 and was never found.

⁵ Mary Jeannson, the "old white woman," with her family, led in the alders at the foot of this lake while Gen. Sullivan was laying waste the Indian villages upon the Genesee. In the summer of 1855 it was reported that an immense serpent, 100 ft. long, had been seen in this lake. So well was the story apparently authenticated that thousands of visitors came from all parts of the country to obtain a sight of his snakeship. A burlesque account of the capture of the serpent, which appeared in the Buffalo Republic, raised the excitement to the highest pitch; and immediately afterward the whole humbug collapsed.

⁶ Soon after, a settlement was made at the foot of the lake, in the w. part of the town, called the "Tollman Settlement." Ziba Hurd and Jonathan Gilbert, from Vt., were the first settlers at Castile Village, in 1816. The first child born was Jane Melbay, in 1813; and the first death was that of Laura Wilcox, in 1815. The first school was taught in 1816, by Anna Bennett, from Vt. Robert Whalley kept the first inn, and erected the first sawmill, on Wolf Creek, below Castile Village, in 1811. John Card and Sylvester Lathrop built the first gristmill, on lot 49, in 1820; the first store was kept by Lemuel Eldridge and M. Frost, in 1815.

The first settlement was made in 1808, on Lot 28, by Silas Meech, from New England.¹ The first religious services were conducted by Rev. John Spencer, at Arcade, in 1812. The first church (Cong.) was formed at Arcade, by Jno. Spencer, July 21, 1813.²

COVINGTON—named from Gen. Leonard Covington—was formed from Le Roy (Genesee co.) and Perry, Jan. 31, 1817. A part was annexed to York (Livingston co.) in 1823. It is the s. e. corner town of the co. The surface is a moderately hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. Oatka Creek flows through the s. w. corner, and receives as tributary Pearl Creek, which flows s. w. through near the center. Wide, fertile alluvial flats extend along Oatka Creek. The soil of the uplands is generally a gravelly loam. Covington Center, (Covington p. o.) in the s. part, contains 20 dwellings; Pearl Creek, (p. v.) in the s. w., contains 15 dwellings; La Grange, (p. v.) near the s. line, a church and 20 dwellings; and Peoria, (p. v.) near the e. line, 15 dwellings. The first settlement was made in 1807, in the w. part, by Jairus Cruttenden, William Miller, and John and William Sprague, all from New England.³ The first religious services were held at the house of David Norris, in 1811, by Rev. Mark Norris, from Vt.⁴

EAGLE—was formed from Pike, Jan. 21, 1823. It occupies a central position on the s. border of the co. Its surface is a hilly upland, broken by the deep ravines of the streams. Nearly the whole drainage is through Wiscoy Creek and its branches. Cold Creek takes its rise in the s. e. part of the town. The hills bordering upon the streams are very steep, and their summits are 400 to 700 ft. above the valleys. Eagle Lake, a small body of water in the s. w. part, has no visible outlet. The soil is a clayey and gravelly loam. Eagle Village, (p. v.) in the s. w. part of the town, contains a church and 20 dwellings. Eagle, (p. o.) in the s. e. part, is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in town in 1808, on Lot 8, by Silas and Wm. Hodges, from Cayuga co.⁵ There are 3 churches in town: M. E., F. W. Bap., and Christian.

GAINESVILLE—named from Gen. E. P. Gaines—was formed from Warsaw, as "Helo," Feb. 25, 1814. Its name was changed April 17, 1816. It is an interior town, lying s. e. of the center of the co. The surface is an upland, slightly undulating and broken by the valleys of the streams. Oatka Creek flows through the s. e. part, and East Coy Creek through the s. w. The soil on the hills is a thin, dark loam underlaid by hardpan, and in the valleys a fertile, gravelly loam. A good quality of building stone is quarried in the s. part of the town. Gainesville Creek, (Gainesville p. o.) on East Coy Creek, near the center of the town, contains a female seminary,⁶ 3 churches, and about 300 inhabitants. East Gainesville, (p. v.), a station on the B. & N. Y. City R. R., contains 20 houses. Gainesville Center and Newburgh are hamlets. The first settlements were made at Gainesville Creek in 1805, by Wm. Richard, and Chas. Bristol, from Columbia co., and Elnathan George, from Vt.⁷ The first religious meeting was held in 1809. The first church (Presb.) was formed in 1815.⁸

GENESÉE FALLS—was formed from Pike and Portage, (Livingston co.) April 1, 1816. It lies on Genesee River, in the s. e. corner of the co. A nearly perpendicular rocky bluff, 100 to 300 ft. high, borders upon the river, and from its summit the country spreads out into an undulating upland. The celebrated Portage Falls, in the Genesee River, are opposite this place.⁹ The soil is a sandy and clayey loam. Portageville, (p. v.) on Genesee River, contains 5 churches and several mills. Pop. 561. The B. & N. Y. City R. R. crosses the Genesee, near the village, by a bridge 800 ft. long and 234 ft. above the bed of the river. This bridge was built at a cost of ¹ Inhabited Sanders, Samuel Nichols, Silas and Leonard Parker, Jacob Jackson, Wm. Barnes, Amasa and Alfred Killebourn—most of them from Vt.—settled in the town in 1809. The first child born was a daughter of Jacob Jackson, and the second a son of Samuel Nichols, both in 1810; the first marriage was that of Silas Meech and Lydia Parker; and the first death that of Mrs. A. Killebourn, in the spring of 1812. Ebenezer Parker taught the first school, in 1811. Silas Parker kept the first inn, in 1812, and the first store, in 1813. Maj. Moss Smith built the first sawmill, in 1811, and Col. Duell Rowley the first gristmill, in 1810.

$175,000, and is the largest wooden R. R. bridge in the world. The Genesee Valley Canal also crosses the river at this point by an aqueduct built upon stone abutments 40 ft. high; the structure cost $70,000. The first settlements were made on the river, above Portageville, in 1804, by John, Samuel, and Seth Fields.¹ The first religious meeting was held by Rev. John Griffith, (M. E.) in 1809; and the first church (Bap.) was formed by Rev. Joseph Case, at "Bigelows Corners," in 1818.²

JAVA—was formed from China, April 20, 1832. It lies on the w. border of the co., s. of the center. Its surface is an elevated region, broken by hills and the deep valleys of the streams. The highest summits are 400 to 600 ft. above the valleys and 1,000 to 1,200 ft. above Lake Erie. Buffalo Creek flows through the w. part, and receives a large number of tributaries. Cattaraugus Creek takes its rise in the e. part. Cattaraugus Lake is a small sheet of water in the s. e. part, nearly surrounded by steep hills. It forms one of the sources of Cattaraugus Creek. The soil upon the hills is a thin, dark loam underlaid by hardpan; in the valleys it is principally a gravelly loam. About 1 mi. e. of Java Village is a quarry of fine building stone. Java Village (p. v.) lies upon Buffalo Creek, in the s. w. part of the town. Pop. about 200. North Java, (p. v.) in the s. e. corner of the town, contains a church and about 100 inhabitants. Java Center, (p. o.), East Java, (p. o.), in the s. e. part of the town, Carriers Corners, (Java p. o.), in the s. w., and Williamsville, near the e. border, are hamlets. The first settlement was made on Lot 32, in the s. w. part of the town, in 1810, by Wm. Richardson and Timothy Kirby, from Lowell, Mass.³ The first church (R. C.) was formed in 1838.⁴

MIDDLEBURY—was formed from Warsaw, March 20, 1812. It lies on the n. border of the co., e. of the center. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the deep valleys of the streams. Oatka Creek flows through the s. e. corner, and Little Tonawanda Creek through the w. part. A deep ravine extends e. and w. through near the center of the town, forming a natural pass between the valleys of these two streams. The hills that border upon Oatka Creek are steep and 400 to 600 ft. high. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam. Wyoming, (p. v.) on Oatka Creek, near the e. border of the town, contains the Middlebury Academy,⁵ 3 churches, and 378 inhabitants. West Middlebury, (Dale p. o.), a station on the B. & N. Y. City R. R., contains 20 dwellings. The first settlement was made by Jonas Sellick, (from Rutland co., Vt.) in 1802, near Wrights Corners.⁶ There are 5 churches in town.⁷

ORANGEVILLE—was formed from Attica, Feb. 14, 1816. Wethersfield was taken off in 1823. It is an interior town, lying s. w. of the center of the co. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by deep ravines. The streams are Tonawanda Creek and its branches, draining the w., and small branches of Oatka and East Coy Creeks, draining the e. parts of the town. The summits of the highest hills are 400 to 700 ft. above the valleys. The soil is a gravelly and clayey loam underlaid by hardpan. Orangeville Center (Orangeville p. o.) contains 15 houses; Johnsonburg, (p. v.) on Tonawanda Creek, lies partly in Sheldon. Pop. about 100. Halls Corners (East Orangeville p. o.) is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in 1805, by John Duncan, on Lot 13, and Elisha Doty, from Cayuga co., on Lot 12.⁸ The first church (Presb.) was organized by Rev. John Alexander, July 11, 1812.⁹

The first school was taught by Maria Bellinger, in 1806. The first inn was kept by Lewis Wood, at Portageville, in 1824; and the first store, by Foot & Martin, the same year. The first sawmill was erected in 1812, and the first gristmill in 1820, on the river, by Mumford, Smith, & McKay.

² The census reports 5 churches; Bap., M. E., Presb., Univ., and R. C.

³ In 1812 and '14, Chas. Richardson and Daniel H. Worcester settled at Java Village, and Charles Fox at Carriers Corners. The first mill was erected by Daniel H. Worcester, at Java Village, in 1816; the first inn was kept by Chas. Fox, at Carriers Corners, in 1818; and the first store, by Mr. Comstock, at Java Village, in 1820.

⁴ The census reports 4 churches; Cong., M. E., F. W. Bap., and R. C.

⁶ In 1802 a number of immigrants from Vt. settled in the town, among whom were Reuben Chamberlain, Jabez Wargen, Frederick Gilbert, Sterling Sterns, and Israel M. Dewey. The first store was kept by Edwin Putnam, in 1810, near Wrights Corners; the first gristmill was built by Silas Newell, in 1813, near Wyoming Village; the first sawmill, by A. Worden, in 1809, at West Middlebury; Amzi Wright kept the first inn, at Wrights Corners, in 1806. In May, 1817, Artemus Shattuck, a citizen of this town, went into the woods, a distance from home, to chop. While cutting off a log that had been partially split open, his foot was caught in the crack, and he hung for a long time suspended by his foot and partially supported by one hand. Despairing of receiving aid, and entirely unable to extricate himself, he finally unjointed his ankle with his pocket knife, made a crutch of a crooked stick, and started for the house. He was found about dark, and carried to the house, where his leg was amputated by a surgeon. He recovered, became a Bap. minister, and lived many years.

⁷ 2 Bap., and 1 each F. W. Bap., Presb., and M. E.

⁸ Lemuel Chase and James Sayer settled about the same time, and Seth and Adah Sherwood, Silas Merrittfield, and Asabel Ward in 1806; Truman Lewis and a number of other families in 1807. The first child born was a son of Seth Sherwood, in 1807; the first marriage was that of Adah Sherwood and Miss Wood, in 1809; and the first death, that of Mrs. James Sayer. Cornelia Lewis and Mary McKnight commenced the first schools, May 1, 1811; Isaac Moore kept the first inn, in 1811, at the Center; and Silas Hubbard the first store, in 1814, at the same place. Robert Hopkins erected the first sawmill, in 1810, and Levi Johnson the first gristmill, in 1817.

¹ It was incorp. by the regents in 1853, and is under the management of a village board of education.
² Sash and blinds, horse rakes, carriages, and waterproof oil blanking.
³ In the same year, Wm. Webster, Shubael Morris, Amos Kinney, Elijah Cutting, and Joseph Palmer settled in the s. part of the town, and Josiah Hovey in the N. part. The first settlers were mostly from New England. The first child born was Eliza Webster, in 1804; the first marriage was that of Siles C. Fango and Catharine Whiting; and the first death, that of an infant son of Sterling Stearns, in 1804. The first death of an adult was that of Dwight Noble, in 1808. The first school was taught by Samuel McWhorter, in 1807. Elizur Webster kept the first inn, in 1809; and Absalom Green and Dan'l Shaw, the first store, in the same year. Solomon Morris built the first gristmill, in 1808.
⁴ The census reports 6 churches; Presb., Cong., Bap., F. W. Bap., Prot. E., and M. E.
⁵ John W. Barry, from Ononda co., settled at Wethersfield Springs in the fall of 1810, and built the first house at that place. The first school was taught by O. Martin. The first gristmill was erected by James Cravath, in 1812, on East Coy Creek, and the first sawmill, by Calvin Clifford, on the same creek, in 1810.
⁶ The census reports 6 churches; 2 Bap., and 1 each Cong., Prot. E., M. E., and Christian.

YATES COUNTY.

This county was formed from Ontario, Feb. 5, 1825, and named from Joseph C. Yates, then governor. Barrington and Starkey were added from Steuben, April 6, 1824. It is generally distant 172 mi. from Albany, and contains an area of 1,370 sq. mi. Its surface consists of a series of ridges extending from Steuben co. in a northerly direction, and gradually declining from a height of about 1,700 ft. above tide, upon the s. border, to a level of the undulating region near the foot of Seneca Lake. The first or most eastern of these ridges lies between Seneca and Crooked Lakes, and occupies the towns of Barrington, Starkey, Milo, Torrey, and a part of Benton. The highest summit is about 900 ft. above Crooked Lake and 1,200 above Seneca. The slopes are generally gradual and the inclination uniform. The second ridge occupies the high peninsula between the two branches of Crooked Lake, and extends s. through Jerusalem, finally losing itself in the rolling upland of Benton. The s. part of this ridge is known as "Bluff Point," from its abrupt termination. It is about 400 ft. above the lake. The third range lies between the w. branch of Crooked Lake and Flint Creek, and occupies the w. part of Jerusalem, the n. part of Italy, and the s. e. part of Potter. The highest summits in the s. are about 700 ft. above the lake. A fourth ridge lies between the valleys of Flint Creek and West River, and extends s. through the w. part of Potter. A fifth range occupies that portion of Middlesex lying between West River Hollow and Canandaigua Lake. The declivities of the last two ranges are mostly very steep; and their summits are 800 to 1,000 ft. above the valleys. The uplands, except in the extreme w. part, are smooth and arable to their summits. The valleys between them are wide and exceedingly fertile, and the s. part of the co. is a fine rolling region.

The lowest rocks in the co. are the upper series of the Hamilton shales, cropping out on the lower course of the Crooked Lake Outlet. Next above these, upon the same stream, appear the Tully limestone, Genesee slate, and Portage groups. The first of the three, furnishing lime, is the most valuable mineral in the co. The Portage group near Penn Yan furnishes a good quality of flagging stone, and is extensively quarried for that purpose. The shales and sandstone of the Chemung group occupy the summits in the s. part of the co.; calcareous tufa is found upon Crooked Lake Outlet, and marl in the swamps near the foot of the lake. Iron pyrites have been found in considerable quantities at Bluff Point. The soil for the most part consists of a fine quality of gravelly loam, intermixed with clay and the dis-integrated shales of the Portage group. It is well adapted to either tillage or pasturage.

The principal streams in the co. are Crooked Lake Outlet, Keshong Creek, Big Stream, Rock Stream, Flint Creek, and West River. Seneca Lake, forming the e. boundary of the co., is 447 ft. above tide, and Canandaigua Lake, forming a part of the w. boundary, 668 ft. Crooked Lake,¹ near the center, two-thirds of it lying within the co., is 718 ft. above tide and is 18 mi. in length. Its s. part is divided by Bluff Point into two branches, each of which is from one to two mi. wide. Owing to the depredations of the midge winter wheat is less grown than formerly, while spring grains, root crops, stock, wool, and fruit are much more extensively and profitably produced. The outlet of Crooked Lake affords large water power for manufacturing purposes, — as yet but slightly improved.

The county seat is located at the village of Penn Yan,² on the line of Milo and Benton.³ The first courthouse⁴ and jail combined was erected in 1824; and in 1834 it was burned. In 1835 a new brick courthouse was built, on a public square, at a cost of $12,000. A jail, detached, was erected the same season. The latter was destroyed by fire in Feb. 1857, and was rebuilt the same year, at a cost of $10,200. A clerk's office was erected some years previous, upon the public square

² The commissioners who located the co. seat, were John Sutton, of Tompkins co., George H. Foster, of Herkimer co., and Joseph B. Walton, of Otsego co.

³ The first court was held at the house of Asa Cole, in Penn Yan, on the first Tuesday in June, 1823. The first board of supervisors met at the same place. The first co. officers were William M. Oliver, First Judge; James Taylor, Dist. Atty.; Abraham with the other public buildings, near the center of the village. The co. poorhouse is located on a farm of 123 acres in the town of Jerusalem, about 5 mi. s. w. of Penn Yan.¹ The average number of inmates is 86, and they are supported at a weekly cost of $1 40 each. A school is taught in the house during a portion of the year, and religious services are held occasionally. The Crooked Lake Canal extends along the outlet of Crooked Lake, and enters Seneca Lake at Dresden. It opens a direct water communication with Yates co. and the s. portion of Steuben, and affords an easy and cheap means of transportation. The Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R. extends through the co., e. of the center, connecting with the N. Y. C. R. R. at the s. terminus and with the N. Y. & E. R. R. at the s. These two works of internal improvement furnish market facilities equal to those generally enjoyed by the interior cos. of the State.

H. Bennett, Clk. Clerk; James P. Robinson, County; and Alvin Hunt P. Ashburgh, Sheriff.

⁴ John Sutton, of Tompkins; Geo. H. Foster, of Herkimer; and Joseph B. Walton, of Otsego co., were appointed commissioners to locate the co. buildings, and Wm. Shattuck, of Benton; Geo. Sherman, and Samuel Stewart, of Middlesex, attended them. The courts were to be held at the house of Asa Cole until the courthouse was finished.

Three newspapers are published in the co.²

The early history of this co. is intimately associated with the history of the "Friends," a religious sect founded by Jemima Wilkinson.³ This singular woman took the name of the "Universal Friend," and was regarded as a prophet by her followers, among whom were persons of respectability, wealth, and influence. At a general meeting of the sect, in Conn., in 1786, it was resolved to emigrate to some unsettled region and found a colony where they might live in peace and in the undisturbed enjoyment of their religious opinions. Three of their number were delegated to seek out a proper location.⁴ They proceeded to Penn., went up the Susquehanna River, and followed the route of Gen. Sullivan to Seneca Lake, where they finally determined to locate. In June, 1787, 25 "Friends" set out for the land of promise by the way of the Mohawk Valley. They settled about 1 mi. s. of the present village of Dresden, the location being fixed upon from its close proximity to the fine waterfalls upon Crooked Lake Outlet.⁵ During the fall they prepared the land, and in the following season sowed it with winter wheat, which they harvested in 1789; and this was the first wheat crop raised in Western N. Y. In 1789, Wm. Potter and Thos. Hathaway, two of their number, purchased of the State 14,000 acres of land lying between Seneca Lake and the Pre-emption Line, and subsequently Thos. Hathaway and Benedict Robinson purchased the town Jerusalem of Phelps and Gorham.⁶ In 1789, Jemima and a large number of her followers

¹ This building, erected 25 years ago, is 100 ft. by 50, and 3 stories high, including basement. The farm yields a revenue of $1,000.

² The Penn Yan Herald was established at Penn Yan in May, 1818, by Abraham H. Bennett. In 1820 it appeared as The Penn Yan Democrat. In 1825 it was pub. by Bennett & Reed, in 1842 by Reed & Bennett, and in 1847 by Alfred Reed. In 1850 Darins A. Ogden became proprietor, in 1853 Reuben Spicer, and in 1857 Geo. D. A. Bridgman, its present publisher.

The Yates County Republican was started Dec. 16, 1824, by E. J. Fowle, and continued 10 years. He then sold it to John Remick, who published it as

The Penn Yan Enquirer about 2 years, when it was discontinued. The Western Star was pub. at Penn Yan in 1833 by H. Gilbert. The Masonary was pub. at Penn Yan in 1833 by Thos. H. Bassett. The Democratic Whig was commenced in 1827 by Wm. Child.

About 2 years after it passed into the hands of Nicholas D. Suydam, who changed its name to

The Yates County Whig. In 1845 it passed into the hands of Rodney L. Adams. In 1852 Mr. Adams sold it to Cleveland & Look. Mr. Look soon retired, and in 1856 its name was changed to

The Yates County Chronicle. It is now published by Stafford C. Cleveland.

The Democratic Organ was commenced in 1844 at Penn Yan by Harvey L. Winants, and published about 2 years.

The Penn Yan Telegraph, &c., was issued from the office of The Whig, for 6 mos. in 1846.

The Dundee Record was commenced at Dundee, Jan. 25, 1844, by Gilford J. Booth. Edward Hoagland succeeded to its editorship in 1847, John J. Diebold in 1853, and D. S. Bruner, its present publisher, in 1857.

³ Jemima Wilkinson was the daughter of Jeremiah Wilkinson, a R. I. farmer. She was one of a family of 12 children and had little or no advantage of education. In her 20th year she had a severe attack of fever; and for some time her life was despaired of. Upon her recovery she claimed that she had been raised from the dead,—that her carnal existence was ended and henceforth her life was to be spiritual and divine,—and that she was endowed with the power of prophecy. She soon commenced traveling and exhorting, and succeeded in converting many persons, among whom were several substantial New England farmers. The following description of her person is copied from "The New Haven Gazette and Connecticut Magazine," dated March, 1787. "She is about the middle-size of woman, not genteel in her person, rather awkward in her carriage; her complexion good, her eyes remarkably black and brilliant, her hair black and waving with beautiful ringlets upon her neck and shoulders. Her features are regular, and the whole of her face is thought by many to be perfectly beautiful. As she is not to be supposed of either sex, so this neutrality is manifest in her personal appearance. She wears no cap, letting her hair hang down as has been described. She wears her neckcloth like a man; her chemise is buttoned around the neck and wrists. Her outside garment is a robe, under which it is said she wears an expensive dress, the fashion of which is made to correspond neither with that of man nor woman. Her understanding is not deficient, except touching her religious fanaticism. She is very illiterate, yet her memory is very great; artful in discovering many circumstances which fall out among her disciples. On all occasions she requires the most extraordinary attentions that can be bestowed upon her; one or more of her disciples usually attend upon her and perform the most menial services. Her pronunciation is after the peculiar dialect of the most illiterate of the country people of New England. Her preaching has very little connection, and is very lengthy,—at times cold and languid, but occasionally lively, zealous, and animated." When she first arose from her bed of sickness, she assumed that there was once such a person as Jemima Wilkinson, but that she had died and went to heaven, after which the Divine Spirit reanimated that same body and it arose from the dead; now, this divine inhabitant is Christ Jesus our Lord, the Friend to all mankind, and gives his name to the body to which he is united, and therefore body and spirit conjointly is the "Universal Friend." She assumed to have two "Witnesses," corresponding in all respects to these prophesied in Rev. chap. xi. from 3d to 13th verses. These were James Parker and Sarah Richards. During her whole life she never yielded the pretensions which she at first made; and her whole career had the merit of consistency. Among the principal peculiar tenets of the sect was the strict enforcement of the Shaker doctrine of celibacy as indispensable to a pure life. The meetings were conducted after the manner of the Quakers, the whole congregation often sitting in perfect silence for an hour or more.—See Turner's Hist. of The Phelps and Gorham Purchase.

This extraordinary woman exerted a strong influence over her followers, who gratuitously planted and hoed her corn, sowed and reaped her wheat, and cut and gathered her hay, always having care to be of no trouble or expense to the Friend upon these occasions. On one occasion she addressed, through an interpreter, a band of Oneidas who had encamped near her settlement on their way to a treaty, endeavoring to convince them that she was Christ. They listened with apparent attention, and, when she had finished, one of the chiefs arose and delivered a short address to his countrymen. She requested to have it interpreted to her,—when the savage contemptuously replied, in broken English, that if she were the character she assumed to be, she would have understood the poor Indian as well as any one. She died July 1, 1819, and her sect has long since been broken up.—Hudson's Life of Jemima Wilkinson.

⁵ The first gristmill in Western N. Y. was built in 1786, by Rich'd Smith, James Parker, and Abraham Dayton, 2½ mi. from Penn Yan.

⁶ It was a rule at that early period with Messrs. Phelps & came in. The first framed house in the co. was erected for her, on a farm of 1000 acres set apart for her especial use. For a time the colony flourished; but soon neighbors began to arrive, and jealousies were engendered, and a series of persecutions commenced, which seriously retarded the progress of the colony and embittered the last days of the "Friend."¹

BARRINGTON—was formed from Wayne, (Stenben co.) April 6, 1822. It lies upon the e. bank of Crooked Lake, in the s. part of the co. Its surface consists principally of a high ridge, sloping gradually upward from Crooked Lake to a height of 600 to 800 ft. Big Stream flows through the s. e. corner, in a deep ravine bordered by steep declivities. From Crooked Lake the ascent is nearly uniform for 2 miles; and the summit of the ridge is rolling. The soil is a slaty gravel mixed with clay, and is generally productive. Barrington,² (p. v.) near the center, contains 1 church and 25 houses. The first settlement was made in 1800, by Jacob Teoplis.³ The Rev. Jas. Osgood (Bap.) was the first preacher. There are two churches in town; Bap. and M. E.

BENTON⁴—was formed from Jerusalem, Feb. 12, 1803, as "Vernon." Its name was changed to "Snell" April 6, 1808, and to Benton April 2, 1810. Milo was taken off in 1818, and a part of Torrey in 1851. It is the n. e. corner town of the co. Its surface is rolling and gradually descending toward the s. and e. From Seneca Lake the land slopes upward for a mile, and to a height of about 300 ft., where it spreads out in a beautiful undulating region. The valley of Crooked Lake, 200 ft. below the summits of the table land, extends about 1 mi. into the s. part of the town. Keshong Creek passes through the s. e. corner. The soil is clay along the lake, but upon the hills it is a deep, rich, clayey and gravelly loam, well adapted to almost every branch of agriculture. Bellona, (Benton p. o.) situated on Keshong Creek, in the s. e. part, contains 2 churches, (pop. 205;) and Benton Center (p. v.) 2 churches and 28 dwellings. Fergusons Corners (p. o.) is a hamlet. The village of Penn Yan lies partly within this town. The first settlement was made in the spring of 1789, by Levi Benton, from Cats-kill, Greene co.⁵ The first religious meetings were held in the barn of Levi Benton, in 1792, and were conducted by Ezra Cole. There are now 4 churches in town.⁶

ITALY—was formed from Naples, Feb. 15, 1815. It is the s. w. corner town of the co. Its surface consists of three distinct ridges, each attaining an elevation of about 1000 ft. above Canandaigua Lake. These ridges are divided by the valley of Flint Creek—known as Italy Hollow—and West River Hollow. The valleys are generally narrow and bordered by steep and often precipitous sides. The summits of the ridges are broken uplands. The soil is a slaty and gravelly loam and is best adapted to pasturage. Italy Hill (p. v.) is situated in the s. r. corner; and Italy Hollow (p. o.) on Flint Creek, s. of the center. The first settlement in the town was made by John Mower, at West Hollow, in 1793.⁷ There are 4 churches in town.⁸

JERUSALEM—was organized Jan. 1789, and Benton was taken off in 1803. A small part of Stenben co., in the forks of the lake, was annexed Feb. 25, 1811. It lies on the w. bank of Crooked Lake and is the central town in the co. Its surface is divided into two distinct ridges by the w. branch of the lake and its inlet. The e. ridge terminates on the s. in Bluff Point, a promontory, 8 mi. in extent, lying between the two branches of Crooked Lake; and it extends on the n. into the town of Benton. It is about 400 ft. high and $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 mi. wide, and is bordered by steep declivities. The continuity of this ridge is broken by a remarkable depression extending 1791; and Ezra Cole, Remarkable Hill and Samuel Bond (Catskill) with their families, in 1722. The first birth was that of Peter Buell, in Sept. 1791; the first marriage that of Thomas Bond and Olive Benton, in 1794, and the first death that of John Bond, in 1795, and Samuel Wheeler, who both died in the fall of 1797. The first sawmill was built by Daniel Benton in 1799, at Bluff Point. The first store was kept by Luther Benton and James Bond, in 1799, and the first and only one (Cole) in 1801. The first school, the first school at Benton Center, in the winter of 1797. The first town meeting was held at the house of Daniel Brown.

² Two M. E., Bap., and Presb.

³ Josiah Bradlee, Seth Spurgeon, Fisher and Isaac Whitney, William Dunton, Edward Low, William Clark, Arthur C. Armstrong, Card Knowles, John Armstrong, Morris and H. C. Tracy, settled in 1794 and '95, and Nathan Southon and Andrew Leitch in 1809. The first birth was that of Peter Mower, in Oct. 1793, and a child of Mr. Mower was the first that died. The first marriage was that of Jacob Metcalf and Nancy Torrey. Nancy Torrey taught the first school, in 1813, at West Hollow. The first birth the first tavern, at the same place, in 1809; Abraham Metcalf the first store, at Italy Hollow; Asa and Stephen, in 1801, the first saw and grist mill, at the same place, at an early date.

⁴ Two Bap., M. E., and Presb.

4 She was several times prosecuted for blasphemy, and was harassed by lawsuits, which were chiefly instigated by those who had once been her followers and friends.—Turner's Hist. of the Phelps and Gorham Purchases.

⁵ Some times called "Wescon."

⁶ The next settlers were Thomas Eronson, from Conn.; Wm. Goddough, from N. J.; Jonathan Davis, William Ovenshire, Oliver Parker, Matthew Knapp, Joseph Fenton, John Kriss, and Henry Spry. The first school was taught by A. C. West, in 1810. Jacob Toole kept the first tavern, in 1804, on the Bath Road; and Elijah Townsend, the first store. John Carr erected the first gristmill, and Wm. Cummings the first sawmill.

⁷ Named from Levi Benton, the first settler.

⁸ T. Spencer, settled at Bellona in 1790; George Wheeler, Robert Clusson, Jas. Scofield, Otis Burden, and Daniel Brown in from the head of the w. branch of Crooked Lake e. to the e. branch. The highest point in this valley is about 70 ft. above the lake. The ridge on the w. rises gradually for 3 or 4 mi. and attains a height of about 700 ft. above the lake, where the surface spreads out into a rolling upland. The soil is a gravelly and slaty loam, and is well adapted to both pasturage and tillage. Branchport, (p. v.) situated at the head of the w. branch of Crooked Lake, contains 3 churches and about 55 houses. Kinneys Corners (Bluff Point p. o.) is situated in the e. part of the town; Shermans Hollow and Yatesville are p. offices. The first settlement was made by Jemima Wilkinson, in 1789.¹ In that year crops of wheat were harvested in the town, and a mill was erected that made flour the same season. The first, and for a long time the only, religious services in town were conducted by Jemima, at her own house. There are 4 churches in town.²

MIDDLESEX—was formed in 1789, as "Augusta." Its name was changed April 6, 1808. Potter was taken off in 1832, and a part was annexed to Potter in 1856. It is the s. w. corner town, lying upon the e. bank of Canandaigua Lake. Its surface consists chiefly of high ridges separated by narrow valleys. The summits are 500 to 600 ft. above the lake. The valley of West River divides the ridges, and the valley of a small stream known as Boat Brook divides the w. ridge into two peaks, the s. of which is known as "Bare Hill." The soil is clayey on the summits of the hills, and gradually changes to a deep gravelly loam in the valleys. Near Federal Hollow, a mile from Rushville, is an inflammable spring.³ Middlesex Center (Middlesex p. o.) contains 3 churches and 20 dwellings. Overackers Corners is a hamlet. The first settlement was made in 1789. Judge Potter, one of the surveyors of Phelps and Gorham's purchase, was the original purchaser of the town, and took an active part in its first settlement.⁴ Many of the first settlers were adherents of Jemima Wilkinson; and for a considerable time there was no other religious association in the town. There are now 4 churches.⁵

MIL0—was formed from Benton, March 6, 1818. A part of Torrey was taken off in 1851. It lies on the e. border of the co., between Seneca and Crooked Lakes. Its surface rises from Seneca Lake in a gentle and gradual slope for 2 mi., where it attains an elevation of about 400 to 500 ft. From this summit the land spreads out into an undulating region, gradually declining on the w. to the valley of Crooked Lake. The soil is principally a gravelly loam, with some clay in the vicinity of Penn Yan and on the shore of Seneca Lake. Penn Yan,⁶ (p. v.) the county seat, was incorp. April 27, 1833. It is situated at the foot of Crooked Lake, and is an important station on the Elmira, Jefferson & Canandaigua R. R. A daily steamer connects it with Hammondsport, at the head of Crooked Lake. It contains 6 churches, a high school,⁷ 2 newspaper establishments, and a bank. Pop. 2,277.—2,114 in Milo, 163 in Benton. Milo Center (p. v.) contains 150 inhabitants; and Himrods Corners (Milo p. v.) 78. The first settlement was commenced in the s. part, by the followers of Jemima Wilkinson, from R. I. in 1788.⁸ The first religious services were conducted by Jemima Wilkinson. There are now 10 churches in town.⁹

POTTER¹⁰—was formed from Middlesex, April 26, 1832, and part of Middlesex was annexed Dec. 18, 1856. It lies near the center of the s. border of the co. Its surface is hilly in the s. w., and rolling in the center and s. Flint Creek, the principal stream, flows northerly through near the center of the town. A swamp of 1 to 1½ mi. wide extends along its course for 8 mi. s. of Potter Center. The soil is a slaty loam in the s. w., and a gravelly and sandy loam, with an intermixture of clay, in the remaining parts. Rushville (p. v.) is partly in Gorham, Ontario co., but principally in the s. w. part of this town. Pop. 583,—408 in Potter, 175 in Gorham. Potter Center (Potter p. o.) contains 20 houses. Voak is a p. o. on the line of Benton. Settlement was begun in 1788, by the followers of Jemima Wilkinson. The most prominent among them were William

⁴ Among the first settlers were Michael Pierce, John Wolford, Jabez French, John Blair, James Lewis, and John McNeur, all from R. I. William Bassett taught the first school, in 1796; Jesse G. Bert kept the first tavern, near Rushville, and Nelson Wilder the first store. John Wolford, jr., built the first sawmill. The first death was that of Mrs. Lucy Wolford, in 1791.

⁵ Two M. E., Bap., and Free Will Bap.

⁷ The Penn Yan High School was incorporated as an academy in 1857. The building is now in process of erection.

⁸ The first settlers were Abraham Dayton, Richard Smith, Jas. Parker, John Lawrence, Stephen Card, Samuel Hartwell, Hezekiah Townsend, David and Peleg Briggs, John Sapplee, Elijah and Micajah Brown, David Wagner, and Adam Hunt, and his sons, Abel and Silas. The first death was that of Mrs. Jedediah Holmes, in 1788. As Jemima Wilkinson's creed was the dominant religion of the town at that period and for some time after, there were no marriages, and of course no known births. It was an era in which people died and none were legitimately born. Hezekiah Townsend kept the first inn, a little e. of Penn Yan, and James Hill the first store.

⁹ 3 Bap., 2 M. E., Cong., Wes. Meth., Presb., Prot. E., and R. C.

¹⁰ Named from Arnold Potter, an original proprietor and the first settler in town.

TROY UNIVERSITY.

This Institution was opened for the admission of students September 9, 1858, and the collegiate department is now fully organized, with the following members of the Faculty of Arts:

REV. JOHN McCLINTOCK, D. D., LL. D.,
President, and Professor of Moral Science.
 MARVIN R. VINCENT, A. M.,
Professor of the Latin Language and Literature.
 CHARLTON T. LEWIS, A. M.,
Professor of Pure Mathematics.

JAMES STRONG, S. T. D.,
Vice-President, and Professor of Biblical Literature.
 OWEN N. ROOD, A. M.,
Professor of Chemistry.
 ALEXANDER MAC WORTER, A. M.,
Professor of Philosophy.

HENRY H. HADLEY, A. M.,
Professor of the Indo-European Languages and Literature.

THE COLLEGE GROUNDS

Comprise a plat of thirty-six acres, of rare beauty and healthfulness of position; and the building is one of the most imposing and well arranged of the kind in the country, affording accommodations for about one hundred and fifty students, including chapel, recitation-rooms, dormitories, boarding hall, and professors' apartments.

THE PLAN OF INSTRUCTION

Embraces the most approved features of the American College system, with all the essential advantages of the English and German Universities, giving an opportunity for the most thorough and general literary culture.

THE UNIVERSITY DEPARTMENT PROPER

Will be inaugurated by appropriate courses of lectures on the higher branches of science, art, and literature, as soon as there shall be graduates prepared to enter upon it. The design of the founders of the institution is to make it a sound Christian (but not sectarian) school of the highest class, both in scholarship and practical efficiency. The course of study includes

A SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT,

Which differs from the classical chiefly in the omission of Latin and Greek, and in occupying only three years.

TERMS AND VACATIONS.

There are two terms and two vacations in the college year. The first, or short term, begins with the Thursday or Friday about the 8th of September, and continues fourteen weeks, followed by a vacation of three weeks. The second or long term, begins with the Thursday, on or about the 5th of January, and continues till Commencement, on the third Thursday of June.

For circulars and full information, address the President or Vice-President, as above. Letters on the business of the Trustees, should be addressed to Rev. Z. Phillips, Financial Agent, Troy, N. Y.

WALNUT HILL SCHOOL, GENEVA, N. Y.

Rev. Dr. Root's Boarding School for Boys is pleasantly situated near the village of Geneva. The number is limited to seventy. Boys are prepared for college, or any department of life that requires.

THOROUGH EDUCATION.

The course of study is full, including

Ancient and Modern Languages, SCIENCE, LITERATURE,
 AND THE FINE ARTS.

Terms for full English, Mathematical and Classical course, $200 per annum. For the Arts the charge is extra. Circulars will be sent those wishing information, on application, to
 THOMAS C. REED,
 Rector and Proprietor.

ROCHESTER COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

N. W. BENEDICT and L. R. SATTERLEE, Principals.

CORNER OF ATWATER AND OREGON STS., ROCHESTER, MONROE COUNTY, N. Y.

To those desirous of being well prepared to enter

COLLEGE,

Or to take a high position in professional or commercial life, affords complete course of systematic study, based upon the most thorough discipline of the intellectual and moral powers.

THIS INSTITUTION

The superiority of its Classical instruction is widely known.

ITS MATHEMATICAL AND OTHER DEPARTMENTS

Are especially efficient, being each conducted by a professional teacher of the highest order.

The Female Department.

In charge of an experienced and highly accomplished professor, offering superior advantages to young ladies, to whom

DIPLOMAS

Are awarded, on the completion of the prescribed course of study.

Students from Abroad

Are provided with the best accommodations in a comfortable department, and the supervision of the Principals.

Circulars containing more particular information may be obtained by application to the principals, Rochester, Monroe County, N. Y.

TROY FEMALE SEMINARY.

This Institution offers the accumulated advantages of nearly fifty years of successful operation. Every facility is provided for a thorough course of useful and ornamental education, under the direction of a corps of more than twenty professors and teachers. The inmates of the Institution have the benefit of Lectures of the highest order, on SCIENCE, HISTORY, LITERATURE, ART, & C. & C.

And the use of a valuable Philosophical Apparatus, a well selected Cabinet of Minerals and Shells, Maps, Charts, and Models.

Superior Music Teachers are constantly employed in the Seminary. Great Attention is given to the French Language.

The teachers reside in the family, and adapt their instructions to its use in conversation.

THE CLASSES IN DRAWING AND PAINTING, IN OIL AND WATER COLORS,

Are under the direction of instructors of long experience and tried ability. A large and choice collection of Pictures is constantly before them for study and for patterns.

The pupils are received into the family of the principals, in which every arrangement is made for their physical education and the improvement of their manners and morals. They occupy private rooms, two in each, the rooms of the female teachers and that of an experienced nurse being among those of the young ladies.

Circulars containing more particular information may be obtained by application to the principals.

Mr. or Mrs. JOAN H. WILLARD, Troy, N. Y.

FORT EDWARD INSTITUTE.

AT FORT EDWARD, WASHINGTON CO., N. Y., ON THE RAILROAD.

REV. JOSEPH E. KING, A.M., PRINCIPAL.

This Institution was opened December, 1854, since which time the Regents' Annual Reports show it to have been the BEST SUSTAINED BOARDING SEMINARY IN THE STATE.

Nearly every county in the State, and two-thirds of the States of the Union, have been its patrons. The following are some of the grounds of its claim to the popular favor:—

Its substantial brick buildings, well guarded against fire, and which, by the central position of its common Dining Hall, Chapel, and an ample suit of class rooms, accessible respectively to the two separate departments by distinct entrances, are most admirably adapted to the safe and successful co-ordination of Ladies and gentlemen, the two departments being at all hours ably and dutifully under the control of the Faculty. Also its noble Library and Apparatus.

ITS LIBERAL PROVISION FOR THE ABLEST INSTRUCTION

In each branch and department of study; three professors and teachers being devoted exclusively to the course in English studies, two each to the Mathematics and Classics, one respectively to Commercial Instruction, to Natural Science, to Modern Languages, and to Painting, while no less than four have in charge the department of Music. Rare facilities are thus afforded to prepare for teaching; while desirable situations are procured for young ladies who graduate in the prescribed course of Studies.

It is a part of the well established system of this Christian Institute, to conserve and promote the health, manners, and morals of its pupils. The Principal wishes it distinctly understood that he becomes personally responsible to parents for the moral and social well being of their daughters while in attendance at this Institute.

It provides good spacious rooms, plainly but suitably furnished; and wholesome and sufficient Board, of a quality and variety satisfactory to its patrons.

ITS REMARKABLY MODERATE RATES.

To many families the difference in the cost of maintaining a son or daughter at home or at this Institute would be scarcely appreciable. One hundred and three dollars per year, pays for Board, furnished room, fuel, washing and bathing in common, Tuition, &c. Extra branches at corresponding rates. A student may enter for a single term, or at any time in the term, and pay for the residue only.

There are three terms of fourteen weeks each. Winter Term opens December 1st, 1859; Spring Term opens March 23d, 1860; Fall Term opens August 16th, 1860. For circulars, or for rooms, apply to the Principal.

Turn to the chapter in the Gazetteer descriptive of Fort Edward, also to chapter of statistics of Academics, and notice the Washington Co. Seminary.

TESTIMONIALS OF EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

REV. WM. SCOTT, of Montreal, Secretary, 1855. The Committee found the buildings, in their construction and specific arrangements, better adapted to their purpose than any other ever visited by them.

REV. S. WASHINGTON, of Troy, Secretary, November, 1856. We were highly gratified with the good order and decorum apparent in every department of the Institute.

REV. M. BATES, of Schenectady, Secretary, March, 1857. There is, we think, no Institution, not wholly devoted to this object, where equal facilities are afforded for acquiring, at trifling expense, a thorough business education.

PROF. JOHN NEWMAN, A.M., of Union College, Secretary, Nov. 18, 1857. The Committee have found the most satisfactory evidence in its able Board of Instruction and Government, its skillful financial management, as well as in the extent and striking character of its patronage, that the Fort Edward Institute is a signal success.

While the Institution is in all departments worthy of entire confidence, the Committee feel called upon to mention the department of Music and that of Painting, as decidedly superior to anything we have ever heard or seen in any similar Institution.

REV. J. K. CHEESMAN, of Schenectady, Secretary, July, 1857.

The gastro-nomic department, under the care of Mr. A. K. Huxton, the Steward, is neatly managed. An abundant supply of well cooked food is provided.

REV. R. H. ROBINSON, Secretary, Saratoga Springs, Nov. 25, 1858. The regular energy of the Principal provides every department of instruction, embracing eighteen teachers, a number sufficient to permit a sub-division of classes, so that none need be neglected. Many students have consecrated their young hearts on the altar of Christianity, and will go forth with great power, rightly directed, to bless the Church and the world.

PROF. C. T. LEWIS, A.M., Troy University, March, 1859. The practical drill was admirable. Attention had been given to the powers of memory and not of expression, but the basis lay in a clear comprehension of facts and principles, for which good language was made an ornament, not a substitute. Perhaps no feature of the exercises was more charming than their entire fairness, which was at once transparent and modifiable.

REV. B. HAWLEY, A.M., Chairman, West Troy, June 23, 1859. In the circle of our Large Academies, possessing the highest advantages at the lowest charges, I know of no one sustaining a better reputation than the Fort Edward Institute.

DESIGN.

The object of this chain of Colleges is to prepare young men in an essential manner for the duties of a business life, in giving them a thorough knowledge of the sciences which secure that end.

This institution, in its plan and arrangements, has regard to the physical as well as the moral and intellectual training of its members.

THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION

Is liberal and thorough, such as experience has proved to be most effectual for this purpose. By it, students are prepared for any class in college, for the scientific schools, or for commercial life. The

ANCIENT LANGUAGES

are taught critically and with a view to sound scholarship and not to mere superficial acquaintance. The

is extensive. The preparation of pupils who have passed through it, and their success elsewhere, gives the best evidence of faithfulness and skill in this very essential department of instruction. Very many are the unsolicited testimonials received on this point. Special attention is given to the

MODERN LANGUAGES:

French, Spanish, and German form an important part of the course of study, and are taught as spoken languages by well qualified masters. The

also, in its elements, as well as in its higher departments, receives more than ordinary notice, and is not made subordinate to any other study.

MORAL AND RELIGIOUS TRAINING

is carefully regarded, as in every well ordered household; but no interference is attempted with the peculiar tenets of any faith. Seats are provided for the pupils in both the Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

The complete arrangements made for this generally neglected object, and the success that has attended them, deserve to be specially noticed. Under their influence, we have seen the delicate and almost puny boy become the robust and enduring youth, able to sustain continued application and to perform in after life an amount of intellectual labor that only a sound and vigorous development could make possible. In connection with the

GYMNASIUM AND THE RIDING SCHOOL ARE THE MILITARY EXERCISES,

The infantry and artillery drills; and, while these receive a minuteness of attention not often given to them, and are so used as to produce physically a permanent effect, they have no tendency to create a desire, as experience has shown, for a military life. The system, as here arranged, has been chosen for the great benefits that result from it. But, although a military school, the institution, it must be distinctly understood, is not for the training of those who are vicious or unmanageable under any other system. Should any of this class, by accident or misrepresentation, ever be received, they will, on the manifestation of such character, be at once returned to their parents. The feelings of the principals, not less than their intimate relations with their pupils, look to other associations and other results. Confidence, patience, and kindness on their part, truthfulness, honor, and generous sentiment on the pupil's, are the basis and the bond of union between them. No boy who is insensible to considerations of this kind is desired in the school, nor can he long remain connected with it.

Pupils are received whenever a vacancy occurs; but, as the number is limited and places are usually filled in advance, applications, to prevent disappointment, should be made as early as possible.

Further information may be obtained from the gentlemen named as references, or by addressing the principals.

PACKER COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, BROOKLYN.
A. CRITTENDEN, A.T., PRINCIPAL.

GARDEN FRONT, LIVINGSTON STREET.

PACKER COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, BROOKLYN HEIGHTS, L. I.

This Institution claims to give to females all the advantages for thorough and complete education that are enjoyed by the other sex in our best appointed Colleges.

It is liberally endowed, and is under the patronage of the State.

Its location, in the city of Brooklyn, opposite New York, enables it to command all the educational resources of the metropolis; while no country village is more quiet, beautiful, or healthy.

THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION

Is under the direction of A. Crittenden, A.M., who has devoted his whole life to female education. He is assisted by twenty-four professors and teachers; and the course of instruction embraces the modern languages, with Latin, the various branches of Literature, History, Mathematics, Chemistry, Natural, Moral, and Intellectual Philosophy, Music, Drawing, Painting, &c. &c.

THE LABORATORY

Is a model of its kind, and furnished with every necessary article of apparatus.

THE OBSERVATORY

Has an excellent achromatic telescope of six inches object glass. It is equatorially mounted, moved by clockwork, &c.

THE CABINETS

Are amply provided with minerals, shells, &c. One or two articles of apparatus particularly arrest the attention of the observer,—one of Ross's Compound Microscopes, which magnifies 1800 diameters, also Barlow's large Planetarium, eleven feet in diameter.

The accommodations for pupils from abroad are intended to afford all the comforts of home, and to secure for them social, intellectual, and moral culture.
